" But inſtead of Indulgence or Comprehenſion on " the laſt Day of June the Act againſt Private " Meetings for Religious Exerciſes paſſed the Houſe " of Commons, and ſhortly after was made a Law, " the Sum of it was, That every Perſon above ſixteen " Years, who is preſent at any Meeting under Colour or " pretence of any Exerciſe of Religion, in other manner " than is allowed by the Liturgy or Practice of the Church " of England, where there are five Perſons more than that " Houſhold, ſhall for the firſt Offence by a Juſtice of Peace " be Recorded and ſent to Goal three Months, till he pay " five Pounds; and for the ſecond Offence ſix Months till " he pay ten Pounds; and for the third time being con- " victed by a Jury, ſhall be baniſh'd to ſome of the American Plantations, excepting New England or Virgi- " nia. The Author who is giving this Account takes a wrong occaſion to complain, It was a great " Hardſhip that attended this Act, that ſo much Power " was given by it to Juſtices of the Peace, to record a " Man an Offender without a Jury: And if they did it " cauſeleſly, there was no Remedy, ſeeing every Juſtice " was made a Judge. A wrong Complaint, and a Re- " flection upon many other of our wholſome Laws, " which could never be executed, if Evidence upon " Oath before a Juſtice of Peace could not make him " ſo far a Judge as to pronounce the Penalty ex- " preſt in the Letter of the Law, without the For- " mality of a Court and a Jury. It is ſufficient, " that the greater Offences and the greater Penalties, " affecting Life or Liberty or Eſtate, ſhall not be " determin'd by any private Juſtices but in the more " ſolemn manner of Court and Judge and Priſoner " and Jury. And ſo it was by this very Act accor- " dingly Provided, that no one ſhould be convicted " of the third Offence which incurr'd Baniſhment, " without a regular Trial by a Jury. The Author goes on to tell us much more pertinently, that " be- " fore this Act the Danger and Sufferings lay on the " Miniſters only, but now the People alſo were ſore- " ly try'd. And that after this, the Nonconfor- " miſts were not a little divided among themſelves, " as to the Lawfulneſs and Expediency of worſhip- " ping God in the publick Churches, over and a- " bove their private Meetings ſtill kept up with great " Secrecy. Mr. Baxter and Dr. Bates, and ſeveral o- " thers with them, were for frequenting the publick " Churches, when better helps were not to be had: " And for reſorting to them now and then, tho' they " had their Choice to ſhew their Charity. They " were for having their moſt uſual Communion " with thoſe Aſſemblies, which they thought were " managed moſt agreeably to the Rule and End of " Worſhip; and yet for having Occaſional Commu- " nion with others, as Members of the Catholick " Church, to ſhew their Catholick Communion " with all the Body of Chriſt: But others were ve- " hement for an entire Separation.

laxing e Laws ngerous Church d State.

To this Account it may be fairly added, that it was the Judgment of the two Houſes of Parliament, and of the Body of the People of England, that no- thing could ſo effectually ſecure the Peace of the State, as the continuing and confirming a general Conformity to the eſtabliſh'd Church: And again, that nothing would more encourage and promote Po- pery, than the Advantage to be gain'd by a Tolera- tion of Proteſtant Diſſenters. And had the Admini- ſtration of Affairs turn'd even and conſtant upon this Baſis, Peace and Happineſs muſt have needs en- ſued. But the Error in Politicks was ſtill the ſame: The Legiſlative Power drew one way, and the Exe- cutive another: The Parliament for a ſtrict Uniformity, the King for Toleration: And therefore the ſtricteſt Laws had their full Influence no longer than during the Seſſion that made them; or at leaſt the Returns of a Sitting Parliament. In every Interval, the King relented, and the Judges muſt connive: which extraordinary way of giving and aſſuming Liberty of Conſcience brought in more Miſchief than a legal Toleration could have done. For by this Means the King was gaining a Party to ſupport him in the Pretenſions of a Diſpenſing Power. The Diſſenters were taught to ſlight the Laws of the Land, as much as thoſe of the Church, and to fly to the Royal Prerogative for a Protection againſt the common courſe of Juſtice. The Biſhops and Clergy were diſcourag'd from truſting to their legal Conſti- tution, and if they proſecuted any upon the Penal Laws, they found the way of Juſtice ſo obſtructed, that they gain'd the Odium of being Perſecutors without Power, and that was all. While the Papiſts triumph'd in their deſired Oppoſition of Church and Conventicle, teaching the Diſſenters to be enraged at the grievous Penal Laws, and the Church-men to be offended at the trifling Suſpenſion of them: and labouring to poſſeſs the King with the Pleaſure of Governing without a Parliament, that his own In- dulgence might be a ſtanding Law; the Fear of which raiſed ſo many Jealouſies in the Minds of the beſt and wiſeſt People, that his Majeſty was forced to wipe them off in his next Speech to the Parlia- ment.

Proceed- ings of Convoca- tion.

The Convocation finding the Church to be ſufficiently by Law eſtabliſh'd, thought it not proper to meddle with any other Buſineſs relating to Religion. on April 20. the Biſhops were conſidering of the Ex- pediency of a new Form of Grammer, fit to be enjoin'd for the Uſe of all publick Schools: And a Committee of both Houſes was appointed May 4. to examine and review the ſaid Form, but nothing was deter- mined in it. And at their next meeting with the Parliament Nov. 25. nothing was done but a Prolo- cutor Dr. John Dolben Dean of Weſtminſter Elected and Approv'd in the room of Dr. John Earwick Dean of Paul's, lately deceaſed. Only on Feb. 18. the Archbiſhop required the Biſhops then preſent, when they came into their reſpective Dioceſes, to certifie to him the Names and Sirnames of all Clerks within their Juriſdiction who had been ejected from their Cures, with the places of their preſent Abode. And on March 4. the Archbiſhop deſired all his Suffragan Brethren to take all poſſible Care and Diligence, that all Miniſters, Rectors, Vicars and Curates, ſhould in their Surplices read Divine Service fully and di- ſtinctly, without omitting any part.

Parlia- ment meets.

The Parliament meeting at the Time to which they had been prorogued March 16. the King came to the Houſe of Lords on Monday March 21. and made this Gracious Speech to both Houſes.

My Lords and Gentlemen,

The King's Speech.

" YOU ſee, God be thank'd, you have met to- " gether again at the time appointed, and I " do aſſure you, I have been ſo far from ever in- " tending it ſhould be otherwiſe, that I do not " know one Perſon who ever wiſh'd it ſhould be o- " therwiſe. Think therefore, I pray, what good " Meaning thoſe Men could have, who from the " time of the Prorogation to the Day of your meet- " ing, have continually whiſper'd and induſtriouſly " infuſed into the Minds of the People, that the " Parliament ſhould meet no more; that it ſhould " either be preſently diſſolv'd, or ſo continued by " Prorogation, that they ſhould be kept without a " Parliament. I pray watch theſe Whiſperers all " you can, as Men who uſe their utmoſt Endeavours " to ſow Jealouſies between you and me: And I do " promiſe you they ſhall not prevail with me; and " I do promiſe myſelf they ſhall not prevail with " you: And the Truth is, we are both concern'd " they ſhould not, and we ſhall then with God's " Bleſſing prevent all the Miſchief they intend.

" You may judge by the late Treaſon in the North, " for which ſo many Men have been executed, how " active the Spirits of many of our old Enemies ſtill " are, notwithſtanding all our Mercy. I do aſſure " you, we are not yet at the bottom of that Buſi- " neſs: Thus much appears manifeſtly, that this " Conſpiracy was but a Branch of that which I diſ- " cover'd as well as I could to you about two Years " ſince, and had been then executed nearer hand, if

1664. 16 Car. II.

" I had not by God's goodneſs come to the knowledge of ſome of the principal Contrivers, and ſo ſecured them from doing the Miſchief they intended. And if I had not by the like Providence had timely notice of the very Hour, and ſeveral places of their Rendezvous in the North, and provided for them accordingly, by ſending ſome of my own Troops, as well as by drawing the train'd-Bands together, their Conjunction would have been in greater Numbers than had been convenient.

" You will wonder (but I tell true) they are now even in thoſe parts, and at this time, when they ſee their Friends under Trial and Execution ſtill purſuing the ſame Conſultations: And it is evident they have Correſpondence with deſperate Perſons in moſt Counties, and a ſtanding Council in this Town, from which they receive their Directions, and by whom they were adviſed to defer their laſt intended Inſurrection; but thoſe Orders ſerved only to diſtract them, and came too late to prevent their Deſtruction. I know more of their Intrigues than they think I do, and hope I ſhall ſhortly diſcover the bottom; in the mean time I pray let us all be as watchful to prevent, as they are to contrive their Miſchief.

" I cannot omit upon this occaſion to tell you, that theſe deſperate Men in their Counſels (as appears by ſeveral Examinations) have not been all of one Mind in the ways of carrying on their wicked Reſolutions. Some would ſtill inſiſt upon the Authority of the Long Parliament, of which they ſay they have Members enough willing to meet; others have fancied to themſelves by ſome Computation of their own, upon ſome Clauſe in the Triennial Bill, that this preſent Parliament was at an end ſome Months ſince, and that for want of new Writs, they may aſſemble themſelves, and chuſe Members for Parliament; and that this is the beſt Expedient to bring themſelves together for their other purpoſes. For the long Parliament you and I can do no more than we have done, to inform and compoſe the Minds of all Men, let them proceed upon their Peril. But methinks there is nothing done to diſabuſe them in reſpect of the Triennial Bill. I confeſs to you, my Lords and Gentlemen, I have often myſelf read over that Bill, and though there is no colour for the Fancy of the Determination of this Parliament, yet I will not deny to you, that I have always expected you would, and even wonder'd that you have not conſider'd the wonderful Clauſes in that Bill, which paſſed in a time very uncareful for the Dignity of the Crown, or the Security of the People, I pray Mr. Speaker, and you Gentlemen of the Houſe of Commons, give that Triennel Bill once a reading in your Houſe, and then in God's name do what you think fit for me and yourſelves, and the whole Kingdom. I need not tell you how much I love Parliaments; never King was ſo much beholden to Parliaments as I have been; nor do I think the Crown can ever be happy without frequent Parliaments. But aſſure yourſelves, if I ſhould think otherwiſe, I would never ſuffer a Parliament to come together by the means preſcribed by that Bill.

" My Lords and Gentlemen, I muſt renew my Thanks to you, for the free Supply you gave me this laſt Seſſion of four Subſidies; yet I cannot but tell you, that the Supply is fallen much ſhort of what I expected or you intended: It will hardly be believ'd, yet you know it to be true, that very many Perſons who have Eſtates of three and four thouſand Pounds a Year, do not pay for theſe four Subſidies ſixteen Pounds: So that whereas you intended and declared, that they ſhould be collected according to former Precedents, they do not now ariſe to half the proportion they did in the time of Queen Elizabeth; and yet ſure the Crown wants more now than it did then, and the Subject is at leaſt as well able to give. 1664. 16 Car.

" The truth is, by the Licenſe of the late ill Times, and ill Humour of this, too many of the People, and even of thoſe who make fair Profeſſions, believe it to be no Sin to defraud the Crown of any thing that is due to it. You no ſooner give me Tonnage and Poundage than Men are deviſing all the ways they can to ſteal Cuſtom; nor can the Farmers be ſo vigilent for the Collection as others are to ſteal the Duties. You give me the Exciſe, which all People abroad believe to be the moſt inſenſible Impoſition that can be laid upon a People: What Conſpiracies and Combinations are enter'd into againſt it by the Brewers, who I am ſure bear not that burthen themſelves, even to bring that Revenue to nothing, you will hear in Weſtminſter-Hall. You have given me the Chimney Money, which you have reaſon to believe is a growing Revenue, for Men build at leaſt faſt enough; and you will therefore wonder, that it is already declin'd, and that this half Year brings in leſs than the former did: I pray therefore review that Bill, and ſince I am ſure you would have me receive whatſoever you give, let me have the Collecting and Husbanding of it by my own Officers, and then I doubt not but to improve that Receipt, and will be cozned of as little as I can.

" I will conclude with deſiring and conjuring you, my Lords and Gentlemen, to keep a very good Correſpondence together, that it may not be in the Power of any ſeditious or factious Spirits to make you jealous of each other, or either of you jealous of me, till you ſee me pretend one thing and do another, which I am ſure you have never yet done; truſt me, it ſhall be in no bodies Power to make me jealous of you. I pray contrive any good ſhort Bills, which may improve the Induſtry of the Nation; and ſince the Seaſon of the Year will invite us all ſhortly to take the Country Air, I deſire you would be ready for a Seſſion within two Months or thereabouts, and we will meet next earlier in the Year. And ſo God bleſs your Counſels.

Murmurs againſt the Dutch.

At the firſt opening of this Seſſion, there was a general Diſcontent and Murmur againſt the Dutch, for breaking in upon our Trade, and affronting our Nation with ſeveral publick Injuries and Inſolencies that were indeed very Provoking, wherein they were encourag'd by the French Court, and had a promiſe of Support and Aſſiſtance from it. The Houſe of Commons took this matter into their firſt Conſideration, and appointed a Committee to examine the Complaints of the Encroachments made by the Hollanders upon the Trade of England, and after a Report made by Mr. Clifford, the Houſe agreed upon Reſolutions to this effect.

Reſolutions of the Commons.

That the Wrongs, Diſhonours and Indignities, the Damages, Affronts and Injuries done by the Subjects of the United Provinces to our Merchants, were the greateſt Obſtructions to all Forcign Trade. And therefore, that his Majeſty ſhould be moved to take ſpeedy and effectual Courſe for the Redreſs thereof; and that they would aſſiſt him with their Lives and Fortunes againſt all Oppoſition whatſoever.

Addreſs of both Houſes.

The Lords concurred in this ſenſe of publick Honour and Intereſt; and ſo both Houſes attended his Majeſty with an Addreſs to repreſent the common Danger. His Majeſty declar'd his high Eſteem of their Care and Tenderneſs for the Honour and Good of the Nation, and expreſt his own Royal Senſe of preſerving the Freedom of Trade and the Dominion of the Seas; letting them farther know, that he would examine and prove the particular Complaints; that he would demand Satisfaction by a publick Miniſter, and do his utmoſt Endeavours to ſecure his Subjects from the like Violences for the future, depending upon the Promiſe of both Houſes to ſtand by him.

him. For which Royal Aſſurance, both Houſes return'd their humble and hearty Thanks.

A new Act for Triennial Parliaments.

The next Care of the Commons was to debate on that part of his Majeſty's Speech which related to the Act for Triennial Parliaments; upon which, they brought in a Bill to repeal that Act, and to eſtabliſh a better Expedient for holding Parliaments once in three Years. At the paſſing of this Act on April 6. his Majeſty gave them his Thanks for their ready concurring in a Matter ſo advantageous to the Nation, and for annulling a former Law ſo prejudicial to the Love and Union between King and People, and founded on a fatal Suppoſition, that the Crown was jealous of Parliaments, or the Parliaments jealous of the Crown.

On April 5. the Houſe of Lords adjourned to the 18th inſtant, and on the Day following the Houſe of Commons made the like Adjournment: Both Houſes unanimouſly reſolving to aſſiſt his Majeſty with their Lives and Fortunes againſt all his Enemies and Oppoſers whatſoever. On May 17. the King came to the Houſe of Lords, and ſending for the Commons to attend him, in a ſhort Speech he let them underſtand, "his Royal Approbation of their "Cares and Labours for the Good of the Publick; "and his Acknowledgments to them for their ready Compliance with his Advice in the Diſpatch "of all Buſineſs depending in the laſt Seſſion; and "concluding with his Reſolution to Prorogue them "to the 20th of Auguſt next enſuing; but declaring "farther, that unleſs ſomething extraordinary ſhould "fall out, it was his purpoſe not to call them together till November following, whereof they "ſhould have timely Notice by his Royal Proclamation. Then Sir Edward Turner, Speaker, preſented to his Majeſty, "the humble Thanks of "the Houſe for his gracious Acceptance of their "Endeavours in the Service of his Majeſty and the "Publick. After which, he inſiſted upon the unſettled Condition of the Country by reaſon of the "diſaffected Parties of Fanaticks, Sectaries, and "Nonconformiſts, who threatned the Diſturbance of "Church and State. Then he touch'd upon the "Injuries complain'd of by our Merchants, and the "Frauds and ill Practices of our Neighbours the "Dutch in the Eaſt and Weſt Indies, in Turkey, Africa, and other Parts, which beſides the Indignity "offered to his Royal Majeſty and the Crown of England, amounted to no leſs than the Value of ſeven "or eight hundred thouſand Pounds: and then he "preſented ſeveral Bills for the Royal Aſſent, among "which was the memorable Act to prevent and ſuppreſs ſeditious Conventicles.

King's Speech.

Thanks of the Commons.

Act againſt Conventicles.

Under this Diſpoſition of the Parliament and People to quarrel with the Dutch, the King had given his particular Inſtructions to his Ambaſſador Sir George Downing, who about the middle of May gave in a Memorial to the States-General, of the great Damages which the Engliſh complained to have ſuffer'd in their Trade and Commerce by the Subjects of thoſe Provinces. The States wiſely declined a preſent Anſwer, and came off with a Promiſe of ſending their own Ambaſſadours to the King of Great Britain, which had the Appearance of a more ſolemn Reſpect, and what was more intended, gave them the opportunity of Deliberation and Delay.

Memorial given in to the States of Holland.

A Fleet fitted out.

But the King, to loſe no time, gave Orders for ſetting out a conſiderable Fleet, to ſecure his Subjects in their freedom of Trade, and to vindicate the Honour and Intereſt of the Engliſh Nation. But he had one continual Misfortune upon him, the want of ready Money: To ſupply this Defect, he ſent ſome Lords of his Privy Council to move the City of London for the Loan of an hundred thouſand Pounds upon this extraordinary Occaſion. The Common Council of the City, who were ſenſible of their Sufferings in Trade, readily complied with the King's Requeſt, and voted an immediate Supply of that Sum, to be repaid upon moderate Terms concerted with the Lord Treaſurer.

1664. 16 Car. II.

Sir George Downing, upon the dilatory Meaſures taken by the States, came over into England for more private and poſitive Inſtructions; and returning back, held ſeveral Conferences with the Deputies of the States, and deliver'd in ſeveral Particulars of Damages and Injuries ſuſtained by the Engliſh: for which he demanded Reparation. The States again declined all expreſs Anſwer, and put off all Propoſals of making Satisfaction. The King underſtood their Craft to be, the keeping him in ſuſpence till they had got home their ſeveral Fleets of Merchant Men, reſolved to intercept them in the Chanel, by way of Repriſal, without waiting the Ceremony of a declared War. The Heer Van Goch was ſent as Ambaſſadour from the States, to expoſtulate with the King upon his viſible Preparations for a War againſt them; and had a ſolemn Audience on June 25. but ſeem'd to have no ſufficient Inſtructions to propoſe or accept any ways of preventing an open Rupture. So that the King made it his Buſineſs and his great Pleaſure to viſit his Docks and Ports, and give Orders for fitting and furniſhing a Fleet with all poſſible Expedition, to be under the Command of Prince Rupert, and to ſail for Guinea, if the Dutch Fleet under Admiral Opdam ſhould happen to paſs the Chanel, and purſue their intended Voyage to thoſe Coaſts. On Octob. 15. Prince Rupert, with his Squadron of ſixteen Men of War, came to the Spit-Head; and at the beginning of November the Duke of York, Lord High Admiral of England, went down to Portſmouth, and joining with the Prince and Earl of Sandwich, took Charge of the Navy, and ſtruck ſuch a Terrour upon the Coaſts of Holland, that Opdam was glad to lay ſtill with his Fleet in the Goree, while the Dutch Bourdeaux Fleet, laden home with Wine and Brandy, fell moſt of them into Engliſh Hands, and with many other of their laden Ships, to the Number of above one hundred and thirty, were brought into our Ports, and by the Admiralty condemn'd for lawful Prizes, tho' no War had been actually declared; which Proceeding was thought to be more Arbitrary than the Law of Nations did allow. It is however a Juſtice to obſerve, that this way of dealing with our Friends before we had pronounc'd them Enemies, was not meerly a Trick of France, or an Intrigue of our own Miniſtry, (as ſome have labour'd to repreſent it) but it was the very Voice of the Engliſh People, and eſpecially the Cry of all our Merchants and Traders. The City of London were ſo full of ill Reſentments againſt the Dutch for engroſſing and uſurping upon Navigation and Commerce, that they not only lent a hundred thouſand Pounds (as before remembred) for Expedition of the Fleet; but, when the King ſtill wanted another like Sum, they advanc'd it with the ſame Readineſs, upon a Motion of the Earl of Mancheſter Lord Chamberlain, in a Speech deliver'd at the Guild-hall in London on Thurſday Dec. 1. where were preſent many Members of both Houſes of Parliament, who brought with them an Order preſented by the Lord Chamberlain to the Lord Mayor, and read by Mr. Avery Deputy Town-Clerk, in theſe Words: "Die Veneris 25. Nov. 1664. Ordered by the "Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and Commons in "Parliament aſſembled, that the Thanks of both "Houſes of Parliament be given unto the City of "London for their Forwardneſs in aſſiſting his Majeſty; and in particular, by furniſhing him with "ſeveral great Sums of Money toward his Preparations for the Honour, Safety, and Trade of this "Nation.

The Parl. thank the City.

The Parliament, according to Prorogation, had met again on Novemb. 24. when the King in a hearty Speech expreſt to them, "How unkindly he had "been treated by his Neighbours the Dutch; how "much he thought it his Duty to vindicate the "Rights of his Subjects, and the Honour of Himſelf and his Kingdoms; how, to this end, he had, "upon the Stock of his own Credit, ſet forth a Navy, that would guard his Seas, and would not "de-

" decline meeting with all the Naval Power of the " United Provinces; that he had almoſt emptied " his own Stores, and had very liberally borrowed " of the City of London; ſo that to diſcharge the " one, and repleniſh the other, would require little " leſs than eight hundred thouſand Pounds: that " he had Reaſon to expect from them a ſpeedy and " ſubſtantial Supply; and muſt deſire them to " frame their Reſolutions with all neceſſary Expe- " dition. The moſt affecting Words of the Speech were theſe: Mr. Speaker, and you Gentlemen of the Houſe of Commons, I know not whether it be worth my Pains to endeavour to remove a vile Jealouſie which ſome ill Men ſcatter abroad, and which, I am ſure, will never ſink into the Breaſt of any Man who is worthy to ſit upon your Benches, That when you have given me a noble and proportionable Supply for the Support of a War, I may be induced, by ſome evil Counſellors (for they will be thought to think very reſpectfully of my Perſon) to make a ſudden Peace, and get all the Money for my own private Occaſions. But let me tell you, and you may be confident of it, that when I am compelled to enter into a War for the Protection, Honour, and Benefit of my Subjects; I will (God willing) not make a Peace, but upon the obtaining and ſecuring thoſe Ends for which the War is entred into: and when that can be done, no good Man will be ſorry for the Determination of it. The Speaker was inſtructed to anſwer, that " The Com- " mons of England could not ſufficiently expreſs " their Loyalty and Affection to the King, nor the " deep Senſe which they All had of the Injuries and " Violations committed by the Dutch; that they " had conſidered the Burden of his Majeſty's Ex- " pences, and the Neceſſity of his Naval Preparati- " ons; and begged Leave to aſſure him of their " Readineſs and Conſtancy to yield him all the Du- " ties of Aſſiſtance and Obedience with their Lives " and Fortunes.

By the 11th of February the Bill was ready for the King's Aſſent, and paſs'd into an Act for granting a Royal Aid of twenty four hundred threeſcore and ſeventeen thouſand and five hundred pounds. Hitherto no War proclaim'd, tho' the Acts of Hoſtility had been in a manner commanded by an Order of the King in Council dated in December, ſetting forth, that his Majeſty taking into due Conſideration the Injuries, Affronts, and Spoils done by the Subjects of the United Provinces, to the Ships, Goods, and Perſons of his Majeſty's Subjects, and having made frequent Demands of Redreſs which were ineffectual, he did therefore now, by Advice of his Privy Council, order, that general Repriſals ſhould be granted againſt the Ships, and Goods, and Subjects of the United Provinces.

But the Hearts of the trading part of the Nation being now entirely turn'd againſt the Dutch, and the Parliament ſhewing the Senſe of the People by a Royal Aid apparently meant for that purpoſe, the King order'd the drawing up a formal Declaration of War, which it is proper to inſert.

Baſeneſs of De Ruyter.

The higheſt Provocation to this War was the perfidious baſeneſs of De Ruyter, who commanded the Squadron ſent by the States in conjunction with an Engliſh Fleet under Sir John Lawſon, to reduce the Algerines to the Terms of Peace and free Trade; when as ſoon as De Ruyter enter'd the Streights, and had cruiſed a little about Gibraltar, he deſerted the Engliſh and the common Service, and ſail'd away to the Coaſts of Guiney, and diſpoſſeſſed the Engliſh of their Factories at Cape-Verd and the Iſle of Gogee; and after that ſtruck off to the Barbadoes, and made an attempt of Landing, but was beat off with Loſs and Shame; and then ſtood for Long-Iſland, and there committed great Depredations upon the Engliſh: thus ingloriouſly beginning a Piratick War under the ſacred Bands of Friendſhip and Alliance. And they inſulted the Engliſh for the Loſſes by ſuch treachery brought upon them: For a Dutch-man in London pretending himſelf to be a Swede, lately come from Guiney, made it his profeſt Buſineſs and Pleaſure to report the utter deſtruction of the Engliſh there by De Ruyter; for which inſolence he was on Febr. 25. whipp'd thro' the Streets of London.

The States all the while affected to be Silent, and hop'd to decline the Imputation of being the firſt Aggreſſors; tho' their Orders and the Execution of them ſufficiently betray'd, that they did not wait to be on the Defenſive ſide. When charg'd by our Ambaſſador with many Inſtances of their Violation of Faith and Honour with us; they condeſcended to publiſh a very diſingenuous Libel entitul'd, An Extract of the Memorials of the States General of the United Provinces upon the Memorial of Sir George Downing, Envoy Extraordinary of the King of Great Britain. Wherein were ſo many Invectives againſt the King, and ſo many Aſperſions upon the Engliſh Nation, that it put Sir George upon the neceſſity of a printed Vindication. And the States (as if deſigning no more than a Paper War) contented themſelves with a ſecond Libel called, A Summary Obſervation and Deduction deliver'd by the Deputies of the States General, upon the Memorial of Sir George Downing Envoy, &c. When they ſaw the Engliſh upon denial of Satisfaction to be in earneſt for a War, they ſent away Monſieur Benninghen to inform the King of France of their proſpect of a Rupture with England, who ſeemed to promiſe them his Favour and Protection; and yet to take advantage of their Neceſſities, he orders his Ambaſſadour in Holland to demand Reparations for the loſs of two very conſiderable Eaſt-India Ships formerly taken from his Subjects.

Paper War.

Church Affairs.

We ought to look back on the Church of Scotland, where Presbytery began to vaniſh upon the firſt appearance of Monarchy; and all the Miſeries and Confuſions of that Kingdom were expreſly enough charged upon the Kirk Party, in one of the firſt Acts of Parliament for Obſervation of the twenty nineth of May, having this Preamble, The States of the Parliament of the Kingdom of Scotland, taking into their Conſideration the ſad Condition, Slavery and Bondage this ancient Kingdom has groaned under theſe twenty three Years, in which, under very ſpecious pretences of Reformation, a publick Rebellion has been by the Treachery of ſome and Miſperſwaſion of others, violently carried on againſt ſacred Authority, to the Ruin and Deſtruction, as far as was poſſible, of Religion, the King's Majeſty and his Royal Government, the Laws, Liberties and Property of the People, and all the publick and private Intereſts of the Kingdom; ſo that Religion itſelf hath been proſtituted for the warrant of all theſe treaſonable Invaſions made upon the Royal Authority, and diſloyal Limitations upon the Allegiance of the Subjects: Therefore, &c. And yet the Kirk had a right of Eſtabliſhment by Law, but ſo weak in the Hearts of the People, and eſpecially of the Nobles and Lairds, that it was to fall of itſelf, without the Honour of a legal Diſſolution. Upon this proſpect of a favourable turn, in the beginning of 1661. ſome of the moſt worthy Scotch Presbyters Mr. James Sharp, Mr. Hamilton, Mr. Farwel, Mr. Loghton came to London, and were there firſt ordained Deacons and Presbyters, and then conſecrated Biſhops, by the Biſhop of Wincheſter and two other aſſiſting Engliſh Prelates; by which Act they expreſly renounc'd the Validity of their former Ordination, and obtain'd a Royal Proclamation dated Sept. 6. declaring the King's Pleaſure to be for reſtoring the Government of the Church of Scotland by Archbiſhops and Biſhops, as it was exerciſed in the Year 1637. and farther ſignifying that he had nominated and preſented Archbiſhops and Biſhops to the ſeveral Sees, to be inveſted with the ſame Authority they had in the Reign of his Royal Grandfather. To obey and execute this good Intention, the Privy Council of Scotland on Jan. 9. following, did ſtrictly diſcharge all Eccleſiaſtical meetings in Synods, Presbyteries and Seſſions, until they ſhould be authoriz'd by the Archbiſhops and Biſhops, upon their entry on the government of their reſpective Sees. And in farther purſuance of this good Deſign, the reſtoring Epiſcopacy in Scotland, the Parliament in their ſecond Seſſions made an Act to redintegrate the Biſhops to the Exerciſe of their Epiſcopal Function, and to all their Privileges, Dignities, Juriſdictions and Poſſeſſions, due and formerly belonging thereunto. And another Act did command all Miniſters to repair unto their Dioceſan Aſſembly, and concur in all Acts of Church Diſcipline, as they ſhould be thereunto required by the Archbiſhops or Biſhops of the Dioceſe, under pain of being ſuſpended from their Office and Benefice, till the next Dioceſan meeting for their firſt Fault; and if they amend not, to be deprived and the Church to be declared vacant. And whereas by the Presbyterian Diſcipline all the Right of Patronage in Parochial Churches was taken from the Nobility and other Laity, and even from the Crown; the Parliament did now provide in their ſecond Seſſion 1662. that all Miniſters who had enter'd to the Cure of any Pariſh within Burgh or Land, in or ſince the Year of God 1649. to have no right to uplift the Rents of their reſpective Benefices, modified Stipends, Manſh or Glebe for this inſtant Year 1662. nor for the Year following, unleſs they ſhould obtain a Preſentation from the lawful Patron, and have collation from the Biſhop of the Dioceſe where he liveth, before the twentieth of September next. And to pluck up the Root of all Evil, on Sept. 5. 1662. the Parliament formed a Declaration to be ſubſcrib'd by all who ſhall have any publick Charge, Office or Truſt within the Kingdom in theſe Words:

I A. B. do ſincerely affirm and declare, that I judge it unlawful to Subjects, upon pretence of Reformation, or any other pretence whatſoever, to enter into Leagues and Covenants, or to take up Arms againſt the King, or thoſe commiſſionated by him; and that all theſe Gatherings, Convocations, Petitions, Proteſtations, and erecting and keeping Counſel Tables, that were uſed in the beginning, and for the carrying on the late Troubles, were unlawful and ſeditious. And particularly that thoſe Oaths whereof the one is called the National Covenant, and the other entituled A ſolemn League and Covenant, were and are in themſelves unlawful Oaths; and were taken by and impoſed upon the Subjects of this Kingdom againſt the 1664. 16 Car. II. Laws and Liberties of the ſame: And that there lieth no Obligation upon me, or any of the Subjects from the ſaid Oaths, or either of them, to endeavour any Change or Alteration of the Government, either in Church or State, as it is now eſtabliſhed by the Laws of the Kingdom.

Laws

This Revolution and Eſtabliſhment of the Church of Scotland was during the Commiſſion of the Earl of Middleton, who did all that was poſſible to aſſert the King's Supremacy, and to ſettle him a good Revenue. But in the beginning of 1663. the Earl of Middleton was removed, and the Earl of Rothes was appointed to be High Commiſſioner of Scotland; a Ringleader of the Presbyterians under King Charles I. and even the principal of thoſe Conſpirators who ſubſcribed a Letter to the King of France, directed Au Roy, to aid their Kirk and Covenant againſt their lawful Prince. And yet now under his Adminiſtration the Presbyterians loſt ground more and more. The ſtanding High Commiſſion for Eccleſiaſtical Cauſes was in hands that extended their Authority in a moſt vigorous manner. And the Parliament to demoliſh all the Remains of Kirk Diſcipline, ordain'd a new Conſtitution of a National Synod or General Church Aſſembly, whereby the external Government of the Church was declared to be inherent in the King, by vertue of his Prerogative Royal in Cauſes Eccleſiaſtical; that the Members of this Synod were to be only Archbiſhops, Biſhops, Deans, Archdeacons, the Moderators of Meetings for Exerciſes, with one Miniſter of each Meeting, to be choſen by the Moderator and plurality of Miniſters for the ſame. The Synod to meet at ſuch Time and Place only as his Majeſty ſhould appoint by Proclamation; and to Debate of ſuch Matters only relating to the Government and Doctrine of the Church, as his Majeſty ſhould recommend. And laſtly, no Aſſembly to be held without the preſence of his Majeſty or his Commiſſioner. And in the next Seſſion of Parliament, a Proclamation was iſſued out, commanding all Miniſters who had enter'd before the Year 1649. and ſince the reſtitution of the Church Government by Archbiſhops and Biſhops, had relinquiſhed their Miniſtry, or had been depoſed by their Ordinary to remove themſelves within forty Days after their Relinquiſhment or Deſpoſal, out of the Pariſhes whereof they had been Incumbents, and not to reſide within twenty Miles of the ſame, nor within ſix Miles of Edinburgh, or any Cathedral, nor within three Miles of any Burgh Royal, nor to inhabit two in one Pariſh, upon penalty of incurring the Laws made againſt Movers of Sedition.

Death of Archbp. Frewen.

The Church of England loſt a great Prelate, Dr. Accepted Frewen Archbiſhop of York, who had been elected Preſident of Magdalen College in Oxford 1626. and inſtall'd Dean of Glouceſter 1631. and conſecrated Biſhop of Coventry and Litchfield 1644. and tranſlated to York in October 1660. He died at his Manor of Biſhop's-Thorp on March 28. 1664. and was buried on May 3. under the great Eaſt Window of his Cathedral Church, with a ſplendid Monument ſoon after erected for him.

Proceedings in Convocation.

The Covocation of the Province of Canterbury held their frequent Seſſions, and having diſpatch'd the Buſineſs of Religion, they fell upon a matter of Eccleſiaſtical Cogniſance, the better Government of Grammer Schools; ſeveral Complaints had been made of the Faults and Defects of Lilly's Grammer. The uſe of which had been preſcrib'd by the Royal Eccleſ. Supremacy; and therefore it was thought proper that a new publick Form of Grammer ſhould be now drawn up and approv'd in Convocation, to be enjoin'd by the ſame Royal Authority. Hence on April 20. the Archbiſhop and his Brethren conſulted of bringing in ſuch a new Form of Grammer, and of appointing fit Perſons for the Examination and Correction of it. On May 4. ſuch a Form of Grammer was brought in by Dr. John Pierſon, and the Reviſal of it was recommended to a Committee of both Houſes. But this matter dropp'd as a dubious and difficult Task, or at leaſt was interrupted by the death of the Prolocutor Dr. John Barwick Dean of St. Paul's; into whoſe place the inferiour Clergy elected Dr. John Dolben Dean of Weſtminſter, who was preſented to the Archbiſhop, and confirmed by him on Friday December 2. Nothing more was done till Febr. 18. when the Archbiſhop deſired the Biſhops, when they ſhould come to their reſpective Dioceſes, to return to him an Account of the Names of all Miniſters who had been ejected from their Cures, and the places of their Habitation. And on March 4. his Grace recommended to the ſaid Biſhops, their taking all poſſible Care and Diligence, that all Miniſters and Curates within their reſpective Dioceſes ſhould read the Divine Service as preſcribed by Law, diſtinctly and fully, without omiſſion of any part in the right Order and in Canonical Habit.

1664. 16 Car. II.

The Clergy firſt tax'd by the Houſe of Commons.

This Year began a very remarkable Change in the Liberties and Properties of the Clergy of England, by altering the way of taxing themſelves, and being tax'd in common with the People in Parliament. It muſt be obſerv'd, that by original Conſtitution the Lords Spiritual and Prelates and Clergy were eſteem'd one of the three Eſtates of the Realm, and therefore met in Eccleſiaſtical Aſſemblies on the civil Account of giving their own Money, and ſecuring their own Secular Rights and Liberties. This was the true and only Reaſon of the inferiour Prelates and Clergy being call'd to Parliament by a Clauſe of Premunientes inſerted in the Parliamentary Writ of Summons to every Biſhop, as the Practice began in 23 Ed. 1. by which Parliamentary Summons, the Lower Clergy never found place among the Temporal Commons, as the Biſhops had long before done among the Temporal Lords; but they were only to meet in a diſtinct Aſſembly in Parliament time, for the Parliamentary purpoſe of Aiding the King with Money, and making their Petitions for any Redreſs of Grievances, or Grant of Liberties, &c. And theſe Parliamentary Convocations medled only with the Civil Rights of the Church, not concerning themſelves with Doctrine or Diſcipline or other Spiritual Things, which were reſerved to the proper Eccleſiaſtical Synods, that were called independently on Parliaments, to meet in two Provincial Aſſemblies, before the reſpective Archbiſhops. This Conſtitution of the Church was not alter'd by the Reformation, any farther than as the Eccleſiaſtical Synods could no longer be called but by the King's Writ, nor act but by his Authority, becauſe he was now declared the Supreme Head. And there was a leſs Change in the Parliamentary Convocations, they gave their Money as before, only their Grants of Subſidy were now generally confirm'd by Acts of Parliament; and yet they gave Benevolences as formerly, to be levied and paid according to Rules and Conſtitutions of their own making. But by degrees theſe two different Aſſemblies of the Clergy in Eccleſiaſtical Synods and in Parliamentary Convocations, grew in effect into one Body, becauſe the Provincial Writs generally brought the Clergy together at the ſame time with the Premunientes Clauſe; not but that they had ſtill a diſtinct Capacity, and might have a ſeparate Being; and they actually had ſo in 1640. when the Parliamentary Convocation expiring with the Parliament diſſolv'd, the Provincial Synod did continue in a legal Being, till diſſolved by a ſeparate Writ, as the Judges themſelves affirmed to be Law. In ſhort, by vertue of ſuch original Conſtitution, the Clergy tax themſelves, and were never included in any Bill of the Lay Commons, till the times of Rebellion and Uſurpation, when the Church of England being diſſolv'd, this Right among others was ſwallow'd up; and the Schiſmatical Miniſters having no great title to be diſtinguiſh'd from the common People, had their Benefices tax'd in common with Lay Eſtates. But when the Church was reſtor'd in 1660. this original Right was reſtor'd with it;

1664. 16 Car. II. it; and was exercised at the Beginning of this Convocation, when the Clergy granted to the King four Subsidies, and had their separate Grant confirm'd by Act of Parliament, Stat. 15 Car. II. cap. 10. But it so happen'd, that the Bishops and Clergy now thought themselves griev'd in this Method of Taxing, by which they paid more in proportion than the Laity, and were subject more to the Pleasure of the Court, and more to the Humour of the Commons, who expected and often requir'd that the Clergy should give beyond their Proportion, and even beyond their Abilities. And besides all these Mischiefs and Dangers, the Body of the Clergy were left too much at the mercy of the Convocation Divines, who were many of them Court-Chaplains and Seekers of Court-Preferment, and so might be tempted to raise their own Fortune by laying a heavier Burden on their Brethren. The Experience or the Fear of these Evils put the Archbishop and some of the chief Bishops into a Consult with the Lord Chancellour, the Lord Treasurer, and some other prime Ministers of State; wherein it was concluded, that the Clergy should tacitly recede from the Custom of Taxing themselves, and should be included in the Money-Bills prepared by the House of Commons: and to encourage their Assent, should have two of the four Subsidies remitted to them; and should have a Clause of saving the antient Rights belonging to the Clergy, as in this part of the Act for granting a Royal Aid unto the King's Majesty, in the Session held at Westminster Nov. 24. 1664.

The first Act of Taxing the Clergy with the People.

" —— Provided always, and be it Enacted by the " Authority aforesaid, that all spiritual Promotions, " and all Lands, Possessions, or Revenues annex'd " to, and all Goods and Chattels growing or renewed upon the same or elsewhere, appertaining " to the Owners of the said spiritual Promotions or " any of them, which are or shall be charged, or " made contributary by this Act towards the Payments aforesaid, during the time therein appointed, (which was to be rais'd, levied, and paid in the space of three Years) shall be absolutely freed and " discharg'd from the two last of the four Subsidies " granted by the Clergy to his Majesty, his Heirs " and Successors, by an Act made in a former Session of this present Parliament, intitled An Act for confirming of four Subsidies granted by the Clergy, " any Clause or Thing in the said Act to the contrary notwithstanding. —— Provided always, that " nothing herein contained shall be drawn into Example to the Prejudice of the antient Rights belonging unto the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, " or Clergy of this Realm, or unto either of the " Universities, or unto any Colleges, Schools, Alms-" Houses, Hospitals, or Cinque-Ports.

Whether this great Change in the manner of Taxing now introduc'd, and likely to continue, be more to the Interest or to the Prejudice of the Church and Clergy in England, is not so easie to determine: tho' excepting the former Independence of the State of the Clergy, and the Danger of being oppress when they shall hereafter fall under the Displeasure of a House of Commons; we must confess, that they have been hitherto better dealt with than while they tax'd themselves, and they seem only to have lost the Benefit of presenting their Articles of Grievances, and obtaining the more easie Redress of them, as a Reward of their Liberality to the Crown. Nay the Clergy have gain'd one Privilege, that of all Rectors and Vicars voting for Members of Parliament, which they never did, till their Money was now given by the Lay Commons; and therefore they ought to be now represented by them, and ought for the same Reason to lose their Votes in all Parliamentary Elections, if ever they could reassume the Practice of Taxing themselves. There is a Clause that does sufficiently reserve that Right: but supposing the Clergy should think fit to claim it, it is a great Question whether the House of Commons will allow it; who, being now in possession of the Custom of Taxing the Clergy, may not be willing to relinquish that Custom.

1665. 17 Car. II.

On March 23. his Royal Highness the Duke of York set out, with a noble Attendance, to go aboard the English Fleet; which being now ready to sail, a proper Care was taken to complete the Preparation by an Order for a General Fast to be observed on April 5. To implore the Blessing of God upon his Majesty's Forces employed against the Dutch. And it was remarked, that the Queen-Mother and Queen-Consort did eminently shew their Zeal on this Occasion; and did, by express and particular Appointment, command all their Domesticks to set themselves apart with entire Abstinence and extraordinary Devotions for the Service of the Day.

The Duke of York Admiral.

The Dutch were not ready to come forth; and did not indeed seem to be in earnest for a War: They were rather soliciting the King of France to interpose; who, accordingly, sent Monsieurs Vernevel and Courtine his Ambassadours extraordinary to our Court, who came to London Apr. 6. and had Audience of the King May 9. Their chief Errand was reported to be the Mediation and Composure between England and Holland; but they could not effect it, because it is most probable their Master did not intend it. In the mean while, all the Dutch could do, was to enlarge their Embargo upon the English, and to provide, that none of the Subjects of that State should insure any Goods belonging to the Subjects of the King of England, and to forbid all Neuters to carry Counterband Goods to any of the Dominions of his Britannick Majesty.

The Dutch not willing to enter into a War.

King of France seems to mediate.

Some of our Cruisers began with good Success, and took three Dutch Frigats; the first a Caper of 7 Guns and 47 Men; the other two were Direction-Ships; one of 32 Guns and 80 Men, taken by the Diamond, wherein Captain Golding, a brave Officer, was slain; the other of 22 Guns and 60 Men, taken by the Yarmouth, after stout Resistance. One of these Direction-Ships was commanded by young Everts, whom the Duke treated with great Courtesie, and the King gave him his Liberty, and a considerable Present, as an Acknowledgment for the good Offices he had formerly received from his Father in Holland. On April 21. his Royal Highness set Sail with the whole Fleet, made up of one hundred and fourteen Sail; and finding the Chanel clear, he resolved to visit the Dutch upon their own Coasts, and came before the Texel on Apr. 28. and sent in a Squadron so near the Shore and Harbour, that the Dutch were in a great Alarm and Consternation, and erected Beacons all along the Sands from the Texel to the Maese, to give notice upon any Attempt of Landing. All this Daring of the English could not draw out the Dutch Fleet; and therefore, after the taking many rich Merchant-Men in the very Mouth of their Rivers and Ports, the Duke carried back his Navy to the English Coasts. The Dutch took that Opportunity of coming out, and by May 29. appeared about the Dogger Sands, divided into seven Squadrons; 14 Men of War and 2 Fireships under Opdam, a like number under John Everts, 15 Men of War and 1 Fireship under Cortenaer, 14 Men of War and 1 Fireship under Stillingwers, 16 and 1 Fireship under Trump, 14 and 1 Fireship under Cornelius Everts, and 16 with 2 Fireships under Schram; in all 103 Men of War, 11 Fireships, and 7 Yatchs, besides Tenders. And by the Duke's retiring from the Holland Coasts, they took the Advantage of intercepting our Hamburgh Fleet, who had sent to the Duke, lying before the Texel, for a Convoy, which was dispatch'd to them; and bringing them along the Holland Coasts when the Duke was sail'd away, and missing of the Roe-Ketch, which the Duke had sent to meet them, and give them Notice of the Duke's Removal; they fell in with a Squadron of the Dutch sent out on purpose to watch and attack 'em, and were most of them taken.

Opening of the War.

The Duke fails to the Coasts of Holland;

And returns.

Then the Dutch came out,

And take our Hamburgh Fleet.

This incensed the Duke to come the sooner to a general Engagement. So having weighed Anchor from from the Gunfleet on May 30. he came to Southold Bay on June 1. and bore up to the Dutch Fleet, and engaged them June 3. and obtained a very signal Victory, taking 18 capital Men of War, and sinking and firing about 14 more, and blowing up Opdam in his Flag Ship, with 500 Men and 84 Guns. On our side was lost but one Ship, the Charity; and that had been before taken from the Enemy: But we lost many brave Men of Quality and Courage; the Earl of Falmouth, the Lord Muskerry, and the Honourable Mr. Boyle, fell all three by one Cannon Shot, so very near the Person of the Duke, that he was sprinkled with their Blood and Brains. The Earl of Portland, the Earl of Marlborough, and Rear-Admiral Sampson, were kill'd in the Fight; and Sir John Lawson soon after died of his Wounds.

Our Loss of many great Men.

It is fit for History to be adorned with this admirable Letter, wrote on Shipboard upon the Coasts of Holland by the Right Honourable James Earl of Marlborough, a little before his Death; directed To the Right Honourable Sir Hugh Pollard, Comptroller of his Majesty's Houshold.

SIR,

A Letter from the Earl of Marlborough.

" I Believe the Goodness of your Nature, and the Friendship you have always borne me, will receive with Kindness the last Office of your Friend. I am in Health enough of Body, and (through the Mercy of God in Jesus Christ) well disposed in Mind. This I premise, that you may be satisfied that what I write proceeds not from any fantastick Terrour of Mind, but from a sober Resolution of what concerns myself, and earnest desire to do you more Good after my Death, than mine Example (God of his Mercy pardon the Badness of it) in my Life-time may do you harm. I will not speak ought of the Vanity of this World; your own Age and Experience will spare that Labour. But there is a certain thing that goeth up and down the World, call'd Religion, dressed and pretended fantastically, and to Purposes bad enough, which yet by such evil-dealing loseth not its Being: The great good God hath not left it without a Witness, more or less, sooner or later, in every Man's Bosom, to direct us in the Pursuit of it: And for the avoiding of those inextricable Disquisitions and Entanglements our own frail Reasons would perplex us withall, God in his infinite Mercy hath given us his holy Word, in which as there are many things hard to be understood, so there is enough plain and easie, to quiet our Minds, and direct us concerning our future Being. I confess to God and You, I have been a great Neglecter, and I fear a Despiser of it: God of his infinite Mercy pardon me the dreadful Fault: But when I retired myself from the Noise and deceitful Vanity of the World, I found no true Comfort in any other Resolution than what I had from thence. I commend, from the bottom of my Heart, the same to your (I hope) happy Use. Dear Sir Hugh, let us be more generous than to believe we die as the Beasts that perish; but, with a Christian, Manly, Brave Resolution, look to what is eternal. I will not trouble you farther. The only great God, and holy God, Father, Son, and Holy Ghost, direct you to an happy End of your Life, and send us a joyful Resurrection. So prays,

Old-James near the Coast of Holland, April 24. 1665.

Your true Friend,

Marleburgh.

I beseech you to commend my Love to all mine Acquaintance: particularly I pray you that my Cousin Glascock may have a sight of this Letter, and as many Friends besides as you will, or any else that desire it.

To return to the glorious Victory. Two thousand sixty three Dutch Prisoners, whereof thirteen were Commanders, were brought to Colchester on June 19. before which Day the Duke himself came Post to Whitehall, and received the Congratulations of the Court. And a solemn Day of publick Thanksgiving for the late Victory, was observed in London and Westminster on June 30, and throughout all other Parts of England and Wales on July 4. And the King having waited on his Royal Mother to the Sea Coasts of Kent, in order to her Return into France, on June 29. went aboard the Royal-Charles in the Buoy of the Nore, where he bestowed the Honour of Knighthood upon several Captains who had behav'd themselves with the most distinguishing Valour in the late Fight, as Rear-Admiral Tiddiman, Captain Jordan, Caprain Sprague, and Captain Cuttings; as he had some few Days before conferred the same Honour, for the same Service, on Capt. Christopher Mings and Capt. Jeremy Smith. In Holland, the Misfortunes of their Fleet put the common People into so many Complaints and Murmurs, that the States were forced to comply with the popular Passions, and to question many of the Officers for Cowardice, or for ill Management, or even for Treachery itself; and, for a Sacrifice, to execute three of their Sea-Captains at the Helder; and to order two more to have their Swords broken over their Heads, and to make another stand some hours upon a Scaffold with a Halter about his Neck. All which Ceremony of Justice was rather to appease the Madness of the People, than to vindicate the Honour of their Country.

Discontents in Holland.

The Joys in England were soon abated by the dreadful Calamity of a raging Pestilence, which broke out in London about the middle of May, and spread with intolerable Infection through the City and Suburbs; and within those Bounds swept away 97306 Persons. It happen'd just forty Years after the Plague that dreadfully prevail'd in 1625, and made some People impute a Fatality to that Number; as if in this sense the Land was to have Rest but forty Years. The King retired to Hampton-Court, and thence to Salisbury, leaving the contagious Cities of London and Westminster to the affectionate Care of George Duke of Albemarle, who in the Heat of the Distemper continued at Whitehall, and gave Orders and Relief with such an unshaken Courage, as if he had been born to triumph over Diseases and Death. The first Method of Healing, was by Proclamation to command a General Fast, to be Religiously observed throughout the Kingdom of England, to the End that Prayers and Supplications might be every where made for the Removal of so heavy a Judgment; in a Form drawn up by the Bishops, and appointed by the King to be likewise used in all Churches and Chapels within the Bills of Mortality, on every Wednesday in the Week, during the Contagion. A second Office of Piety and Charity, was to order the making of continual Collections, publick and private, for Relief of the Sick and Needy in the time of such miserable Distress. A third Means of stopping the Plague, or hindring the Tumults and Distractions that might arise upon it, was to publish A Proclamation requiring all disbanded Officers and Soldiers who had served in the Armies of any of the late usurped Powers, to depart the Cities of London and Westminster, and not to return within twenty Miles of the same till November following. And lastly, Another way of restoring wholsome Breath was made use of, by ordering continual Fires to be kindled and kept in all the Streets and open Places of the City three whole Days and Nights together, to purifie the Air.

Proclamation.

The Lord High Admiral, the Duke of York, cared not to adventure his Person in another Sea-Fight, and therefore committed to the Earl of Sandwich the chief Command of the Navy; which, having repaired the Losses sustained in the late Action, and having fitted out for Service several of the Dutch Prizes, on the 5th of July they weigh'd about sixty

Sail

Sail from Soulbay, and made for the Coaſt of Holland; the Standard was born by the Earl of Sandwich, under whom Sir George Aſcue was Vice-Admiral, and Sir Thomas Tyddeman Rear-Admiral, Sir William Pen was Admiral of the White, under him Sir William Berkley Vice-Admiral, Sir Joſeph Jordan Rear-Admiral. The Blew Flag was carried by Sir Thomas Allen, whoſe Flag Officers were Sir Chriſtopher Mimms, and Captain Harman. The Dutch waited for the return of De Ruyter from Newfoundland, to which place, after his being beat off from Barbadoes, he had ſteer'd his Courſe with 17 Dutch Men of War, and arriving at St. John's, he took the Diamond of Plimouth and the Unity of Dartmouth, and plunder'd the Colony of their Proviſion and their very Cloaths: At Bay Bull's Harbour he took two Ships more, and in Pitt's Harbour three other Ships, and ranſack'd all the fiſhing Coaſts, and brought away above a hundred of the moſt able Seamen, becauſe they refuſed to enter into the Service of the States. With theſe few Prizes and his own Ships extremely damag'd, he crept home by the Coaſt of Norway and Denmark, and was immediately made Admiral of the Dutch Fleet, yet rather to carry the Flag than to command the Maritine Affairs, which in a new Model were put under the Superintendency of three of their great Men, De Witt, Huygens and Boreel.

The Earl of Sandwich finding the Dutch Fleet were not yet ready to meet him, ſailed in three Squadrons toward the North-Seas, and having notice that the Dutch Smyrna and Streights Fleet, with ſome of their Eaſt-India Men were got into the Harbour of Bergen in Norway, he ſent a Squadron of 22 Men of War under the Command of Sir Thomas Tyddeman, with Orders to ſail directly and attack them in that Port. This Enterprize had been more ſucceſsful, but that the Wind did not ſerve the Engliſh at the Mouth of the Harbour, and the Danes aſſiſted the Dutch in raiſing a Battery on the Banks of it; but, however, the Engliſh Ships lay and fir'd with ſo much Reſolution, that ſome few of the Dutch were fir'd, and many were diſabled. In this Action was ſlain a near Relation of the Earl of Sandwich, the Honourable Edward Mountague, Son to the Lord Mountague of Boughton. After this Attempt, the Engliſh Fleet on Aug. 30. ſet ſail for the Coaſt of Holland, and having ſuffer'd much by a Storm that carried them back Northward, on Sept. 4. they met with the Dutch Eaſt-India Men, and ſeveral other Merchant-men under a good Convoy; and tho' the ſtormy Weather much favour'd the eſcape of the Dutch, yet we took eight good Men of War, two of their beſt Eaſt-India Ships, and twenty Sail of their Merchant-men. And on Sept. 9. a part of our Fleet fell in with 18 Sail of Hollanders, and took the greateſt part of them, bringing away with the other Prizes four Dutch Men of War, and above one thouſand Priſoners.

The Parliament having been Prorogued from March 2. to June 21. was by Proclamation on May 30. further prorogu'd to a time which ſhould be preſixed at their Day of meeting on June 21. when it was accordingly prorogu'd to Aug. 1. and then again prorogu'd to meet at Oxford on Octob. 9. the King and Court chuſing that Place, as the moſt free from Infection. So on October 10. the King ſeated on a Throne at the upper-end of the great Hall in Chriſt-Church, made an acceptable Speech before the two Houſes to this effect:

" That they might confidently believe, that had " it not been abſolutely neceſſary to conſult with " them, he would not have now called them toge- " ther, when the Contagion had ſpread itſelf over " ſo many parts of the Kingdom. That he had en- " ter'd upon a War with the States General, by their " Advice and Encouragement; and that therefore " he deſired, they might receive Information of the " Conduct and Effects of it, to the end he might " have the continuance of their cheerful Supply. " That this War had prov'd more chargeable to him " than he could imagine it would have done. That " the Addition and Recruits which the Dutch made " to their Fleets, made it unavoidably neceſſary for " him to make a proportionable Preparation. That " as the Dutch endeavour'd by falſe Suggeſtions to " make themſelves Friends, ſo he himſelf had not " been wanting to encourage thoſe Princes who had " been wrong'd by the Dutch, to recover their own " by force; to which end he had aſſiſted the Biſhop " of Munſter with a conſiderable Sum of Money. " That for theſe Reaſons his Supply already gran- " ted was near ſpent, and the Publick Occaſions " would require much greater Aid. However, that " he made not War for War's ſake, but was ready " to receive all fair Propoſitions; tho' he thought " indeed the Dutch were no leſs inſolent than ever; " and yet had gain'd no Advantage that he knew " of.

Speech of the Lord Chancellor Hyde.

When his Majeſty had done ſpeaking, the Lord Chancellor Hyde made a much larger Speech, running over the whole Proceſs of State Affairs from before his Majeſty's Reſtauration to the preſent Juncture, obſerving, " That notwithſtanding the Af- " fronts put upon the Royal Family in Holland du- " ring the Uſurpation, his Majeſty was pleaſed to " imbark himſelf in one of their Ports, tho' preſt " by the two Neighbour Kings to have taken his " Paſſage thro' any part of their Territories. That " being return'd, the King was forc'd to ſupport " himſelf upon Credit, till the Armies were diſ- " banded, and the Fleet paid off; which Debt was " heightned by the neceſſary Supplies of his Maje- " ſty's Stores, ſo exhauſted at that time, that there " was not Arms for five thouſand Men, nor Proviſions for the ſetting out ten new Ships. That " under all theſe Difficulties, his Majeſty had " repleniſh'd his Stores, had reduc'd the Expence " of his Navy, by providing only a neceſſary " Guard for the Narrow-Seas, and a Fleet againſt " the Pyrates, which had brought them to Submiſ- " ſion. Then he repeated the ſeveral Injuries and " Inſolencies commitred by the Dutch; the neceſ- " ſity of vindicating the Rights and Honour of our " Nation; the King's referring of this Cauſe to the " Parliament, the Parliaments humble Deſires of " Redreſs; the States preparations for War; and the " whole Series of the War, and its ſucceſs until " that time; and then reflecting upon the greatneſs " of the King's Expence, he concluded with an " earneſt Motion for farther ſpeedy and effectual " Supplies.

Proceedings of the Commons.

In anſwer to this, the Houſe of Commons ſoon " return'd their Thanks to his Majeſty for his gra- " cious Care and Conduct, for the preſervation of " his People, and advancement of the Honour of " the Nation; declaring they would aſſiſt him with " their Lives and Fortunes in carrying on the pre- " ſent juſt and neceſſary War. And they readily " made good their Promiſe by granting an additional Supply of 1250000*l.* to be raiſed by Monthly Aſſeſſments, and threw in for a Benevolence one Months continuation of the Tax, to come in the Rear after the expiration of the other Payments, which they deſir'd his Majeſty would beſtow upon his Royal Highneſs.

The Honour done to the Univerſity.

On the laſt Day of their Seſſions the Houſe of Commons conſidering, that they ſate in the Convocation Houſe, voted, that the Thanks of their Houſe ſhould be given to the Chancellor, Maſter and Scholars of the famous Univerſity of Oxford, for their eminent Loyalty to his Majeſty, and to his Father of bleſſed Memory during the Rebellion; particularly for their Zeal and Courage in refuſing to be viſited by the uſurp'd Powers, and to ſubſcribe the Solemn League and Covenant; and in publiſhing to the World their excellent Reaſons to juſtifie their Refuſal, and to aſſert his Majeſty's and their own Rights. Which Thanks were accordingly preſented to the Univerſity in a full Convocation, by Mr. Lawrence Hyde, Sir Heneage Finch, Sir John Berkenhead, and Colonel Strangways, all which were now, or a little before made Doctors of Laws. And then on this 20th of October, the Money Bill, the Bill of Attainder of certain English Fugitives who had join'd with the Dutch, and a Bill for farther reſtraint of the Nonconformiſt Teachers, with ſome other Bills, the Parliament was prorogued to the twentieth of February next enſuing, then to meet at Weſtminſter; and at that meeting was again prorogued to April 23.

The Term kept at Oxford.

On October 11. his Majeſty by Proclamation had adjourn'd the Michaelmas Term from Weſtminſter to Oxford; ſo that ſoon after the Receſs of the Parliament, the ſeveral Courts of Juſtice ſate in the publick Schools; Sir John Keeling then firſt appearing on the Bench as Lord Chief Juſtice of England, and and Sir William Morton one of the Judges of the ſame Court, in the place of Sir Wadham Windham deceaſed. The next Hilary Term was from hence adjourn'd to Windſor, but upon ceaſing of the Plague was from thence reſtored to Weſtminſter.

Dutch Ambaſſador.

In the heat of this Summers War, the Dutch had ſtill their Ambaſſador Van Gotch Reſident in England, but when they found his Sollicitations for a Peace were to no purpoſe, they recalled him, and he took his leave of the King at Oxford, then receiving his Majeſty's Letter to the States, wherein he poſitively charg'd them to be Authors of the War, yet ſignified to them his readineſs to come to any fair and honourable Terms of Accommodation. In the mean time, the Mediterranean Seas were well ſecured by a good Squadron of Ships under the Command of Sir Jeremy Smith, and the Channel by another ſtrong Squadron Commanded by Sir Chriſtopher Mimms, who hearing of a Dutch Squadron near Oſtend, ſail'd after them, and chaſed them into the Weilings; and clearing the Seas and the very Coaſts of all Dutch Veſſels, he ſail'd away for the Coaſt of Sweden, and came to an Anchor at the Mouth of the Elve, where General Wrangle travel'd above thirty Miles to give a Viſit and a Complement to the Engliſh Admiral, who entertained him on Ship-board with great Civility and Splendor.

Our Seas ſecured.

Biſhop of Munſter againſt the Dutch.

While the Dutch were ſo great Sufferers at Sea, they had a greater Difficulty to defend themſelves by Land. For the Biſhop of Munſter, ſupported by the King of England's Money, had advanc'd into the Country of Frieſland, and defeating ſeveral conſiderable Parties of the Dutch, had taken ſome Towns, and had ſpoil'd and burnt ſeveral Villages, whilſt Prince Maurice with eighteen thouſand Men was able to do little more than to look on. The Dutch had no Friends or Aſſiſtants but the King of France, and Dukes of Lunenberg, and the Brandenburghers; theſe laſt were cold in the Cauſe, and choſe rather to be negotiating a Mediation between the States of Holland and the Biſhop of Munſter. The Dukes of Lunenberg were altogether as indifferent in the matter, and ſent to excuſe themſelves to the King of England, for what they had done, and pretending ignorance of the Grounds and Cauſes of the Biſhops taking Arms. The greateſt Hopes and Dependance of the States was to be in the French King, who yet ſent them only a Supply of ſome ſickly Troops, who could do no other Service but that of infecting a Camp, and therefore were ſent to Quarter in the Brandenburgher's Country, as if going meerly for freſh Air.

King of France faintly aſſiſts them.

Is afraid of the advantage of the Engliſh.

In the middle of Winter the French King began to be very ſenſible, that the Engliſh by Sea were much Superior to the Dutch, and therefore his Deſigns having been barely to keep the Ballance even, and to let them fight till they were both equally weaker than himſelf, he was now ſo much afraid of the Prevalency of the Engliſh, that he threatned to declare a War againſt them; but yet to make it rather an Intrigue than an open Rupture, he began with acquainting the Queen Mother of England, that tho' he could no longer keep off a Declaration of War againſt his Majeſty of Great Britain, yet he ſhould always preſerve the ſame Eſteem and Value for his Majeſty's Perſon, hoping his Britannick Majeſty would alway continue the ſame Kindneſs and Affection for him. Accordingly upon January 27. the French King's Declaration of War was publickly Proclaim'd, upon pretence of ſuccouring the States General, in conſequence of the Treaty made with them in 1662. the Lord Hollis being then Ambaſſador in France, enter'd his Remonſtrance againſt the Injuſtice of that ſudden Declaration, which ſubjected all Engliſh Men in their Perſons and Effects to the immediate Acts of Hoſtility, contrary to the Treaties between the two Crowns, which allow'd the Subjects of each Kingdom three Months time for the withdrawing their Eſtates and Perſons after any Rupture. And this prevail'd with the French King to iſſue out a ſecond Order, giving the Engliſh the ſaid Liberty of three Months to tranſport themſelves and their Goods. King Charles had no inclination to break with the French, and therefore demurr'd a while, but finding his People heartily diſpoſed to it, and knowing no other way to ſave his Honour, he did on Feb. 10. publiſh a Declaration, ſhewing, that whereas the French King pretending an Alliance Defenſive with the States General, had proclaimed War againſt his Subjects, he was reſolved to proſecute the War which the French King had ſo unjuſtly undertaken againſt him with his utmoſt Force by Sea and Land. He then iſſued out his Orders to all the Maritime Counties to put themſelves into a poſture of Defence, which they did with all poſſible alacrity, ſhewing the good old natural Averſion to the encroaching Power of France, and offering the continual Attendance of their Militia in Arms; but the King unwilling to give them a needleſs Trouble and Expence, was pleaſed to direct their Diſmiſſion and Return home till farther occaſion ſhould require.

1666. 17 Car. II. Declar. War gainſt England.

K. Charles not inclin'd to War with France.

Parl. in Ireland.

The Duke of Ormond Lord Lieutenant of Ireland, was remanded back to that Kingdom, and being receiv'd at Dublin in great ſplendour and Magnificence, held a Parliament there at the end of this Year, wherein ſeveral of the Members were accuſed and examined for having been in the Plot againſt the Government in 1663. and Robert Shapcot, Eſq; Alexander Staples, Eſq; and five others were called to the Bar, and there expelled the Houſe, and made incapable of ever ſitting in any Parliament of that Kingdom.

Parl. in Scotland.

The Parliament in Scotland iſſued out a ſevere Proclamation againſt the Conventicle Preachers as movers of Sedition; being provok'd to it by the inſolent Carriage of one Alexander Smith a depoſed Miniſter, who being taken at a Conventicle, was conven'd before the High Commiſſion Court, where he gave ſuch reviling Language to the Archbiſhop of St. Andrews, who ſate there as Preſident, that the Lord Commiſſioner order'd him to be put in Chains twenty four Hours in the Thieves Hole.

State of Religion.

As to Religion, the Government was more and more jealous of the Nonconformiſts, partly becauſe ſome of the rigid Fanaticks went into the actual Service of the Dutch againſt their own Natural Prince and Country, for which they were attainted in the Oxford Parliament, and the King afterward ſet forth his Proclamation, commanding Colonel John Desborough, Colonel Thomas Kelſey, and ſeveral others, who had been Officers in the late disbanded Armies to return into England by July 22. 1666. or elſe to ſtand guilty and be liable to the Pains of High-Treaſon: And partly becauſe the more moderate Diſſenters ſhew'd no affection to a War, againſt the Dutch, but rather deſired they might be alway our Proteſtant Allies, and a Peace made with them to turn our Arms againſt the French: And again partly, becauſe the Conventiclers in Scotland were very mutinous and inſolent, and were thought to have held Correſpondence with ſome of the Brethren in England. Hence to be the better informed of the Number and Strength of their Teaching Leaders, there were Orders and Inſtructions ſent from the Archbiſhop of Canterbury to the ſeveral Biſhops of his Province, " requiring them " punctually

Orders of the Abp. of Canterbury to find out the number of Diſſenting Teachers.

1665. 17 Car. II.

" punctually to obſerve all the Canons and Rules " concerning Ordination; and that, for the future, " they yearly certifie the Names of all Ordained by " them; and that they forthwith make a Return of " the Names and Degrees of all their Beneficed " Clergy, and of Lecturers, Schoolmaſters, and " Ushers, and Practitioners of Phyſick; as likewiſe " of all ejected Nonconformiſt Miniſters, with their " Place of Abode, and Manner of Life. Dated " July 7. 1665. The Returns of the ſeveral Biſhops made hereupon, are ſtill preſerved in Lambeth Library. And the Parliament at Oxford ſeem'd to be ſo apprehenſive of Danger from that Party, that they made a Law more ſevere than any former againſt the Teachers of them, to prohibit their dwelling or coming, unleſs upon the Road, within five Miles of any Corporation, or any other Place where they had been Miniſters, or had Preach'd after the Act of Oblivion, unleſs they firſt took the following Oath.

Corporation Act.

I A. B. do ſolemnly declare, that it is not lawful upon any Pretence whatſoever to take up Arms againſt the King: And that I do abhor the traiterous Poſition of taking Arms by his Authority againſt his Perſon, or againſt thoſe that are commiſſion'd by him, in purſuance of ſuch Commiſſion. And I do ſwear, that I will not at any time to come endeavour the Alteration of the Government either in Church or State. So help me God.

Diſſenters of a Judgment of it.

If the Reader would have the Diſſenters own Opinion and Account of this Act, he muſt take this late Report made of it in the Abridgment of Mr. Baxter's Life. —— " The main Promoters of this Act among " the Clergy were Archbiſhop Shelden, and Biſhop " Ward of Salisbury: And tho' the Earl of Southamp- " ton, Lord Treaſurer (who was one that had ever " adher'd to the King, but underſtood the Intereſt " of his Country and of Humanity) vehemently " oppoſed it, yet the Lord Chancellour and his " Party carried it. When this Act came out, thoſe " Miniſters that had any Maintenance of their " own, found out ſome Dwellings in obſcure Villa- " ges, or in ſome few Market-Towns that were " not Corporations. And ſome that had nothing, " left their Wives and Children, and hid themſelves " abroad, and ſometimes came ſecretly to them by " Night: but the moſt reſolved hereupon to preach " the more freely in Cities and Corporations, till " they went to Priſon. —— But the Nonconformiſts " being in this Act charg'd with ſeditious Doctrines " and heinous Crimes, many were much concern'd. " And hereupon they endeavour'd to find out a " Senſe in which the Oath might be taken ſafely, " to prevent their paſſing under that Brand to Po- " ſterity. Dr. Bates conſulted the Lord Keeper " Bridgman, who profeſs'd a great Reſpect for him, " about his taking it in a ſound Senſe. He, to ſa- " tisfie him, promis'd to be at the next Seſſions, " and there on the Bench to declare openly, that " by Endeavour in the Oath to change Church Go- " vernment, was meant only unlawful Endeavour. " Upon which Declaration, he and ſundry other " Nonconformiſts, to the number of twenty, took " it at the Seſſions, to avoid the Imputation of ſe- " ditious Doctrine.

any Diſſenters take the Oath, with a very odd Diſtinction.

The Matters of Fact here deliver'd are very much to be queſtion'd, and the Scruple itſelf ſeems very unreaſonable; for there hardly appears to be any diſtinction in a private Perſon's lawfully or unlawfully endeavouring any Alteration of the Government in Church or State, ſince whoever endeavours it, will be ſure to think it lawful ſo to endeavour: And yet while a lawful Government is legally eſtabliſh'd, the very Endeavours of private Men to alter it muſt be in themſelves unlawful. There ought perhaps rather to have been a Scruple at the round Expreſſion of not taking Arms againſt thoſe that are commiſſionated by the King, in purſuance of ſuch Commiſſion; and they might rather deſire to have it thus explain'd or underſtood, Thoſe that are legally commiſſionated, in a legal Purſuance of ſuch Commiſſion.

1665. 17 Car. II.

Tho' our own Diſſenting Brethren did, for the Reaſons before mentioned, and upon Account of the then receiv'd Opinion, that Indulgence to them was a Favour to the Papiſts, happen to raiſe the Zeal or Jealouſie of the two Houſes of Parliament againſt them; yet the King and his ſecret Council were alway diſpoſed to countenance and protect them: And the King, in Clemency and Good-nature, if not in Judgment and Conſcience, gave a very generous and faithful Protection to the Foreign Proteſtants, and eſpecially the French, even after the Breach with that Court; reſerving his Promiſes of Safety and Protection to them in his Declaration of War: for which, on Feb. 28. ſome Deputies from the French Church in the Savoy attended his Majeſty, with the humble Thanks of that Church for his good Protection and kind Indulgence expreſt toward them in his late Declaration againſt France. And to give them the greater Invitations of Security and Eaſe, the French Proteſtants had the Favour to have a new Church, and full Liberty of uſing it, granted to them in the City of Dublin: And when their firſt Aſſembly met at the opening of it, the Lord Lieutenant honour'd them with his Preſence, and with a firm Aſſurance of continuing to them their Liberty and a peaceable Enjoyment of it.

Diſſenters alway favour'd by the King.

The States of Holland having concluded a Peace with the Biſhop of Munſter, a mercenary Prince, and alſo with the King of Denmark, and depending on a joint Fleet from the King of France, began to put early out to Sea. Our Navy was in equal Forwardneſs: And becauſe the Duke of York was no more to adventure in Perſon, and the Earl of Sandwich was ſent Ambaſſadour to Spain, therefore Prince Rupert and the Duke of Albemarle were appointed to be his Majeſty's Generals at Sea for this Summer's Expedition, having Sir Thomas Allen Admiral of the White, and Sir William Berkley of the Blue; and on Apr. 23. they went down to the Fleet, and entred on their Command of it. They lay ſome time in the Buoy in the Nore, where they were viſited by his Majeſty and his Royal Highneſs on May 3. and on the 23d arrived at the Gun-fleet, and were riding in the Downs on May 29. when Prince Rupert received Orders to ſail with the White Squadron to the Weſt, to fight the French Fleet; who, by Report, were come out to join the Dutch. An artificial Rumour, that ſeems to have been given out on purpoſe to anſwer a double Deſign, of diſappointing the Dutch and dividing the Engliſh. What follows, is ſaid to be an Account given by Sir John Harman himſelf, who was Vice-Admiral of the Blue.

Pr Rupert and the D. of Albemarle joint Commanders at Sea.

Our Fleet divided.

" At the ſame time Prince Rupert ſailed from the " Fleet, the Dutch put out to Sea, the Wind at " North-Eaſt, a freſh Gale. This brought the Dutch " Fleet on the Coaſt of Dunkirk, and carried the " Prince to St. Helens on the Iſle of Wight. But the " Wind ſuddenly turning into the South-Weſt, " blew a ſtrong Gale, which brought the Dutch and " Duke to an Anchor; when Captain Bacon of the " Briſtol, by firing of his Guns, gave notice to the " Duke of the Approach of the Dutch. The Duke " ſummoned all the Captains on board, and in a " Council of War agreed to weigh Anchor, and " fight the Enemy. This was June 1. the Wind at " South-Weſt, blowing a ſtiff Gale, ſo that the " Dutch were forc'd to cut their Cables, not having " time to weigh Anchor: And tho' the Engliſh had " the Weathergage of the Dutch, yet the Wind ſo " bowed the Engliſh Ships, that they could not uſe " their loweſt Tire when they came up to fight. " Sir William Berkley's Squadron led the Van: The " Duke, when he came on the Coaſt of Dunkirk, to " avoid running on a Sand, made a ſudden Tack, " which brought his Top-Maſt to the Board; where- " upon he was forced to lie-by four or five hours, " till another was ſet up: But the Blue Squadron " knowing nothing of this, ſailed on, fighting

Sir John Harman's Account.

1666. 18 Car. II.

" through the Dutch Fleet, which were five to one " to the Blue. Here Sir William was kill'd, and " his Ship the Swiftſure, a ſecond Rate, taken; ſo " was the Eſſex, a Frigat of the third Rate; and " Sir John Harman, in the Henry, got among nine " Ships of the Zealand Squadron, commanded by " Vice-Admiral Everts; and theſe ſo diſabled the " Henry, that Everts offered Sir John Quarter if he " would yield: but Sir John told him it was not " come to that yet, and gave him a Broadſide, and " killed Everts.

" Hereupon this Zealand Squadron ſailed to aſſiſt " their Fellows behind, and left Sir John to the " Mercy of three Fireſhips; one of which grappled " the Henry on her Starboard Quarters: The Dutch " Fire-Ships do not take Fire at firſt, as the Engliſh " do, but firſt raiſe a Smoak incredibly ſtinking, " and ſo thick as nothing can be ſeen at the leaſt " diſtance; ſo as it could not be ſeen where the " Fire-Ship's Grappling-Irons were fixed: but up- " on the Fire-Ship's taking Fire, Sir John's Boat- " ſwain ſwang himſelf into the Fire-Ship, and by " the Light of the Fire found where the Grappling- " Irons were fixed in the Fire-Ship, and let them " looſe, and got on Board again. But another Fire- " Ship grappled the Henry in her Lar-board Quar- " ter Deck, and took Fire; and Sir John's Chap- " lain, and about 50 more skipped into the Sea: " whereupon Sir John ran among the Mariners, and " threatned to kill any who did not aſſiſt in quench- " ing the Fire: whereupon Sir John's Cabbin-Boy " ſeeing the Sails on fire, with wet Cloths encoun- " tred, and put it out; but the Cordage being burnt, " the Croſs-beam fell upon Sir John's Leg, and " brake it. By this time, the third Fire-Ship made " towards the Henry; but four Pieces of Cannon, " laden with Chain-Shot, diſabled her, ſo that Sir " John made a hard ſhift to bring his Ship into " Harwich, and the next Day after fitted her up, " and tho' his Leg were broke, went out to Sea a- " gain to have fought, but the Fight was over be- " fore he could come up to the Fleet.

" In this Day's Fight, wherein the Engliſh could " make no uſe of their lower Tire of Guns, and " therefore Sir Thomas Tiddiman, Rear-Admiral of " the Red, refuſed to engage; the Engliſh were " much damnified in their Rigging: yet next Day " the Duke engaged the Dutch again, tho' above " double his Number of Ships, and the Dutch hour- " ly receiving freſh Supplies: So he did the Day " after, the 3d of June, when the Duke cauſed ſe- " veral of his moſt diſabled Ships, after he had ta- " ken out their Men, to be burnt, and had but ſix- " teen Ships left able to fight, with which he re- " treated, putting them between the Dutch and his " unburn'd diſabled Ships.

" Towards the Evening the Engliſh eſpied the " White Squadron making up towards them, and " therefore were ſtriving to make the neareſt way " to meet them. The Prince-Royal, commanded by " Sir George Askew, run on a Sand and was loſt, and " Sir George made Priſoner. Yet next Day the " Fleets fought again; and by the Help of the " White Squadron, with much ado got into Har- " bour.

This Account ſeems to have too much Sharpneſs in it, as wrote with a ſtrong Biaſs of Prejudice to the Court and Councils of that time; and therefore concludes with leaving it a Problem, whether it were a greater Treachery to divide the Fleet, or Madneſs to fight the Dutch with the reſt, when they could not uſe their lower Tire of Guns. By more authentick Reports it did appear, that in the firſt Day's Fight the Dutch had two of their great Ships fired; and in the ſecond Day's Engagement loſt three Sail more; and in the laſt Day, when the Prince was joined, the Engliſh fought through the Dutch Fleet five ſeveral times with good Advantage, and ſo broke them, that they had not above 25 in any one Body, who only maintained a running Fight, having loſt above 15 Ships and 21 Captains, and of common Seamen above five thouſand.

1666. 18 Car. II.

The Policy of the French King was on this occaſion very eminent and odious; for, inſtead of ſending his promiſed Fleet to aſſiſt the Dutch, he ſent it to deſtroy the Engliſh in their Plantations upon the Leeward Iſlands, and almoſt totally expell'd the Engliſh out of St. Chriſtopher's, and interrupted all the Trade in thoſe Parts. And to do ſecret Miſchief nearer home, he ſends the Governour of Chouſey over from France in a ſmall Boat to carry a Letter to Major General Lambert there in Priſon, and to offer him good Terms for contriving how to deliver up that Iſland to the French: But this perfidious Governour being apprehended, did at laſt confeſs the whole Matter, and he and his Pilot were executed on the common Gallows for Spies.

Policy and Treachery of the French King.

The Dutch had the credit of appearing at Sea again before the Engliſh were ready to come out; and therefore ſeem'd to ride braving on our Coaſts, and often to make toward France, in a ſecond Expectation of meeting a French Fleet to join them, under the Command of Beaufort, who had other ſecret Orders. By July 19. the Engliſh Fleet under the ſame Command of Prince Rupert and the Duke of Albemarle, ſailed from the Buoy in the Nore, the Flags being carried by Sir Joſeph Jordan, Sir Robert Holmes, Sir Thomas Allen, Sir Thomas Tyddiman, Captain Utburt, Sir Jeremy Smith, Sir Edward Spragge, and Captain Kempthorn. They ſoon came up with the Dutch, and obtain'd a glorious Victory, ſinking and burning above 20 of their Ships, killing Evertſon Admiral of Zealand, Tirrick Hiddes Admiral of Friezland, the Vice-Admiral of Friezland, and Rear-Adm. Van-Saen, with above 4000 common Seamen, and near 3000 wounded; and chaſing their Ships along the Coaſts of Zealand and Holland, till with the Advantage of Flats and Banks, over which our great Ships could not follow them, they got into the Weilings. And the good Uſe that was made of this Victory in a wiſe Purſuit of it, was a greater Honour to the Engliſh, and a ſeverer Blow to the Dutch, than the Victory itſelf. There is this Account of it given by Authority.

The Dutch come out again.

" Fireſhips clapp'd the three great Merchant Men

" and burn'd them. This put all their Fleet in a " great confuſion, which Sir Robert Holmes perceiv-

" Day, being the ninth of Auguſt, ſo that we had
" that Day enough to fall upon the Iſland of the " Ulie; Sir Robert Holmes being alſo inform'd by
" ſome Priſoners, that the Place was not ſo conſider-
" able as it had been repreſented; and Night com-
" ing on, and perceiving two of our Frigots, viz.
" the Dragon and Garland aground, it was thought
" moſt convenient for all Hands firſt to go to work
" to get them off, which being done, he continued

" Rain happen'd that Night, that the Arms and Am" munition in the Boats, Hoys and Ketches having
" receiv'd much Damage, he thought it beſt to weigh,
" and as the Wind ſtood to attempt ſomething up-
" on the Iſland of Schelling, which, the Morning
" proving moderate Weather, he accordingly pro-
" ſecuted, landing by the help of his Long Boats 11
" Companies on ſhore, where he diſcover'd only
" ſome few ſcattering Fellows, but met with little " or no oppoſition. Leaving therefore one Compa" ny to ſecure his Boats, himſelf with ten Compa" nies marched up three Miles to the Capital Town
" called Brandaris, a very fair Town or Dorp of a" bove 1000 Houſes, where keeping five Compa" nies upon the skirts of the Town, to prevent any
" Surprize of the Enemy, he ſent the other five to " fire and burn the Town; but finding them (as " his Vigilance was to ſecure a ſafe Retreat) ſome-
" what ſlow to execute that Order, and fearing they " might be tempted to forget themſelves in the Pil-
" lage, he himſelf was forc'd to ſet fire to ſome
" Houſes on the Windward, the ſooner to per" fect the Work and haſten his Men away; which
" burnt with that violence, that in half an Hours
" time the moſt part of the Town was in a Flame.
" The Town was reported by thoſe that were found " in it to have been very Rich, and ſo it appear'd
" by ſome of the Soldiers Pockets; but very few " People were to be ſeen in it, having had time to " run away from the Danger, except ſome old Men
" and Women, who were uſed with all Gentleneſs
" and Humanity.

" The remaining Villages of that Iſland, which " are two or three, had certainly run the ſame For-
" tune, but conſidering it was near High-water,
" Sir Robert thought it not fit to loſe that oppor" tunity of getting off to Sea, which he thought
" more conſiderable than to ſtay 24 Hours for the " deſtruction of them, remembering likewiſe, that
" the Chanels between the Buoys were narrow, and " not bold without a frank Wind. By High-water
" he got off all his Men, and ſet Sail out of that " place, retaining ſtill his firſt Intention of falling
" upon the Ulie; but as he was going on Board he
" ceiv'd Orders from the Generals to return to the " Fleet with all ſpeed, which accordingly he did
" that Evening, being Auguſt 10. leaving behind
" him the Marks of a ſingular Conduct and moſt
" vigorous Execution, and bringing off beſides a con-
" ſiderable Booty to the private Soldiers and Sea-
" men, the States Pleaſure-Boat of 12 Guns, with" out other loſs than of ſix Men kill'd, and about
" as many wounded.

To recover theſe Diſaſters, or to ſeem not to feel them, the Dutch put to Sea again about the end of Auguſt, and on September 1. paſſed by Dover, making for the Coaſts of France, ſtill purſuing the vain hopes of being join'd by the French Admiral the Duke of Beaufort, who lay at Rochel with forty Sail. Our Fleet under the ſole Command of Prince Rupert ſtood after them to the Bulloign-Road, where the Dutch to avoid fighting hawl'd cloſe to ſhore, and had been there burnt and ſtav'd, if a ſudden Storm had not oblig'd the Engliſh to return to St. Hellens, and given the Dutch opportunity to reach their own Coaſts. The French Fleet made a little ſhew of ſailing, when three or four Men of War being ſeparated from the reſt, fell among a Squadron of ours, Commanded by Sir Thomas Allen, who took the Ruby, a Ship of 1000 Tuns and 500 Men, Commanded by Monſieur la Roche; which Accident was a fair Pretence for the French Fleet to come no farther. And De Ruyter being forc'd to go home by Sickneſs, made the States recal their Fleet, and brought the People into great Murmurs at the ill Succeſs of it. Van Tromp and De Ruyter fell out, and laid the Miſcarriage upon one another; the States favour the lat-

Fire of London. In the mean time there came a moſt dreadful Calamity upon the City of London, of which, this Account was given by Authority. "On September 2. "at one of the Clock in the Morning, there happen'd to break out a ſad and deplorable Fire in "Pudding-lane near New-fiſh-ſtreet, which falling out "at that Hour of the Night, and in a Quarter of "the Town ſo cloſe built with wooden pitch'd "Houſes, ſpread itſelf ſo far before Day, and with "ſuch diſtraction to the Inhabitants and Neighbours, "that Care was not taken for the timely preventing the farther diffuſion of it by pulling down "Houſes, as ought to have been: So that this lamentable Fire in a ſhort time became too big to "be maſter'd by any Engines or working near it. "It fell out moſt unhappily too, that a violent "Eaſterly Wind fomented it, and kept it burning "all that Day and the Night following, ſpreading "itſelf up to Grace-Church-ſtreet, and downwards "from Canon-ſtreet to the Water-ſide as far as the "Three Cranes in the Vintry.

"The People in all parts about it diſtracted by "the vaſtneſs of it, and the particular Care to carry away their Goods; many Attempts were made "to prevent the ſpreading of it, by pulling down "Houſes, and making great Intervals, but all in "vain; the Fire ſeizing upon the Timber and Rubbiſh, and ſo continuing itſelf even thro' thoſe "Spaces, and raging in a bright Flame all Monday "and Tueſday, notwithſtanding his Majeſty's own, "and his Royal Highneſſes indefatigable and perſonal Pains to apply all poſſible Remedies to prevent it, calling upon and helping the People with "their Guards, and a great number of Nobility and "Gentry unweariedly aſſiſting therein, for which "they were requited with a thouſand Bleſſings from "the poor diſtreſſed People. By the favour of "God the Wind ſlacken'd a little on Tueſday Night, "and the Flames meeting with Brick Buildings at "the Temple, by little and little it was obſerv'd to "loſe its Force on that ſide, ſo that on Wedneſday "Morning we began to hope well, and his Royal "Highneſs never deſpairing or ſlackning his perſonal Care, wrought ſo well that Day, aſſiſted "in ſome parts by the Lords of the Council before "and behind it, that a ſtop was put to it at the "Temple Church, near Holbourn-Bridge, Pie-Corner, "Alderſgate, Criplegate, near the lower end of Coleman-ſtreet, at the end of Baſing-hall-ſtreet, by the "Poſtern, at the upper end of Biſhopſgate-ſtreet and "Leaden-hall-ſtreet, at the Standard in Cornhill, at "the Church in Fan-Church-ſtreet, near Cloathworker's-Hall in Mincing-lane, at the middle of Mark-lane, and at the Tower-Dock.

"On Thurſday by the Bleſſing of God it was "wholly beat down and extinguiſh'd; but ſo, as "that Evening it unhappily burſt out again a "freſh at the Temple, by the falling of ſome Sparks "(as is ſuppoſed) upon a Pile of wooden Buildings: But his Royal Highneſs who watch'd there "that whole Night in Perſon, by the great Labours and Diligence uſed, and eſpecially by applying Powder to blow up the Houſes about it, "before Day moſt happily maſter'd it.

"Divers Strangers, Dutch and French, were during the Fire apprehended, upon ſuſpicion that "they contributed miſchievouſly to it, who are all "impriſon'd, and Informations prepar'd to make "a ſevere Inquiſition thereupon by my Lord Chief "Juſtice Keeling, aſſiſted by ſome of the Lords of "the Privy Council, and ſome principal Members "of the City; notwithſtanding which Suſpicions, "the manner of the burning all along in a Train, "and ſo blown forward in all its way by ſtrong "Winds, makes us conclude, the whole was the effect of an unhappy Chance, or to ſpeak better, "the heavy Hand of God upon us for our Sins, 1666. "ſhewing us the terrour of his Judgment in thus 18 Car. II. "raiſing the Fire, and immediately after his mira- "culous and never enough to be acknowledg'd "Mercy in putting a ſtop to it, when we were in "the laſt Deſpair; and that all Attempts for the "quenching it, however induſtriouſly purſued, "ſeem'd inſufficient. His Majeſty then ſate hourly in Council, and ever ſince hath continued making Rounds about the City in all parts of it "where the Danger and Miſchief was greateſt, till "this Morning, September 8, that he hath ſent his "Grace the Duke of Albemarle, whom he hath called for to aſſiſt him on this great Occaſion, to "put his happy and ſucceſsful Hand to the finiſhing this memorable Deliverance.

Such was the Account given by Authority the ſame Week wherein this Conflagration happen'd. On the Monument afterward erected near the place where the Fire began, there was an Inſcription to this effect, that the dreadful Flames broke out in a Lane adjoining, about Midnight, and being driven by a high Wind, conſumed not only the adjacent Parts but Places far remote; and with incredible noiſe and fury deſtroy'd eighty nine Churches, among which was the Cathedral of Paul's, City-Gates, Guild-Hall, many publick Structures, Hoſpitals, Schools, Libraries, a vaſt number of ſtately Edifices, thirteen thouſand two hundred Dwelling Houſes, four hundred Streets; of ſix and twenty Wards it utterly ruin'd fifteen, and left eight others ſhatter'd and half burnt. The Ruins of the City were four hundred thirty ſix Acres, extending from the Tower along the Thames ſide to the Temple Church, and from the North-Eaſt Gate along the City Wall to Holbourn-Bridge or Fleet-Ditch. It was mercileſs to the Eſtates and Fortunes of the Citizens, but favourable to their Lives, that it might in all things reſemble the laſt and great Conflagration. The Deſtruction was ſudden, for in a ſhort time the ſame City which was ſeen in a flouriſhing Condition was reduc'd to nothing; and after three Days, when the fatal Fire had in appearance overcome all means of Reſiſtance and Humane Counſels, by the Will of Heaven it ſtopt and was extinguiſh'd. Account inſcribed on the Monument.

Various were the Opinions how this Fire began. Moſt People did then look upon it to be the hand of God in a terrible Judgment upon a wicked City: Some ſaid, it was contriv'd and carried on by a Conſpiracy of Papiſts, which was offer'd to be made appear in the Popiſh Plot. Others did ſuſpect it an inſidious way of the Dutch and French making War upon us, their two Fleets being neareſt to joining at that very time. There was but one Man tried at the Old-Bailey for being the Incendiary, who was convicted by his own Confeſſion, and executed for it. His Name was Robert Hubert a French Hugonot of Rohan in Normandy. Some People ſhamm'd away this Confeſſion, and ſaid he was Non Compos, and had a mind it ſeems to aſſume the Glory of being hang'd for the greateſt Villain: Others ſay, he was Sober and Penitent, and being after Conviction carried thro' the Ruins to ſhew where he put Fire, he himſelf directed thro' the Aſhes and Rubbiſh, and pointed at the very Spot whereon the firſt burning Houſe had ſtood. It was ſoon after complain'd of, that Hubert was not ſufficiently examin'd, who ſet him to work, or who join'd with him. And Mr. Hawles in his Remarks upon Fitz-Harris's Trial, is bold to ſay, that the Commons reſolving to examine Hubert upon that matter, next Day Hubert was hanged before the Houſe ſate, and ſo could tell no farther Tales. But among all the Proofs or Conjectures, nothing more certain than this, that in the beginning of this very Year, John Rathbone, William Sanders, and ſix others, formerly Officers or Soldiers in the great Rebellion, were Tried, Convicted and Executed for conſpiring the Death of his Majeſty, and the Subverſion of the Government; in order whereunto the City of London was to be ſet on Fire by them on Sept. 3. which by ſome Aſtrological Scheme they pitch'd upon as a lucky Day for ſuch an Enterprize. So as the Fire being afterward Conject. how this Fire began.

And it ſo far encreaſed a Suſpicion of the Malice of our Foreign Enemies, that thoſe Conſpirators ſo condemn'd and executed were ſaid to be under the Direction of a Committee who ſate conſtantly in London, and received Orders from another Council in Holland.

Iriſh Affairs. In Ireland the Gariſon of Kaiickfergus fell into a Mutiny about the middle of May, proteſting in a Declaration, under their Hands, againſt diverting the publick Money to other Uſes when it was deſigned for their Pay: They turn'd their Officers out of Town, and poſſeſt themſelves of the Caſtle, and were making themſelves a formidable Party; but the Earl of Arran with four Companies of the Royal Regiment, being ſent from Dublin in the Dartmouth Frigot to reduce them, forc'd them from the Walls of the Town, and purſued them to the Caſtle, where they defended themſelves with great Obſtinacy, till his Grace the Lord Lieutenant himſelf arrived with ſome of his Horſe Guards, and made them yield upon Diſcretion. The Tories were very inſolent and troubleſome, one Gorſteloe at the Head of a great Party of them aſſaulted the Caſtle of Cornet-Ormsby in the County of Mayo, and took it. In Ulſter ſeveral other Parties of them got together and did much Miſchief. Sir James Ware his Majeſty's Auditor General died at Dublin on Saturday Dec. 1.

and was buried there the Tuesday following, his Place being conferred on his Son, who was on St. Andrew's Day ſworn in the Exchequer.

In Scotland the rigid Presbyterians were as mutinous as the Popiſh Tories were in Ireland. Fifteen hundred of them got into a Body, and by degrees formed themſelves into an Army, having their Foot commanded by one Wallace, and their Horſe by one Lairmont, formerly a Tailor; moſt of the other Leaders of their Troops were caſhier d Preachers, by whoſe Advice they all took the Coveant at Lanrick, and being drawn up for Battle on Pentland Hills, their Word was The Covenant. They were abſolutely defeated and diſperſt by the King's Forces, who had on their Right Wing his Majeſty's two Troops of Guards, and the Major Generals Troop making four Squadrons; and on the Left the Lieutenant General Duke Hamilton, the Earls of Athol and Aysby, and many other Noblemen. Of the Rebels about 500 were kill'd, and 100 taken Priſoners, of which moſt were executed. After the quieting of this dangerous Inſurrection, the Convention of the Eſtates met at Edinburgh in January, and fell immediately upon the effectual Means of ſecuring the Kingdom from publick and domeſtick Dangers, and of putting the ſame into a poſture of Defence, and of raiſing ſix thouſand Pounds Engliſh by the Month, to maintain ſuch Forces as ſhould be employ'd in his Majeſty's Service.

State of Religion.

Tueſday Aug. 14. was with Joy and Devotion obſerved as a Day of Thankſgiving for the ſignal Victory it pleaſed God lately to give his Majeſty's Fleet over the Dutch, with a Form of publick Thankſgiving compoſed for that Occaſion, and an excellent Sermon preach'd before his Majeſty at Whitehall by the Reverend Dr. Dolben Clerk of the Cloſet and Dean of Weſtmiſter, publiſhed by his Majeſty's ſpecial Command. This Example ſet in the Cities of London and Weſtminſter on Aug. 14. was by like Authority follow'd in all parts of England upon Thurſday Aug. 23. A Proclamation was given September 13. in a very pious and affectionate Stile, for enjoining a General Faſt to be obſerv'd throughout England and Wales, to be ſolemnly obſerv'd on Wedneſday October 10. upon occaſion of the late dreadful Fire in London. And by Act of Parliament the ſecond of September was to be annually obſerv'd within the Bills of Mortality, for a Day of Faſting and Humiliation, with a publick Office preſcrib'd for that purpoſe. The dreadful Plague had by ſlow degrees abated, but was not perfectly extinct till the beginning of this cold Winter, when Nov. 14. his Majeſty in Council was pleaſed to Order, that Tueſday the twentieth of this Month ſhould be obſerv'd in the Cities of London and Weſtminſter and the ſeveral Pariſhes within the weekly Bills of Mortality, as a Day of Thankſgiving to God for aſſwaging the late Contagion and Peſtilence.

Annual Thankſgiving on Sept. 2.

Dangers of Popery.

The Fears and Jealouſies of Popery were very juſt and very great, and were chiefly owing to the Mediations of the Queen-Mother in France, the private Sollicitations of the Duke of York, and the unhappy perverſion of his Dutcheſs, the like Inclinations of the new Miniſtry, and eſpecially of Bennet and Clifford; and the King's own diſpoſition to any thing that he was told ſhould be conſiſtent with his Intereſts and Pleaſures. The Lords and Commons in Parliament, tho' ſo many of the Members were themſelves a part of the Court, Camp and Miniſtry, would not be ſilent under theſe imminent Perils, but agreed in a zealous Addreſs to the King for executing the Laws againſt Popiſh Prieſts and Jeſuits, who were labouring to pervert his Majeſty's Subjects; and for maintaining the true Religion eſtabliſh'd in the Church of England. Which concurrent ſenſe of the two Houſes could not ſuffer the King to do leſs than to publiſh a Proclamation Nov. 10. for the baniſhment of all Popiſh Prieſts and Jeſuits, and putting the Laws in ſpeedy and due execution againſt all other Popiſh Recuſants; his Majeſty therein declaring, "That he had ſeriouſly conſider'd of the "late Addreſs and humble Deſire made to him by "the Lords Spiritual and Temporal and Commons "in this preſent Parliament aſſembled, for ſuppreſſing the Inſolencies of the Papiſts; and accepting "with much contentment their great Care for the "preſervation of the true Religion eſtabliſh'd in "this Kingdom; and therefore he had thought fit "to charge and require all Popiſh Prieſts and Jeſuits "to depart the Kingdom before Decemb. 10. next "enſuing, upon pain of having the Laws and Statutes of this Realm inflicted upon them, the Magiſtrates and Officers in all Ports having Order "upon their declaring themſelves, to aſſiſt them in "ſeeing them ſhipp'd and ſent away; and charging "the Judges and all Magiſtrates and Miniſters of "Juſtice to put the Laws in execution againſt all "Papiſt Recuſants, and ſuch as are ſuſpected ſo to "be, in order to their Conviction; and that in "their reſpective Courts, Aſſizes, Goal-Deliveries, "and Quarter-Seſſions, they publickly give the "Laws in charge againſt them; and that the Judges "of Aſſize in their Returns give an Account of their "Proceedings therein to the Chancellor for the time "being.

Addreſs of both Houſes, to ſuppreſs the Inſolence of the Papiſts.

A Proclamation enſues.

The Proteſtant Diſſenters were by the King's principle of Government as much unmoleſted as the Juſtices and Magiſtates would poſſibly allow; and the deſtruction of Churches, and diſperſion of the Clergy of London, gave the Nonconformiſt Preachers a better opportunity of gathering Congregations to them, their own Hiſtory tells us, "This unhappy Fire "made the way of the Nonconformiſts yet the "plainer to them: For the Churches being burnt, "and the Pariſh Miniſters gone, for want of Places "and Maintenance, the People's Neceſſities became "unqueſtionable, for they had no places now to "worſhip God in, ſaving a few Churches that were "left ſtanding, which would not hold any conſi"derable part of them. Whereupon the Noncon"formiſts open'd publick Meeting Houſes, and were "very full: And as Circumſtances then ſtood, to "have forbid the People to hear them, had been in "effect to forbid them all publick Worſhip of God, "and require them to live like Atheiſts.

Repreſented by themſelves.

His Majeſty at the cloſe of the laſt Seſſion had promiſed his two Houſes of Parliament, that he would conſtitute Commiſſioners for taking the Accounts of the ſeveral Sums of Monies which had been raiſed and aſſign'd to his Majeſty, during the preſent great and important Wars, to the end that his Majeſty and his People might be ſatisfied in the faithful Application and Expence of them. In diſcharge of this Royal Word and Promiſe, the King granted a Commiſſion under his Great Seal of England to John Earl of Bridgwater, Oliver Earl of Bolingbrook, Robert Earl of Ailesbury, Edward Viſcount Conway, John Lord Lucas, and John Lord Crew, Peers of this Realm, together with Sir William Lowther, Sir Tho. Meares, Sir Humphry Winch, Sir Tho. Littleton, Sir William Thompſon, Sir Thomas Osborne, Sir Thomas Gower, Col. Sam. Sandys, Giles Strangways, William Garway, Edward Boſcowen and John Jones, Eſquires, being Members of the Houſe of Commons, with full Power to examine and ſtate the ſaid Accounts; and they open'd their Commiſſion on Wedneſday April 17. by which manner of Proceeding it appear'd, that the Enquiry into publick Accounts was hitherto reſerv'd to the King, and by him graciouſly promiſed to the People, and purſued in a Method that ſeem'd to ſignify, the Lords were as much concern'd in this matter as the Commons.

Commiſſioners for publick Accounts.

Negotiation for a Peace with Holland.

The Ambaſſadours Extraordinary from Sweden (who took leave of his Majeſty in a ſolemn Audience an April 26.) were Mediators for a Treaty of Peace with the Dutch to be negotiated at Breda: And for the management of it the King appointed the right Honourable Denzil Lord Hollis, one of the Lords of his Majeſty's moſt Honourable Privy Council, and the Honourable Henry Coventry, Eſq; of his Majeſty's Bed-

Bed-Chamber, his Ambaſſadors Extraordinary for the ſaid Treaty, who took their leave of his Majeſty on May 1. and arriving in few Days at Breda, made their publick Entry there in a very ſolemn manner, and fell ſoon upon adjuſting the Preliminaries of a common Treaty, which being ſettled about the beginning of June, the Ambaſſadors of England, France and Sweden, the Plenipotentiaries of the States, and of Denmark, repaired to the Caſtle belonging to the Prince of Orange, and fell upon the Buſineſs of a general Accommodation with great Care and Diligence. Mr. Coventry one of the Engliſh Ambaſſadors, to prepare for the finiſhing Stroaks was ſent over to the Engliſh Court for a private Conference with the King and his Cabinet Council, and came back with the full Reſolutions of Agreement. So that on June 21. the Articles were ſign'd by the ſeveral Miniſters; yet the Inſtruments of Ratification were not interchang'd till Auguſt 14. when the Peace was immediately proclaim'd before the Doors of all the Plenipotentiaries; and was publiſh'd by Proclamation in the City of London on Aug. 24. and was afterward confirm'd by an additional Treaty, concluded by Sir William Temple in January following.

There was this falſe ſtep in the management of this Affair, that the King conſented to a Motion for this Treaty without requiring a Ceſſation of Arms: and yet imagin'd that the commencing of a Treaty would of itſelf as effectually bring on that Ceſſation. So the King in a reliance upon the Honour of the Dutch, that they would not be open Enemies while they were treating to be Friends; and being eaſily inclin'd to ſave ſo great a part of the Revenue for other occaſions, ſet out no Fleet and ſeem'd to make no Preparations for it. The Dutch took their Advantage of this Negligence and Security, and appeared abroad at Sea with a Fleet of above 70 Sail; and well knowing that our great Ships were laid up, they rode in triumph upon our Coaſts and at the Mouth of the Thames, and ſeeing no oppoſition they ſailed up to the Medway, and made themſelves Maſters of the Fort of Sheerneſs, tho' ſtoutly defended by Sir Edward Spragg. To ſtop their farther Progreſs ſeveral Veſſels were ſunk about Muſcle-Bank, the narroweſt part of the River, and a ſtrong Chain was put croſs, and the Lord General, the Duke of Albemarle, was got down there with a Land Force to oppoſe them. But having the Advantage of an Eaſterly Wind and a ſtronge Tide, they preſt on and broke thro' the Chain, and burnt the three Ships that lay to guard it, the Mathias, the Unity and the Charles the Fifth, all three Dutch Ships taken in the preſent War, damaging many other of our Veſſels, and carrying along with them the Hull of the Royal Charles, which was twice fired by the Engliſh and as often quench'd by the Enemy. They advanc'd with ſix Men of War and five Fireſhips as far as Upnore-Caſtle, and burnt the Royal-Oak, and much injur'd the Loyal-London and the Great James, which they left moſt part under Water: And after all this Inſult and Miſchief, they fell down the River again with no great Damage to themſelves but the running a-ground two of their Men of War, which they were forc'd to ſet on Fire.

The Conſternation at Court, and in the City of London was extremely great. An Eye Witneſs has thought fit to give this Account of it. " I was on " June 10. in the Morning walking in St. James's " Park, when a Gentleman whiſper'd to me, that " the Dutch were enter'd the River. Then the King " had fed his Ducks, and was walking on the Weſt " ſide of the Park; and as we walked Prince Rupert overtook us, and met the King at the farther " end of the Pall-Mall; and the King told the Prince " how he had ſhot a Duck, and ſuch a Dog fetch'd " it; and ſo they walk'd on till they came to St. " James's Houſe, and there the King ſaid to the " Prince, Let's go ſee Cambridge and Kendal (the " Duke's two Sons who then lay a dying) but up- " on his Return to Whitehall he found all in an Uproar, the Counteſs of Caſtlemain (as 'twas ſaid) be- 1667. " wailing above all others, that ſhe ſhould be the firſt 19 Car. II. " torn in pieces.---I was at London in the Plague and " Fire Years, yet in neither did I obſerve ſuch Con- " ſternation and Confuſion in the Looks of all Men, " as at this time, and with great Cauſe: For if the " Dutch had then come up to London they had " found all open to them; not one Gun mounted " at Tilbury-Fort, nor one Frigot ready in the Ri- " ver; ſo as they might have forced all the Ships in " the River up to the Bridge, and there have burnt " them, which would have certainly fir'd the Tower " and all the Suburbs Weſt to Blackwall, as well as " Southwark below Bridge.

When the Dutch got out to Sea again, they made many other Attempts of Bravery or rather of Revenge, even after the Peace was actually concluded at Breda, they ſail'd to Portſmouth with a Deſign upon our Ships in that Harbour, but finding them too well ſecured by the Diligence of the Earl of Macclesfield and Captain Eliot (whom the King had ſent thither for that purpoſe) they appear'd before Plymouth on July 15. and made an Attempt upon Torbay on July 19. but were beaten off; then they ſtood Eaſtward, and again enter'd the River of Thames on July 23. and got above 25 Sail into Tilbury-Hope, where we had all our Naval Strength lying, about 18 Men of War and Fireſhips. Sir Edward Spragge who Commanded this Engliſh Squadron was unluckily abſent when the Dutch came firſt up to them; and therefore the Dutch with their Fireſhips did ſome conſiderable Miſchief; but Sir Edward returning on Ship-board, and being ſoon after join'd with a ſmall Squadron from Harwich under Sir Joſeph Jordan, the Dutch were glad to fall down the River again, with as much damage to themſelves as to us. After this they bid defiance to the Town of Harwich, and landed three thouſand Men near Felſtone-Cliff, and made two Aſſaults upon Languard-Fort, and made a ſtand againſt the Train'd-Bands, under Command of the Earl of Suffolk, and without any great Loſs or Execution they reimbark'd and ſailed away again for the River Thames, and came up once more as far as Hull-Haven, and engaged the Squadron of Sir Edward Spragge, made up of the Succeſs and 18 other Men of War; where the Encounter was ſo ſharp that the Engliſh ſtood off for Graveſend, and left the Dutch at Anchor in the Hope; but they ſoon fell down to the Buoy in the Nore, and leaving Sir Edward Spragge the Honour of ſeeming to purſue them, they got to Sea again, and made to the Weſtern Coaſts, and attempted to Land firſt at Wenbury in Devonſhire, and then near Cawland in Cornwal, and hover'd about with continual Alarms and Offers of Deſcent, till not being able any longer to diſſemble their knowledge of a Peace, De Ruyter invited ſome of the Coniſh Gentlemen on Board him, and gave them a liberal Entertainment, and excuſing ſome of his later Acts of Hoſtility, he diſmiſt them Civily and ſail'd home.

Other Attempts of the Dutch.

It was ſome wonder to the wiſer Men, that theſe hoſtile Attempts of the Dutch did not ſeem at all to interrupt or retard the depending Treaty: there ſeem'd to be no Thoughts of Repriſal, or of any Demand of Satisfaction; nay, to obviate the Expectance of any Reparation, this Article was inſerted, That all Offences, Injuries, Damages, and Loſſes ſuſtained on either ſide by the King and States, or their Subjects, during this War, or at any time before, upon any Cauſe or Pretence whatſoever, be totally expunged and buried in Oblivion: With another 4th Article, That all Ships, Goods, and Moveables, which had come at any time into the Power of either Party, or their Subjects, ſhould remain with the preſent Poſſeſſors thereof, without any Compenſation or Reſtitution for the ſame, without any exception of Time, Place, or Things.

No ſatisfaction made for theſe Inſults.

The Miſcarriages of this Summer made it neceſſary that ſome one great Miniſter of State ſhould bear the Odium of 'em, and be given up for a Sacrifice

Fall of the Earl of Clarendon.

1667. 19 Car. II. crifice to the murmuring Part of the People. In purſuance of this common Policy, on Aug. 31. his Majeſty thought fit to take the Great Seal from his faithful Miniſter the Earl of Clarendon, and give it to Sir Orlando Bridgman, with the Title of Lord Keeper; and by that Mark of Diſgrace to give up the Lord Clarendon to the Malice of his Enemies, who ſoon hunted him into Impeachment and Baniſhment; though, no doubt, the greateſt Diſpleaſure taken at him, was for his heartily oppoſing Popery, and thoſe new Miniſters who were the profeſs'd Favourers and Promoters of it. The King diſcharg'd this wiſe Counſellor when he had greateſt need of him; for he had within few Months before loſt his other greateſt Stateſman, the Lord Treaſurer Southampton: and the King, not knowing where to find a ſingle Perſon of equal Capacity for ſo great a Truſt, made Commiſſioners for executing the Office of Lord High Treaſurer of England, his Grace the Duke of Albemarle Lord General, the Right Honourable the Lord Aſhley Chancellor of the Exchequer, Sir Thomas Clifford Comptroller of the Houſhold, Sir William Coventry and Sir John Duncomb Knights and Privy Counſellors.

Commiſſioners for the Treaſury.

The Terrors of the Dutch Fleet made another great Alteration in calling the Parliament together before their time: for the King was ſo ſurpriz'd, and the Miniſtry ſo afraid, that on June 26. his Majeſty declared by Proclamation, That whereas the Parliament now in being did ſtand Prorogued till the 10th Day of October next, his Majeſty having had reaſon to believe at the time of the ſaid Prorogation, that his Affairs might have permitted the Attendance of the Members of both Houſes on his Majeſty's Service and their own Occaſions in their reſpective Countries until that time; his Majeſty now finding this his Kingdom invaded during a Treaty of Peace, and eſteeming himſelf ever moſt ſafe in the Advice and Affection of his People, in Parliament, hath therefore thought fit to call together both his Houſes of Parliament, ſtraitly charging and commanding all and every the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and all Knights, Citizens, Burgeſſes, and Barons of the Cinque-Ports, that they and every of them do perſonally appear, re-aſſemble themſelves, and give their Attendance at Weſtminſter on the 25th Day of July next, then and there to treat of the weighty Affairs of his Majeſty's Kingdom.

Parliam. to meet before their time.

In Obedience to this his Majeſty's Proclamation, on Thurſday the 25th of July the two Houſes aſſembled at Weſtminſter, and upon his Majeſty's Deſires, made known to them by the Lord Chancellour, adjourn'd till Monday the 29th inſtant, at which time his Majeſty came to the Houſe of Lords with the uſual Ceremonies, and made a gracious Speech to the two Houſes, "excuſing the Trouble of extraordinary Attendance, and telling them the Occaſions of their Meeting were now leſs urgent, and therefore he could again diſmiſs them to the Day formerly prefix'd, and ſhould take an Opportunity, in the mean while, to do ſome things which he hoped would not be unwelcome to them: and ſo Prorogu'd them to the 10th of October.

King's Speech.

Accordingly on Thurſday Octob. 10. his Majeſty with the uſual Solemnity came into the Houſe of Lords, where the Houſe of Commons with their Speaker attending him, his Majeſty in a ſhort Speech acquainted them, "That at their laſt Meeting, about eleven Weeks ſince, he thought fit to Prorogue them to this Day, reſolving there ſhould be a Seſſion now, and in the mean while giving himſelf time to do ſome things which he hoped would not be unwelcome to them, but be a Foundation for a greater Confidence between them for the future; which things he had ſince done, and would therefore now leave the other Reaſons of their Prorogation, with ſome other Matters of which he was pleaſed to acquaint them, to be declared by the Lord Keeper. And accordingly the new Lord Keeper Bridgman, in Obedience to his Majeſty's Commands, began in a larger Speech to acquaint the two Houſes with "his Majeſty's farther Reaſons for the late Prorogation, together with his Deſires of recommending to their Wiſdom the Obſtructions of foreign Commerce, and the Settlement of ſuch a Ballance of Trade between the Subjects of this Kingdom and thoſe of Scotland, that we may not be prejudiced by the Import of their Commodities hither, nor yet they ſo far diſcourag'd as to leave off Trading here, and find out another Vent abroad: in which his Majeſty had uſed ſome Endeavours, but found it too hard for him without the Aſſiſtance of his Parliament. That as to the Accounts of the Monies given towards the War, which his Majeſty formerly promiſed ſhould be given them, his Majeſty had commanded his Officers to make them ready: and ſince that way of Commiſſion wherein he put the Examination of them had been ineffectual, his Majeſty was willing the Parliament ſhould follow their own method to examine them in what way and as ſtrictly as they pleaſed, aſſuring them he will leave every one concerned to ſtand or fall according to his own Innocency or Guilt. That his Majeſty having reaſon to believe, that ſome diſaffected Perſons taking Advantage of the Publick Neceſſity, had ſpread abroad Diſcourſes and Rumours reflecting upon the Government; yet his Majeſty promis'd himſelf, from the good Affections of his Parliament, that every one of them, in their ſeveral Places, would endeavour to preſerve a good Underſtanding betwixt him and his People: Adding, That if any juſt Grievances ſhall have happen'd, his Majeſty will be as willing and ready to redreſs them for the future, as they to have them repreſented: His Majeſty not doubting, but that they will give healing and moderate Counſels, and imprint that known Truth into his Subject's Hearts, that there is no diſtinct Intereſt betwixt the King and his People, but that the Good of the one is the Good of both.

1666. 19 Car. Lord Keeper's Speech.

The Houſe of Commons took into Conſideration his Majeſty's gracious Speech, and reſolved upon an Addreſs of Thanks to his Majeſty, in which they deſired and obtained the Concurrence of the Lords: Accordingly on Octob. 15. after Noon, the two Houſes in a Body, with their Speakers, attended his Majeſty in the Banquetting-Houſe at Whitehall; where the Lord Keeper, as Speaker of the Houſe of Lords, in the Name of the two Houſes, made this following Addreſs to his Majeſty.

Proceedings of the Commons.

"WE your Majeſty's Loyal and Faithful Subjects, the Lords and Commons in Parliament aſſembled, having taken into our ſerious Conſideration your Majeſty's gracious Speech, wherein you were pleaſed to let us know, that your Majeſty thought fit to Prorogue this Parliament till the 10th of October, that you might give your ſelf time to do ſomething which would not be unwelcome, but a Foundation for a greater Confidence for the future between your Majeſty and your People; We find Ourſelves bound in Duty to return your Majeſty our humble and hearty Thanks for the gracious Declaration of your Royal Intentions in that your Majeſty's gracious Speech, and in that deliver'd by your Majeſty's Command by the Lord Keeper. And particularly that your Majeſty hath been pleaſed to disband the late raiſed Forces, and to diſmiſs the Papiſts from out your Guards and other military Employments: For your Majeſty's Care in quickning the Execution of the Act for reſtraining the Importation of foreign Cattel; For cauſing the Canary Patent to be ſurrendred and vacated: And that, more eſpecially, your Majeſty hath been pleaſed to diſplace the late Lord Chancellour, and remove him from the Exerciſe of Publick Truſt and Employment in Affairs of State.

Addreſs to the 1667. 19 Car. II. ng's nſwer.

To which Addreſs his Majeſty was pleaſed to make his Return to this effect: That he thanked the Houſes for their Thanks; that he was glad that what he had done had ſo well pleaſed them; and, that for what concerned the Earl of Clarendon, he ſhould not, during his Life, be employed in any Places of Publick Truſt.

As to the Caſe of this great Man, the Earl of Clarendon; It was on Octob. 26. that Mr. Edward Seymour charg'd him in the Houſe of Commons viva voce with many great Crimes: whereupon, after a long Debate upon the manner of Proceeding, a Committee was appointed to reduce the Accuſation to Heads, and preſent them to this Houſe. And accordingly on Novemb. 6. Sir Thomas Littleton reported, that the Accuſation was reduced to Heads, which he read in his Place, and afterward delivered the ſame in at the Clerk's Table; which are as followeth:

harge ainſt m.

I. "That the Earl of Clarendon hath deſigned a "Standing Army to be raiſed, and to Govern the "Kingdom thereby, and adviſed the King to Diſ-"ſolve this preſent Parliament, to lay aſide all "Thoughts of Parliaments for the future, to Go-"vern by a military Power, and to maintain the "ſame by free Quarter and Contribution.

II. "That he hath, in the Hearing of the King's "Subjects, falſly and ſeditiouſly ſaid, That the "King was in his Heart a Papiſt, or Popiſhly af-"fected; or Words to that effect.

III. "That he hath received great Sums of Mo-"ney for the procuring of the Canary Patent, and "other illegal Patents; and granted illegal Injun-"ctions to ſtop Proceedings at Law againſt them, "and other illegal Patents formerly granted.

IV. "That he hath adviſed and procured divers "of his Majeſty's Subjects to be Impriſoned againſt "Law, in remote Iſlands, Gariſons, and other Pla-"ces, thereby to prevent them from the Benefit of "the Law, and to produce Preſidents for the Im-"priſoning any other of his Majeſty's Subjects in "like manner.

V. "That he procured his Majeſty's Cuſtoms to "be Farmed at Under-rates, knowing the ſame; "and great pretended Debts to be paid by his Ma-"jeſty, to the Payment of which his Majeſty was "not in ſtrictneſs bound: and afterwards received "great Sums of Money for procuring the ſame.

VI. "That he received great Sums of Money "from the Company of Vintners, or ſome of them, "or their Agents, for inhancing the Prizes of "Wines, and for freeing them from the Payment "of legal Penalties which they had incurred.

VII. "That he hath in a ſhort time gained to "himſelf a greater Eſtate than can be imagined to "be gained lawfully in ſo ſhort a time, and, con-"trary to his Oath, he hath procured ſeveral Grants "under the Seal, from his Majeſty to himſelf and "Relations, of ſeveral of his Majeſty's Lands, He-"reditaments, and Leaſes, to the Diſprofit of his "Majeſty.

VIII. "That he hath introduced an Arbitrary "Government in his Majeſty's foreign Plantations, "and hath cauſed ſuch as complained thereof be-"fore his Majeſty and Council, to be long impri-"ſoned for ſo doing.

IX. "That he did reject and fruſtrate a Propoſal "and Undertaking approved by his Majeſty for the "Preſervation of Nevis and St. Chriſtopher's, and "reducing the French Plantations to his Majeſty's "Obedience, after the Commiſſions were drawn for "that purpoſe; which was the Occaſion of our "great Loſſes and Damage in thoſe Parts.

X. "That he held Correſpondence with Cromwel "and his Complices when he was in Parts beyond "the Seas attending his Majeſty, and thereby ad-"hered to the King's Enemies.

XI. "That he adviſed and effected the Sale of "Dunkirk to the French King, being part of his "Majeſty's Dominions, together with the Ammu-"nitions, Artillery, and all ſorts of Stores there, "and for no greater Value than the ſaid Ammuni-"tions, Artillery, and Stores were worth. 1667. 19 Car. XII. "That the ſaid Earl did unduly cauſe his "Majeſty's Letters Patents under the Great Seal of "England to one Dr. Crowther, to be alter'd, and "the Enrollment thereof to be unduly raiſed.

XIII. "That he hath in an arbitrary way exami-"ned and drawn into queſtion divers of his Maje-"ſty's Subjects, concerning their Lands, Tene-"ments, Goods, Chattels, and Properties, deter-"mined thereof at the Council-Table, and ſtopped "Proceedings at Law by Order of the Council-Ta-"ble, and threatned ſome that pleaded the Statute "of 17 Car. 1.

XIV. "That he hath cauſed Quo Warranto's to "be iſſued out againſt moſt of the Corporations of "England, immediately after their Charters were "confirmed by Act of Parliament, to the intent he "might require great Sums of Money of them for "renewing their Charters; which when they com-"plied withall, he cauſed the ſaid Quo Warranto's "to be diſcharged, and Proſecution therein to "ceaſe.

XV. "That he procured the Bills of Settlement "of Ireland, and received great Sums of Money for "the ſame in moſt corrupt and unlawful manner.

XVI. "That he hath deluded and betrayed his "Majeſty and the Nation in all foreign Treaties "and Negotiations relating to the late War, and "betrayed and diſcovered his Majeſty's ſecret Coun-"ſels to his Enemies.

XVII. "That he was a principal Author of that "fatal Council of dividing the Fleet about June "1666.

After a ſecond Reading of theſe Heads of Accuſation, it was reaſonably moved, that in regard the Articles were many, they might be referr'd to the Committee to ſee how far they were true, becauſe Fame is too ſlender a ground to bring a Man upon the Stage. But this was carried in the Negative; and the Articles were again ſingly and ſeparately read over, and ſeveral Members ſpoke to the Truth or Probability of them: And the Queſtion being put, Whether this Houſe hath ſufficient Inducement to Impeach, it was carried in the Affirmative. And after farther Debate, whether to Impeach of Treaſon or high Miſdemeanours only, it was reſolved that an Impeachment of Treaſon, and other Crimes and Miſdemeanours, be carried up to the Lords againſt Edward Earl of Clarendon by Mr. Seymour; who on Novemb. 12. went up to the Houſe of Lords; and the Lord Keeper Bridgman being come to the Bar to meet him, he deliver'd himſelf to this purpoſe. Reſolution to Impeach him.

My Lords,

THE Commons aſſembled in Parliament having been informed of ſeveral traiterous Practices, and other high Crimes and Miſdemeanours committed by Edward Earl of Clarendon, a Member of this honourable Houſe; have commanded me to impeach him: and I do accordingly impeach him of High Treaſon, and other Crimes and Miſdemeanours, in the Name of the ſaid Commons, and of all the Commons of England. And they have farther commanded me to deſire your Lordſhips to ſequeſter him from Parliament, and to commit him to ſafe Cuſtody, and in convenient time they will exhibit Articles againſt him. Mr. Seymour's Speech at his carrying up the Impeachment.

The Lords were generally diſſatisfied with this Proceeding, and did not commit the Earl to Cuſtody, and gave this Reaſon for their not doing it, in a Conference with the Commons, Becauſe the Accuſation is only of Treaſon in general, without charging any thing in particular. The Commons, highly diſpleaſed at the Lords not committing the Earl, referred it to a Committee to bring in Reaſons why a Perſon generally charged by the Houſe of Commons for High Treaſon ought to be committed to ſafe Cuſtody, Lords not ſatisfied with this Proceeding.

1667. 19 Car. II. dy, tho' the particular Treason be not specified at the time of such Charge. Which Reasons and the Precedents to inforce them were communicated at a free Conference; after which, on December 2. the Lords sent down a Message to the Commons by two Judges to this effect, That upon the Report made to them of the last free Conference, they are not satisfied to Commit or Sequester from Parliament the Earl of Clarendon, without the particular Treason be mention'd or assign'd. And in Return the Commons did resolve, That the Lords not having complied with the Desire of the Commons in committing the Earl of Clarendon, and sequestring him from Parliament upon the Impeachment from this House, is an obstruction to the publick Justice of the Kingdom, and is a President of evil and dangerous Consequence.

Difference between the two Houses.

The Earl withdraws and leaves a Paper.

The Earl seeing no hopes of allaying this Storm so raised against him, thought it most adviseable to withdraw himself, and only to leave behind him some written Vindication of his Innocence and Honour, which he did in a Paper thus entitul'd.

To the Right Honourable the Lords Spiritual and Temporal in Parliament assembled, the Humble Petition and Address of Edward Earl of Clarendon.

May it please your Lordships,

" I Cannot express the unsupportable Trouble and " Grief of Mind I sustain under the Apprehen- " sion of being Misrepresented to your Lordships; " and when I hear how much of your Lordships " time hath been spent upon the mention of me, " as it is attended with more publick Consequences, " and of the Differences of Opinion which have al- " ready, or may probably arise between your Lord- " ships and the Honourable House of Commons, " whereby the great and weighty Affairs of the " Kingdom may be obstructed in the time of so ge- " neral a Dissatisfaction.

" I am very unfortunate to find myself to suffer " so much under two very disadvantageous Re- " flections, which are in no degree applicable to " me.

" The First, From the greatness of my Estate and " Fortune collected and made in so few Years, which " if it be proportionable to what is reported, may " very reasonably cause my Integrity to be suspected.

" The Second, That I have been the sole Manager " and chief Minister in all the Transactions of State " since the King's Return into England to August last, " and therefore that all Miscarriages and Misfor- " tunes ought to be imputed to me and my Coun- " cils.

" Concerning my Estate, your Lordships will not " believe that after Malice and Envy have been so " inquisitive and so sharp-sighted, I will offer any " thing to your Lordships but what is exactly true; " and I do assure your Lordships, in the first place, " that (excepting from the King's Bounty) I have " never received nor taken one Penny but what was " generally understood to be the just lawful Perqui- " sites of my Office, by the constant Practice of the " best Times, which I did in my own Judgment " conceive to be that of my Ld Coventry and my Ld " Elsmere; the Practice of which I constantly obser- " ved, altho' the Office in both their Times was law- " fully worth double to what it was to me, and I be- " lieve now is. That all the Courtesies and Fa- " vours which I have been able to obtain from the " King for other Persons in Church or State, or in " Westminster-Hall, have never been worth to me five " Pounds: So that your Lordships may be confident " I am as innocent from Corruption as from any " disloyal thought, which after near 30 Years Ser- " vice of the Crown in some Difficulties and Di- " stresses, I did never expect would be objected to " me in my Age. And I do assure your Lordships, " and shall make it very manifest, that the several " Sums of Money, and some parcels of Land, which " his Majesty hath bountifully bestowed upon me, " since his Return into England, are worth more " than all I have amounts unto; so far am I from 1667 " advancing my Estate by indirect means. And tho' 19 Car. " this Bounty of his hath very far exceeded my Me- " rit or my Expectation, yet some others have been " as fortunate at least in the same Bounty, who " had as small pretences to it, and have no great " Reason to envy my Condition.

" Concerning the other Imputation of the Credit " and Power of being Chief Minister, and so causing " all to be done that I had a mind to, I have no " more to say, than that I had the good Fortune " to serve a Master of a very great Judgment and " Understanding, and be always join'd with Per- " sons of great Ability and Experience, without " whose Advice and Concurrence never any thing " hath been done.

" Before his Majesty's coming into England, he was " constantly attended by the then Marquis of Or- " mond, the late Lord Culpeper, and Mr. Secretary " Nicholas, who were equally trusted with myself, " and without whose joint Advice and Concur- " rence, when they were all present (as some of " them always were) I never gave any Council. As " soon as it pleased God to bring his Majesty into " England, he established his Privy Council, and " shortly out of them he chose a number of Honour- " able Persons of great Reputation (who for the " most part are still alive) as a Committee for Fo- " reign Affairs, and Consideration of such things " as in the Nature of them required much Secrecy, " and with these Persons he vouchsafed to join me; " and I am confident this Committee never transac- " ted any thing of Moment (his Majesty being al- " ways present) without presenting the same first to " the Council Board, and I must appeal to them " concerning my Carriage, and whether we were " not all of one Mind in matters of Importance.

" For more than two Years I never knew any " Differences in the Councils, or that there were " any Complaints in the Kingdom, which I whol- " ly impute to his Majesty's great Wisdom, and " the entire Concurrence of his Counsellors, with- " out the vanity of assuming any thing to myself: " And therefore I hope I shall not be singly charg- " ed with any thing that hath since fallen out a- " miss. But from the time Mr. Secretary Nicholas " was removed from his Place there were great Al- " terations; and whosoever knew any thing of the " Court and Councils, know well how much my " Credit hath since that time been diminished, tho' " his Majesty graciously vouchsafed still to hear my " Advice in most of his Affairs: Nor hath there " been from that time to this above one or two " Persons brought to the Council, or preferred to " any considerable Office in the Court, who have " been of my intimate Acquaintance, or suspected to " have any Kindness for me; and most of them most " notoriously known to have been very long my Ene- " mies and of different Judgment and Principles " from me, both in Church and State, and have ta- " ken all opportunities to lessen my Credit with the " King, and with all other Persons, by misrepresen- " ting and misreporting all that I said or did; and " perswading Men I have done them some prejudice " with his Majesty, or crossed them in some of their " Pretensions; tho' his Majesty's Goodness and Ju- " stice was such, that it made little Impression up- " on him.

" In my humble Opinion, the great Misfortunes " of the Kingdom have proceeded from the War, to " which it is notoriously known, that I was always " most averse, and may without Vanity say, I did " not only foresee, but declare the Mischiefs we " should run into, by entring into a War before any " Alliances made with the Neighbouring Princes, " and that it may not be imputed to his Majesty's " want of Care, or the Negligence of his Counsel- " lors, that no such Alliances were enter'd into, I " must take the boldness to say, his Majesty left " nothing unattempted in order thereunto, and

" know-

1667. 19 Car. II.

" knowing this well, that France resolv'd to begin " a War upon Spain, as soon as his Catholick " Majesty should depart this World, which be- " ing much sooner expected by them, they had " in the two Winters before been at great Charges " in providing plentiful Magazines of all Pro- " visions upon the Frontiers, that they might be " ready for the War, his Majesty used all possible " Means to prepare and dispose the Spaniard with " that Apprehension, offering his Friendship to that " degree as might be for the Benefit and Security " of both Crowns.

" But Spain flattering itself that France would not " break with them, at least, that they would not " give them any Cause, by administring matter of " Jealousie to them, never made any real Approach " towards a Friendship with his Majesty, but both " by their Ambassadors here, and to his Majesty's " Ambassador at Madrid, always persisted as Preli- " minaries upon the giving up of Dunkirk, Tangier " and Jamaica.

" Tho' France had an Ambassadour here, to whom " a Project of a Treaty was offer'd, and the Lord " Hollis his Majesty's Ambassadour at Paris, used all " Endeavours to pursue and prosecute the said " Treaty, yet it was quickly discern'd, that the " principal Design of France was to draw his Maje- " sty into such a nearer Alliance as might advance " their Design, without which they had no mind to " enter into the Treaty proposed. And this was " the state of Affairs, when the War was enter'd in- " to with the Dutch, from which time neither " Crown much consider'd the making any Alliance " with England.

" As I did from my Soul abhor the entring into " this War, so I presumed never to give any Ad- " vice or Counsel for the way of managing it, but " by opposing many Propositions, which seemed to " the late Lord Treasurer and myself to be unrea- " sonable, as the payment of the Seamen by Tickets, " and many other Particulars which added to the " Expence, my Enemies took all occasions to inveigh " against me, and making their Friendship with o- " thers out of the Council of more licentious Princi- " ples, and who knew well enough how much I " disliked and complained of the Liberty they took " to themselves of reviling all Counsels and Coun- " sellors, and turning all things serious and sacred " into Ridicule; they took all ways imaginable to " render me ungrateful to all sorts of Men (whom " I shall be compelled to name in my defence) per- " swading those who miscarried in any of their De- " signs, that it was the Chancellor's doing; where- " of I never knew any thing. However, they could " not withdraw the King's Favour from me, who " was still pleased to use my Service with others, " nor was there ever any thing done but with the " joint Advice of at least the major part of those " who were consulted with. And as his Majesty " commanded my Service in the late Treaties, so I " never gave the least Advice in private, nor wrote " one Letter to any one Person in either of those " Negotiations but upon the Advice of the Council, " and also after it was read in Council, or at least " by the King himself and some others: And if I " prepared any Instructions or Memorials it was by " the King's Command, and the Request of the Se- " cretaries who desired my Assistance: Nor was it " any Wish of my own, that any Ambassadour " should give me any Account of the Transactions, " but to the Secretaries, to whom I was always " ready to advise; nor am I conscious to myself of " ever having given Advice that both proved mis- " chievous or inconvenient to his Majesty; and I " have been so far from being the sole Manager of " Affairs, that I have not in the whole last Year " been above twice with his Majesty in any Room " alone, and very seldom in the two or three Years " Preceding. And since the Parliament at Oxford, " it hath been very visible, that my Credit hath " been very little, and that very few things have " been hearken'd to, which have been proposed by " me, but contradicted eo nomine because proposed " by me. 1667. 19 Car. II.

" I most humbly beseech your Lordships to re- " member the Office and Trust I had for seven " Years, in which, in discharge of my Duty, I was " obliged to stop and obstruct many Mens Preten- " ces, and refused to set the Seal to many Pardons " and other Grants, which would have been profi- " table to those who procured them, and many " whereof, upon my Representation to his Majesty, " were for ever stopt, which naturally has raised " many Enemies to me. And my frequent concur- " ring, upon the Desires of the late Lord Treasurer " (with whom I had the Honour to have a long " and vast Friendship to his Death) in repreſenting " several Excesses and Exorbitances, the yearly Issue " so far exceeding the Revenues, provoked many " Persons concern'd, of great Power and Credit, to " do me all the ill Offices they could. And yet I " may faithfully say, that I never medled with any " part of the Revenue or the Administration of it, " but when I was desired by the late Lord Treasurer " to give him my Assistance and Advice, having had " the Honour formerly to serve the Crown as Chan- " cellour of the Exchequer, which was for the most " part in his Majesty's Presence. Nor have I ever " been in the least degree concerned, in point of " Profit, in letting any part of his Majesty's Reve- " nue, nor have ever Treated or Debated it but in " his Majesty's Presence, in which my Opinion " concurr'd always with the major part of the Coun- " sellors who were present.

" All which upon Examination will be made ma- " nifest to your Lordships, how much soever my " Integrity is blasted by the Malice of those who I " am confident do not believe themselves. Nor " have I in my Life upon all the Treaties, or o- " therwise, received the value of one Shilling from " all the King's or Princes in the World (excepting " the Books of the Louvre Print, sent me by the " Chancellor of France by that King's Direction) " but from my own Master, to whose intire Service " and the Good and Welfare of my Country, no " Man's Heart was ever more devoted.

" This being my present Condition, I do most " humbly beseech your Lordships to entertain a fa- " vourable Opinion of me, and to believe me to be " innocent from those foul Aspersions, until the con- " trary shall be proved, which I am sure can never " be by any Man worthy to be believ'd: And since " the Distempers of the Times, and the Difference " between the two Houses in the present Debate, " with the Power and Malice of my Enemies, who " gave out that I should prevail with his Majesty " to Prorogue or Dissolve this Parliament in Dis- " pleasure, and threaten to expose me to the Rage " and Fury of the People, may make me to be " look'd upon as the Cause which obstructs the " King's Service, and Unity and Peace of the King- " dom.

" I most humbly beseech your Lordships, that I " may not forfeit your Lordships Favour and Pro- " tection by withdrawing myself from so powerful " a Persecution, in hope that I may be able by such " withdrawing hereafter to appear, and make my " Defence, when his Majesty's Justice (to which I " shall always submit) may not be obstructed or " controuled by the Power and Malice of those who " have sworn my Destruction.

CLARENDON.

Publick Account of the E.'s withdraw- ing.

Upon News at Court of the Earls withdrawing, there was care taken to give this publick Advertise- ment of it. Whitehall December 4. Yesterday Morning became publick the first notice of the Earl of Clarendon's having withdrawn himself, but the time when he retired is not certain. This Afternoon his Majesty was pleased to declare his Pleasure in Council, that the said Earl be put out of the Council, and remain henceforth divested of the Place of a Counsellor. The Lords, on Dec. 3. sent a Message to the Commons by two Judges, that they had received a large Petition from the Earl of Clarendon, which intimated that he was withdrawn. Whereupon the Commons order'd, that Sir Thomas Clifford, Comptroller of the King's Houshold, be sent to the King, to desire the Ports may be stopped. And at a Conference between the two Houses, the Duke of Buckingham deliver'd up the Earl's Petition in this way of Insult and Derision; "That the Lords had "commanded him to deliver to the Commons that "scandalous and seditious Paper sent from the Earl "of Clarendon: they bid me present it to you, and "desire you in convenient time to send it to them "again; for it has a Stile which they are in love "with, and they desire to keep it. This way of ridiculing the Afflictions of a great Man, and turning the Justice of the Nation into a Jest, could not but offend all sober serious People, and made them the more capable of understanding Who it was Whom the Earl in his Paper chiefly meant, when he complained of some Enemies of more licentious Principles, who took to themselves the Liberty of reviling all Counsels and Counsellors, and turning all things serious and sacred into Ridicule.

1667. 19 Car. II.

Proceedings upon it in Parliament.

Insult of the D. of Buck.

The Earl's Paper censur'd by the Commons.

The Commons, to justifie their own Proceeding, resolved upon the Question, That the Paper sent to the Lords by the Earl of Clarendon, and by them sent down to the House of Commons, and now read, is scandalous and seditious, and doth reproach the King and the publick Justice of the Nation. And after a Motion and Debate for burning the Paper, or desiring the Lords to burn it (as was done by the Hands of the common Hangman on Dec. 12.) and a Proposal for bringing in a Bill of Attainder; the House at last agreed in this Vote, Resolved, that this House taking notice of the Flight of the Earl of Clarendon, being under an Impeachment of High Treason by this House, the King's Majesty be humbly desired to issue out his Proclamation for summoning the said Earl to appear by a Day, and to apprehend him in order to his Trial. And Resolved, To send to the Lords for their Concurrence to this Vote. But the Lords, who seemed to have a more favourable Opinion of the Person accused, as well as a Concern for their own Rights, would not concur; and on Dec. 14. deliver'd their Reasons for not concurring, having the Day before sent down to the Commons a Bill for banishing the said Earl, and therefore now declaring, that their Lordships, upon Consideration of the whole State of Affairs, and of the Kingdom, had, upon Grounds of Prudence and Justice, thought fit, for securing of King and Kingdom, to proceed in a Legislative way against the said Earl, and had to that end pass'd and sent down to them a Bill of Banishment and Incapacity against him. After many Speeches and Debates among the Commons, some being against the Bill, because it went too far in condemning a Man before the Hearing of him; others opposing it upon a contrary Opinion, that the Penalties of Incapacity and Banishment were not adequate to the Crimes which that House had charged against him; on Dec. 18. the Bill was read the third time, and the Question being put for passing of it, sixty five were for it, and forty two against it. And it easily obtained the Royal Assent; for it was indeed the wisest Course to prevent a Legal Answer, and to stop the Discovery of some Secrets that must have been otherwise exposed.

A Bill of Banishment,

Pass'd by the King.

Actions of the French.

This Summer the French King, with a mighty Army, had fallen into Flanders, and taken Charleroy, Oudenard, Tournay, Douay, Courtrich, Lisle, and other Parts of the Spanish Netherlands; and had farther advanc'd his Conquests in Alsatia and Franche-Comte; that he began to strike a Terror upon the Dutch, and a reasonable Jealousie upon the English, and to make it their mutual Interest and Inclination to stop the furious Progress of his Arms. Under this Disposition, the King sent to Sir William Temple, his then Resident at Brussels, to take joint Measures with the States for a defensive Alliance against the French. The States being very apprehensive of their Danger, did wisely and readily comply with the Proposals offer'd by Sir William, who stept over to wait on the King, and to take his more immediate Instructions, and within five Days after was sent back with Powers to conclude a stricter Defensive League between his Majesty and the States General, which was soon concluded and signed at the Hague, and brought over to Whitehall by Mr. Temple Brother to the Envoy on Jan. 19. And because the Swedes soon after enter'd into it, it was call'd the Triple Alliance; so grateful to the Parliament, and so very pleasing to the People, that it was of mighty Service to the King and his Ministry, and cover'd them a while from all Suspicion of Popery and a French Interest.

1667. 19 Car. II.

Triple League.

On Decemb. 19. after passing the Bill against the Earl of Clarendon, and a Bill for taking the Publick Accounts, &c. the Parliament adjourned to Feb. 6. and then meeting, adjourned again to Monday Feb. 10. on which Day his Majesty was pleased to come to the House of Lords, and having on his Crown and Robes, with the usual Solemnity took his Seat, where the House of Commons with their Speaker attending him, his Majesty was pleased to express himself to both Houses in this following Speech.

My Lords and Gentlemen,

King's Speech.

"I Am glad to see you here again, to tell you "what I have done in this Interval; which I am "confident you will be pleased with, since it is so "much for the Honour and Security of this Nation. "I have made a League Defensive with the States "of the United Provinces, and likewise a League for "an efficacious Mediation of Peace between the "two Crowns; into which League, that of Sweden, "by its Ambassadour, hath offer'd to enter as a "Principal.

"I did not at our last Meeting move you for any "Aid, tho' I lie under great Debts contracted in the "last War; but now the Posture of our Neighbours "abroad, and the Consequence of this new Alliance, "will oblige me, for our Security, to set out a "considerable Fleet to Sea this Summer; and be"side, I must build more great Ships; and 'tis as "necessary that I do some things in order to the "fortifying some of our Ports. I have begun some"thing my self in order to these Ends; but if I "have not your speedy Assistance, I shall not be "able to go through with it. Wherefore I do ear"nestly desire you to take it into your speedy Con"sideration; for the loss of a little time now, may "beget a Prejudice not to be repaired. And for the "settling a firm Peace as well at home as abroad, "one thing more I hold my self obliged to recom"mend to you at this present, which is, that you "would seriously think of some Course to beget a "better Union and Composure in the Minds of my "Protestant Subjects in Matters of Religion; where"by they may be induced not only to submit quiet"ly to the Government, but also chearfully give "their Assistance to the Support of it.

Peace with Spain and Portugal.

Nigh the same time, by the Mediation of the Earl of Sandwich his Majesty's Ambassadour Extraordinary to Spain, and of Sir Robert Southwell his Majesty's Envoy to Portugal, a Peace was concluded between those two Crowns, and the King of England declared the Mediator and Guarantee of it. So that all things seem'd to be put into a condition of reducing the exorbitant Power of France, and restoring the Ballance of Europe.

Death of Great Men.

At the beginning of this Year, March 25. died the Earl of Cleveland, Captain of his Majesty's Band of Pensioners; which Office was conferred on the Lord Bellasis. On Wednesday May 22. died at the Palace of St. James's the Duke of Kendal, second Son to his Royal Highness; and the Duke of Cambridge, his elder Brother, after a grievous and tedious Distemper, 1667. 19 Car. II. ſtemper, died at Richmond on Thurſday June 20. to the great Affliction of the Court. The wife and good Miniſter of State, Thomas Earl of Southampton, Lord High Treaſurer of England, died on May 16. at his Houſe in New Southampton Square. The excellent Poet Mr. Abraham Cowley died on July 28. and had the Honour of a publick Funeral and a proper Monument beſtow'd on him by the Generoſity of the Duke of Buckingham: And this Account was publiſh'd of it; Whitehall, Aug. 4. Yeſterday in the Evening the Body of Mr. Abraham Cowley, who died the 28th paſt, was conveyed from Wallingford-Houſe to Weſtminſter-Abbey, accompanied by divers Perſons of eminent Quality, who came to perform this laſt Office to one who had been the great Ornament of our Nation, as well by the Candour of his Life as the Excellency of his Writings.

State of Religion. In Matters of Religion, it is obſervable that the Nonconformiſts were pleaſed with the Fall of the Earl of Clarendon, looking upon him as a ſtout and ſteady Protector of the Church of England; and rejoiced as much that the Duke of Buckingham was received into the King's Favour, and into the Reputation of prime Miniſter, eſteeming him their great Patron. They themſelves give this Account. "In Prejudice of the Diſſenters againſt the E. of Clarendon. "the Year 1667. the Lord Chancellour Hide was "impeached and diſcarded: And it ſeem'd a remarkable Providence of God, that he who had "been the grand Inſtrument of State in the foregoing Tranſactions, and had dealt ſo ſeverely with "the Nonconformiſts, ſhould at length, by his own "Friends, be caſt out and baniſh'd, while thoſe "whom he had perſecuted were the moſt moderate "in his Cauſe, and many for him. The Duke of "Buckingham ſucceeded him as chief Favourite: "He was a Man for Liberty. Under him the Non-"conformiſts in London were conniv'd at; and Peo-"ple went openly to their Meetings, without fear. "This encourag'd the Country Miniſters, who did "the like in moſt Parts of England, and Crowds of "the moſt religiouſly-inclined People were their "Auditors. It muſt be added to the Foot of this Account, that it could be no Credit to the Diſſenting Party to have had the Earl of Clarendon their Oppoſer, and the Duke of Buckingham their Promoter; the firſt oppoſing them upon no worſe Principle, than a Zeal to the eſtabliſh'd Church, as the moſt effectual Bulwark againſt Popery; and the other appearing in their Intereſt upon no better Account, than a ſtrong Affection to the univerſal Liberties of Opinion and of Practice.

Judgment of the Commons that Popery was promoted by Indulgence to Diſſenters. But the Houſe of Commons, who run down the Earl of Clarendon, had ſtill a Majority of the ſame Judgment with his Lordſhip, "That Popery had "its Encouragement and Growth under the Cover "of indulging the Proteſtant Diſſenters: And therefore tho' his Majeſty had graciouſly obliged them in his Speech of Febr. 10. by recommending to the two Houſes, that they would ſeriouſly think of ſome Courſe to beget a better Union and Compoſure in the Minds of his Proteſtant Subjects; yet the Commons were ſo ſenſible that this Royal Motion made the Nonconformiſts too preſuming in their Liberty, and the Papiſts too inſolent in their Hopes and Expectations: and therefore their Houſe, upon ſolemn Debate and Reſolution, made and preſented a Humble Petition to his Majeſty, "That he would iſſue out his Procla-

Petition of the Commons againſt Popery. "mation for enforcing the Laws againſt Conventicles; and that Care might be taken for Preſer-"vation of the Peace of the Kingdom againſt unlawful Aſſemblies of Papiſts and Nonconformiſts. And accordingly on March 10. his Majeſty (who was under Expectance of a liberal Supply from the Commons) was pleaſed to iſſue out his Proclamation, declaring, "That upon Conſideration of the late

The K.'s Proclamation. "humble Petition of his Loyal Subjects the Com-"mons in Parliament aſſembled, and upon Infor-"mation that divers Perſons, in ſeveral Parts of "this Realm, abuſing the Clemency which had been "uſed towards Perſons not conforming to the Wor-"ſhip and Government eſtabliſh'd in the Church "of England (even whilſt it was under Conſidera-"tion to find out a way for the better Union of his "Proteſtant Subjects) have of late frequently and "openly, in great Numbers, and to the great Di-"ſturbance of the Peace, held unlawful Aſſemblies "and Conventicles; therefore his Majeſty had been "pleaſed in Council to declare, that he will by no "means permit ſuch notorious Contempts of him-"ſelf and his Laws to go unpuniſh'd; but by Ad-"vice of his Privy Council does order this his Pro-"clamation to be iſſued out, requiring, charging, "and commanding all Lord-Lieutenants, Deputy-"Lieutenants, Juſtices of Oyer and Terminer, Ju-"ſtices of Aſſize and Goal-Delivery, Juſtices of "Peace, Mayors, Bayliffs, and all other his Maje-"ſty's Officers whatſoever, that they be circumſpect "and vigilant each of them in their ſeveral Charges "and Juriſdictions, to inforce and put in Executi-"on all the Laws now in force againſt unlawful "Conventicles: ſtrictly charging and commanding "his ſaid Magiſtrates and Officers, that they, and "every of them in their ſeveral Places, do take care "for the Preſervation of the Peace of his Kingdom, "againſt unlawful Aſſemblies of Papiſts and Non-"conformiſts.

1667. 19 Car. II.

The French King was ſo afraid of the Conſequence of the Triple League, and the Peace between the two Crowns of Spain and Portugal, that he immediately enter'd upon a Treaty at Aix la Chapelle, employing in that Affair his greateſt Miniſter Monſieur Colbert, and the King of England ſending thither his Ambaſſadour Extraordinary Sir William Temple. By their Negotiation a Peace was there concluded and ratified between France and Spain, the Miniſters of the King of England and of the States-General of the United Provinces attending the French King at Paris on May 18. and there exchanging the Inſtruments of Ratification.

Peace between France and Spain.

Acts paſs'd in Parliament. On May 9. his Majeſty was pleaſed to be preſent in the Lord's Houſe; where the Commons attending him, the Speaker preſented him theſe following publick Acts: 1. "An Act for raiſing three hun-"dred and ten thouſand Pounds by an Impoſition "on Wines and other Liquors. 2. An additional "Act againſt the Importation of foreign Cattel. "3. An Act for proceeding to Judgment on Writs "of Error brought in the Exchequer. 4. An Act "for giving Liberty to Buy and Export Leather and "Skins Tanned or Dreſſed. 5. An Act for the bet-"ter Payment of Monies received for the Uſe of "the Crown. 6. An Act for the Increaſe and Pre-"ſervation of Timber within the Foreſt of Dean. "7. An Act to regulate the Trade of Silk-throw-"ing. Which, with ſeveral private Bills, his Majeſty was graciouſly pleaſed to paſs; and the Parliament afterwards adjourned till the 11th of Auguſt next enſuing: and then again, by his Majeſty's Direction, adjourn'd themſelves to the 1ſt of March: But the King being in Peace and Plenty, did by Proclamation, dated Dec. 18. Prorogue the Parliament upon and from the ſaid 1ſt Day of March until the 19th Day of October next following.

Ambaſſadours ſent abroad. After this general Peace of Europe, the King, to maintain the friendly Correſpondence, ſent away Sir William Godolphin, lately Knighted by him, to reſide as his Ambaſſadour in the Court of Spain; and Sir Edward Sprague as Envoy to the Conſtable of Caſtile upon his Entry on the Government of the Spaniſh Netherlands; and Sir William Temple as his Ambaſſadour Extraordinary in Holland; and Sir Daniel Harvey as Ambaſſadour to Conſtantinople; Sir Joh. Trevor as Envoy Extraordinary to France; the Earl of Carliſle Ambaſſadour to the Crown of Swedeland; and received Monſieur Colbert as Ambaſſadour from his moſt Chriſtian Majeſty, who made his publick Entry into London Aug. 17. as did likewiſe, on September 17. Signiour Pietro Morcenigo, Ambaſſadour from the State of Venice.

The

1668. 20 Car. II. Honours and Preferments.

The King conferred the Honour of Knighthood on John Vaughan, who being solemnly sworn Serjeant at Law in the Court of Chancery on Friday May 22. was next Day admitted Lord Chief Justice of the Court of Common-Pleas. On Friday Morning June 12. died of a short Apoplectical Distemper Charles Lord Viscount Fitz-Harding of the Privy-Council, and Treasurer of his Majesty's Household, which Office his Majesty was pleased to confer upon Sir Thomas Clifford formerly Comptroller of his Majesty's House, and that of Comptroller upon Francis Lord Newport, who on July 1. was sworn of his Majesty's most Honourable Privy-Council. On Sept. 19. the Duke of Monmouth in Hyde-Park was plac'd by his Majesty in the Command of Captain of his Life-Guard of Horse, void by the Resignation of the Lord Gerard of Brandon. Sir John Trevor who had return'd from his Employment as Envoy Extraordinary to the most Christian King on June 18. and had given his Majesty a satisfactory Account of his Negotiation in that Court, was on Sept. 29. sworn one of his Majesty's principal Secretaries of State upon the Resignation of Sir William Morrice.

Our Fleet at Sea.

It having been a fatal Error in the Administration not to have had a Fleet at Sea in time of War the last Summer; it was now amended by another extreme, the keeping out our Fleet in a time of Peace with all our Neighbours. This Fleet under Command of Sir Thomas Allen, was visited by his Majesty and his Royal Highness in the Downs on June 23. and was thence order'd to sail Westward, and having safely shew'd their Grandeur in the Chanel, Sir Thomas upon express Orders on Aug. 20. sailed by Plymouth towards the Mediterranean, and at the end of September came before Algiers; and threatning the Town made them offer a Release of all the Captive English, and renew their former Peace with us, upon good additional Articles to this effect, 1. That all their Captives should be commanded to let all Engl. Vessels pass without Damage or Molestation, upon their shewing English Colours. If in any Vessel the English were equal to the Strangers, they should then be free; if the Strangers exceeded the English then lawful Prize; yet, if they could shew an English Pass, to be let go. 2. That none of their little Frigots with Oars shall stop any Vessels laden with Provisions or Ammunition for Tangier. 3. That they shall not deliver any of their little Frigots with Oars to any of the Salley Men to make use of. 4. That if any of their little Vessels intended for Tangier, they should take a Pass from the English Consul at Argier.

Algiers brought to submission.

State of Religion.

As to Religion, the Church and State were equally in Peace and Quiet, and the Nonconformists finding no hopes of a legal Toleration were the better disposed to desire a Comprehension, and to accept any reasonable Terms of being brought into one Communion. They themselves have thus represented their Inclinations and Attempts this Year. " In " January 1668. Mr. Baxter received a Letter from " Dr. Manton, intimating that he was told by Sir " John Barber, that the Lord Keeper Bridgman desi- " red to confer with them two about a Comprehen- " sion and Toleration. Hereupon he came to Lon- " don, and they two waited on the Lord Keeper, " who told them, that he had sent for them to " think of a way of their Restauration: To which " end, he had some Proposals to offer to them, " which were for a Comprehension for the Presbyte- " rians, and an Indulgence for the Independents and " the rest. They ask'd him, whether it was his " Pleasure, that they should offer him their Opinion " of the Means, or only receive what he offer'd to " them? He replied, that he had something to offer, " but they might also make their own Proposals. " Mr. Baxter told him, he thought they might be " able to offer him such Terms (without injuring " any one) as might take in both Presbyterians and " Independents, and all sound Christians into the pub- " lick establish'd Ministry. He answer'd, that that " was a thing that he would not have, and so it " was agreed to go first upon the Comprehension. A " few Days after he sent his Proposals. After this " they met with Dr. Wilkins and Mr. Burton to confer " about the matter. The thing they most differ'd a- " bout was Re-ordination. At length by Conference " with Sir Mathew Hale that Point was thus adjusted, " that there should be an Admission into the Mini- " stry of the Church of England, of those who had " been Ordained before, according to this Form of " Words, Take thou legal Authority to preach the Word " of God, and administer the Holy Sacraments in any " Congregation of England, where thou shalt be lawful- " ly appointed thereunto. It was agreed the Ceremo- " nies should be left indifferent, and the Liturgy " alter'd; and that there should be an Indulgence " of such as could not be Comprehended; the Names " of the Teachers and all the Members of their re- " spective Congregations being Register'd: And a " Bill was accordingly drawn up by Judge Hale to " be presented to the Parliament. But they no " sooner sate than the High-Church Party made such " an Interest, as that upon putting it to the Vote, " it was carry'd that no Man should bring an Act " of this Nature into the House; and so they pre- " vented all Talk or Motion of such a thing: And " the Lord Keeper who set it on Foot, grew as in- " different about it as any one, when he saw which " way the Stream was strongest.

1669. Prince of Tuscany comes into Engl.

This Year began with the Reception of the Prince of Tuscany, who in the Portland Frigot from Corunna after being driven into Kingsale in Ireland, and again into the Isle of Silly, arrived at Plymouth on Mar. 22. and being here honourably received by Sir John Skelton the Governour, he left the Town on the 27th and lay the next Night at Exeter, being there complemented and attended by the Mayor and his Brethren. On April 1. he came to Salisbury, where he was waited on by the Earl of Pembroke, with the Mayor and Aldermen in their Habits; the next Day he was nobly entertain'd by the Earl at his House in Wilton; and proceeding on his Road, he was met and Complimented in his Majesty's Name at Brentford, by the Lord Viscount Mandeville in one of his Majesty's Coaches, and coming to London April 5. Incognito, he was at his arrival attended by Sir William Killigrew with a Complement from her Majesty, by the Earl of Peterborough from his Royal Highness, and from her Royal Highness by Sir William Powel the Master of her Horse. At the end of the Month he went along with the King and the Duke of York and Prince Rupert to Newmarket, and having diverted himself with the Recreations of that Place, he went to Cambridge on May 1. and was received with all Respect imaginable by the University and Town, being attended at his Lodgings, and Complemented in the Name of the University by the two Divinity Professors, accompanied by all the young Noblemen then Students there, and by the Mayor and Aldermen from the Town; which done, his Highness being pleased to go abroad, the Vice-Chancellor with the Doctors and both the Proctors, stood ready in their Habits of Formality to receive him at the publick Schools, all the Scholars being ranged on each side of the way; the publick Orator entertain'd him with a Speech at the Gate, from whence his Highness was conducted into the Regent-House, where was held a Congregation for creating in all Degrees and Faculties on this occasion, by the particular Command of his Majesty, where a second Speech was made to him by the same Orator. In the Afternoon he was pleased to be present at a Philosophy Act appointed for that purpose, and performed to the great Satisfaction of the Prince and the whole Auditory. The Prince went away to Northampton, and being entertain'd at Dinner on Monday May 3. he came very late that Night to Oxford, and refusing the Lodgings offer'd him by the Vice-Chancellour in Christ-Church, went to be more private in the Angel-Inn; where the next Morning he was attended by the Vice-Chancellour and Doctors in

In the Afternoon the Vice-Chancellour and Doctors went again to his Lodgings, and conducted him thence to the Convocation, his Highneſs being pleaſed to walk all the way on Foot, thro' the Ranks of Scholars placed on each ſide from his Lodgings to the Schools. The Maſters of Arts being ſet in the Convocation-Houſe attended there his arrival, upon which the Convocation began, the Prince being firſt ſeated in a Chair of State provided for that occaſion on the right hand of the Vice-Chancellour, then the publick Orator Dr. South, made him an Oration, which ended, and ſeveral Academical Affairs diſpatch'd, to ſatisfie his Highneſs of the manner of acting in thoſe Aſſemblies; his Phyſician (a Doctor of Bononia) was incorporated and admitted to the ſame Degree. Thence the Prince was conducted to the New-Theatre, and ſo to the publick Library, where he had a view of the choiceſt Manuſcripts, Coins and other Rarities of that Place; and hence to the ſeveral Schools, in moſt of which the Profeſſors and Lecturers were reading in their ſeveral Faculties, and Diſputations held in the others: His Highneſs was pleaſed particularly to take a Seat in that of Geometry, and to hear a learned Lecture read by Dr. Wallis, and having heard ſome Diſputations in the School of Tongues, and in that of Natural Philoſophy, he was entertain'd in the Muſick School with Vocal and Inſtrumental Muſick, and at ſeven in the Evening was reconducted to his Lodgings by the Vice-Chancellour and ſome of the Doctors, who attended him again the next Morning, and took their leave upon his departing that Day for Windſor. On May 11. he was carried by his Majeſty into Hyde-Park, to take a view of the three Troops of his Majeſty's Horſe-Guards, and ſeven of the Regiment of Guards Commanded by the Earl of Oxford, with fourteen Companies of the Foot Guards of his Majeſty's Regiment, and of the Generals Regiment of Guards, all drawn up in excellent Order and Equipage. On Monday May 31. his Majeſty and Royal Highneſs were pleaſed to do the Prince the Honour to ſup with him at St. Alban's Houſe in St. James's-Fields, and were entertain'd by him with great Magnificence. The next Day he took his leave of the Court, and departed for Holland much ſatisfied with his Reception here, and the Honours he had received.

At the beginning of July Prince George of Denmark, after a ſhort Tour in France, came over to ſee the Engliſh Court, and on Wedneſday July 21. was by the Lord Chamberlain conducted to his Majeſty, and in the Afternoon was introduc'd to the Queen; and after an honourable Reception return'd again for Denmark.

Opening of the Theatre at Oxford.

On Friday July 9. the Univerſity of Oxford being aſſembled in a full Body, went to take poſſeſſion of the new Theatre, the Magnificent Benefaction of his Grace the Lord Archbiſhop of Canterbury, where after the reading of his Graces Grant by the Regiſter of the Univerſity, Dr. South the publick Orator made an excellent Speech upon the Occaſion: In the Afternoon, being again aſſembled and placed in the Theatre, after the Muſick were pronounc'd ſeveral Panegyricks, the firſt in Proſe, then one in Pindarick Verſe, after that an Oration, then a Dialogue in Poetry; which having taken up a conſiderable time, the Auditory was diverted with excellent Muſick, Vocal and Inſtrumental; which ended, they were again entertain'd with another Oration, follow'd by two Speeches in Poetry, and afterwards by a Diſcourſe in favour of Learning, then a ſhort Speech from the Muſick Gallery, uſhering in two Odes, which were excellently ſung, after which follow'd another Speech, which concluded the Solemnity of that Day.

D. of Ormond made Chancellour of Oxford.

On Wedneſday Aug. 4. was held a Convocation by the Univerſity in the uſual Place, in which upon a Reſignation of the Chancellourſhip, which was ſent by his Grace the Lord Archbiſhop of Canterbury to the Vice-Chancellour, the Univerſity according to Statute proceeded to a new Election, and unanimouſly made choice of his Grace the Duke of Ormond to ſucceed in that Honourable Charge. This Reſignation of the Archbiſhop was made upon a Reſolution of his retiring from publick Buſineſs, and a Satisfaction to himſelf that he had ſerved the Univerſity with as much Affection and greater Munificence than any of his Predeceſſors. He earneſtly recommended the Duke of Ormond to be his Succeſſor, having a great and juſt Opinion of the Duke's Integrity and Honour; and to ſhew the higher Eſteem of him, he did this at a Juncture, when the Duke was out of Favour at Court; having been called out of Ireland, and leaving his Son the Lord Oſſory to Command in his abſence, was ſoon ſucceeded by the Lord Roberts, but left a Reputation and an Intereſt in that Kingdom exceeding great; and upon the firſt News of the Change, the Lord Mayor and Aldermen of Dublin, the Provoſt of the College, the Dean of Chriſt-Church, and moſt of the Clergy attended the Lord Oſſory, to make a ſolemn Acknowledgement of the many Benefits which the City had receiv'd from the Government of his Father and himſelf, and the Protection and Favours which the Church had enjoy'd as well by their good Examples as by the plentiful Proviſion made by them for the Clergy.

Ambaſſadors ſent abroad.

Mr. Montague was ſent Ambaſſadour from his Majeſty of Great Britain to the French King, and made his publick Entry into Paris April 25. and with great State and Ceremony had his Audience the next Day. Sir Peter Wich was ſent Envoy to the Court of Muſcovy, and arrived at Riga on May 1. having been upon the way civily Treated and Complemented by the Magiſtrates of Dantzick, and afterwards entertain'd at Coningbergh in Pruſſia by his Electoral Highneſs of Brandenburgh, and honourably treated thro' the Territories of the Duke of Courland. Sir Thomas Higgons had gone Envoy Extraordinary to his Highneſs the Elector of Saxony, and had carried to him the Order of the Garter, returning in the beginning of June, and reporting that he had been treated with extraordinary Kindneſs and Bounty. Sir William Godolphin was ſent with the like Character to the Court of Portugal, and arriving at Lisbon on May 18. had his pulick Audience from the Prince and Princeſs, to which he was conducted in the Prince's Coach by Don Lucas de Portugal. The Lord Howard being appointed by his Majeſty to go in an Ambaſſy to the Emperor of Morocco, imbark'd himſelf with a very ſplendid Train at Plimouth, in a Squadron under the Command of Sir Thomas Allen. The Lord Viſcount Faulconbridge being diſpatch'd on an Ambaſſy Extraordinary to the Republick of Venice, and ſeveral Princes of Italy, departed from London on Jan. 18.

Death of great Men.

On July 16. died the Right Honourable the Earl of Berkſhire of a lingring Diſtemper, occaſion'd ſome Months ago by an accidental Fall; on the twentieth in the Evening his Body was honourably attended to his Interment in Weſtminſter-Abbey. He was near the 90th Year of his Age, and the eldeſt Knight of the Right Honourable Order of the Garter. The Queen-Mother Hemietta Maria, who in June 1665. had again croſs'd the Seas to reſide in her Native Country, departed this Life on Aug. 10. N.S. about four in the Morning, at her Houſe at Colombe four Leagues from Paris, in the 60th Year of her Age. Her Body was Embalm'd and expoſed ſome time in an Apartment within the Caſtle of Colombe with great Ceremonies; her Heart was in a Veſſel of Silver inſcrib'd with her Name and Title carried in a Mourning Coach to the Monaſtery of Chaliot, attended

And of the Queen-Mother.

1669. 21 Car. II. tended by the Lord Montague her Almoner and a long Retinue: Her Body was convey'd to St. Denys and receiv'd at the Door of the Church by the Religious with Tapers in their Hands, where the grand Almoner made a Diſcourſe upon the Subject, which was anſwer'd by the Prior; then the Body was placed in a Chapel behind the Quire, and afterward interr'd with great Solemnity. She was no more Popular in the Reign of her Son, than ſhe had been in that of her Royal Husband, and had the common Imputation of bringing no leſs Miſchiefs on the one Reign than ſhe had Miſeries on the other. On Wedneſday Sept. 1. Sir Edward Nicholas one of his Majeſty's moſt Honourable Privy Council, a Perſon of great Abilities and Integrity, by which he had faithfully ſerv'd his Majeſty and his Royal Father, in the Employment of Secretary of State, dy'd at his Houſe in Horſley in the County of Surry, after a long Sickneſs, in the 77 or near the 78th Year of his Age. The Duke of Albemarle had fallen this Summer into a long and dangerous Diſtemper, but in the beginning of July he thought himſelf perfectly recover'd and reſtor'd to his former Health by the Aſſiſtance of a Quack, one William Sermon of Briſtol, whoſe Pills had that Succeſs as to bring him perfectly to his Sleep and Appetite, and wholly to abate all the Symptoms of his Diſeaſe, ſo that on July 12. as being perfectly cur'd, he diſmiſſed his Phyſicians from their farther Attendance; and next Day Mr. Sermon was preſented to his Majeſty in St. James's-Park, where he had the Honour to be admitted to kiſs his Majeſty's Hand, and to receive his Thanks for the good Service of that excellent Cure performed upon his Grace. But toward Winter the Duke fell into a Relapſe, and died at the Cockpit by Whitehall on Jan. 3. in the ſixty ſecond Year of his Age. His Garter being brought to the King, was by his immediate Command carried back to the Earl of Torrington then by his Father's Death Duke of Albemarle; with a kind Aſſurance that he ſhould ſucceed in the place of Gentleman of his Bed-Chamber and Lord Lieutenant of the County of Devon; and as the laſt Mark of his Majeſty's Gratitude to the immortal Memory of the Deceaſed, his Majeſty would himſelf take care for the Funeral, to be celebrated with a Solemnity, ſuch as may become the glorious Things he did in the Service of the Crown, and the eminent Senſe and Value his Majeſty will ever retain of them. Accordingly after the Body had lain in State ſome time in Somerſet-Houſe, a publick Funeral was magnificently celebrated in a ſolemn Proceſſion from thence to Weſtminſter-Abbey on April 30. 1670. accompanied by a long Train of Perſons of Quality, with all the Triumphs of Honour becoming ſo great a General, and was buried on the North ſide of King Henry VII.'s Chapel; with an Eloquent Sermon preach'd and publiſh'd by Seth Lord Biſhop of Sarum. As he had been ſingularly happy in being the chief Inſtrument of the King's Return, he was no leſs happy in the Senſe the King ever continu'd to expreſs of ſo great an Obligation: It ſhew'd him to be a Man of great Sincerity and true Judgment, that he did not ſeem to over value his own Services, but kept himſelf all along in the Eſteem of the Court and the Affections of the People. His Wife the Dutcheſs died in the ſame Houſe the twenty third Day of the ſame Month, and was privately interr'd in the ſame Chapel.

Meeting of Parliament.

On October 19. the two Houſes of Parliament according to their laſt Prorogation met at Weſtminſter, where his Majeſty in a gracious Speech acquainted them with his Joy to ſee them at that time, and the Hopes he had of a happy meeting, which he promiſed to himſelf from the great Experience he had of their Affection and Loyalty, of which he doubted not the continuance; briefly minding them of his Debts, which tho' preſſing, he was unwilling to call for their Aſſiſtance till this time; acquainting them, that what they laſt gave was wholly apply'd to the Navy, and to the extraordinary Fleet for which it was intended; deſiring they would now take his Debts effectually into their Conſideration; afterwards hinting to them a Propoſal of great Importance concerning the Uniting of England and Scotland, which requiring ſome length, his Majeſty left it and ſome other things to his Lord Keeper to open them more fully; which his Lordſhip accordingly did in a larger Speech. After which, the Commons return'd to their Houſe and Adjourn'd till the Thurſday following, and the Houſe of Lords Adjourn'd till Monday.

1669. 21 Car. II.

On November 6. both Houſes in purſuance of a Vote of the third inſtant attended his Majeſty in the Banquetting-Houſe at Whitehall, where the Lord Chief Juſtice Vaughan, ſupplying the room of the Lord Keeper then indiſpoſed, in the name of both Houſes return'd his Majeſty their Thanks for his Care of the Publick, in iſſuing out his Proclamation for ſuppreſſing Conventicles; deſiring his Majeſty to continue the ſame Care for the future: To which his Majeſty return'd a gracious Anſwer to the ſatisfaction of both Houſes. On December 11. the Black Rod was ſent from the Houſe of Peers to that of the Commons, to tell them, that the Lords Authorized by Commiſſion from his Majeſty, deſired the Attendance of that Honourable Houſe immediately in the Houſe of Peers, who accordingly went thither with their Speaker, to whom his Majeſty's ſaid Commiſſion being read, the Parliament was Prorogu'd till Feb. 14. next enſuing. On Thurſday December 23. his Majeſty in Council order'd a Proclamation to declare his full Purpoſe and Reſolution, that the Parliament ſhould meet and ſit on the ſaid Feb. 14. and therefore to require the Attendance of all the Peers and Commons preciſely on that Day, his Majeſty expecting a ready Conformity to his Royal Will and Pleaſure. And accordingly on Monday February 14. His Majeſty went to Weſtminſter in a Coach, preceded by his Trumpets and Kettle-Drums at the Head of his new Guards, and followed by his Horſe-Guards, and in his Robes took his Seat in the Houſe of Lords, where he was attended by the Houſe of Commons with their Speaker, to whom he made a gracious Speech, which was enlarged by another from the Lord Keeper. Then the Houſe of Commons return'd to their own Houſe, and voted his Majeſty's Speech to be taken into Conſideration the Thurſday following. Upon which there aroſe an unhappy Difference between the two Houſes; but publick Information was given from Whitehall February 22. that this Day the two Houſes of Parliament did, at his Majeſty's gracious Recommendation, come to an happy Agreement in the Matter in Difference between them, to the great Joy and Content of all that wiſh well to the Proſperity of his Majeſty's Government, and the Publick Quiet of this his Kingdom.

Thanks of the two Houſes for ſuppreſſing Conventicles.

Parl. met again.

The Parliament in Scotland met the ſame Day with that of England, Octob. 19. and his Majeſty wrote this Letter to them.

My Lords and Gentlemen,

K.'s Letter to the Parl. in Scotland.

" WE do often reflect, with Thankfulneſs and Joy, upon the Goodneſs of Almighty God, for reſtoring us to our Kingdoms, and them to their former Liberty and Peace: And we acknowledge it a farther Inſtance of God's Goodneſs, that as he hath filled our Heart with Kindneſs towards our Subjects of that our antient Kingdom, and with a conſtant Zeal to promote what we judge conducible to their Welfare; ſo he hath bleſt us with Returns from them of Love, Loyalty, and ready Compliance with our Pleaſure on all Occaſions, moſt ſuitable thereunto: of which our late Parliament hath given ſignal Proofs, as well as our other good Subjects. And this gives us Confidence, that the earneſt Deſire we have to render this Iſland more happy than ever it was in times paſt, by ſettling amongſt all our good Subjects within the ſame a mutual Affection that " may

669. 21 Car. II.

" may endure to all Poſterity, ſhall meet with a free " Concurrence from you our Parliament, whom we " have call'd together chiefly for this End.

" The bringing of theſe two Kingdoms of Scotland and England to as cloſe and ſtrict an Union " as is poſſible, is the Means that we propoſe for " the effectuating thereof: which as it is the high- " eſt and nobleſt Deſign we can have, for witneſ- " ſing our Royal Affection to them both; ſo the " Accompliſhment of it will raiſe our Satisfaction " almoſt as high as our Wiſhes. For by the Union " of the Hearts and Hands of our People, not only " our Throne ſhall be ſtrengthned, and they have " Peace and Love ſettled among them for ever; but " we ſhall have the Glory of Accompliſhing what " our Royal Grandfather King James, of ever bleſ- " ſed Memory, attempted, as the greateſt thing he " could deviſe, and wherein he, who was a compe- " tent Judge, placed the Happineſs of the Crown " and Kingdoms, and wherein he meant to have " gloried as the chiefeſt Action of his Life.

" We have fully inſtructed our Commiſſioner " with our Intentions as to this Subject, and con- " cerning ſuch other Matters as ſeem to us to be " uſeful for the conſtant Peace and Welfare of the " Church and State in that our Kingdom. You are " to give him full Credit, and he will acquaint us " with all Matters; and what is farther neceſſary " for us to do, will be ſpeedily performed. So we " bid you heartily Farewel.

At the opening of the ſaid Parliament, his Grace the Earl of Lauderdale, his Majeſty's High Commiſſioner, made this Speech.

My Lords and Gentlemen,

of Lauderdale's Speech.

" BY the Authority of the King, and his ſpecial " Command, you are here aſſembled in his " high Court of Parliament. You have heard his " Royal Intentions under his own Hand, with the " chief Reaſons of his Calling you together. You " have heard his moſt gracious Expreſſions of his " Kindneſs to his Subjects in this his antient King- " dom, and his Confidence of you their Repreſen- " tatives. And I ſhall, as ſhortly as I can, acquaint " you with what I have farther in Command from " my Maſter to ſay in his Name at the opening of " this his Parliament.

" And firſt I am to aſſure you of his Majeſty's " conſtant and unalterable Zeal for maintaining " and defending the true Reformed Proteſtant Reli- " gion in this his Kingdom, for which he will con- " ſtantly lay out his whole Power and Authority; " as alſo for diſcouraging and puniſhing all Atheiſm " and Profanities, and all that is contrary to true " Religion and Godlineſs.

" I am farther particularly commanded to aſſure " you, that with no leſs Zeal and Conſtancy he " will maintain and defend the antient Government " by Archbiſhops and Biſhops, as now it is happily " ſettled, as a ſure Fence for the true Reformed " Proteſtant Religion. A Government moſt ſuit- " able to Monarchy; and well may I call it anti- " ent: for, whoever will look into Antiquity, ſhall " find Epiſcopal Government hath continued in the " whole Catholick Church, both Eaſt and Weſt, " even from the moſt Primitive and Apoſtolick " Times. I ſhall not inſiſt on the ſad Calamities " and Confuſions which the violent and rebellious " Endeavours to overturn this Government produ- " ced in this Kingdom. His Majeſty's gracious " Act of Pardon and Oblivion forbids the ripping " up thoſe Sores which his own Royal Hand hath " cured; and long may they be buried in Oblivion. " Yet ſure I am, the Reflexions on thoſe diſmal " Days ought to raiſe no leſs Zeal in the Parlia- " ment, and in all good Subjects, for the maintain- " ing of that Government, as now it is happily " ſettled: For in his Majeſty's Name, and by his " ſpecial Command I do aſſure you, he will employ " his utmoſt Power in the Maintenance of that Go- " vernment, and will protect the Perſons of my " Lords the Archbiſhops and Biſhops, and of the " Loyal, Orthodox, and Peaceable Clergy, in the " Exerciſe of their Functions. He will not endure " thoſe numerous and unlawful Conventicles which " tend to Sedition and Schiſm, which have been too " frequent in ſome few Shires of this Kingdom. " Good Laws have been made, and in Proſecution " of thoſe Laws, the Lords of his Majeſty's Privy " Council have ſhewn their Care for ſuppreſſing " thoſe ſeditious Aſſemblies: Yea, and of late his " Majeſty has graciouſly indulged the planting of " ſome who were eſteemed Peaceable Men, in va- " cant Churches (tho' they came not up to the " Rules eſtabliſh'd.) It will be expected, that they " walk worthy of ſo great a Favour: But if, after " this Removal of the very Pretence of unlawful " Conventicles, any factious People ſhall, in con- " tempt of his Majeſty's Laws, yea and of his In- " dulgence alſo, ſeditiouſly aſſemble themſelves un- " der pretence of Religious Worſhip, his Majeſty " doth require his Parliament, and all in Authority " under him, vigorouſly to ſuppreſs ſuch Meetings, " and to bring the pretended Preachers, and the " Ringleaders of ſuch unlawful Aſſemblies, to con- " dign and exemplary Puniſhment.

1669. 21 Car. II.

" In the next place, I am commanded to let you " know, that I am ſufficiently inſtructed to give his " Majeſty's Royal Aſſent to ſuch Laws as ſhall be " prepared in this Parliament, for the conſtant " Peace and Welfare of this Church, and of the " Kingdom in all its Relations: But the chief Oc- " caſion of calling this Parliament, is the proſecu- " ting that great and glorious Deſign of bringing " his Kingdoms of Scotland and England to a ſtrict- " er and nearer Union. This Deſign was begun by " his Royal Grandfather of bleſſed Memory, who " went ſo far on towards this great Work, that in " the firſt Year of his Reign over Great Britain, " King James named Commiſſioners for this King- " dom, who by Act of Parliament were authorized " to treat and conſult with Commiſſioners for the " Kingdom of England concerning ſuch an Union: " And in purſuance of their Treaty, Acts were made " for the repealing of hoſtile Laws, and the utter " Abolition of all memory of Hoſtility between the " two Nations: And in the ſeventh Year of his " Reign, it was by the Judges of all the Courts of " Weſtminſter-Hall in England, ſolemnly adjudged " in the Caſe of the Poſtnati, that thoſe who after " the Deſcent of the Crown of England to K. James " were born in Scotland, were no Aliens in England, " and conſequently were capable not only of Land, " but of all other Immunities, as if they had been " born in England: So much was done in K. James's " time. And the Occaſions of his Majeſty's Reſo- " lutions to proſecute the great Work, were theſe: " Complaints having been made to his Majeſty, " that ſince the 25th Day of March in the 12th Year " of his Reign, new Duties were impoſed in Eng- " land upon divers Commodities of the Growth, Pro- " duction, and Manufacture of Scotland, and Inco- " pacities laid upon the Subjects of Scotland; it " pleaſed the King to appoint divers Meetings upon " this matter, tho' without Succeſs: whereupon " the late Parliament in this Kingdom impoſed in " their third Seſſion Ann. 1663. great Duties upon " the Commodities of the Growth, Production, or " Manufacture of England, which by his Majeſty's " Command were ſuſpended, and have not been ex- " acted, tho' the Duties in England ſtill continue; " and upon his Majeſty's Recommendation to the " Parliament of England, an Act was lately made " for ſettling Freedom and Intercourſe of Trade be- " tween the two Kingdoms: Thereupon Commiſſi- " oners were nominated and appointed by his Ma- " jeſty for both Kingdoms to treat upon that Affair, " who had many Meetings, but produced no Effect, " unleſs it were a Conviction of the Difficulty, if

1669. 21 Car. II.

" not Impoſſibility, of ſettling it in any other way, " than by a nearer and more complete Union of the " two Kingdoms.

" His Majeſty is fully perſwaded, that nothing " can tend more to the Good and Security of both " Nations than ſuch an Union: And finding that in " his Royal Grandfather's time ſo great an Advance " was made towards this Union, and that the con- " tinuance under the ſame Obedience for near ſe- " venty Years having begotten the ſame common " Friends and common Enemies to both Nations, " and taken off a great part of thoſe Difficulties " which at the firſt (notwithſtanding the Union in " Obedience to one Soveraign) ſtood in the way; " his Majeſty well hopes, that what is yet wanting " to the perfecting of it, may be now accompliſh'd. " And therefore, in his Majeſty's Name, I do moſt " heartily recommend this great Work unto you: " and I doubt not but you will ſpeedily ſend ſuch " an humble Anſwer to his Majeſty's moſt gracious " Letter, as may witneſs how well-grounded that " Confidence is which his Majeſty hath expreſſed of " you.

" This Day the Parliament of England meets, and " the King will, both by himſelf and his Lord- " Keeper, make the like Propoſals (as to the Uni- " on) unto both Houſes: And I am confident that " Loyal Parliament, who have all along given ſuch " ample Teſtimonies of their Duty and Affection to " his Majeſty, will upon this Occaſion make a " ſuitable Return to his Propoſals. What is farther " to be propoſed upon this Matter, ſhall be offer'd " at your next Day's Meeting: And the King doubts " not, but that after the Meeting of Commiſſioners " for both Kingdoms, theſe things will be tender'd " to your Conſideration, in order to the Union, as " ſhall tend to the Honour of his Majeſty, and the " common Good of all his Subjects. Theſe things " I was commanded, before I came away from his " Majeſty, to acquaint you with; and I have ſince, " upon another Occaſion, received an Order in Wri- " ting, bearing Date the 7th of this Month, by " which I am again commanded amply to declare " his Majeſty's unchangeable Reſolution to main- " tain Epiſcopal Government in the Church. So " having begun and ended with this Declaration, I " hope both the groundleſs Jealouſies on the one " hand, and the vain and idle Hopes on the other, " ſhall be at an end.

After ſome Conſideration the Parliament of Scotland returned this Anſwer to his Majeſty's gracious Letter.

In præſentia Dominorum PARLIAMENTI.

Farther Proceedings of the Scots Parliament.

We preſent theſe Letters and Speech to the Reader, to ſhew what Inclinations and what Attempts have been for a Union between the two Kingdoms; and how the former Motions of that kind have been heavily carried on, and abruptly ended. During this Seſſion of the Scots Parliament, they made An Act aſſerting his Majeſty's Supremacy over all Perſons and in all Cauſes Eccleſiaſtical, to a higher and more effectual degree than had ever been before legally declared. And they made another Act for the Benefit of Trade by the Naturalization of Strangers within the Kingdom of Scotland; providing, that all Strangers of the Proteſtant Religion, who ſhould think fit to bring their Eſtates into the ſaid Kingdom, or ſhould come to ſet up new Works and Manufactures therein, ſhould be received and treated as Native-born Subjects to all Intents and Purpoſes. The King farther declaring, that upon Application made to him by ſuch Strangers, he would grant them the free and publick Uſe of their Religion in their own Language, and the Liberty of having Churches of their own. But in the mean time, as to the Union, nothing in Parliament was done, and very little mention'd of the matter. It is obſervable, that tho' the Deſign tended moſt to the Intereſt of Scotland, and the Wiſhes and Deſires of it ſeem'd to come from thence; yet the Objections and Interruptions were chiefly from the ſame Quarter, and were owing to the 1669. 21 Car. II. the Jealouſies of ſuffering as the weaker ſide, to the Love of Independence, and the Affectation of a ſeparate Intereſt, and the Remembrance of being an antient Kingdom within itſelf: which Principles muſt needs indiſpoſe them to the Propoſal or Reception of any effectual Terms of Union; though indeed under all theſe Diſadvantages, they were in great meaſure united by Oliver Cromwel.

State of Religion.

Nonconformiſts indulged.

The Nonconformiſts had their open Meetings more full and frequent, and their Intereſt and Figure growing more conſiderable, by reaſon of the King's apparent Inclinations of Indulgence to them; and by the particular Countenance and Protection of ſome of the chief Miniſters of State, who agreed in the Patronage of them, tho' on a different Principle; ſome out of Humanity and Moderation, but others from a worſe Motive of gaining the more Liberty to Papiſts, and weakning the Communion of the Eſtabliſh'd Church. Under theſe Advantages the Nonconformiſts aſſum'd a Liberty that became very offenſive to thoſe who were by Conſcience in the Communion of the Eſtabliſh'd Church, and had a reſpect for the legal Conſtitution of the Kingdom. For by their own Account, "Mr. Baxter and other "Teachers now openly boaſted of the Act againſt "Conventicles being no longer in Force; of their "Meetings being not now contrary to Law; of no "Act in being that could convict them of keeping "Conventicles; of the Oxford Act only ſuppoſing "Perſons already convicted, but not enabling any "to convict them; of the Oxford Oath no way concerning their Teachers, and that it ought not to "be put upon them. And to make themſelves a more formidable Body againſt the Church, the two chief Parties, the Presbyterians and Independents, were now projecting a Union with one another, as the Fact and Method are thus deliver'd in their own way. "At this time (1669) Mr. Baxter was pro- "jecting an Agreement with the Independents for "the ſtrengthning of the Common Intereſt: Dr. "Owen, in his Catechiſm, had made two conſide- "rable Conceſſions; viz. That the People have not "the Power of the Keys; and, That they give not the "Power of the Keys, or their Office Power to the Paſtors. "Theſe Conceſſions he thought very improvable, "and therefore he propoſed to him, that they two "ſhould ſee how far they could go towards an Ac- "commodation, before the Matter was communi- "cated to others. The Method he offer'd was this: "That they ſhould firſt fix the Eſſentials of Reli- "gion and Communion, which are the Terms that "all Chriſtians agree in; and then endeavour to "find out the Means of bringing both Sides to con- "ſent to Communion upon thoſe Terms. He "thought the moſt likely Method would be, the "drawing up a Writing containing all the Points "of Diſcipline, great and ſmall, which the two "Parties were really agreed in, which would make "the few things they differ'd in ſeem ſo ſmall, as "not to be ſufficient to hinder Communion. He "was for each of them to draw up a Draught, and "then conſider the Matter together: but the Dr. "highly approving the Motion, deſired him to un- "dertake it. Whereupon he drew up a great ma- "ny Theſes, as the Matter of their common Con- "cord. He complain'd they were too many, and "might be abridg'd: Whereupon he quickly carried "him another Draught, of ſo many of thoſe things "which both Presbyterians and Independents are agreed "in, as are neceſſary to their practical Concord and "Communion with reſpect to the things wherein "they are or ſeem diſagreed. The Dr.'s Objections "were principally four: That the Particulars inſi- "ſted on were too many for the firſt Attempt; "that the Socinians would agree to make the Creed, "as expounded in the firſt four Councils, the Teſt "of Orthodoxy; that ſome Expreſſions ſuited to "prevent future Diviſions and Separations, would "ſeem to reflect on former Actings; and, that the "inſiſting on the Power of the Magiſtrate, eſpeci- "ally as under Civil Coercion and Puniſhment, was "not neceſſary in the firſt Attempt.

Union propos'd between Presbyter. and Independ.

1669. 21 Car. II.

Under this Diſpoſition of all the Diſſenters jointly to oppoſe the Church of England, they ſeem'd to deſpiſe, and indeed to defie the Laws againſt them. When Mr. Baxter was brought before the Juſtices of Peace, and told by them, that he was convict of keeping Conventicles contrary to the Law, and ſo tender'd him the Oxford Oath; he anſwer'd boldly, That he took not his Meeting to be contrary to Law; and that the Oxford Oath did not concern him; nor could he apprehend they were impower'd by the Act to put it upon him. And when for his Offence and Contempt he was committed to Goal for ſix Months, many at Court mov'd for him; the Earl of Orrery, Earl of Manchester, Lord Arlington, and Duke of Buckingham, intimated to the King, that his Impriſonment was not for his Service: And Sir John Barber came to him in Priſon, to let him know, that the King in Diſcourſe had ſignified to him, That he was not willing to be ſeen to relax the Law, but that he would not be offended if he ſought his Remedy at Law. And accordingly, his Habeas Corpus was demanded at the Common Pleas, and granted: The Judges declar'd the Mittimus invalid, and he was diſcharged; "having receiv'd in Priſon 20 Broad "Pieces from Sir John Bernard, 10 l. from the Coun- "teſs of Exeter, and 5 l. of Alderman Beard; "which defray'd his Law and Priſon Charges.

Confidence of the Diſſenters.

Abridgm. of Mr. Baxter's Life.

A formidable Party.

The whole Party were indeed ſo bold in trampling upon the Laws and Conſtitution, that it juſtly raiſed not only the Indignation of the Church-Men, but the Jealouſie of all who were honeſtly concern'd for the Government, and the legal Adminiſtration of it. And therefore the better to diſcover their Numbers and Places of publick Meeting, the Lord Archbiſhop of Canterbury ſent his circular Letter, dated from Lambeth June 8. 1669. requiring the Bp. of London and his other Suffragans, to take a particular Account of them within their reſpective Dioceſes. And the Return of this Enquiry made ſuch a due Impreſſion on the better part of the Miniſtry, that on Friday July 16. "Upon ſeveral In- "formations which had been given in to his Ma- "jeſty from ſeveral Parts of the Kingdom, that "thoſe who ſeparate themſelves from the eſtabliſh'd "Worſhip, do meet in greater Numbers than for- "merly, to ſuch a degree as may endanger the Pub- "lick Peace, by which his Majeſty could not but "take notice how far his known and ſtill avowed "Eaſineſs to indulge tender Conſciences was abu- "ſed thereby; his Majeſty was pleaſed, by the "Advice of his Privy Council, to order his Procla- "mation to be iſſued out, ſtraitly charging and "commanding all his Juſtices of the Peace, within "the Limits of their ſeveral Juriſdictions, where "they ſhall find ſuch Meetings to be held; that "they put the Laws in execution for Suppreſſion "thereof, and particularly proceed againſt the "Preachers, according to the Statute made in the "17th of his Majeſty's Reign, intitled, An Act for "reſtraining Nonconformiſts from inhabiting in Corpora- "tions. This Proceeding of the King in Council met with ſuch a general Approbation from the Nobility and Gentry, that at the next Meeting of the Parliament, both Houſes, in a ſolemn manner, on "Novemb. 6. return'd his Majeſty their Thanks for "his Care of the Publick, in iſſuing out his Procla- "mation for ſuppreſſing Conventicles; and humbly "deſired his Majeſty to continue the ſame Care "for the future.

Proclamation for ſuppreſſing Conventicles.

His Majeſty was pleaſed this Year to confer two ſignal Marks of Favour upon the two Epiſcopal Sees of Exeter and Sarum. For upon the Vacancy of the Deanery of Saint Burien in Cornwal, the Dignity and Revenue thereof was by Royal Authority annex'd and united for ever to the Biſhoprick of Exeter, for the better ſupport of that See miſerably impoveriſh'd at the Reformation. And in a Chapter of the moſt noble Order of the Garter held at Whitehall

Royal Favours to the Sees of Exeter and Sarum.

1669. 21 Car. II. Whitehall on Nov. 19. the Sovereign then declared, that the Reaſon of calling this Chapter was to conſider of the Pretenſions of Dr. Seth Ward Biſhop of Salisbury, exhibited in a Petition concerning the Title and Claim of himſelf and his Succeſſors unto the Office of Chancellour of the moſt Noble Order of the Garter (when the ſame ſhould become void) the Biſhop grounding the Equity of his Claim upon a Charter firſt granted by King Edward the Fourth, in the fifteenth Year of his Reign, unto Richard Beauchamp Biſhop of Salisbury and his Succeſſors for ever; which Charter hath been ſince confirm'd under the great Seal of England by other Kings and Queens, and particularly by King Charles the Firſt of ever bleſſed Memory: Hereupon the Biſhop being called in, and commanded to produce his Proofs to make good that his Pretenſion, accordingly the Biſhop humbly offer'd an authentick Copy of the Original Charter of the ſaid King Edward the Fourth, renewed and confirmed by the ſaid King Charles the Firſt, in the fourth Year of his Reign; the which being read and truly conſider'd, together with the Objections to the contrary, particularly that the Poſſeſſion and Execution of the ſaid Office of Chancellour, had been for above an hundred Years committed unto Lay-Men; notwithſtanding which, the Sovereign and Companions being fully ſatisfied with the juſtneſs of the Claim of the ſaid Biſhop, grounded upon the aforeſaid Charters, and likewiſe conſidering, that the returning of the ſaid Office to the firſt Inſtitution would be for the Honour and Dignity of the ſaid moſt Noble Order; the Soveraign thereupon with the unanimous conſent of the moſt Noble Companions then preſent, did Declare and Ordain, that the Biſhop of Sarum, and his Succeſſors for ever, ſhall have and execute the Office of Chancellour of the ſaid moſt Noble Order, and receive and enjoy all Rights, Privileges and Advantages thereunto belonging, immediately upon the firſt vacancy of the ſaid Office.

Dr. Peter Gunning made Bp. of Chicheſter.

March 6. The Ceremony of Conſecration of the Right Reverend and Learned Dr. Peter Gunning Biſhop of Chicheſter, was performed in the Chapel of his Grace the Archbiſhop of Canterbury, with the uſual Solemnities, in preſence of both the Archbiſhops, moſt of the Biſhops now in Town, and many Perſons of Honour and Quality.

Acts paſt in Parl.

The Parliament having prepar'd their Bills and diſpatch'd all other Buſineſs, on Monday April. 11. in the Afternoon, his Majeſty was pleaſed to be preſent in the Houſe of Peers, where the two Houſes being met, the King gave his Royal Aſſent to theſe publick Acts.

1. An Act for granting his Majeſty an Impoſition upon all Wines and Vinegar imported, between June 24. 1670. and June 24. 1678.

2. An Act for taking away the Benefit of Clergy from ſuch as ſteal Cloth from the Racks, and from ſuch as ſhall ſteal or embezel his Majeſty's Ammunition and Stores.

3. An Act for Improvement of Tillage, and the Breed of Cattle.

4. An Act for aſcertaining the Meaſures of Corn and Salt.

5. An Act for the Repairing the Haven and Peers of Great Yarmouth.

6. An Additional Act for the better Repairing of Highways and Bridges.

7. An Act for advancing the Sale of Fee-Farm Rents, and other Rents.

8. An Act to ſuppreſs and prevent Seditious Conventicles.

9. An Act for ſettling the Impoſition on Brandy.

10. An Act for Authorizing ſeveral Commiſſioners of the Realm of England, to treat with Commiſſioners of Scotland for the Weal of both Kingdoms.

11. An Additional Act for Rebuilding of the City of London, Uniting of Pariſhes, and Rebuilding of the Cathedral and Parochial Churches within the ſaid City. 1666. 21 Car. II.

12. An Act to enable the King's Majeſty to make Leaſes, Grants and Copies of Offices, Lands, Tenements and Hereditaments, Parcel of his Highneſſes Dutchy of Cornwal, or annex'd to the ſame.

13. An Act for Sale of part of the Eſtate of Sir John Petiman, for ſatisfaction of a Debt due to the King's Majeſty.

After the paſſing theſe and 25 other private Acts, his Majeſty ſignified his Pleaſure, that the two Houſes ſhould Adjourn till October 24. next; which was accordingly done.

Union of the 2 Kingdoms a Project ineffectual.

The Act of treating for a Union between the two Kingdoms, was by concert follow'd in Scotland, with an Act of that Parliament for appointing their Commiſſioners to meet and act in purſuance of that great Affair: But after many Conferences and ſeeming Reſolutions of Agreement in the main things, they broke off in mutual Jealouſies and a general Diſſatisfaction. I have heard one of the Scots Commiſſioners themſelves confeſs'd it was their own Fault in being over-wiſe and nice in the ſmaller terms of Accommodation.

Dutcheſs of Orleans meets the King at Dover.

The Dutcheſs of Orleans the King's Siſter was preparing for a Voyage to England, in appearance for a Viſit of Love and Reſpect to her Brothers, in deſign for a Meſſage from the French Court, to break the Triple League, and to draw in the King of England to aſſiſt France againſt the Dutch. His Majeſty in a kind expectation of her ſent the Advice the Guernſey, and ſeveral Yatches to receive her Royal Highneſs at Dunkirk, and haſted himſelf to Dover on Sunday May 15. accompanied by the Duke of York, Prince Rupert, the Duke of Monmouth and many other Perſons of Honour and Quality. The Dutcheſs landed the next Morning and was received and entertain'd by his Majeſty with all poſſible Expreſſions of Kindneſs. She was attended by the Mareſchal De Pleſſis Praſlin, and his Brother the Biſhop of Tournay, Madam De Pleſſis the Mareſchal's Son's Lady, the Counteſs of Grammont, and a beautiful Servant Madam Carewel, whom ſhe left behind her, an Object of the King's Affection and the Nations Hatred, the enamouring and intriguing Dutcheſs of Portſmouth.

The French King ſeem'd impatient in the Expectance of his Siſters Return, as if he were to bring him News of very great Importance; and therefore he came to Dunkirk and ſtay'd there ſome Days for her Arrival: The King of England ſending over my Lord Buckhurſt, and his Royal Highneſs Mr. Thinne to complement his moſt Chriſtian Majeſty in that Port, which ought rather to have been ſtill in Engliſh hands. She embark'd from Dover on Thurſday June 2. and landed at Calais the ſame Evening. But her ſtay in England having been longer than Monſieur her Husband allow'd or expected, it raiſed a Jealouſie, or at leaſt a Diſcontent in him; and it was plainly owing to his unkind Reception of her, that in her perfection of Strength and Health and Age, ſhe was hurried out of the World within few Days after her Return. Our Court in great Amazement durſt not betray a ſuſpicion of her indirect way of dying, but gave this ſoft Account of it, June 22. This Day arrived an Expreſs from Mr. Montague his Majeſty's Ambaſſadour at Paris, with the ſad News of the Death of Madam his Majeſty's only Siſter, to the infinite Grief and Affliction of their Majeſty's and Royal Highneſſes, as well for the greatneſs of this Loſs as for the aſtoniſhing ſuddeneſs of it. She died at St. Clou about four of the Clock on Monday Morning of a ſudden and violent Diſtemper, which had ſeized her at five of the Clock the Evening before, and was by the Phyſicians taken for a kind of Bilious Cholick. Her ſudden Death.

Prince of Orange viſits the King.

His Majeſty receiv'd this Year a more happy Viſit from his Nephew the Prince of Orange, who had lately at eighteen Years of Age been choſen Firſt Noble of Zealand, and began now to ſhew himſelf very forward, 1670. 22 Ca. II. forward, and to deserve the Character of being a most extreme hopeful Prince: And to speak more plainly (in Sir William Temple's own Words) something much better than he expected, a young Man of more Parts than ordinary, and of the better sort, that is, not lying in that kind of Wit which was neither of Use to ones Self nor any body else, but in good plain Sense, which shews Application if he had Business that deserved it, and with extreme good and agreeable Humour and Dispositions, and thus far of his way without any Vice; besides, being sleepy always by ten a Clock at Night, and loving Hunting as much as he hated Swearing, and preferring Cock-Ale before any Wine.

About the beginning of June he had been introduced into the Council of State, and that with all the pleasing Circumstances of being ineffectually opposed, and of prevailing by the Affections of the People. At this Juncture he resolv'd upon a Journey into England, but before he set out, he was very earnest with the English Ambassador to have his Opinion, whether he was likely to procure any Satisfaction in his Pretensions there; saying, that all his best Friends in Holland were of Opinion, that in case that should wholly fail him, his Journey would prove of great prejudice to his Affairs at home, by letting his Friends see how little he was considered by his Majesty, whose Countenance would be a great support to him in the course of his Fortunes. These Pretensions of his were supposed to be some Money owing from England upon the account of his Mother's Fortune; for the Ambassador's Answer to him on this Subject was, That he was wholly ignorant of all his Majesty's Affairs, besides what related to that Country, and particularly of the present State of his Revenue, or how much the late Supplies had contributed towards the ease of it. Upon which the Prince seem'd very desirous that the Ambassadour (Sir William Temple) should touch on it to one of the chief Ministers in England, so as to have his Thoughts upon it before he went. This Motion was supposed to have proceeded chiefly from the Princess Dowager, who declared her Opinion positively some Weeks before to the Ambassadour upon that matter to the same purpose, and for some time persisted in it. This private Affair might be one Motive and the more profest Reason of his Journey to England; but no doubt he had some more publick Thoughts and Cares upon him, relating to his own Honour and Hereditary Claims, and the Interest of his Co[illegible] and the common Good of Europe, which w[illegible] now upon a very Critical Turn.

But whatever [illegible]ain Hopes and Designs of his Journey, [illegible]rag'd and protracted from time to tim[illegible] Spirit not easily diverted from any [illegible] embark'd at the Bril on October 27 [illegible] one [illegible] Majesty's Yatches that waited ther[illegible] and [illegible]ed at Margate on October 29. The next Morning his Highness went to view the several Colleges, and found the Heads with their respective Societies standing at the Gates in a readiness to receive him. After Noon he visited the Schools, the Library and Theatre, in which last place a Convocation was held, where his Highness was Complemented in a Speech by the Oratour Dr. South, and did the University the Honour of accepting a Degree (as did several other Honourable Persons of his Train) and of an Invitation from the Vice-Chancellour to his College of St. John's, where he was entertain'd with an excellent and liberal Dinner. On Monday February 15. the Prince parted from Whitehal early, in order to his Return for Holland, infinitely sensible of the great Tenderness and Affection expressed to him by their Majesty's during the time he had been in England, and not less satisfied with the universal Esteem and Respects of the Court and People here. His Highness din'd at Rochester, and thence having view'd the Ships that lie in the River, he embarked about five in the Evening on board his Majesty's Yatch at Sheerness, being accompanied by the Earl of Offory, whom his Majesty had particulary appointed to attend his Highness in his Passage over. He came to the Hague privately on Saturday Evening, in an ordinary Stage-Coach, attended by one or two Servants, to avoid all publick Ceremony; all which could not hinder the People, who had known of his Arrival, from flocking to see him pass, and were not wanting to express by loud Acclamations their Joy for his Highness's safe Return.

His Return

A nearer Alliance with Fr.

The King by his Sister's Importunity and other Sollicitations was now unhappily disposed to a nearer Alliance and Correspondence with the French King, who had seconded the Motions supposed to be whisper'd from the Dutchess of Orleans, by his Ambassador in Ordinary Monsieur Colbert, and by another express Agent the Marquis De Bellefonds; and to soften things, had descended from his former stiffness, and had deliver'd up to Sir Charles Wheeler the English Portion of St. Christophers, yet destroy'd all the Plantations, and carried away all that was portable, and left the Country in a worse Condition than if it had never been inhabited. By this Intrigue of new Friendship, the French King was enabled to keep the Emperour and the Duke of Lorrain from entring (as before inclin'd) into the Triple League; and to engage the Archbishop of Cologne and the Bishop of Munster (two Princes of the Empire) against the Dutch; and to prepare a Fleet more formidable than the Kingdom of France had ever before pretended to shew: wherein he was assisted by English Shipwrights and English Timber, to the Reproach of our Court, and the great damage of our Dominion and Trade at Sea.

D. of Monmouth comes into Favour.

James Duke of Monmouth was admitted into the Privy Council on April 28. he was the eldest and best beloved Natural Son of King Charles by Mrs. Lucy Walters, born at Rotterdam on April 9. 1649. and bearing the Name of James Crofts till his Majesty's Restoration; bred chiefly at Paris under the Eye of the Queen Mother, and the Government of Thomas Ross, Esq; afterwards Secretary to Mr. Coventry Ambassador to the King of Sweden, Keeper of the King's Library, and Groom of the Privy Chamber: His Beauty, his Mein and Behaviour, in those Years of Childhood were said to be Graceful and Majestick, and to Charm all that saw him. He was brought over to England in July 1662. and receiv'd 1670. 22 Ca. II. ceived by the King at Hampton-Court with all poſſible Demonſtrations of Joy and Affection. He had an Apartment fitted up for him in the Privy Gallery at Whitehall; he had his Gentlemen and Pages to attend him, with other Equipage, Train, and Penſion, ſuitable to his Birth and Royal Relation. The ſame Year he was created Duke of Orkney in Scotland, and the 25th of Febr. Duke of Monmouth. He then took his Seat in the Houſe of Peers, and in April 1663. he was inſtall'd Knight of the Garter, with the uſual Solemnities, at Windſor. In 1665. he was entred a Member of Chriſt-Church in Oxford, having been before incorporated a Maſter of Arts in both Univerſities: In this ſame Year he was made Maſter of the Horſe, and ſoon after Married Anne Daughter and Heir to Francis Earl of Buccleugh in Scotland, generally eſteem'd the greateſt Fortune and the fineſt Woman in the three Kingdoms. His Majeſty gave him ſeveral other Places of Honour and Profit, as General of his Land-Forces, Captain of his Life-guards of Horſe, Lord Lieutenant of the Eaſt-Riding of Yorkſhire, Governour of the Town and Citadel of Kingſton upon Hull, Chief Juſtice in Eyre on the South-ſide of Trent, and in Right of his Lady, Duke of Buccleugh, and Lord Great Chamberlain of Scotland: And, what was above all other Titles, he grew every Day more and more a Favourite of the King and of the People.

Ld. Berkley made Lieutenant of Ireland.

John Lord Berkley was appointed by the King to be Lord Lieutenant of Ireland; and arriving at Dublin on April 21. entred that Day upon the Poſſeſſion of his Government, the Lord Roberts delivering up the Sword to him, with a ſhort Speech, in Council. On Tueſday Apr. 26. the Univerſity of Dublin attended his Excellency, introduced by the Lord Primate, where Dr. Ward made him an excellent Oration in Latin; to which his Excellency made his Return in Engliſh, letting them know the Kindneſs he had for Learning and Learned Men; concluding with this Counſel to them, that they would apply their Minds and Studies to the moſt uſeful Parts of Learning, ſuch as did moſt conduce to the Benefit of Mankind, to which he promiſed them all due Encouragement.

Embaſſies abroad.

The Earl of Eſſex was ſent Ambaſſadour from his Majeſty of Great Britain to the King of Denmark, and made his ſolemn Entry into Copenhagen May 14. Henry Earl of Ogle, the only Son of his Grace the Duke of Newcaſtle, was ſworn a Privy Counſellor on June 15. The Duke of Buckingham was ſent with private Inſtructions to the French King, and had Audience from him at St. Germains in the Beginning of Auguſt, where his Majeſty entertain'd him with a Review of his Army drawn out of the Camp at St. Sebaſtien, with which he preſently after took Poſſeſſion of Lorrain. Sir William Temple return'd from his Embaſſy in Holland, and was graciouſly received by his Majeſty on Sept. 20.

His Majeſty, by entring into new Counſels and a ſtricter Correſpondence with the French King, became the more jealous of the Diſcontents of his own People: And it was on this account, that on June 10. his Majeſty order'd a Proclamation to be iſſued out, commanding all Officers and Soldiers ſerving in any of the Armies of the late Uſurped Powers, not having a conſtant Habitation, to depart out of the Cities of London and Weſtminſter, on or before the 16th of June, and not to return again, or come within 20 Miles, till after the 10th Day of December next, and in the mean time to carry no Sword, Piſtol, or other Arms.

Meeting of Parl.

Monday Octob. 24. the two Houſes of Parliament, according to their Adjournment, re-aſſembled at Weſtminſter, where his Majeſty made a ſhort gracious Speech to the two Houſes, leaving the Lord Keeper to open to them more at large the Particulars, which were, " The great Care his Majeſty " had taken of them and of the Kingdom ſince their " laſt Receſs, and that beſides the Triple-League " he had made many advantageous Alliances, both " for Security and Profit of Trade, with the Swede, Dane, Spaniard, and Duke of Savoy: But ſince the Dutch and French made ſuch vaſt Naval Preparations, it was neceſſary, for the Safety and Honour of the Nation, that the King ſhould at leaſt keep equal pace with them, which could not be done without great Supplies, which muſt be ſpeedily granted; for the King intended to put an End to this Seſſion before Chriſtmas. This done, the Commons, with their Speaker, returned to their Houſe, and the ſame Morning Adjourned, as did alſo the Houſe of Lords, till Thurſday. And notwithſtanding his Majeſty's declar'd Intention, they continued to ſit till Monday March 6. when his Majeſty gave his Royal Aſſent to ſeveral Bills preſented to him; among which, the publick ones were theſe that follow: 1. " An Act for regulating the " Making of Kidderminſter Stuffs. 2. An Act to " prevent the malicious Burning of Houſes, Stacks " of Corn, and Hay, and killing and maiming of " Cattel. 3. An Act to prevent malicious Maiming and Wounding. 4. An Act for re-veſting the " Power of granting Wine-Licenſes in his Majeſty's " Heirs and Succeſſors, and for ſettling a Revenue " on his Royal Highneſs in lieu thereof. 5. An Act " for granting a Subſidy to his Majeſty for Supply " of his extraordinary Occaſions. 6. An Act for " Continuance of a former Act, entitled, An Act " to prevent Delays in extending Statutes, Judgments, and Recognizances. 7. An Act for Continuance of a former Act, to prevent Arreſts of " Judgments, and ſuperceding Executions. 8. An " Act for an Additional Exciſe on Beer, Ale, and " other Liquors.

Barbarous Aſſaults on the D. of Ormond and Sir John Coventry.

In the ſame Month of December this Year, there were two barbarous Aſſaults made; one upon the Duke of Ormond, and the other upon Sir John Coventry; which gave expreſs Occaſion to the above-mentioned Act for preventing malicious Maiming and Wounding, and therefore commonly called Coventry's Act. The Relations of theſe Facts were thus given by Authority: " On Tueſday the 6th of this inſtant " December, between the Hours of Six and Seven in " the Evening, a barbarous and inhumane Attempt " was made upon the Perſon and Life of his Grace " James Duke of Ormond, who was ſet upon in the " Streets, as he was going in his Coach, between " St. James's and Clarendon-Houſe, by ſix Perſons armed and mounted on H[illegible] who forced him " out of his Coach, and t[illegible]ed him to be ſet " on Horſe-back behind o[illegible] Company, with " intent to have carried [illegible]e obſcure Place " out of Town, whe[illegible]with more Privacy have executed t[illegible]and bloody Conſpiracy, until at l[illegible]ke endeavouring " to reſcue himſe[illegible]nd diſmounting " him that ro[illegible]ry much wounded in tha[illegible]nguiſhing under " thoſe W[illegible]n Clarendon-Houſe. in private on the other side of the Water, till his Grace had sign'd some Writings to surrender an Estate to Blood that he had forfeited by Rebellion in Ireland: A desperate Villain! who failing in this Attempt, made another on the Crown it self in the following Year. —— In the Preamble of the Act to prevent malicious Maiming and Wounding, this Account is given of the other more bloody Assault. "On Decemb. 21. a violent and inhumane Attempt "was made upon the Person of Sir John Coventry, "Knight of the Honourable Order of the Bath, being a Member of the Commons House of Parliament, and then attending the Parliament, and "upon the Person of his Servant William Wylkes, by "a considerable number of armed Men, both on "Foot and Horseback, whereby the said Sir John "Coventry and his Servant then lost several Goods, "and the said Sir John Coventry received divers "Wounds, some of which were given him in such "barbarous manner, that some of the Offenders held "him whilst others wounded him. The Fact, by "Bills of Indictment, was found to be committed "by Sir Thomas Sandys Knight, Charles Orbian Esq; "Simon Parry and Miles Reeves, who were fled from "Justice, not daring to abide a legal Trial.

The Act now made to prevent and suppress seditious Conventicles, was (as the Preamble set forth) for "Providing farther and more speedy Remedies against the growing and dangerous Practices of seditious Sectaries and other disloyal Persons, who "under pretence of tender Consciences, have or "may at their Meetings contrive Insurrections, as "late Experience hath shewn. And therefore it is "Ordained, That if any Person of sixteen Years or "upwards shall be present at any Assembly, Conventicle, or Meeting, under colour or pretence "of any Exercise of Religion, in other manner than "according to the Liturgy and Practice of the Ch. "of England, where five Persons or more shall be "assembled besides the Family, and be thereof convicted by Confession of the Party, or the Oath of "two Witnesses, shall pay five Shillings for the "first Offence, and ten Shillings for the second: "And every Person taking upon him to Teach or "Preach in such Meeting, shall forfeit for the first "Offence twenty Pounds, and for the second Offence forty Pounds; and if the Preacher cannot "be found, or be unable to pay, then the Penalty "to be levied by Warrant upon the Goods and "Chattels of any who were present. And every "Person wittingly and willingly suffering any Conventicle in his or her House, to forfeit the Sum "of twenty Pounds. For the better Execution of "the Act, Justices and Constables were impower'd "to break open Doors upon Refusal of Admission: "And Lieutenants, Deputy-Lieutenants, and commission'd Officers of the Militia, were, on Certificate made by any Justice, to disperse the said "Conventicles. The Act, and all Clauses in it, to "be construed most largely and beneficially for the "suppressing of Conventicles, and for the Justification and Encouragement of all Persons to be "employ'd in the Execution thereof. There was a "concluding Clause to provide, That neither this "Act, nor any thing therein contained, should extend to invalidate or void his Majesty's Supremacy in Ecclesiastical Affairs.

This new Act was thought by the Dissenters a mighty Grievance; and it seem'd the greater to them, because they depended on the King's Disposition of Indulgence, and a Court Interest that was running into a general Toleration of Papists, and, for the sake of Them, of all Protestant Dissenters. They complain therefore of the New Hardships put upon the poor Nonconformists, and give their own History of this Year in these Words: "The Act against Conventicles was renew'd, and made more severe than "ever: Several new Clauses were put in; as, that "the Fault of the Mittimus should not disable it; that "all doubtful Clauses in the Act should be interpreted as "would most favour the Suppression of Conventicles; and "that they that fled, or remov'd their Dwelling into another Country, should be pursu'd by Execution, &c. "Dr. Manton, tho' he had great Friends and mighty Promises of Favour, was sent Prisoner to the "Gatehouse for Preaching the Gospel in his own "House in the Parish where he had formerly been "Minister, and for not taking the Oxford Oath; "and yet coming within five Miles of a Corporation: and he continued there six Months; and all "that time the Meetings in London were disturb'd "by Bands of Soldiers, to the Terror of many and "the Death of some. About this time my Lord "Lauderdale going into Scotland, signify'd to Mr. "Baxter a Purpose there was of taking off the Oath "of Canonical Obedience, and all Impositions of "Conformity there, save only that it should be necessary to sit in Presbyteries and Synods with the "Bishops and Moderators; and told him, he had "the King's Consent to offer him what Place in "Scotland he would choose, either a Church, or a "College in the University, or a Bishoprick. From "accepting which Motion he excus'd himself, from "his Weakness and Indisposition, and the Circumstances of his Family. After that the Earl of "Lauderdale was in Scotland, Sir Robert Murray, a "great Confident of his, sent Mr. Baxter the Frame "of a Body of Church-Discipline for Scotland, and "desir'd his Animadversions. The Scheme was "handsomly contriv'd, and favour'd of much Moderation; but the Power of Synods was contrived to be in the King: Mr. Baxter made his Remarks as he was desired.

The Reasons for this Act.

We shall do them this Justice all along, to give their own Story in their own Words. But tho' the Wisdom of the Nation had very good Reasons to make a more effectual Law against Conventicles, yet 'tis certain the Dissenters had no great Reason to complain of the rigorous execution of it: It was a needful Restraint and Awe, rather than an actual Storm upon them. Nor did all the Sufferers of that Party seem to suffer for Conscience-sake, if we believe this Relation given by Authority. "Winchester, Novemb. 1. Two Persons, a Man and his "Wife, both Nonconformists, and great Pretenders "to Godliness, being upon some Misdemeanours "committed to the House of Correction in this "City, the Woman was several times observed to "encourage her Husband to do what (she said) the "Lord had put into his Heart, and not to be faint-"hearted; of which the Keeper suspected not her "Meaning, till leaving the Room to give them "Correction, of which he pardoned the Man upon "his Submission, and gave but four Stripes to the "Woman, tho' by her Hastiness and ill Behaviour "she had much provok'd him; he was, as he was "going out of the Room, suddenly stabb'd by the "Man into the left Breast with a Knife: which "Wound, 'tis feared, may prove mortal. The "Prisoners are so little sensible of the Heinousness "of the Fact, that they have expressed themselves "to be sorry that they had not dispatch'd the Keeper and his Wife together; and seem to fear the "Knife has not done what they desired.

Meeting-Houses turned into Tabernacles.

That the People by suppressing of Conventicles might not be deprived of equal Opportunities to worship God in a solemn and lawful manner; it was order'd by the King and Council, that all such Places of Meeting within the Cities of London and Westminster should be turned into stated Tabernacles and be regularly supplied by the Church-Divines: And therefore on June 15. publick Notice was given, "That the Places under-named, of late made "use of for Conventicles and unlawful Assemblies, "are now by his Majesty's particular Command in "Council appointed to be used every Lord's-day "for celebrating Divine Worship and Preaching the "Word of God, by approved Orthodox Ministers, "thereto to be appointed by the Right Reverend "Father in God the Lord Bishop of London, to be-

" In Fisher's-Folly in Bishopsgate-street a convenient " Place with two Galleries, Pews and Seats.

" In Hand-Ally in Bishopsgate-street a large Room " purposely built for a Meering-House, with three " Galleries, thirty large Pews, and many Benches " and Forms, known by the Name of Vincent's " Congregation.

" In St. Michael's-Lane a large Room with two " Galleries and thirty nine Forms.

" In Mugwel-street Mr. Doolittle's Meeting-House, " built of Brick with three Galleries, full of large " Pews, and thirty eight large Pews below, with " Locks and Keys to them, besides Benches and " Forms.

" The Cockpit in Jewin-street, a Meeting-House of " one Grimes, three Galleries, many Pews, Forms " and Benches.

" In Black-Friers Mr. Wood's Meeting-House, four " Rooms opening into one another, with Lattice " Partitions, each Room conveniently filled with " Benches and Forms.

" In Salisbury-Court four Rooms opening into one " another, in the Possession of John Fowl a School- " Master.

" In New-street within Shoe-Lane four Rooms o- " pening into one another, with seventeen Pews and " divers Benches, in the possession of Mrs. Turner.

Dangers of Popery. The Lords and Commons in Parliament gave a sufficient Proof that their Care in suppressing Conventicles was a necessary Means to discourage Popery, and to prevent the Hopes and Designs of that growing Faction: And therefore the two Houses join'd in a humble Address to the King, representing their Fears and Apprehensions of the growth of the Popish Religion, and their Desires to have the Laws impartially executed on all Popish Recusants, and especially on the Priests and Jesuits. Upon which his Majesty could not forbear to issue out his Royal Proclamation of the 23d of March, declaring, " That " whereas the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and " Commons in this present Parliament assembled, " have by their humble Petition represented to his " Majesty their Fears and Apprehensions of the " Growth and Encrease of the Popish Religion in " these his Majesty's Dominions, together with the Causes thereof, and also such Remedies as they con- " ceive may be proper to prevent such growing " Mischiefs. Which Petition of theirs his Majesty " having seriously consider'd, and with much Con- " tentment and Satisfaction, accepting and appro- " ving the great Care of the said Lords Spiritual and " Temporal and Commons in Parliament assembled, " for the Preservation of the true Religion establish'd " in this Kingdom; to which his Majesty declares, " as he hath always adhered against all Temptati- " ons whatsoever, so he will still employ his utmost " Care and Zeal in the Maintenance and Defence of " it. And therefore strictly charges and commands " all Jesuits and Romish Priests, that before the " first of May they depart out of England upon pain " of having the Penalties of the Laws and Statutes " of this Realm inflicted upon them. And for the " better discovery of all others who are Popish Re- " cusants, or justly suspected to be so, his Majesty " commands, that all the Judges, Barons of the Ex- " chequer, Justices of Peace, &c. do not only ob- " serve his Majesty's Will and Pleasure therein be- " fore expressed, but also forthwith put all other " the Laws in due Execution against all Popish Re- " cusants, and such as are suspected to be so, in or- " der to their speedy Conviction, and due Process " upon such Convictions. And because there may " be some Priests imprisoned in this Realm, yet un- " known to his Majesty, all Sheriffs, Bayliffs and " Keepers of Prisons are within twenty Days after " publication of this Proclamation to advertise some " of the Lords of the Privy Council of their Names, " and by whom and for what Cause they were com- " mitted, to the end Order may be given for their " Transportation."

On June 19. Dr. Creighton Bishop of Bath and Wells was solemnly Consecrated at Lambeth with the usual Ceremonies, at which assisted the Bishop of London in the place of his Grace the Archbishop of Canterbury not then fully recover'd from his late Distemper, with the Bishops of Winchester and Ely, where the Sermon was preach'd on that occasion by Dr. Hill Chaplain to his Grace the Duke of Ormond; after which, the Bishops, several of the Nobility and many Persons of Quality were entertained at a plentiful Dinner. Consecration of Dr. Creighton.

On Sunday March 12. the new Church in Shadwel, formerly in the Parish of Stepney, and now made Parochial by Act of Parliament, and plentifully Endowed by the Dean of St. Pauls and —— Neal, Esq; was with the usual Solemnity Consecrated by the Right Reverend Father in God John Lord Bishop of Rochester, commissionated thereunto by Humphrey Lord Bishop of London, as being in his Diocese. Most of the Gentry of those Quarters assisting at the Ceremony, which being ended, the said Bishop of Rochester made an excellent and most learned Sermon upon that Occasion, to the great Satisfaction and Applause of all that were present. Consecration of the Church of Shadwel.

1671. This Year begins in Mourning for the Death of Anne Dutchess of York, the eldest Daughter of Edward Earl of Clarendon late Lord Chancellour of England: After a growing Corpulency that cast her into a long Indisposition of Health, she died in the 34th Year of her Age at the Palace of St. James on Friday March 31, between two and three in the Afternoon, and on Wednesday April 5. was interr'd a large Vault on the South side of King Henry VII.'s Chapel; her Body being accompanied from the Painted Chamber in the Palace at Westminster (whither it was privately brought from St. James's) by his Highness Prince Rupert, who appear'd as Chief Mourner, and by most of the Nobility, who follow'd in Order; the Kings and Officers of Arms giving their Attendance; their Majesty's and Royal Highnesses Servants, and several Gentlemen and Persons of Quality preceding the Corps to the Place of Interment, with the Solemnities usually practis'd on the like Solemnities. She left Issue by James Duke of York one Son Edgar Duke of Cambridge, who after a long Weakness from his very Birth, died at Richmond on Thursday June 8. and two incomparable Daughters, the Princess Mary and the Princess Anne, both preserved for a most singular successive Blessing to this Church and Nation, and one other younger Daughter Catherine, who at about ten Months old died at Whitehall on Wednesday December 6. within this same Year. Death of the Dutchess of York.

The two Houses on their last Day of Sitting April 22. waited in a Body upon his Majesty in the Banquetting-House at Whitehal, with their humble Address, " That his Majesty would be graciously plea- " sed by his own Example to encourage the constant " wearing of the Manufactures of his own Kingdom " and Dominions, and discountenance the Wear of " any Manufactures made in Foreign Countries. His " Majesty very graciously accepted their humble " Motion, and was pleased to declare, that he would " comply with their Desires; that he had in his own Per- " son as little used them as any, and for the future would " discountenance those that should. In the Afternoon of the same Day, his Majesty with the usual Solemnities being present in the House of Peers, and the House of Commons with their Speaker there attending, was pleased to give his Royal Assent to several Bills then presented to him, fourteen private Acts and eighteen publick, of which last were, 1. " An Act to prevent the delivery up of Merchants " Ships, and for the Encrease of good and service- " able Shipping. 2. An Act for exporting of Beer, " Ale and Mum. 3. An Act for laying Impositi- " ons Address of the two Houses. Acts passed.

tempt ſteal :Crown

May 9. a bold and incredible Attempt was made to ſteal the Crown out of the Tower of London in this manner: About ſeven in the Morning four Men came to Mr. Edwards Keeper of the Jewel Houſe in the Tower, and deſired to ſee the Regal Crown remaining in his Cuſtody; he carried them into the Room where it was kept, and ſhewed it to them as to innocent and undeſigning Strangers; but they to carry on their villainous Intention, clap'd a Gag of a ſtrange Form into the old Man's Mouth, who making what Noiſe and Reſiſtance he could, they ſtabb'd him a deep wound in the Belly with a Stiletto, adding ſeveral other dangerous Wounds in the Head with a ſmall Beetle, which they had brought for the purpoſe of beating together and flattening the Crown, to make it the more eaſily Portable; which having, together with the Ball put into Bags provided by them for that uſe, they fairly walk'd out, leaving the old Man groveling on the Ground gagged and pinioned. Thus they paſſed by all the Sentinels, till, in the mean time, the Son-in-Law of Mr. Edwards caſually paſſing by, and hearing the Door ſhut and ſome buſtle, went in to look what the matter might be, where he found his old Father in the miſerable Condition they had left him; whereupon running out in all haſte, and crying to ſtop the Authors of that horrid Villainy, the Perſons began to mend their Pace, and to make a ſpeedier Eſcape, which the laſt Sentinel perceiving bid them ſtand; but inſtead of ſtanding to give an Account of themſelves, one of them fired a Piſtol at the Sentinel, and he his Musket at them; which gave the Alarm ſo, as with the purſuit of Mr. Edwards's Son-in-Law, two of the Malefactors were immediately ſeiſed; but two more with another that held their Horſes without the Tower-Gate eſcaped: With the two that were taken were found the Crown and Ball, only ſome few Stones miſſing, which had been looſen'd with the beating of the Crown together with the Mallet. Thoſe two were immediately carried to Whitehall, and one of them proved to be Blood apparell'd in the Habit of a Clergyman to cover all ſuſpicion, a notorious Traitor and Incendiary, who had been out-law'd for the Rebellion in Ireland eight Years ago; the other was one Perrot a Dyer in Thames-ſtreet. Within two Hours after a third was apprehended, as he was eſcaping on Horſeback, and he proved to be Thomas Hunt, mention'd in his Majeſty's Proclamation for the diſcovering of the Perſons who had lately committed that horrid Attempt upon his Grace the Duke of Ormond, but by whatever Name he went he was indeed Son of the ſaid Blood, who with great impudency confeſs'd, that they two were with ſeven others in that Action. They were all three ſent cloſe Priſoners to the Tower. 1671. 23 Ca. II.

Knights of the Garter.

On Sunday May 28. being the Eve of the Celebration of St. George's Feaſt, appointed to be kept this Year on the Anniverſary of his Majeſty's Birth and ever happy Reſtoration, the King as Sovereign of the Order of the Garter accompanied by the Duke of York, Prince Rupert and ſeveral other Companions, all in their Habits proceeded in the Afternoon to the Chapel of St. George in Windſor with great Solemnity, where before the Divine Service began, the Earl of Carliſle introduc'd between his Royal Highneſs and Prince Rupert, was Inſtalled as Proxy of the King of Sweden; and the Earl of Winchelſea between the Dukes of Ormond and Buckingham as Proxy for the Elector of Saxony, both which Princes had been inveſted with the full Habit of the Order in the Year 1669. and after them the Duke of Albemarle, introduc'd between the Earls of Sandwich and Oxford was likewiſe inveſted and ſet in his Stall. The next Day the Feaſt was celebrated with extraordinary Splendor and Magnificence; and the Day following the Sovereign proceeding to the Chapel, after he had taken his Stall, the Companions before they aſcended to theirs, offer'd in Order the Atchievements of Arms, viz. the Banners, Swords and Creſts of ſeven deceaſed Knights, being William Earl of Salisbury, Thomas Earl of Berks, Algernon Earl of Northumberland, Thomas Earl of Southampton, George Duke of Albemarle, Mountague Earl of Lindſey, and Edward Earl of Manchester.

Death of great Men.

This Edward Earl of Manchester Lord Chamberlain of his Majeſty's Houſhold, and Chancellor of the Univerſity of Cambridge, died at Whitehall on Friday May 5. about twelve a Clock at Night, in the 69th Year of his Age, much to the Regret of his Majeſty and the Grief of the whole Court. His Majeſty was pleaſed to make choice of the Right Honourable Henry Earl of St. Albans, to ſucceed in the Office of Lord Chamberlain, and was pleaſed to deliver him the Staff on May 13. and immediately his Lordſhip enter'd upon the execution of that Honourable Charge; and the Dignity of Chancellor of the Univerſity of Cambridge was ſoon after by Election conferr'd upon his Grace the Duke of Buckingham. This indeed was a Year of reigning Mortality among the Great Men: On Tueſday May 9. died at his Houſe in Town Sir John Keyling Knight, Lord Chief Juſtice of his Majeſty's Court of King's Bench, after a long weakneſs and decay of Strength, much regreted for his great Integrity and Worth: And his Majeſty was pleaſed to confer that important Place upon the Lord Chief Baron Hales, who after having taken the uſual Oaths before the Right Honourable the Lord Keeper, took his Seat on that Bench Thurſday May 18. leaving his Seat in the Exchequer to be filled with his Majeſty's choice of Sir Edward Turner, Knight, Sollicitor General, who on Tueſday May 23. in obedience to his Majeſty's Writ, commanding him to take his Degree of Serjeant at Law, he appeared at the Chancery Bar, and according to cuſtom took the uſual Oath before the Right Honourable the Lord Keeper, and then perform'd the due Ceremonies before the Lord Chief Juſtice of the Common Pleas, after which he was called by the Lord Keeper to the Exchequer Bar, and being there ſworn Lord Chief Baron of that Court, he took his 1671. 23 Ca. II. Place on the Bench; while his Majesty was pleased to make choice of Francis North, Esq; Son to the Lord North, to succeed in the Trust of Sollicitor General, who having receiv'd the Honour of Knighthood was sworn into the Place on Tuesday May 23. His Grace William Duke of Somerset died Dec. 26. in the twentieth Year of his Age, after five Days illness of the Small Pox, to the great Affliction of that Noble Family, leaving his Unkle the Lord John Seymour Heir of his Honour and Estate. Sir Thomas Ingram Chancellor of the County Palatine and Dutchy of Lancaster died soon after Christmas at his House in Thistleworth; and his Majesty deliver'd the Seals of that Office on Febr. 14. to Sir Robert Carr, Knight and Baronet, as a gracious Mark of the Esteem his Majesty had for his Worth and Loyalty; and he was the same Day admitted of the Privy Council, and took his Place at the Board. On Thursday Febr. 22. the Right Honourable Thomas Lord Leigh died at his House at Stoneleigh in Warwickshire in the 77th Year of his Age, leaving Heir to his Estate and Honour his Grandchild Thomas Son to his eldest Son Sir Thomas Leigh deceased.

French Intrigues. Ill Counsellors, Ladies and Relations drew away the King to promote the Grandeur of France and the Advance of Popery; and to incite the Court to these fatal Measures, great Sums of Money were sent over from the French King to buy in the English Ministry and their Master himself. The Plot of France was no less than to dissolve the Triple Alliance, to make a new War between England and Holland, to procure Liberty and Relaxation of Laws to the Roman Catholicks, and (to prevent interruption in these Designs) to keep the Parliament from sitting. And all these things were fatally accomplish'd.

Ambassies abroad. To break the Triple Alliance Henry Coventry, Esq; was sent Ambassadour Extraordinary from his Majesty to the King of Sweden, and embark'd at Greenwich in one of his Majesty's Yatchs in the beginning of September, and did his Business so effectually, that at our first declaring War against the Dutch, the Swedish King stood Neuter, and soon after join'd with us and the French King against them. And there seems to be truth in what a late Writer observes, This Success Mr. Coventry had, that for this Roger Coke Esq; Business, which put all Christendom into a Flame, he was by the King made Principal Secretary of State, and it may be presented with his fine Rangers place in Enfield-Chase too; and that perhaps with thrice more by the French King: Whereas Sir William Temple who was the principal Instrument in the Peace at Nimeguen, lost two thousand two hundred Pounds by it, and his only Recompence was to be Secretary of State in Mr. Coventry's Place, if Sir William would give him 10000 l. for it. Other Ambassies were order'd to expedite the great Design, or to cover over the Intentions of it, Sir Robert Southwel went Envoy Extraordinary to the Count De Monterey Governour for his Catholick Majesty of the Spanish Netherlands, and began his Journey to Brussels October 30. the Earl of Sunderland went Ambassadour Extraordinary to the Crown of Spain, setting out for Dover on Nov. 22. intending to pass from thence to Calais, and so to proceed by Land, as if he had Instructions to receive upon the Road from the Court of France. And Sir George Downing was appointed his Majesty's Ambassadour to the States General of the United Provinces, and embark'd at Greenwich for his Transportation about the beginning of December; but he did the Business there with so little Art, that within a Day after his Return on Feb. 7. he was privately examined by some of the Lords of the Council, and an Account thereof being given to his Majesty, he was by his Majesty's Warrant sent Prisoner to the Tower, for not having obey'd the Orders sent to him. For fear a Parliament should inquire into the Intrigues that were now depending, his Majesty was pleased to issue his Royal Proclamation on Sept. 22. for the Parl. Prorogu'd. farther Prorouguing of the Parliament from April 16. next ensuing, till Octo. 30. following, which should be in the Year 1672. Some good Subjects would have thought, that the King could never enter into a War with Holland without Advice of his Parliament, or at least that he could never support himself in any War without their Aid and Assistance. But to salve this matter, a fatal Expedient was found out, that was said to be the suggestion of my Lord Ashley to Sir Thomas Clifford, or at least was the joint Project of these Ministers who then govern'd all, viz. Clifford, Ashley, Buckingham, Arlington and Lauderdale, the Initial Letters of whose Names made up their proper Title of CABAL. This Expedient was to shut up the Exchequer, wherein the Bankers who had furnish'd the King with mighty Sums of Money at very extorsive Interest, had lodg'd between thirteen and fourteen hundred thousand Pounds of other Subjects Money. To put some Colour on so unjust a Practice, his Majesty being present in Council upon Tuesday January 2. was pleased to declare,

Shutting up of the Exchequer.

1671. 23 Ca. I.

" That seeing all the Princes and States his Neighbours, were making great Preparations for War, both by Sea and Land; his Majesty for the safety of his Government and People, look'd upon himself as oblig'd to make such Preparations as might be proportionable for the Protection both of the one and the other; and to that end had already given Orders, for the fitting and preparing a very considerable Fleet, to be ready against the Spring. That by this inevitable necessity, his Majesty considering the great Charges that must attend such Preparations, and after his serious Debates and best Considerations, not finding any possibility to defray such unusual Expences, by the usual ways and means of borrowing Monies, by reason his Revenues were so anticipated and engaged, he was necessitated (contrary to his own Inclinations) upon these Emergencies, and for the publick safety at the present, to cause a stop to be made of the payment of any Monies, now being, or to be brought into his Exchequer, for the space of one whole Year, ending the last Day of December next, upon any Person or Persons whatsoever, by vertue of any Warrant, Securities or Orders, whether Register'd or not Register'd therein, and payable within that time. And after some Promises of repayment, and that no Person should be defrauded of any thing that was justly due to him, his Majesty was farther graciously pleased to declare, that nothing could have urg'd his Majesty to an Act of this Nature but such a Conjuncture of Affairs, when all the neighbouring Princes and States were making such threating Preparations, that his Government could not be safe, without appearing in the same posture.

The French K. draw the Engl. into a War with Holland.

We are told that the French King, having got the King of England into this Net, used him very ill, by openly declaring that to break with the Dutch, was none of his own Quarrel, and that he only engaged in it out of respect to his Person; and therefore before any War was declar'd, the King of England must first break the Peace by some Attempt at Sea.

Accordingly Sir Robert Holmes was order'd to lye off of Portsmouth, to meet the Dutch Smyrna and and Streights Fleet, and find a Pretence to intercept them. An Account of this dishonourable Action was thus given by Authority from Whitehall, " That " on Wednesday March 13. five of his Majesty's Fri- " gots cruizing by the Isle of Wight, met with the " Dutch Fleet of Smyrna Men and others, of about " fifty Sail, convoy'd by six Men of War, and of " their Merchant-Men twenty at least carried be- " tween twenty and forty Guns apiece, when our " Frigots came near them, we shot to make them " strike and lower their Top-sails, which the Dutch " refusing to do, our Frigots shot thro' and thro' " them; and though they then lower'd their Top- " sails, yet they refused to strike, upon which the " Fight began; this happen'd about three of the " Clock that Afternoon and continued until Night,

1671. 23 Ca. II.

" at which time three more of our Frigats came in. " Thurſday, the next Morning, the Fight begun a- " gain, and continued all that Day; in the Even- " ing were taken five of their richeſt Merchant- " men, and Captain John Holmes in the Gloceſter " boarded their Rear-Admiral, and took her, but " ſhe was ſo ſhatter'd and torn, that ſhe ſunk with- " in a few hours in his poſſeſſion. This Squadron " was commanded by Sir Robert Holmes in the Saint " Michael, the Earl of Oſſory was Vice-Admiral in " the Reſolution, and Sir Fretcheville Hollis Rear- " Admiral in the Cambridge, Captain Legg com- " manded the Fairfax, Captain Elliot the York, Cap- " tain Towlis the Diamond, and Captain Watſon the " Succeſs, who all behaved themſelves with great " Gallantry.

We are told that the Dutch, alarm'd at the Attempt upon their Smyrna Fleet, and being in no condition to reſiſt both Kings, ſent Deputies to both, to know upon what Terms they would agree to Peace. Thoſe ſent to our King were denied Audience, and kept at Hampton-Court till it were known what the French King's Pleaſure was: but thoſe ſent to the French King had Anſwer, That what the King had was his own, and what he ſhould conquer ſhould be his without an Equivalent; and declared, the States might deal with England as they pleaſed, and come off as cheap as they could, becauſe by their Treaty they were not bound to procure them any Advantages.

A Declaration of War was reſolved upon; but it required ſome Art to repreſent ſufficient Reaſons for it. To furniſh the Government with ſome fair Pretenſions at leaſt, the Committee for the Eaſt-India Company was ſummon'd to ſhew Cauſe, whether the Dutch had not broke in upon their Trade, or committed any Violence abroad, for which publick Satisfaction ought to be demanded of them. They anſwer'd, and gave it under their hands, that ſince the Treaty at Breda the Dutch had ſufficiently obſerved the Articles of Trade; and they knew no Cauſe, on that account, of breaking with them. However, the Miniſtry was reſolved to find Cauſes, or make them: And therefore on the 17th of March was publiſhed his Majeſty's Declaration of War againſt the States General of the United Provinces, containing the Motives and Reaſons inducing his Majeſty thereunto; of which, the firſt was, " The " pretended Inſults of the Dutch upon the Engliſh " in their Trade in the Eaſt and Weſt Indies, and " particularly the detaining our Engliſh Planters in " Surinam after it was reſtored into their hands. A ſecond was, " The making bold with the King's " Royal Perſon by abuſive Pictures and falſe Hiſto- " rical Medals and Pillars. A third was, Their " invading the Right of the Flag, and refuſing Sa- " tisfaction. It concluded with a Paragraph that was thought a Jeſt to all wiſe People; a Promiſe to maintain the Triple League, even by this expreſs Violation of it: The Words were, And whereas we are engaged by a Treaty to ſupport the Peace made at Aix la Chapelle, we do finally declare, That notwithſtanding the Proſecution of this War, we will maintain the true Intent and Scope of the ſaid Treaty; and that in all the Alliances which we have or ſhall make in the Progreſs of this War, we have and will take care to preſerve the Ends thereof inviolable, unleſs provoked to the contrary. To the Reaſons of this Declaration the Dutch anſwer'd, That as to Trade, they had made no unjuſt Inroads upon any the Engliſh Factories or Plantations: And as to the Engliſh Planters in Surinam, they themſelves were not willing to forſake their Effects and Subſiſtence, and therefore ſtay'd behind upon their own choice. As to the Pictures and Medals, they ſaid they knew of none, except one Medal, which might be liable to any ill Conſtruction; but as ſoon as they knew of it, they cauſed the Stamp to be broken. As to the Flag, the States diſown'd the Refuſal of it; and offer'd to make any reaſonable Satisfaction.

nſwer f the Dutch.

The States of Holland ſeeing this terrible Storm falling on them, had recourſe to the young Prince of Orange, and ſeem'd to depend upon him, as born for their Defence and Protection: and therefore they preſented him, being now 22 Years of Age, with the Charge of their Armies, and Admiral of the United Provinces. The States did this the more willingly upon a Proſpect of ſoftning the Engliſh Court, and talked of ſending an Extraordinary Ambaſſadour thither to buy Good-will, ſaying, That the Prince's Promotion, and Satisfaction upon the Flag, would certainly appeaſe them; wherein, it ſeems, they were encouraged by their own Ambaſſadour then at London. The Prince having accepted of theſe Commands, went to the Army, that lay not far from Nieukop, where he kept his Poſt againſt the united Forces of the French, and conſtrained them to retire with Loſs and Diſhonour. But the Frontier Towns and Garriſons in Holland falling every day into the Hands of the French, the People would not be ſatisfied without the Advancement of the Prince of Orange to the Office of Stadt Holder, which had been oppoſed and reſolved againſt by the States and the Miniſtry. 1671. 23 Ca. II. The Dutch make the Prince of Orange their Admiral and General.

This Affection of the People appeared firſt in Dort, where the People roſe in Multitudes and Arms, and would not be pacified till the Magiſtrates had ſent for the Prince from the Army, and declared him Stadt Holder, with the ſame Power, Dignity, and Authority, which his Anceſtors had formerly enjoyed. This Example, by the Importunities of the People, was ſoon followed by all the Cities of Holland, and Zealand, and Weſt Frieſland. And becauſe it was chiefly oppoſed by the Penſionary De Wit, and his Brother Cornelius Bailiff of Putten, they were torn in pieces by the Rabble at the Hague. And at laſt their Stadt Holder.

When the Prince was thus advanced, the French made their Applications to him, with a Propoſal of making him Prince Soveraign of thoſe Provinces, under the Protection of England and France. But tho' the Temptation at that time was very inviting, he had the Honour to deſpiſe it, and anſwer, that he would not betray the Truſt repoſed in him, nor ever ſell the Liberty of his Country which his Anceſtors had ſo long defended. Yet the Game he play'd was then thought ſo deſperate, that one of his greateſt Confidents expoſtulated the matter with him, and ask'd him, How he pretended to live after Holland was loſt? And whether he had thought ſo far? He anſwer'd, He was reſolved to live upon his Lands in Germany, and that he had rather ſpend his life in Hunting there, than ſell his Country or his Liberty to France at any price. The Prin. refuſes the Bribes of the French.

As to Church Affairs; On the Death of Dr. Skinner, Walter Lord Biſhop of Oxford was on June 13. at St. Mary Savoy, in the Preſence of all the Biſhops in Town, with the uſual Solemnity, tranſlated to the See of Worceſter; and did Homage to his Majeſty in the uſual Forms on June 18. And on June 27. Dr. Nathaniel Crew, Son to the Lord Crew and Clerk of the Cloſet to his Majeſty, Biſhop elect of Oxford; and Dr. Thomas Wood, late Dean of Litchfield, Biſhop elect of Coventry and Litchfield, received their Confirmation at St. Mary's Savoy; and on Sunday July 2. were ſolemnly conſecrated in the Chapel at Lambeth by his Grace the Lord Archbiſhop of Canterbury, aſſiſted by the Biſhops of London, Ely, Lincoln, Worceſter, and Rocheſter; with a Sermon preach'd by Mr. Tompkins one of his Grace's Chaplains. On Sunday Oct. 1. Dr. Henry Bridgman Dean of Cheſter, was, in the Quire of that Cathedral Church, conſecrated Biſhop of Sodor and Man, by the Lord Biſhop of Cheſter, as Subſtitute of his Grace the Archbiſhop of York, aſſiſted by the Biſhops of Bangor, St. Aſaph, and Clonghar, in the Preſence of many Perſons of great Quality, who were afterwards very nobly entertained by the new Biſhop at his own Houſe. On February 12. upon the Vacancy of the Biſhoprick of Durham upon the Death of Dr. John Coſin Lord Bp and Count Palatine, who departed this Life upon the 15th of January laſt, in the 77th Year of his Age, and left a moſt ample State of Religion. Eccleſiaſtical Preferments.

Teſti-

1671. 23 Ca. II. Teſtimony to the World of his great Piety and Charity; his Majeſty was pleaſed, in order to the Adminiſtration of Juſtice in Civil Affairs within that County Palatine, to conſtitute Sir Gilbert Gerard Kt. and Baronet to be High Sheriff of the ſame, as likewiſe to appoint Sir Francis Goodrick, Temporal Chancellour of the ſaid County, to be Keeper of the Great Seal of the ſaid Biſhoprick and County Palatine: and then kept the See vacant, aſſigning over the great Revenues to no very honourable purpoſe. Apr. 19. 1672. the Funeral of Biſhop Coſins proceeded in great State from the Houſe of Sir Gilbert Gerrard in the Pall-Mall near St. James's through the Strand to the Temple, and through Chancery-Lane and Grays-Inn-Lane out of Town, in order to an Interrment at Biſhops-Aukland near Durham, which Palace he had, in his Life-time, with exemplary Piety and Munificence repaired, having added a fair and noble Chappel, and there choſe the Place of his Sepulture. On Sunday Dec. 17. the new Church called now Chriſt-Church near Paris Garden in Southwark, built by Mr. John Marſhal late Inhabitant there (who beſide other large charitable Bequeſts, had likewiſe plentifully endowed the ſame) and made Parochial by Act of Parliament, was conſecrated by the Right Reverend Father in God the Biſhop of Winchester, Dioceſan, with the uſual Solemnity; and an excellent and learned Sermon preach'd by Dr. Littleton.

Complaints of the Diſſenters.

The Diſſenters thus report their Sufferings in this Year. "The Dioceſe of Salisbury was moſt "fiercely driven on to Conformity by Dr. Seth "Ward their Biſhop: Many Hundreds did he proſe- "cute with great Induſtry; and among the reſt, "that learned, humble, holy Gentleman, Mr. Tho- "mas Grove, an ancient Parliament Man, of as "great Sincerity and Integrity as moſt in the Land: "He ſtood it out a while in a Law-Suit, but was "overthrown, and forc'd to forſake his Country, "with multitudes of others. During the Mayoralty "of Sir Samuel Sterling, many Jury-men in London "were Fin'd and Impriſon'd by the Judge for not "finding certain Quakers guilty of violating the "Act againſt Conventicles: They appeal'd and "ſought Remedy: The Judges remain'd about a "Year in ſuſpence, and then by the Lord Chief "Juſtice Vaughan deliver'd their Reſolution againſt "the Judge, for the Subjects Freedom from ſuch "ſort of Fines. He dilated upon it in a Speech of "two or three hours, which was received with great "Joy and Applauſe by the People, and the Judges "thereupon cried up as the Pillars of Law and Li- "berty.

Their Caſe repreſented

The Diſſenters ſhould not have complain'd of Perſecution, without confeſſing the true Reaſons of it. The Laws had impoſed moderate Penalties upon them; the two Houſes were expreſs for the Execution of thoſe Laws; the Biſhops and Clergy might be ſincerely zealous in it: but the King and the Miniſtry were for ſtopping the legal Proceedings againſt them, and were in the Secret of Diſpenſing with the Laws Eccleſiaſtical and Civil for the ſake of indulging the Papiſts and the Nonconformiſts. This encourag'd the Diſſenters to defie the Laws, to which they would moſt of them have ſubmitted if they had found a ſteady and impartial Execution of them. And this again provok'd the honeſt Juſtices and Magiſtrates to bear the more hard upon them, when they ſaw them ſo bold in deſpiſing and evading the Juſtice of the Nation.

Even by their own Confeſſion.

This Reaſon the Men of Separation have indeed themſelves confeſt, tho' not ſo fully as they ought to have done. Their Words are theſe: "The "Parliament having made the Laws againſt Non- "conformiſt's Preaching and private Religious "Meetings ſo ſevere as hath been repreſented, the "King, altho' he conſented to thoſe Laws, became "the Patron of their Liberty. Not by any legal "Abatements, but by his Connivance as to the ex- "ecution; the Magiſtrates, for the moſt part, do- "ing what they perceived to be his Will. The Mi- "niſters were encourag'd by Sir John Barber and "others, to make their Addreſſes to the King, to "profeſs their Loyalty, and acknowledge his Cle- "mency: and they did ſo. The King told them, "That tho' ſuch Acts were made, he was againſt "Perſecution, and hop'd e're long to ſtand on his "own Legs, and then they ſhould ſee how much "he was againſt it. By this means they gain'd "Peace and Quiet in their Meetings in the City; "And in all Sir Richard Ford's Mayoralty (tho' he "was ſuppos'd one of their greateſt and moſt know- "ing Adverſaries) they remained undiſturb'd. 1671. 23 Ca. II.

Another Author, who was enough tender of the Diſſenting Parties, does obſerve, "That the Vizard- "Mask under which the Popiſh Party covered their "Hypocriſie, was for the King, againſt the Judg- "ment of the two Houſes, to diſpenſe with Penal "Laws againſt Diſſenters from the Church of Eng- "land, ſo to conjoin the Proteſtant Diſſenter's In- "tereſt with the Popiſh: And this not only appear- "ed by Practice, but by Deſign in Coleman's Letters "to Fathers Ferrier and la Chaiſe, the French King's "Confeſſors. And therefore, as before the firſt "Dutch War the King iſſued out his Declaration "of Indulgence for Diſpenſing with the Penal Laws "in Eccleſiaſtical Affairs, in the Interval of the ſit- "ting of the Parliament; ſo did he before this ſe- "cond War. —— And before this Declaration of In- "dulgence in England, the King on Febr. 26. iſſued "out his Proclamation in Ireland for Granting ge- "neral Licence to all Papiſts to live in Corporati- "ons and exerciſe any Trade therein, and enjoy the "ſame Privileges as other Subjects ought to do. Roger Co. Eſq.

There ſeems to be this farther Policy in the timing this Indulgence, That the Church-Party in general were ſo Loyal in their Affections to the King, that they were not forward to ſuſpect the Intrigues of the Court, and therefore fell in with the Meaſures of aſſiſting the French and ruining the Dutch, with an implicit Faith it was the Wiſdom of the Miniſtry ſo to do. But the Diſſenters, in the ſeveral Parties of them, had no ſuch profound Veneration for the Government, but were rather jealous of the Adminiſtration of it; and therefore at this Juncture were the more naturally diſpoſed to murmur at the Politicks of the Court in eſpouſing the Cauſe of France againſt our Proteſtant Neighbours in Holland, and ſhew'd their Fears and Jealouſies very much (and indeed very juſtly) on this occaſion. So that it was the more neceſſary to ſtop the Mouths of theſe Men by an Indulgence, and divert them from the Proſpects of Popery and Arbitrary Power, which lay ſo open before them. And excepting this one political Reaſon of giving Content and Quiet, there was no other Cauſe of Indulging, but that of giving Liberty to Papiſts, and of gaining a new Precedent for an Arbitrary Diſpenſing Power, without which Popery could never prevail in theſe Kingdoms. The wiſer Diſſenters were themſelves ſenſible, that this Favour was not purely granted for their ſake; as they acknowledge in theſe Words: The beginning of the Dutch War made the Court think it neceſſary to grant an Indulgence to the Diſſenters, that ſo there might be Peace at home while there was War abroad: and upon this occaſion they had Liberty given them, tho' much to the Diſſatisfaction of thoſe who had had a hand in framing all the ſevere Laws againſt them. —— This Indulgence was applauded by ſome among the Nonconformiſts, while others fear'd the Conſequences: for they well knew, that the Toleration was not chiefly for their ſakes, but for the Papiſts, and, that they ſhould hold it no longer than their Intereſt would allow it them: and withall, they feared it would continue the Diviſions, which were much better heal'd by a Comprehenſion. However, they concluded on a cautious and moderate Thankſgiving for the King's Clemency and their own Liberty, and were introduc'd by my Lord Arlington. Mr. Baxter was not very forward to take the Advantage

1671. 23 Ca. II. of this Indulgence: He was desirous of Liberty in another way; and was fearful what this Method would issue in. —— And they relate it as a very observable thing, That no Man was more zealous in opposing this Declaration in the House, than Alderman Love, a City Member and a noted Dissenter; who declar'd, he had much rather still go without their desired Liberty, than have it in a way that would prove so detrimental to the Nation. —— But without farther Reflections, we present the Reader with a Copy of the said Declaration.

The King's Declaration of Indulgence.

" OUR Care and Endeavours for the Preservation of the Rights and Interests of the Church, " have been sufficiently manifested to the World " by the whole Course of our Government since our " happy Restoration, and by the many and frequent " ways of Coercion that we have used for reducing " all erring or dissenting Persons, and for compo- " sing the unhappy Differences in Matters of Religi- " on, which we found among our Subjects upon " our Return; but it being evident, by the sad Ex- " perience of twelve Years, that there is very little " Fruit of all those forceable Courses, we think our- " self obliged to make use of that Supreme Power " in Ecclesiastical Matters which is not only inhe- " rent in us, but hath been declared and recognized " to be so by several Statutes and Acts of Parlia- " ment: And therefore we do now accordingly is- " sue this our Declaration, as well for the quieting " the Minds of our good Subjects in these Points, " for inviting Strangers in this Conjuncture to come " and live under us, and for the better Encourage- " ment of all to a chearful following of their Trade " and Callings, from whence we hope, by the Bles- " sing of God, to have many good and happy Ad- " vantages to our Government; as also for prevent- " ing, for the future, the Danger that might other- " wise arise from private Meetings and seditious " Conventicles.

" And, in the first place, we declare our express " Resolution, Meaning, and Intention to be, That " the Church of England be preserved and remain " entire in its Doctrine, Discipline, and Govern- " ment, as now it stands established by Law; and " that this be taken to be, as it is, the Basis, Rule, " and Standard of the general and publick Worship " of God, and that the orthodox conformable Cler- " gy do receive and enjoy the Revenues belonging " thereunto; and that no Person, tho' of a different " Opinion and Perswasion, shall be exempt from " paying his Tythes, or other Dues whatsoever. " And farther we declare, That no Person shall be " capable of holding any Benefice, Living, or Ec- " clesiastical Dignity or Preferment of any kind in " this our Kingdom of England, who is not exactly " conformable.

" We do, in the next place, declare our Will " and Pleasure to be, That the Execution of all and " all manner of Penal Laws in Matters Ecclesiasti- " cal, against whatsoever sort of Nonconformists " or Recusants, be immediately suspended; and " they are hereby suspended. And all Judges, Judg- " es of Assize, and Goal-Delivery, Sheriffs, Justices " of the Peace, Mayors, Bailiffs, and other Officers " whatsoever, whether Ecclesiastical or Civil, are " to take notice of it, and pay due Obedience there- " unto.

" And that there may be no Pretence for any of " our Subjects to continue their illegal Meetings " and Conventicles, We do declare, That we shall " from time to time allow a sufficient number of " Places, as they shall be desired, in all Parts of " this our Kingdom, for the Use of such as do not " conform to the Church of England, to meet and " assemble in, in order to their publick Worship and " Devotion; which Places shall be open and free to " all Persons. 1671. 23 Ca. II.

" But to prevent such Disorders and Inconveni- " ences as may happen by this our Indulgence, if " not duly regulated, and that they may be the " better protected by the Civil Magistrate; our ex- " press Will and Pleasure is, That none of our Sub- " jects do presume to meet in any place until such " place be allowed, and the Teacher of that Con- " gregation be approved by us.

" And lest any should apprehend, that this Re- " striction should make our said Allowance and Ap- " probation difficult to be obtained, we do farther " declare, That this our Indulgence, as to the Al- " lowance of the publick Places of Worship, and " Approbation of the Preachers, shall extend to all " sorts of Nonconformists and Recusants, except " the Recusants of the Roman Catholick Religion, " to whom we shall in no wise allow publick Pla- " ces of Worship, but only indulge them their " share in the common Exemption from the Execu- " tion of the Penal Laws, and the Exercise of their " Worship in their private Houses only.

" And if, after this our Clemency and Indulgence, " any of our Subjects shall presume to abuse this " Liberty, and shall preach seditiously, or to the " Derogation of the Doctrine, Discipline, or Go- " vernment of the Establish'd Church, or shall meet " in Places not allowed by us; we do hereby give " them Warning, and declare, we will proceed a- " gainst them with all imaginable Severity: And " we will let them see we can be as severe to punish " such Offenders, when so justly provoked, as we " are indulgent to truly tender Consciences.

Given at our Court at Whitehall this 15th Day of March, in the Four and twentieth Year of our Reign.

1672. And now begins in earnest the second Dutch War. According to his Majesty's Proclamation, Wednesday the 27th of March was observed in the Cities of London and Westminster as a solemn Fast for the Bless- ing of God upon his Majesty's Naval Forces: And it was indeed a Day of Sorrow and Humiliation to all honest and discerning Persons. The next Day the War was proclaimed in a solemn manner by the Heralds, at four several places, Temple-Bar, the End of Chancery-Lane, the End of Woodstreet in Cheapside, and the Royal Exchange. The People were encoura- ged to Shouts and Acclamations, and the Lord Mayor invited the Heralds and the Guards to a plentiful Dinner, that the World might imagine this War to be undertaken at the Desire and to the Satisfaction of the City. On the 7th of April the King of France, seeming to follow an Example that he had really given, publish'd his Declaration of War against the States General, containing, That the Dissatisfaction his Majesty has in the Carriage of the States General of the United Provinces of the Low-Countries towards him for some Years past, being come to that point, that his Majesty cannot longer, without Diminution of his own Glory, dissemble the Indignation raised in him, by a Treatment so unsuitable to the great Obligations which his Majesty and the Kings his Predecessors have so liberally heaped upon them; his Majesty had resolved to declare War against the said States; forbidding therefore all his Subjects to hold any Correspondence with them on pain of Death, &c.

Second Dutch War.

Declaration of the French K.

Under the general Dissatisfaction of his Subjects, his Majesty hop'd to make himself the more popular by taking into his Council these four Persons of good Reputation among the People; Henry Marquis of Worcester, Lord President of the Council of Wales; Arthur Earl of Essex, whom his Majesty declared he was sending into Ireland as Lord-Lieutenant of that Kingdom; Thomas Viscount Falconberg, Captain of his Majesty's Band of Pensioners, and George Vis- count Halifax; who being admitted on the 17th of April, took the usual Oaths and their Places at the Board.

Honours and Preferments.

1672. 24 Ca.II. Board. But the Cabinet Council were diſtinguiſh'd with more peculiar Favours; for on April 20. his Majeſty was pleaſed to create the Right Honourable John Earl of Lauderdail, principal Secretary of State of Scotland, Duke of Lauderdail in the Kingdom of Scotland; Henry Lord Arlington his Majeſty's principal Secretary Earl of Arlington and Viſcount Thetford; Anthony Lord Aſhly Earl of Shaftsbury and Baron Cooper of Paulet; and Sir Thomas Clifford Treaſurer of his Majeſty's Houſhold Baron Clifford of Chudleigh. And the Duke of Lauderdail was made Knight of the Garter on Thurſday April 18. as likewiſe the Earl of Arlington in another Chapter of that Order held on June 15. And another able Miniſter was now raiſed up, Sir Tho. Osborne Baronet, was admitted of his Majeſty's moſt Honourable Privy Council on May 3. And on May 29. Henry Marquis of Worceſter, the Earl of St. Alban's, and the Earl of Bedford were inſtall'd Knights of the Garter in a Chapter held at Whitehall. On Sept. 30. Thomas Earl of Oſſory was inveſted with the ſame Honour of the George and Garter.

The King diſpenſes with ſome Laws.

As his Majeſty began the War with a diſpenſation of the Laws, relating to Religion, by vertue (as he claim'd) of his ſupreme Power in matters Eccleſiaſtical, ſo he now proceeded to diſpence with another Law in a matter purely Civil. For on May 10. his Majeſty was pleaſed in Council to Order and Declare, that the Act of Parliament made in the twelfth Year of his Majeſty's Reign, For the Encouraging and Encreaſing of Shipping and Navigation, be totally ſuſpended and diſpens'd with, as likewiſe another Act made in the 13th Year of his Majeſty's Reign, entitul'd, An Act for the Encouragement of Trade: His Majeſty declaring, that the Suſpenſion of thoſe Laws ſhall continue during his own Royal Will and Pleaſure; and that when his Majeſty ſhall think fit to determine this Diſpenſation, he will by Proclamation give ſix Months notice thereof. Tho' the diſpencing in theſe matters, under the neceſſities of a War, was perhaps to the common Good, yet the doing of it by Royal Will and Pleaſure, without Advice and Conſent of Parliament was a very ill Example, and might grow into other more pernicious Acts of Arbitrary Power.

Expedition of the French Fleet joined by the Engliſh.

The King of France ſent out a Squadron of his Ships under the Count D'Eſtrees Vice-Admiral of France, who arriving at St. Hellens on May 3. the King and his great Officers went immediately to Portſmouth to pay Complements to him, and the Engliſh Fleet ſail'd from the Downs and join'd with them. The Duke of York as Admiral was Commander of the Red, Monſieur D'Eſtrees of the White, and the Lord Sandwich of the Blue. The Dutch were as early abroad, and were ſeen off of Dover ſtanding for Calais on Thurſday May 9. and chaſt the Glouceſter and other Frigots into the River as far as Sheerneſs on May 13. On Sunday May 19. the Engliſh and French Fleet got their firſt ſight of the Dutch about eight Leagues E. S. E. of the Gunfleet, and put themſelves in a readineſs for Engagement the next Morning, but being again ſeparated and hinder'd by hazy Weather, the Engliſh ſtood into Sould-Bay and lay there at Anchor till May 28, when the Dutch fell in with them and ſurpriz'd them. The Day before there had been great Jollity and Feaſting in the Engliſh Fleet; in the midſt of which my Lord of Sandwich was obſerv'd to ſay, That as the Wind ſtood the Fleet rode in danger of being ſurpriz'd by the Dutch, and therefore thought it adviſeable to weigh Anchor and get out to Sea. The Duke of York Lord High Admiral ſlighted the Advice, and retorted upon the Earl, that he ſpake this out of Fear, which Reflection his Lordſhip is thought to have ſo far reſented, as the next Day out of Indignation to have ſacrific'd his Life, which he might have otherwiſe preſerv'd. The Dutch began the Engagement with the Blue Squadron, and the Royal James, Commanded by the Earl of Sandwich, was the firſt Ship that fir'd, and after great Execution was at laſt burnt by a Dutch Fireſhip, and the Noble Earl periſh'd in her with many brave Gentlemen, Captain Haddock getting off with a wound in his Thigh. The Duke was becalm'd and could not draw into a Line of Battle, and yet receiv'd much Damage; the French had moſt Sea-room, and might have weather'd the Dutch and diſingaged the Engliſh, but they fir'd at a diſtance, and moſt of their ſhot fell ſhort, yet their Vice-Admiral was kill'd. The Fight continued till nine at Night, when Sir Joſeph Jordan getting the Weathergage of the Dutch, they ſtood-away, and the Duke ſailing after them got the appearance of a Victory. On our ſide were kill'd the Noble Earl of Sandwich, Mr. Digby Capt. of the Henry, Sir Fretcheville Holles Capt. of the Cambridge, Sir John Fox Captain of the Prince, Capt. Pearce of the St. George, Capt. Waterworth of the Anne, Capt. Hannam of the Triumph, Capt. Tennes of the Alice and Francis Fireſhip, Monſieur De la Rabiniere Rear-Admiral of the French; and of our Volunteers the Lord Maidſtone, Mr. Mountague, Mr. Richard Nicholls and Mr. Roger Vaughan, both of his Royal Highneſſes Bed-Chamber, Mr. Trevanian his Gentleman-Uſher, Sir Philip Cartwright, Sir Charles Harbord, Capt. Bromley, Capt. Bennet, Mr. Cotterel, Capt. Burgh, Capt. Barry, Mr. Napier, Brother to a Scotch Lord of that Name, Mr. Bowles, and very many wounded. The Body of the Earl of Sandwich was diſcover'd floating on the Sea by one of his Majeſty's Katches, and was taken up and brought into Harwich, where it was receiv'd and embalm'd by the Governour Sir Charles Littleton, who ſending notice of it to Whitehall, his Majeſty declar'd That out of his Princely regard to the great Deſervings of the ſaid Earl and his unexampled Performances in this laſt Act of his Life, he reſolved to have his Body brought up to London, there at his Charge to receive the Rites of Funeral due to his great Quality and Merits.

1672. 24 Ca.II.

Policy of the French.

Loſs of the Engliſh.

French rapid ſucceſs by Land.

While the French were content to have no Victory at Sea, they advanced their Conqueſt by Land in a very rapid manner. The French King in Perſon paſt the Mayeſe, and putting to flight the Dutch Troops there poſted to oppoſe him, he took Orſoy, Rhinburgh and Doſſery, all which ſurrender'd upon his firſt Approach before them. Wezel was deliver'd to the Prince of Conde upon the firſt opening the Trenches, and advancing he took many other Towns, which put the States into ſuch a Terror that they remov'd from the Hague to Amſterdam for their better ſecurity, opening the Sluces and putting the Country round under Water, to the Damage of eighteen Millions of Gilders: For by June 28. the French had advanc'd within four Leagues of Rotterdam, and about the ſame diſtance from Amſterdam, with a Royal Army of at leaſt 118000 Foot and 26000 Horſe, compoſed of the beſt Troops that had been ever ſeen together, Commanded by two of the greateſt Generals of the Age, the Prince of Conde and the Mareſchal Turenne, who being encourag'd by the King in Perſon, like an impetuous Torrent carried all before them.

The Dutch in a dreadful conſternation.

Theſe rapid Victories put the Dutch into a dreadful Conſternation, and the States General as well as De Wits muſt have been ſacrificed to the Fury of the People, if they had not concluded on July 1. that the perpetual Edict, by which they obliged themſelves never to admit of a Stadt-Holder, ſhould ceaſe and be of none effect, and had conſented to reſtoring the Prince of Orange to that Hereditary Honour. And the People of England were ſo much diſpoſed to Murmurs and Complaints upon the ſucceſsful Progreſs of the French, that his Majeſty was obliged to iſſue his Proclamation for ſuppreſſing that unlawful and undutiful kind of Diſcourſe, by a moſt ſtrict and exemplary Puniſhment of all Perſons who ſhould be found ſpreaders of falſe News, or promoters of any malicious Slanders and Calumnies in any Coffee-Houſe or other publick or private Meeting. And under this juncture of Affairs the King was neceſſitated to publiſh a Declaration even in Favour of the Dutch, That notwithſtanding clination towards all ſuch of the Subjects of the ſaid Low-Countries as ſhall deſire to deliver themſelves from the

Dutch over ıuties ngl. Under theſe frightful Apprehenſions the States-General ſent over their Deputies to the King of England to repreſent the common Dangers of Europe, and the Ruin of their own Country, and the neceſſity of putting a ſtop to the violent Progreſs of the French Armes. On Thurſday June 20. his Majeſty ſent four of the Lords of his Privy Council, viz. the Duke of Bucks, the Earl of Arlington, the Earl of Shaftsbury, and the Lord Clifford to thoſe Deputies of the States-General of the United Provinces at Hampton-Court, to know what Propoſals they had to offer to his Majeſty. They reply'd, they had no Power or Inſtructions to make any offer, but to hear what his Majeſty would demand. Upon which his Majeſty appointed the Duke of Bucks, the Earl of Arlington, and the Lord Hallifax to be his Ambaſſadours Extraordinary and Plenipotentiaries, to treat jointly with ſuch as ſhould be appointed by the moſt Chriſtian King, with any Deputies or Commiſſioners from the ſaid States. Who for this purpoſe ſail'd from the Buoy in the Nore on June 23. and landing at Maeſland-ſluce, were received with great Joy and Satisfaction by the People, out of hopes they came to conclude a Peace, and were met near the Hague by a multitude of Men, Women and Children, who joined in their Acclamations all along as they paſſed, of God bleſs the King of England, God bleſs the Prince of Orange, and the Devil take the States. Theſe Ambaſſadours are ſaid to have ſent an Account of their Mediation to the King of France, who made a very imperious Anſwer, That the King of England might perious nour of French. treat as he pleaſed, but that what he himſelf had got by his Arms was his own, and that what he ſhould get he would not reſtore without an Equivalent. Upon which our Ambaſſadours are ſaid to have a great Indignation, and to have promiſed the States and the Prince of Orange, that they would engage to their utmoſt to bring the French King to be ſatisfied with Maſtricht, and of keeping Garriſons upon the Rhine, belonging to the Electors of Brandenburgh and Cologn. And under this appearance of Amity the Duke of Bucks proceeded to wait on the French King at Utrecht, where they are ſaid to have changed their Minds, and within four Days after to have ſent Word to the Prince of Orange, that the States muſt give Satisfaction to both Kings jointly, and that neither would treat ſeparately. So that on July 21. the Plenipotentiaries return'd to Whitehall with this Account given to the Publick, That all their Excellencies could effect for the preſent was, to compoſe a Promiſory Act between the two Kings, not to Treat or Conclude without Participation and Incluſion of each others Pretences. The Intrigue of this Ambaſſy is beſt diſcover'd by theſe Queries made upon it by Mr. Secretary Trevor.

I. Whether they were ſent to promote the French Conqueſts? If not, why, by making the Peace impoſſible, as far as in them lay, would they force the Dutch to ſubmit to the French Dominion?

II. Whether they did not know that the French Demands alone had been rejected by the States, and that the granting of them would make it impoſſible for the Dutch to give the King any Satisfaction?

III. Whether having received, from the Prince and States, all imaginable Aſſurances of their Deſigns to return to the King's Amity, and to purchaſe it at any Rate they could, they could faithfully neglect theſe, and enter into a new Engagement ſo prejudicial to England?

IV. How far thoſe who were join'd in Commiſſion did concur in their Judgment; and whether theſe Conſiderations, with many others, were not repreſented to them, and urged by ſome who deſired to ſerve the King faithfully? 1672. 24 Ca. II.

V. Whether or no it was for that Reaſon they oppoſed ſo fiercely my Lord Viſcount Hallifax's (who came a Day or two after them) Appearing and Acting jointly with them, tho' in the ſame Commiſſion with them, in as ample a manner as themſelves?

VI. Who were thoſe who (after my Lord Hallifax could be kept out no longer) went privately to the French Camp under Pretences, and had Negociations of their own on Foot?

VII. Whether they had Order to call the French King King of France, and to name him before their Maſter, as well in the French Demands as of his Majeſty's, in all their Agreements which they ſent to the Prince of Orange?

VIII. Whether they had Inſtructions to ſtand in Behalf of the French, upon the publick Exerciſe of the Roman Catholick Religion in the United Provinces, the Churches to be divided to the Roman Prieſts to be maintained out of the Publick Revenues? And to bind the King's Hands, ſo that the French King may be ſure of his Bargain, theſe Plenipotentiaries (two of them) agreed with the French, that the King ſhould not treat nor conclude a Peace with the Dutch without them: But the French King ſhall find no more Security herein, than the Dutch and Spaniard did in the King's joining in the Tripple League.

The Right Honourable Sir John Trevor, one of his Majeſty's Principal Secretaries of State, and of his Honourable Privy Council, died on Tueſday May 28. about ten of the Clock at Night, after ſix Days Diſtemper of a Feaver, in the forty ſeventh Year of his Age, and on Friday Night following was honourably interr'd at St. Bartholomew's in Smithfield. Duke of Monmouth ſent abroad.

The Duke of Monmouth was now ſent abroad to diſtinguiſh himſelf by Arms and ſome Experience in them. The K. of England, by his Agreement with Lewis XIV. was to ſend ſix thouſand Men into his Service by Land. Theſe Forces being Engliſh and Scots, were Commanded by the Duke of Monmouth, who arrived in the French Camp near Charleroy at the latter end of April. A Detachment of twenty thouſand Men, and a Train of Artillery, under the Viſcount de Turenne, were ſent towards Maeſtricht; and the next day the French King followed with the Body of the Army, accompanied by the Dukes of Orleans and Monmouth. The Count de Lorge inveſted the Place with three thouſand Horſe: but the King calling a great Council of War, at which the Duke of Monmouth aſſiſted, 'twas there reſolved, to turn the intended Siege of Maeſtricht into a Blockade. So twenty thouſand Men were left before it for that purpoſe, and the reſt of the Army march'd to the Rhine. The Duke was at the Taking of Orſoy, Rheinberg, Wezel, Emmerick, Doesburg, Zutphen, and was in the French King's Camp near Utrecht when that City ſent her Keys to the Conquerour. On the 5th of July, the Duke, with the Engliſh Noblemen and Gentlemen Volunteers in the French Army, went to view the Town, and were honourably entertained by the Magiſtrates. The 11th of July the Army broke up, and march'd back to Flanders; and the Campaign being over, the King return'd to Saint Germains, and the Duke to England. On his Arrival at London, he was received with univerſal Joy; for, tho' the People diſlik'd the War, yet they were pleaſed to hear how much the Duke was a Hero in it. On the 25th of Aug. his Dutcheſs was deliver'd of a Son, chriſtned Charles, who died in 1679. In November the Duke went again to France, on News that the Prince of Orange was ſet down before Charleroy: but the Prince leaving that Siege to attack Bon, Flanders was quiet the reſt of the Winter. The Duke landed at Calais, and went thence to Dourlens, where his Regiment quarter'd. In his way thither, the Duke of Elbeuf, Governour of Montreuil, receiv'd him in an extraordinary manner. At Beville the Militia were drawn up, and the Mayor complemented him at the Gates. Near Dourlens the Governour met him with his Coaches, attended with forty Horſe; waited upon him into the Town, entertain'd him ſplendidly for five days, and received the Word from him every Night. Here the Duke took a Review of his Regiment, which he found in good Order, and well diſciplin'd. Thence he went to Paris, and ſo to St. Germains, where he was received by the King with particular Honours. He made no long Stay at the French Court; but finding there was no likelihood of any ſudden Action, he return'd to England, and remain'd there till the opening of the Campaign.

Meeting of Parl.

On Tueſday Feb. 4. the two Houſes of Parliament, according to his Majeſty's Prorogation, met at Weſtminſter; where his Majeſty having commanded the Houſe of Commons to attend him in the Lords Houſe, 1672. 24 Ca. II. House, the Lord Chancellour did, by his Majesty's Command, acquaint them, that by the late Advancement of Sir Edward Turnor Kt. to the Place of Lord Chief Baron of his Majesty's Court of Exchequer, the Place of Speaker of that House was now void; and that therefore it was his Majesty's Pleasure they should forthwith return to their House, and choose a Speaker, with Directions to present him the next day at Three in the Afternoon to his Majesty, for his Allowance and Approbation: which the House of Commons accordingly did, having unanimously made Choice of Sir Job Charlton Kt. to supply that Place. On Feb. 5. his Majesty was pleased to return to the House of Lords, where the Commons attended and presented their new Speaker, whom his Majesty was pleas'd to accept and allow of. Then his Majesty made a Speech to the two Houses, acquainting them, That he had entred into an expensive War, and wanted Money to support it, and to pay his Debts; which he left to their special care: and telling them farther, That he had granted an Indulgence, and was resolv'd to stand to it. The Lord Chancellour Shaftsbury was to make a farther Declaration of his Majesty's Mind, which he did in a large Speech, wherein he was very bitter against the Dutch, representing them as our Rivals, and sworn Enemies in Honour and Trade, and applying to Holland, Delenda est Carthago; farther adding, That the States of the United Provinces were in a mortal Opposition to us both by Interest and Inclination; and magnified our Happiness in a League with France, as the greatest Advantage that could happen to England. It must be own'd, that this was a false and a scandalous Speech, and was soon condemn'd by the Speaker himself, who presently found the fatal Influence of joining with France, and the wise Necessity of espousing the Defence of Holland, and took Refuge at last in that Country as the surest Place of Protection for his Liberty and Life.

On February 7. the two Speeches of the King and Chancellour were read in the House of Commons, and the Matter of them was taken into Consideration. And that their Zeal for the King's Service might the better justifie their Freedom of debating on this Subject, upon a Motion for Supply, the House forthwith resolved into a Committee of the whole House, to consider of that Motion; and immediately upon a Report from the Committee, the House resolved Nemine contradicente, That a Supply be given to his Majesty of eighteen Months Assessment, according to the Proportion of the last Royal Aid, not exceeding Seventy thousand Pounds per Mensem.

When the Commons resum'd the Debate of the Speeches of the King and the Lord Chancellour, they seem'd to awake out of a profound Security into very sensible Jealousies and Fears of Popery and Despotick Power. An Army encamped at Black-Heath under many Popish Officers, raised without Advice of Parliament, to send against Protestant Neighbours already too far swallowed up by the French: And the Dispensing Power exercised in a Declaration of Indulgence, for the sake of Popish Recusants as well as of Protestant Dissenters: These things, and the Dangers of an ill consequence of them, alarm'd the Commons, tho' by Custom and Obligations addicted to the Court. They first agreed upon an humble Address to the King, wherein they represent, that considering his Declaration of Indulgence, they found themselves bound in Duty to inform him, that Penal Statutes, in Matters Ecclesiastical, cannot be suspended but by Act of Parliament. To which the King made an Answer, to soften them and divert them from their Motion: But the House not satisfied with it, renew'd their Address by way of a Reply, and insisted on the Illegality of a Royal Dispensing Power, with so much Resolution, that his Majesty was forced to yield to them. These Debates were so warm, and so unacceptable to the Court, that they are thought to have made the Speaker weary of his Chair before he was settled in it. His leaving the Place is thus reported by Authority in the best Colour it could bear: Saturday Feb. 15. Sir Job Charlton, Speaker of the House of Commons, having been taken ill the Night before, so as not to be able to proceed in the Service of the House that Day; the House, notwithstanding the great and pressing Affairs now depending before them, thought fit to Adjourn till Tuesday: at which time Mr. Speaker, finding his Indisposition to continue still upon him, did by Letter make his humble Suit to his Majesty, that he might be eased of the Burden he was not able longer to sustain: Whereupon his Majesty signified to the House, by Mr. Secretary Coventry, his Permission to them to choose a new Speaker (they having the same Morning received a Letter from the Speaker, to have Leave to retire into the Country) and immediately the House did unanimously make Choice of Edward Seymour Esquire, much to his Majesty's Satisfaction, for his known Loyalty and great Abilities to discharge that Place. And accordingly, the House of Commons, having presented him to his Majesty in the House of Lords for his Majesty's Approbation, his Majesty was pleased very graciously to accept and allow of the Choice.

1672. 24 Ca. II. Speaker weary of his Chair.

Edward Seymour Esq; chosen Speaker.

Soon after both Houses of Parliament did join in a humble Petition and Address, Representing to his Majesty their Fears and Apprehensions of the Growth and Encrease of the Popish Religion in these his Majesty's Dominions, together with the Causes thereof, and also such Remedies as they conceive may be proper to prevent such growing Mischiefs. Upon which his Majesty issued out his Proclamation of the 13th of March, Declaring that his Majesty had seriously considered of the said Petition, and with much Contentment and Satisfaction did accept and approve the great Care of the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and Commons in Parliament assembled, for the Preservation of the true Religion established in this Kingdom; to which his Majesty declares, as he hath always adhered against all Temptations whatsoever, so he will still employ his utmost Care and Zeal in the Maintenance and Defence of it: And therefore strictly charges and commands all Jesuits and Romish Priests to depart the Kingdom, and the Laws to be put in due Execution against all Popish Recusants, or justly suspected to be so.

Address against Popery.

But the Proclamations of this kind having been formerly things of course, the two Houses were not satisfied, but on the next day presented to his Majesty another Address, humbly representing the best Means, in their Opinion, for the satisfying and composing the Minds of his Subjects. And the King seeing them now in earnest, began to recede from his Dispensation of Indulgence, and his declared Resolution of keeping to it; and very graciously assured them, that He freely and readily agreed to what they had proposed, and would take care to see it performed accordingly. And on the Morrow after this Assurance given, his Majesty renew'd it in a more solemn manner by a gracious Speech to both Houses, which was published on March 15. and was as follows.

Another Address.

My Lords and Gentlemen,

" YEsterday you presented me an Address, as the best means for the satisfying and composing the Minds of my Subjects, to which I freely and readily agreed, and shall take care to see it perform'd accordingly. King's Speech.

" I hope on the other side, you Gentlemen of the House of Commons will do your part; for I must put you in mind, it is near five Weeks since I demanded a Supply, and what you then voted unanimously, did both give Life to my Affairs at home and dishearten my Enemies abroad; but the seeming delay it hath met withal since, hath made them take new Courage, and they are now preparing for this next Summer a greater Fleet (as they say) than ever they had yet; so that if the Supply be not very speedily dispatch'd it will be altogether ineffectual, and the Safety, Honour and Interest of England must of necessity be exposed.

1672. 24 Ca. II.

" posed. Pray lay this to Heart, and let not the " Fears and Jealousies of some draw an inevitable " Ruin upon us all.

My Lords and Gentlemen,

" If there be any Scruple yet remaining with you, " concerning the dispensing with Penal Laws, I " here faithfully promise you, that what hath been " done in that particular, shall not for the future be " drawn either into Consequence or Example.

" And as I daily expect from you a Bill for my " Supply, so I assure you, I shall as willingly receive, " and pass any other you shall offer me, that may " tend to the giving you Satisfaction in all your " just Grievances.

Proceedings of the Commons.

This Speech so far sweetned the Commons, that they proceeded in the Supply and dispatch of the other Bills before them; and yet in the Money Bill they would not expresly own the Dutch War, nor seem to maintain it, but worded it only to supply the King's extraordinary Occasions. And before they parted with the Bill they tack'd a Proviso to it, That no Papist should be capable of holding any publick Employment. It must be observ'd, that while the Commons shew'd so much resentment at the King's Indulgence to Protestant Dissenters, they excepted more against the way of doing it than against the thing it self, if done in a legal manner: For on Feb. 14. the Commons Resolv'd Nemine Contradicente, That a Bill be brought in for the ease of his Majesty's Subjects, who are Dissenters in matters of Religion from the Church of England. And the Bill having passed that House, was carried to the Lords and thrown out by them.

Bill for the ease of Protestant Dissenters.

Dispensing Power established by Law in Scotland.

In Scotland the Duke of Lauderdale Lord High Commissioner, got the King's dispensing Power to be established by Law: For in this second Parliament held by him at Edingburgh this Summer, he procured an Act, declaring That by vertue of the King's Supremacy, the ordering the Government of the Church does properly belong to his Majesty and Successors, as an Inherent Right of the Crown; and that he may Enact and Emit such Constitutions, Acts and Orders concerning Church Administrations, Persons, Meetings and Matters, as he in his Royal Wisdom shall think fit, &c. any Law Act or Custom to the contrary notwithstanding. And while Indulgence was a part of the Politicks of the English Court, he took away all hopes of it in Scotland, for with a standing Army, living upon free-Quarter, he made all sorts of People depose upon Oath, their knowledge of the Persons of Dissenters, not Popish meetings, in the Exercise of their Worship, upon Penalty of Fining, Imprisonment, Banishment and Transportation, and to be sold for Slaves; Imprisoning all outed Ministers, who shall preach out of their Families, till they give Security of 5000 Marks Scot not to do the same again; every Hearer being a Tenant to pay 25 l. Scot and Cotter 12, Toties Quoties, they shall offend; and that it shall be Death for any to preach in Fields or Houses, where any are without Doors, and 500 Marks Reward for any to secure such Dead or Alive; and gave Orders that every Man for himself, and all under him, should give Bond not to go to Field Meetings, and to Inform against, Pursue and Deliver up all outed Ministers to Judgment.

Bravery of the Prince of Orange.

The Prince of Orange being now Stadtholder of Holland, was in effect the only Protector of the Liberties of Europe, and the only opposer of the excessive Powers of France. It was a general Report that deserves Credit, when the Duke of Buckingham with the Lords Arlington and Hallifax was sent upon an Ambassy this Summer to the French King at Utrecht, his Grace had a long Discourse with the Prince about the bad posture of the Affairs of his Country, and used many Arguments to him in vain for his accepting the Soveraignty of it under the Protection of England and France, he told him at last, he wonder'd what he could propose to himself in such a desperate Case, since according to the Humour he persisted in, he must unavoidably see the final Ruin of it. To which the Prince reply'd, That what his Grace said concerning their dangerous Condition was indeed true; but yet, that he had one way still left not to see it compleated, which was to lie in the last Dike; by which he meant the fighting of it out to the last. Under this intrepid Resolution he attack'd Woerden, and beat off the Duke of Luxembergh from two several Attempts of relieving the Town, but having lost Colonel Zuleslein, who refusing Quarter was slain, he was forc'd to rise from that Siege, and to march for Rosendale, the place appointed for the General Rendezvous. A certain Colonel by the way had the Curiosity to ask him, What great Design he had at that time against the French? He put another Question to him by way of Reply, Whether he would discover his Designs to any Person in the World that should be so impertinently inquisitive to ask him? And the Colonel answering him in the Negative: Then, said the Prince, my Tongue is also endow'd from Heaven with the same Grace.

1672. 24 Ca. II.

From Rosendale (with an Army of 24000 Horse and Foot) he march'd directly towards the Country of Liege, and made the Count De Duras retire with his Army to Wassemburgh, and decline a Battle which the Prince provok'd him to; after this the Prince by a strong Detachment took in the strong Castle of Valkeren, and then invested Charleroy, but finding a formal Siege impracticable, made himself Master of Binch, and retiring thro' Brabant, dispersed his Army into Winter Quarters. And when Luxemburgh with an Army of 14000 Horse and Foot march'd over the Ice to invade the Province of Holland, about the end of December, the Prince hasted to Alsen, and by his presence upon a sudden Thaw, made the French glad to retire with considerable Loss.

State of Religion.

As to the State of Religion, it has already appeared, that the dangers of Popery were visible to all who had their Eyes open. And it did not a little contribute to the common Fears and Jealousie, that the Dutchess of York, who had been bred and had long lived a firm and zealous Member of the Church of England, was in the time of her Weakness and Sickness importun'd and overpower'd to declare herself a Roman Catholick; and she had some time before betray'd her Inclinations, had left this Copy of a Paper written by her some few Months before her Death.

Dutchess of York dies a Papist.

" IT is so reasonable to expect, that a Person always bred up in the Church of England, and as well instructed in the Doctrine of it (as the best Divines and her Capacity could make her) should be liable to many Censures for leaving that, and making herself a Member of the Roman Catholick Church, to which I confess I was one of the greatest Enemies it ever had; That I rather chose to satisfie my Friends by reading this Paper, than to have the trouble to answer all the Questions that may daily be asked me. And first, I do protest in the presence of Almighty God, that no Person, Man or Woman, directly nor indirectly, ever said any thing to me since I came into England, or used the least endeavour to make me change my Religion; It is a blessing I wholly owe to Almighty God, and I hope the hearing of a Prayer I daily made him, ever since I was in France and Flanders; where, seeing much of the Devotion of the Catholicks, (tho' I had very little my self) I made it my continual request to Almighty God, that if I were not, I might before I died, be in the true Religion. I did not in the least doubt but that I was so, and never had any scruple till November last, when reading a Book called The History of the Reformation, by Dr. Heylin, which I had heard very much commended, and have been told, if ever I had any doubt of my Religion that would settle me: Instead of which, I found it the description of the horridest Sacrileges in the World, and could find no reason why we left the Church, but for three the most abominable ones that were ever heard of among Christians. First, Henry VIII. renounces the Pope's Authority, because he would " not:

1672. 4 Ca. II.

" not give him leave to part with his Wife, and " marry another in her life-time. Secondly, Edward VI. was a Child and govern'd by his Unkle, " who made his Eſtate out of Church Lands; and " then Qu. Elizabeth, who being no lawful Heireſs " to the Crown, could have no way to keep it but " by renouncing a Church that could never ſuffer " ſo unlawful a thing to be done by one of her " Children. I confeſs, I cannot think the Holy " Ghoſt could ever be in ſuch Councils; And it is " very ſtrange, that if the Biſhops had no deſign, " but (as they ſay) the reſtoring us to the Doctrine " of the primitive Church, they could never think " upon it till Henry VIII. made the breach upon ſo " unlawful a pretence. Theſe ſcruples being rais'd, " I began to conſider of the difference between the " Catholicks and us, and examin'd them as well as " I could by Holy Scripture, which, tho' I do not " pretend to be able to underſtand, yet there are " ſome things I found ſo eaſy, that I cannot but " wonder I had been ſo long without finding them " out: As the real Preſence in the Bleſſed Sacrament, the Infallibility of the Church, Confeſſion and Praying for the Dead. After this, I ſpoke ſeverally to " two of the Biſhops we have in England, who both " told me there were many things in the Romiſh " Church which (it were very much to be wiſh'd) " we had kept; as Confeſſion, which was no doubt " commanded by God: That praying for the Dead " was one of the ancient things in Chriſtianity: " That for their parts, they did it daily, tho' they " would not own it. And afterwards preſſing one " of them very much upon the other Points, he told " me, That if he had been bred a Catholick he would " not change his Religion; but that being of another " Church (wherein he was ſure were all things neceſſary " to Salvation) he thought it very ill to give that ſcandal, as to leave that Church wherein he received his " Baptiſm. All theſe Diſcourſes did but add more " to the deſire I had to be a Catholick, and gave " me the moſt terrible Agonies in the World within " myſelf; for all this, fearing to be raſh in a matter of that weight, I did all I could to ſatisfy my " ſelf, made it my daily Prayer to God, to ſettle me " in the Right, and ſo went on Chriſtmas-day to receive " in the King's Chapel: After which, I was more " troubled than ever, and could never be at quiet, " till I had told my Deſign to a Catholick, who " brought a Prieſt to me, and that was the firſt I " ever did converſe with upon my Word. The more " I ſpoke to him the more I was confirm'd in my " Deſign: And as it is impoſſible for me to doubt " the Words of our Bleſſed Saviour, who ſays, The " Holy Sacrament is his Body and Blood, ſo cannot believe that he who is the Author of all Truth, and " has promiſed to be with his Church to the end of " the World, would permit them to give that Holy Myſtery to the Laity but in one kind, if it " were not lawful ſo to do.

Sheldon Abp of Cant. Blanford Biſhop of Worceſter.

" I am not able, or if I were, would I enter into " Diſputes with any Body: I only in ſhort, ſay this " for the changing of my Religion, which I take " God to witneſs I would never have done, if I had " thought it poſſible to ſave my Soul otherwiſe. I " think I need not ſay, it is any Intereſt in this " World leads me to it: It will be plain enough " to every body, that I muſt loſe all the Friends " and Credit I have here by it; and have very well " weigh'd which I could beſt part with, my ſhare " in this World or the next: I thank God I found " no difficulty in the Choice.

" My only Prayer is, That the Poor Catholicks of " this Nation may not ſuffer for my being of their Religion; that God would but give me Patience to bear " them, and then ſend me any Afflictions in this World, " ſo I may enjoy a bleſſed Eternity hereafter.

St. James's, Aug. 20. 1670.

This Paper ſeems to be written with as much partiality and prejudice as a new Convert could be taught to have. To ſay that the real Preſence in the Bleſſed Sacrament (that is in her Senſe Tranſubſtantiation) and Infallibility of the Church, were things " ſo eaſy, that ſhe could not but wonder ſhe had been ſo long without finding them out, does argue to have been eaſily diſpoſed to any Faith. What ſhe ſays of the Biſhops was from a failure of Memory at leaſt, for they themſelves ſurviving did ſolemnly deny the Words. Her change of Religion muſt be imputed to the Zeal of his Royal Highneſs, who tho' he did not yet openly profeſs that Religion, yet he was unhappily perverted to it in the Court of France: Where upon the Artifices of his Royal Mother and her Confeſſor Mr. Mountague, his Brother King Charles wrote this memorable Letter to him, of which the original found among the Papers of Dr. Berwick a Phyſician is now in the Hands of a very faithful Perſon, who has atteſted this to be a very true Copy of it.

Cologne Nov. 10. 1654.

Dear Brother,

Letter of K. Charles to his Brother James D. of York.

" I Have receiv'd yours without a date, in which " you mention that Mr. Mountague has endea- " vour'd to pervert you in your Religion. I do " not doubt but you remember very well the Com- " mands I left with you at my going away con- " cerning that Point, and am confident, you will " obſerve them; yet the Letters that come from Paris ſay, that it is the Queens purpoſe to do all ſhe " can to change your Religion, which if you hear- " ken to her, or any body elſe in that matter, you " muſt never think to ſee England or me again; and " whatſoever Miſchief ſhall fall on me, or my Af- " fairs from this time, I muſt lay all upon you, " as being the only cauſe of it, therefore conſider " well what it is not only to be the cauſe of ruining a Brother that loves you ſo well, but alſo of " your King and Country, do not let them perſwade you either by force or fair promiſes, for " the firſt they neither dare nor will uſe, and for " the ſecond, aſſoon as they have perverted you, " they will have their End, and will care no more " for you.

" I am alſo inform'd, that there is a Purpoſe to " put you in the Jeſuits College, which I command " you upon the ſame Grounds never to conſent unto, and whenever any body ſhall go to diſpute " with you in Religion, do not anſwer them at all; " for though you have the Reaſon on your ſide, yet " they being prepar'd, will have the Advantage of " any body that is not upon the ſame Security that " they are. If you do not conſider what I ſay to " you, remember the laſt Words of your dead Father, which were to be conſtant to your Religion, " and never to be ſhaken in it; which if you do " not obſerve, this ſhall be the laſt time you will " ever hear from

Dear Brother,

Your moſt affectionate Brother

Charles R.

The Readers of this Letter will hardly forbear to make this one Remark upon it, that James Duke of York by his revolt to Popery, forfeited the Bleſſing of his Father; incurr'd the Curſe denounc'd by his Grandfather; rejected the moſt importunate Advices of his Brother; and went his own way to Misfortunes and Ruin. But whatever unhappy influence he had upon his Conſort, it was a ſingular Bleſſing of Providence, that the two Princeſſes his Daughters were not corrupted by any Familiar Advice or Example; but were ſtrictly bred up in the Proteſtant Religion, and were both married to Proteſtant Princes, and became both the greateſt Inſtruments of ſecuring and adorning the Reformation.

And

1672. 24 Car. II. And this Juſtice muſt be done to the Father of the Dutcheſs, the Earl of Clarendon, to obſerve, that he very much lamented this perverſion of his Daughter; and wrote to the Duke and Dutcheſs two Expoſtulatory Letters on this occaſion, with hearty concern for the Sin and the Scandal of it.

Caſe of the Diſſenters as repreſented by themſelves.

To return, the Nonconformiſts thus repreſent their own Opinion of the Parliament obliging the King to recal his Declaration of Indulgence. "In February "the Parliament met, and voted down the King's De- "claration as illegal; and the King promis'd it ſhou'd "not be brought into Preſident. And thereupon "they conſulted of a Bill for the eaſe of Proteſtant "Diſſenters, and many Members profeſſed their Re- "ſolution to carry it on; but when they had gran- "ted the Tax deſired, they turn'd it off and left it "undone; taking away from the poor Diſſenters "the ſhelter of the King's Declaration, and ſo lea- "ving them to the Storm of the ſevere Laws that "were in force againſt them, which by ſome Coun- "try Juſtices were rigorouſly put in Execution, tho' "the moſt forbore. The Abridger of this Account "has added this farther Obſervation. On Feb. 14. the Commons reſolv'd Nemine Contradicente that a Bill be brought in for the Eaſe of his Majeſty's Subjects who are Diſſenters in matters of Religion from the Church of England. And a Bill paſſed the Houſe accordingly, but was ſtopp'd in the Houſe of Lords. But the Motion of the Lower Houſe in this Affair was therefore the more remarkable, becauſe it was the ſame Houſe of Commons, who ten Years before ſo warmly voted the contrary. A good Argument they were now convinc'd of a greater danger of Popery than they could before be perſwaded to believe. Whatever this Reflection is, the Truth was only thus: The Commons in this Parliament were by long Experience more and more ſenſible, that the Papiſts were for their own Pleaſure and Advantage playing and ſtriking the Church-men and Diſſenters one againſt another. At one time the Patrons of Indulgence to break the eſtabliſh'd Communion, and for their own ſakes to let in a univerſal Toleration; at another time the Puſhers on of Severity and Perſecution, to exaſperate the Nonconformiſts againſt the Laws and the Church, and make them fly toward Popery and a diſpenſing Power for Refuge and Protection. And therefore the Commons upon a view of theſe double Deſigns were obliged to take their different Meaſures, for the ſame good Ends of the Peace and Union of the Proteſtant Intereſt. When they ſaw Indulgence and Toleration ſet up by arbitrary means for ill purpoſes, they acted by the ſtricteſt Rules of Honour and Conſcience to preſs the Uniformity by Law eſtabliſh'd. And and while they ſaw that a rigorous Proſecution of Diſſenters might ſerve the Hopes and Deſires of Rome as effectually as a Royal Indulgence: they would have provided againſt the one as well as againſt the other; and by granting a legal and limited Eaſe to them, would have ſetled a mutual Forbearance for the foundation of a mutual Love; and at leaſt have ſo far reconcil'd the Members of the Church and the Diſſenters from it, that they ſhould have been alway ready to unite againſt the common Enemy of the Reformation.

A more true Account.

As to the Parliaments apprehending the Advancement of Popery, the ſame Author thus repreſents the matter.

"The Parliament at length grew into great Jea- "louſies of the prevalence of Popery. An Army "(pretended to be deſign'd for Service againſt the "Dutch) lay encamp'd at Black-Heath, many of the "Commanders were Papiſts. It was the general "Apprehenſion, that having no hopes to get the "Parliament to ſet up their Religion by Law, it "was their intention to put down Parliaments and "reduce the Government to the French Model, and "Religion to their State by a ſtanding Army. All "that lov'd their Country had diſmal Expectations, "the Parliament made an Act that no Man ſhould "be in any Office of Truſt, who would not take "the Oaths of Supremacy and Allegiance and re- "ceive the Sacrament according to the Order of the "Church of England. Hereupon the Duke of York, "who was General of the Army, and the Lord "Treaſurer Clifford, laid down all their Places. 1671. 23 Ca. I.

The Teſt Act.

This Teſt Act was entitul'd, An Act for preventing Dangers which may happen from Popiſh Recuſants, and it did require, "That all Perſons bearing any Office "or Place of Truſt or Profit ſhould take the Oaths "of Supremacy and Allegiance in publick and open "Court, and ſhould alſo receive the Sacrament of "the Lord's Supper according to the uſage of the "Church of England, in ſome Pariſh-Church, upon "ſome Lord's-Day immediately after Divine Ser- "vice and Sermon, and deliver a Certificate of ha- "ving ſo received the Sacrament under the Hands "of the reſpective Miniſter and Churchwarden, pro- "ved by two credible Witneſſes upon Oath, and put "upon Record in Court, and that all Perſons ta- "king the ſaid Oaths of Supremacy and Allegiance "ſhould likewiſe make and ſubſcribe this Declara- "tion following: I A. B. do declare, that I do be- "lieve there is not any Tranſubſtantiation in the Sacra- "ment of the Lord's-Supper, or in the Elements of Bread "and Wine, at, or after the Conſecration thereof, by "any Perſon whatſoever. Which Act and Teſt there- "in preſcrib'd were a great Security to the Prote- "ſtant Religion; and therefore the Repeal and Ab- "rogation of them were the great Deſign and Labour of the next Popiſh Reign.

Letter of the Abp of Cant. to his Suffragan for Catechiſing and ſuppreſſing irregular Schools.

Under theſe united Dangers of Popery and Fanaticiſm, it was the great Wiſdom of the Archbiſhop and Biſhops to prevail with the King to require and command, the more diligent uſe of publick Catechiſing in the Church, and to ſuppreſs all Schools ſet up by diſaffected People, not conforming to the uſe of the Church Catechiſm: As appears by this Circular Letter of the Archbiſhop of Canterbury ſent to every Suffragan by the Dean of the Province, the Ld Bp of London, in Form and manner following:

My Lords,

"I Have receiv'd a Letter from his Grace the Lord "Archbiſhop of Canterbury, a Copy whereof I "am requir'd to tranſmit to your Lordſhip, by "which you will underſtand the Duty which his "Majeſty requires of your Lordſhip.

The Letter is as followeth.

"The King's moſt Excellent Majeſty being truly "ſenſible that the growing increaſe of the prevail- "ing Sects and Diſorders among us, proceed chief- "ly from the general neglect of inſtructing the "younger ſort of Perſons, or their erroneous Inſtru- "ctions in the Grounds and Principles of true Re- "ligion, is therefore pleaſed to command me, that "in his Name I require your Lordſhip, and by "you, the reſt of my Brethren, the Biſhops of this "Province, that by yourſelf and Officers, you will "at all ſeaſonable times reinforce the Execution of "ſuch Laws and Conſtitutions, as enable us to enjoin "the Uſe and Exerciſe of our Church Catechiſm; "and that by the moſt effectual Remedies that may "be, ſuch as without Licenſe either publickly or "privately teach School within your Lordſhips or "their Juriſdiction be forthwith proceeded againſt, "according to ſuch Rules as are preſcrib'd unto us "for their Reſtraint; and to the end that this Miſ- "chief may be prevented for the future, he moreo- "ver ſtrictly chargeth us, that none be admitted to "that Office without ſuch Subſcription, Oaths and "Declaration as are exactly requiſite. But in the "mean time I deſire that your Lordſhip and they "will with the firſt conveniency let me know, how "we are already defective in theſe Particulars, that I "may be able to give ſuch Satisfaction as hereafter "will be neceſſary. I bid your Ldp heartily farewel.

1673. The Parliament were now ready to conclude their Buſineſs and their Seſſion. On Wedneſ. Mar. 26. the Commons preſented an Addreſs to the King for the more effectual Reſtraining and Puniſhing of Popiſh Recuſants, and for the better Security of the Proteſt. Relig. And on Mar. 29. after Noon, his Majeſty was preſent in the Houſe of Lords, and the Commons attending, the Speaker preſented ſeveral Bills, to which his Majeſty was pleaſed to give his Royal Aſſent. The publick Acts were theſe that follow:

Acts paſſed.

1. "An Act for raiſing the Sum of Twelve hun- "dred thirty eight thouſand ſeven hundred and fif- "ty Pounds, for Supply of his Majeſty's extraor- "dinary Occaſions.

2. "An Act for the King's Majeſty's moſt gra- "cious, general, and free Pardon.

3. "An Act for continuing a former Act con- "cerning Coinage.

4. "An Act for enabling his Maj. to make Leaſes "of his Lands belonging to his Dutchy of Cornwal.

5. "An Act for preventing Dangers which may "happen from Popiſh Recuſants.

6. "An Act for reviving the Judicature for the "Determination of Differences touching Houſes "burn'd down and demoliſhed by reaſon of the late "Fire which happen'd in London, and for rebuild- "ing the Navy-Office.

7. "An Act for taking off Aliens Duties upon "Commodities of the Growth and Manufactures "of this Nation.

8. "An Act for Encouraging the Greenland and "Eaſtland Trades, and for the better ſecuring the "Plantation Trades.

9. "An Act for Repeal of a Clauſe in a former "Act to prohibit Saleſmen from ſelling fat Cattel.

10. "An Act to enable the County Palatine of "Durham to ſend Knights and Burgeſſes to ſerve "in Parliament.

Claim of James Percy to the Earldom of Northumberland.

After which the Parliament adjourned till the 20th of October next enſuing. On the Day before their Riſing, the Lords, upon reading the Petitions of James Percy, ſetting forth his Claim to the Title of Earl of Northumberland, &c. and his refuſing to make appear any Probability towards the ſaid Claim, notwithſtanding he had a Months time given him before, and cauſed above forty Witneſſes to be ſworn at the Bar; and their Lordſhips having fully heard the elder Counteſs of Northumberland's Counſel, who chargeth the ſaid James Percy to be an Impoſtor: it was Reſolved, that both the Petitions of the ſaid James Percy for his Claim, &c. ſhould be diſmiſſed the Houſe; and they were diſmiſſed accordingly. And by a ſucceeding Vote it was reſolved, that the Conſideration of what further Proceedings ſhould be had againſt the ſaid James Percy, concerning the ſaid Impoſture, ſhould be taken up the next Morning. This Percy was a Trunk-Maker who came out of Ireland, and brought Evidence with him of his being deſcended from the antient noble Family of that Name. When rejected by the Lords, he carried on ſome Pretenſions at Common Law; but being an Impoſtor, or at leaſt a Beggar, he could have no Succeſs. At the end of this Seſſion, the new Speaker, Edward Seymour Eſquire, was thought to have deſerved ſo well of the King and his Court, that on Apr. 9 he was ſworn and admitted one of his Majeſty's moſt Honourable Privy Council, and took his Place at the Board accordingly.

At the beginning of April, thoſe Lords of his Majeſty's moſt honourable Privy Council who were appointed a Committee for the Redemption of Captives from Algiers and Salley, publiſh'd a Liſt of all thoſe Perſons who had been Redeemed from Captivity by the Monies collected by vertue of his Majeſty's Letters Patents dated in Auguſt 1670. and gave notice, that the whole Collection paid into the Chamber of London amounted unto Twenty thouſand and five hundred Pounds; out of which Sum, Fifteen thouſand one hundred and ſeventy Pounds had been already iſſued out for the Redemption of Two hundred forty ſeven Perſons; and the Remainder was impreſted and actually employing towards the carrying on the ſaid Redemption with all the Expedition that may be. 1673. 25 Ca. Affairs at Sea.

This Summer was full of Action at Sea: The Dutch, with their uſual Diligence, were firſt abroad, and intended ſome Advantage by their early Expedition. For on April 30. O. S. Admiral De Ruyter ſailed from the Maeſe with forty two Ships of War, to the Mouth of the Thames, in hopes, by ſinking ſome Veſſels, to block up the River, and hinder the Canary, Bourdeoux, and New-Caſtle Fleets getting in; but they had happen'd to go up the River two Days before, and had given up Fifteen hundred Men to the Navy Royal. De Ruyter hearing this, returned to Schonevelt, where he was joined by Admiral Tromp with the Amſterdam Squadron; in the Command whereof, he ſucceeded the Baron Van Ghent, kill'd in the laſt Summer's Engagement. By May 12. the Engliſh Fleet was ready; and Prince Rupert, as Admiral, went on Board the Royal-Charles at Dungeneſs: and on May 16. the French Squadron, commanded by the Count D'Eſtree, came up and joined our Navy off of Rye. The King and the Duke went down to ſee the Fleet, and left them on May 19. ready to ſail with the firſt fair Wind: Before his coming away, his Majeſty made the Earl of Oſſory Rear-Admiral of the Blue Squadron. The firſt Engagement began near Schonevelt on May 28. Prince Rupert commanded our main Body, Sir Edward Spragge the Blue Squadron, and the Count D'Eſtree the White. The French were mingled with the Engliſh, to prevent their running-away, as they were ſaid to have done in the Fight at Solebay the laſt Year. The Engliſh and French made about a hundred and ten Sail; the Dutch near a hundred. When De Ruyter ſaw the Confederates appear, he weigh'd Anchor to meet them. Tromp and Sir Edward Spragge began the Fight, which on every ſide was continued with great Fury till the dark Night divided them. The Dutch loſt Vice-Admiral Schram, and Rear-Admiral Ulugh; our Captain Legg took one Dutch Man of War, but Captain Backer who loſt it did bravely retake it: The Deventer, another Dutch Ship of ſixty Guns, was diſabled; and ſtriking on the Sand in her Return home, all the Men were drown'd except thirty. The Dutch affirm they loſt only this Ship, and that not by the Enemy; whereas the Confederates loſt twelve, ſunk or burnt, of which the moſt were French, the Fripon, the Thunderer, and ſeveral of their Fireſhips, which they knew not how to uſe. It is certain that both Sides were well beaten, and therefore both Sides claim'd the Victory. De Ruyter, in his Letter to the Prince of Orange of June 8. ſays, We judge abſolutely, that thus far the Victory (God be praiſed) is on the ſide of this State and your Highneſs. And Prince Rupert writes thus to the Lord Arlington, I thought it beſt for us to ceaſe the Purſuit, and drop Anchor where I now am. On the Engliſh ſide were kill'd Capt. Fowls, Capt. Werden, and Capt. Finch; Colonel Hamilton, had his Leg ſhot off: The Captains Legg, Holmes, Wetwang, and Story, ſignaliz'd themſelves in this Battel, which drove back the Engliſh to their Coaſts, and the Dutch to Schonevelt. The greateſt Argument of the Victory inclining to the Dutch, was their ſetting out early again, and ſailing to the Engliſh Coaſts, where they challenged and attacked the Engliſh and French Fleet. On June 4. Tromp and Spragge were the firſt again that engaged: The Fight laſted ſix hours without much Loſs on either ſide; ſo that both again pretended to the Victory, and both indeed deſerved it. De Ruyter wrote to the States thus; The next day we ſaw the Enemies Sea Fights.

Another Sea Fight.

1673. 25 Ca. II.

were gone, and doubt not but they made to the Thames: we ſatisfied our ſelves with purſuing them half-way, and then return'd to our former Station. And Prince Rupert thus to my Lord Arlington: About Midnight the Dutch Fleet tacked — At Two in the Morning we tacked alſo, and ſtood after them; at Six ſeeing no likelihood of reaching them before they would get within their Sands, we thought it to no purpoſe to purſue them any further: ſo we tacked again, and ſtood for our own Coaſt. All we can ſay more of the Enemy is, That they went off in great Diſorder, leaving us ignorant of what Loſs they have ſuſtained. By the latter end of July the Engliſh and French, having repaired their Ships, return'd to the Coaſts of Zeland; and De Ruyter left his Port of Schonevelt, to meet the Enemy. A third Engagement began on Monday Aug. 11. Count D'Eſtree led the Confederates White Squadron, Prince Rupert the main Line, and Sir Edward Spragge the Blue Squadron. The French, as was uſual for them to do in this War, fled, and ſtay'd out of the Reach of the Cannon. Tromp and Spragge fought with their wonted Bravery: Tromp forc'd Sir Edward Spragge twice out of his Ship, and Spragge compell'd Admiral Tromp once to change his. Bankert of the Zealand Squadron met with very little Reſiſtance from D'Eſtree in the White; ſo he join'd with De Ruyter, who was engag'd with Prince Rupert, and very much diſtreſs'd him. Vice-Admiral de Liefds and Sweers were kill'd of the Dutch; and Sir Edward Spragge drown'd, a Cannon ſtriking his Boat and ſinking it, as he was going out of his ſecond Ship into the third. De Ruyter writes, The Fight laſted till Night, and then the Enemy made away to their Coaſts, leaving us, God be thank'd, Maſters of the Place of Battle.

A Third Engagement.

The Engliſh had ſhipp'd 6000 Men, commanded by Mareſchal de Schonbergh, for a Deſcent upon the Coaſts of Holland; but their not being able to attempt any thing at Land, was an Argument that they were not ſuperiour at Sea.

Tabago taken from the Dutch.

The Iſland of Tabago was, at the beginning of this Year, taken from the Dutch by the Engliſh, under the Command of Sir Tobias Bridges, with a Booty of 400 Priſoners, and as many Negroes.

And St. Helena loſt and regain'd.

The Dutch, in Repriſal, had ſeized upon our Iſle of St. Helena, which would have proved a great Obſtruction to our Eaſt-India Trade, had it not been ſoon after regained by Capt. Munday, with a more fatal Loſs to the Dutch of three very conſiderable Eaſt-India Ships: for which acceptable Service, the Capt. at his Return in Auguſt, was Knighted by his Majeſty.

Honours and Preferments.

As to Civil Offices and Honours, the Lord Clifford, being a profeſs'd Papiſt, finding himſelf diſabled by the Teſt, reſign'd into his Majeſty's Hands his Staff as Lord High Treaſurer of England, on June 19. which his Majeſty, by the Recommendation of the Duke of Buckingham, was pleaſed to deliver the ſame Day to Sir Thomas Osborne Knight and Baronet, and lately created Lord Viſcount Osborne of Dunblain in Scotland. Soon after, on the Death of Sir Robert Long, Knight and Baronet, Auditor of his Majeſty's Exchequer, that profitable Place was given to Sir Robert Howard, who left his Office of Secretary to the Lord High Treaſurer of England to Charles Bertue Eſquire, Brother to the Earl of Lindſey. But the greateſt Change at Court was by the Diſgrace of the Lord Chancellour Shaftsbury, who had lately ſet himſelf at the Head of the diſcontented Party, and earneſtly oppoſed all thoſe Meaſures which were thought to be tending to the Growth of Popery, or to the Exerciſe of Arbitrary Power. When Serjeant Thurland took his Oath before him, as one of the Barons of the Exchequer, he gave him this bold Advice: Let me recommend to you ſo to manage the King's Juſtice and the Revenues, as the King may have moſt Profit, and the Subject leaſt Vexation. Raking for old Debts, the Number of Informations, Projects upon Concealments, I cou'd not find (in the eleven Years Experience I had in this Court) ever to advantage the Crown; but ſuch Proceedings have, for the moſt part, deliver'd up the King's good Subjects into the hands of the worſt of Men, Clerks of the Court, Cuſtom-houſe Officers, and Excize-men. For daring thus to limit the King's Revenue and his Power, and for taking other Liberties of ſpeaking freely againſt the Popiſh Intereſt at Court, he became very uneaſie to the Duke of York, who prevailed with his Brother to remove him. It was by this Procurement of his Royal Highneſs, that the King ſent for the Earl to Whitehall on Sunday Nov. 9. and demanded the Seals of him, which he reſign'd with great Chearfulneſs, and putting on his Sword, he return'd home as unconcern'd as if he had brought the Mace back with him. The ſame Day he was viſited by Prince Rupert, and moſt of the Peers and Perſons of Quality about Town, who acknowledg'd that the Nation was oblig'd to him for the juſt Diſcharge of the Truſt that had been repoſed in him, and return'd him their Thanks. The Papiſts were ſo angry with him, that they began to proſecute him, not only into Diſgrace but into Ruin; for they examined the Court Rolls to meet with ſomething on which to ground an Accuſation in Law againſt him: And picking out ſome Pretenſions, they preſented a Paper to the King's Council, containing Matters for a Charge of Corruption and other Miſdemeanours; but, to their great Mortification, the Council reported, that nothing could be drawn out of that Paper for any legal Information. And indeed this Juſtice muſt be done to his Lordſhip's Memory, that he executed this great Office with ſingular Integrity and Honour.

The Great Seal was immediately given to Sir Heneage Finch Knight and Baronet, his Majeſty's Attorney General, with the Title of Lord Keeper. He was Nephew to Sir John Finch, Lord Keeper in the Reign of K. Charles I. and had the Parts and Elocution of his Uncle.

Proceedings in Parliam.

As to Proceedings in Parliament, on Monday Oct. 20. the two Houſes met, according to their laſt Adjournment, and were Prorogu'd by Commiſſion to Monday the 27th inſtant. The Commons ſeem'd very uneaſie in their Fears of Popery, and a Popiſh Faction at Court, and preſented to his Majeſty two bold Addreſſes againſt the Match which had been this Summer Treated and Concluded, by his Majeſty's Conſent, between James Duke of York and Mary Princeſs of Modena: But, contrary to their Opinion and Importunity, the King told them it was too late to prevent it. And the Liberty they took of interpoſing in this Affair, was ſo unacceptable to the Court, that on Tueſday Nov. 4. his Majeſty was pleaſed to Prorogue the Parliament till the 7th of January next. In the mean time, to make ſome ſhew of ſatisfying the Commons of England in ſuppreſſing the Fears of Popery, his Majeſty was pleaſed on Novemb. 14. to call before him in Council the Lords Chief Juſtices, and the Lord Chief Baron, and to command them to conſider of the moſt effectual means of putting the Laws in Execution for preventing the Growth of Popery, and ſpeedily to Report the ſame to his Majeſty: And at the ſame time his Majeſty was pleaſed to order, "That no "Perſon who is a Roman Catholick, or is reputed "to be of the Roman Catholick Religion, do preſume, after the 18th Day of this inſtant Novemb. "to come into his Majeſty's Royal Preſence, or to "his Palace, or to the Place where his Court ſhall "be. And accordingly, the Lord Steward and "Lord Chamberlain of his Majeſty's Houſhold, "were ordered to cauſe this his Majeſty's Pleaſure "to be effectually put in Execution. And on Decemb. 10. was pleaſed farther to declare in Council, "That no Popiſh Recuſant, or reputed ſo to be, "ſhould preſume to come into St. James's Houſe, or "into the Park adjoining. On Wedneſday Jan. 7. the two Houſes, in purſuance to their late Prorogation, met at Weſtminſter; whither his Majeſty, attended by many of the Peers, went by Water; and being come into the Houſe of Lords, and there ſeated in due Solemnity, the Houſe of Commons was called up, and his Majeſty made a ſhort Speech to the two Houſes:

Addreſs againſt the Match of the D. of York.

The King labours to quiet the Fears of Popery.

Parliam. meets.

1673. 25 Ca. II.

Houſes: After which the new Lord Keeper made a large Deduction of the Dutch Averſeneſs to Peace, their uncivil Demeanour to the King's Plenipotentiaries at Cologn, and how indirectly they dealt with the King in all the Overtures of Peace; and therefore a neceſſary Supply, proportionable to the Greatneſs of the King's Affairs, was not only demanded, but care to be taken for Payment of the Bankers Debt, otherwiſe multitudes of the King's loyal Subjects would be undone. But both Houſes began to ſhew their Diſcontent at the Continuance of a War with Holland, and at a Progreſs of the French Arms, and at the Prevalence of Popiſh Counſels. Firſt therefore the Lords preſented an Addreſs, beſeeching his Majeſty, "That he would be graciouſly pleaſed to iſſue out his Royal Proclamation, requiring all Papiſts and reputed Papiſts, within five Miles of London, Weſtminſter, or Southwark, not being Houſholders, nor attending any Peer of this Realm as a menial Servant, to repair to their reſpective Dwellings, or to depart ten Miles from the Cities and Borough aforeſaid, and not to return during this Seſſion of Parliament: And likewiſe, That his Majeſty would be pleaſed to give Order to the Quarter-Seſſions, that they give in a faithful Account of what Houſholders are within the Cities or Borough aforeſaid, and five Miles thereof, who are of that Profeſſion; and, that the Quarter-Seſſions do adjourn themſelves from time to time for that purpoſe. And accordingly his Majeſty did by Proclamation, dated Jan. 14. declare, "That he had ſeriouſly conſider'd the Addreſs of his moſt dutiful and loyal Subjects, the Lords Spiritual and Temporal in this preſent Parliament aſſembled, and did accept it with much Contentment and Satisfaction: And as he had always manifeſted his Zeal for the Preſervation of the true Religion eſtabliſhed in this Kingdom, and to hinder the Growth and Increaſe of the Popiſh Religion; ſo he was now ready, upon this Occaſion, to prevent all Fears and Dangers that might ariſe by the Concourſe of Perſons of that Profeſſion in or near his Cities of London or Weſtminſter, &c.

Diſcontent of the two Houſes.

Their Addreſs againſt Popery.

The King's Anſwer.

The Commons on Oct. 31. had voted, That conſidering the preſent Condition of the Nation, they will not take into farther Conſideration any Aids or Charges upon the Subject, except it ſhall appear that the Obſtinacy of the Dutch ſhall render it neceſſary, nor before this Kingdom be effectually ſecured from Popery and Popiſh Counſels, and other Grievances be duly redreſſed. And they now joined with the Lords in another Addreſs to his Majeſty to expreſs themſelves paſſionately ſenſible of the calamitous Condition of this Kingdom, not only by reaſon of the War wherein it is at preſent involved, but many other inteſtine Differences and Diviſions amongſt us, which are chiefly occaſioned by the undermining Contrivances of Popiſh Recuſants, whoſe Numbers and Inſolencies are greatly of late increaſed, and whoſe reſtleſs Practices threaten a Subverſion both of Church and State. And indeed the Commons were now ſo weary of the War with Holland, and ſo apprehenſive of the Powers and Intrigues of France, and of the Delays in the Treaty now depending at Cologn, that they did in effect declare for a ſpeedy Peace, and encourage the States of Holland to a ſecret Correſpondence with them on that occaſion. And indeed it was this univerſal Inclination of the Parliament and People of England that induced the King to deſert the French, and to make the United Provinces once more his Friends and Allies. And therefore on Jan. 24. his Majeſty came to the Houſe of Lords, and ſent for the Houſe of Commons, and communicated to both Houſes a Letter together with Propoſitions for Peace, which he had received from the States-General of the United Provinces, by the Hands of the Spaniſh Ambaſſador: And on Jan. 27. the Commons, upon peruſing the Propoſals made by the States-General of the United Provinces, which the King had laid before them, agreed, That his Majeſty be humbly deſired to proceed in a Treaty with the ſaid States, in order to a ſpeedy Peace. This Treaty was happily managed by Sir William Temple, and was concluded to the great Satisfaction of both Nations. It conſiſted of five Articles: By the firſt the States agreed to the Right of the Flag to be paid to all the King's Ships: The ſecond was for ſettling Trade in the Eaſt-Indies: The third related to the Colony of Surinam: By the fourth, Both Sides were obliged to reſtore all Places taken from each other during this War: By the fifth, the States bound themſelves to pay our King Eight hundred thouſand Patacoons. Theſe Articles were ſign'd on Monday Feb. 9. at Whitehall by the Lords his Majeſty's Commiſſioners, and by the Marquis Del Freſno Extraordinary Ambaſſadour of Spain, on the part of the States-General of the United Provinces, by vertue of the Power he had received from them. And on Wedneſday Morning Feb. 11. his Majeſty being come into the Houſe of Lords, and ſending for the Commons, was pleas'd to acquaint them, "That he had made an honourable and (as he hop'd) a laſting Peace with the States-General of the United Provinces: which was entertained with an univerſal Satisfaction in both Houſes. This great Work being happily accompliſhed, his Majeſty was pleaſed on Febr. 24. to Prorogue the Parliament till the 10th of November next. And to make good the Royal Promiſe given to the two Houſes of ſuppreſſing Popery, his Majeſty gave Order in Council March 6. that the Lord Keeper do ſignifie his Majeſty's Pleaſure to the Judges, that in their ſeveral Circuits they cauſe the Laws againſt Popiſh Recuſants to be put in execution; and that they accordingly give the ſaid Laws in charge for their ſpeedy Conviction.

Reſolutions of the Commons

Articles of it.

King's Speech.

This Peace was chiefly owing to the victorious Progreſs of the Prince of Orange, who with an Army of 25000 Men had ſat down before Narden, and took it in ſight of the Duke of Luxemburgh's Army, and ſo put a ſudden Stop to the French Career and Conqueſts in thoſe Parts: For, leaving his Poſts there well guarded, he march'd to the reſt of his Army, took Bonn, and open'd a Paſſage for the German Forces to come over the Rhine into Flanders; upon which the French abandon'd all their Conqueſts upon Holland in leſs time than they had made them, and began to wiſh the War at an end, tho' they made ſhew to the contrary. The Dutch were over-joy'd at this great and unexpected Turn of Affairs, and did juſtly impute it chiefly to the great Wiſdom and Conduct of the Prince of Orange; and therefore a greater Honour was done to him than to any of his illuſtrious Anceſtors: For now the States General not only confirm'd the Charge of Stadt Holder of the Provinces of Holland and Weſt-Frieſland in the Perſon of his Highneſs during Life, but ſettled it likewiſe upon the Heirs Male of his Body born in lawful Wedlock, by a ſolemn Decree made Feb. 22. And on the ſame Day the States of Zealand conferr'd the ſame Dignity upon the Prince, and made him alſo chief hereditary Nobleman of that Province.

This Peace chiefly owing to the Pr. of Orange.

As to the State of Religion, The Fears and Jealouſies of Popery expreſſed by the Parliament, and the Aſſurances given by his Majeſty for quieting thoſe Fears, have been already delivered. As to the Diſſenters, they themſelves report their Hopes of Accommodation in this manner. They ſay, that in the laſt Seſſion this Year, the Earl of Orrery deſir'd Mr. Baxter to draw up Terms of Union between the Conformiſts and the Nonconformiſts, in order to their joint vigorous oppoſing Popery: And he told him, that Sir Thomas Osborne the new Lord Treaſurer, Biſhop Morley of Winchester, and ſeveral other great Men, were mightily for it; upon which he ſent him Propoſals for that purpoſe, the chief of which were theſe.

" That none be forc'd to receive the Sacrament, " while unfit or averſe. That Miniſters be not for" ced to deliver the Sacrament to any unbaptiz'd " Perſons, or to ſuch as won't own their Baptiſmal " Covenant, and publickly profeſs their Adherence " to it; or to ſuch as are guilty of ſcandalous Im" moralities, till they have profeſſed Repentance. " That Miniſters be not forc'd to publiſh an Ex" communication or Abſolution againſt their Con" ſciences, upon the Decree of a Lay-Chancellor, &c. " or harraſs'd by attending their Courts to bring " Witneſſes againſt thoſe, to whom they have re" fuſed the Sacrament upon the aforeſaid Reaſons. " That it be left to the diſcretion of Miniſters, " whom they will abſolve in Sickneſs, and to whom " they will give the Sacrament, and over whom " they at their Interment will uſe theſe few Words, " which import the Juſtification and Salvation of " the Deceaſed: And that the Sick and Dying have " the Liberty of chooſing what Miniſters they will " to attend and aſſiſt them, without Reſtraint. " That no Miniſters be forc'd to deny the Sacra" ment, to ſuch as think it unlawful to take it " kneeling. That the uſe of the Surplice be left " indifferent: And that People who live under an " ignorant or ſcandalous Miniſter, have Liberty to " join with thoſe with whom they can better pro" fit, in any neighbouring Church of the ſame Dio" ceſe, paying the Incumbent his Dues. That no " Ordain'd Miniſters be put upon renouncing their " Ordination but upon proof of their fitneſs for " the Miniſtry, receive by Word, or a written In" ſtrument, a legal Authority to Exerciſe their Mi" niſtry in any Congregation in his Majeſty's Do" minions, where they ſhall be lawfully called. " That no Excommunicate Perſon as ſuch be impri" ſon'd or ruin'd. And that after all Chriſtian Lenity " be uſed to all conſcientious Diſſenters; and that " the Tolerable be tolerated under Laws of Peace " and Safety.

Upon the whole he added, " That if the Sacra" craments were but left free to be adminiſter'd and " receiv'd by none but Volunteers: And Liberty " granted to Miniſters to preach in thoſe Churches " where the Common Prayer was read by others; " and the Subſcriptions contain'd nothing that a " Conſcientious Man might need to ſcruple; he " thought it might take in all, even the Indepen" dents as well as Presbyterians. Mr. Baxter gave " the Earl of Orery theſe Propoſals, and he after " ſome time return'd them with Biſhop Morley's " Strictures or Animadverſions, which fully diſco" ver'd that all his Profeſſions for Abatement and " Concord were deceitful, and that he intended no " ſuch thing, for he would not make the leaſt Abate" ment in any thing of Moment.

" A little after, ſome great Men of the Houſe of " Commons drew up a Bill for Accommodation, to " take off Oaths, Subſcriptions and Declarations, " except the Oaths of Allegiance and Supremacy, " and Subſcriptions to the Doctrine of the Church " of England, according to the 13th of Elizabeth but " ſhewing it to the Biſhop of Wincheſter, he cauſed " them to forbear, and broke the Deſign. And in " the mean time, that it might not ſeem to be for " nothing that he oft pretended to be of ſo peace" able a Diſpoſition, he further'd an Act only to take " off Aſſent and Conſent, and the Renunciation of " the Covenant. But when other Biſhops were a" gainſt even this ſhew of Abatement he told them " openly in the Houſe; that had it been but to abate " them a Ceremony, he would not have ſpoken in " it. But he knew that they were bound to the " ſame things ſtill, by other Clauſes or Obligations " if theſe were repeal'd.

The King was thought to have been ſo much offended with the Proceedings of the Parliament in their " laſt Seſſion, that it was generally believ'd he had no mind to meet them again, tho' they had been ſo long endear'd to him, by ſo many agreeable Acts and continual Supplies. Hence the popular Rumour was, that his Majeſty intended to diſſolve the Parliament: But the King apprehending that a Report of this Nature might irritate ſome of the leading Members, and be otherwiſe prejudicial to his Affairs, he publiſh'd a Proclamation given at Whitehall May 2. declaring, " That whereas of late many Perſons ill-affected to the Government have aſſumed to themſelves a Liberty in their ordinary Diſcourſes, " to cenſure and defame the Proceedings of State, " whereby they endeavour to create and nouriſh in " the Minds of his Majeſty's good Subjects, an evil " Opinion of things they underſtand not, and fur" ther to promote their ſeditious Ends, they do daily " invent falſe News, and ſpread the ſame abroad " amongſt the People, to the great Scandal of his " Majeſty's Government: Whereof his Majeſty ta" king notice, and in particular of that very falſe " Report of an Intention to diſſolve this preſent " Parliament, which hath not been under delibera" tion, his Majeſty ſeeing no cauſe to change his " Reſolutions taken touching their meeting. And " therefore his Majeſty would look upon the Sprea" ders of that Report as Perſons ſeditiouſly inclin'd " and ill-affected to his Service, and was reſolved to " ſuppreſs that unlawful and undutiful kind of " Diſcourſe by a moſt ſtrict and exemplary Puniſh" ment of all ſuch Offenders as ſhall hereafter be " diſcover'd. But however, his Majeſty might think fit to continue this Name of a long Parliament, he did not ſeem inclinable to ſuffer them this Year to ſit and Remonſtrate againſt Popery, and therefore on September 22. his Majeſty was pleaſed to cauſe a Proclamation to be publiſh'd for the farther Proroguing the Parliament, from Nov. 10. next to the 13th of April enſuing. Yet in the mean time to ſeem to anſwer the Addreſſes of their laſt meeting, his Majeſty was pleaſed to ſhew a publick Care for ſuppreſſing Popery, and convicting Romiſh Prieſts and Jeſuits, who were daily more numerous and more inſolent in the City and Country. Therefore on June 10. his Majeſty in Council at Hampton-Court, did order his Royal Proclamation to be publiſh'd to ſatisfie his People, that having been inform'd that many " Prieſts and Jeſuits, in contempt of former Orders " and Proclamations, did continue and harbour " themſelves

And that ſuch Diſcoveries might be " the better encouraged, his Majeſty had given " Order to the Lord High Treaſurer of England " to cauſe ſpeedy payment to be made of the ſum " of five Pounds for every Prieſt or Jeſuit ſo diſ- " cover'd.

Popiſh Plot.

There was certainly great Reaſon for the popular Jealouſies of Popery: For the Plot that had been more or leſs been carried on for ſeveral Years to ſupport, if not reſtore the Romiſh Religion in England, began now to ſhew it ſelf in a more open manner, as appears by ſeveral Letters written by Mr. Coleman, the Duke of York's Secretary, to ſeveral Foreigh Correſpondents; the firſt that came to view was this, directed to the French King's Confeſſor, dated June 29. 1674.

Coleman's Letters.

" I Am commanded to tell you, that his Royal " Highneſs my Maſter, is very ſenſible of the " Friendſhip of his moſt Chriſtian Majeſty, which " he will endeavour to cultivate very carefully, " and to give him all poſſible Aſſurances of it, " to take away all Jealouſies that his Enemies " would raiſe to the contrary.

" That his Royal Highneſs has done nothing " in any manner whatſoever, nor in any place, " againſt the Intereſt of his moſt Chriſtian Maje- " ſty, but hath render'd him all the good Offi- " ces he hath been capable of.

" That as for recalling the Parliament, and " touching my Lord A..... his Highneſs is al- " together of the Opinion of his Majeſty, that " neither one nor other is uſeful, but quite contra- " trary, very dangerous as well for England as " France, and that his moſt Chriſtian Majeſty is " in great danger of loſing the Neutrality of " England at the next Seſſion (if the Parliament " meet) as he loſt its Alliance by the Peace of " Holland at the laſt; becauſe the Lower-Houſe " and their Friends (as the furious Proteſtants, " and the Malecontents in the Houſe of Lords) " have a Deſign to leſſen his Royal Highneſs, and " root out the Catholick Religion, and they think " they cannot make uſe of any other fitter means " to attain their End, than to raiſe the Dutch, " and to perplex his moſt Chriſtian Majeſty as " much as lies in their Power.

" That his Highneſs doubts not but it is abſo- " lutely neceſſary for the Intereſt of his moſt " Chriſtian Majeſty and his Royal Highneſs, to " uſe all Endeavours to hinder the meeting of the " Parliament by perſwading his Britannick Maje- " ſty, that his Greatneſs, his Honour and his " Quiet, are no leſs concerned therein than theirs; " ſo that if his moſt Chriſtian Majeſty would " write freely his Thoughts thereupon to his Bri- " tannick Majeſty, to forewarn him of the Dan- " ger he apprehends from thence, and would " withal think fit to make him the ſame gene- " rous Offers of his Purſe, to perſwade him to " diſſolve the preſent Parliament, as he hath done " to his Highneſs for the Election of another, per- " haps he would ſucceed therein by the Aſſiſtance " we would give him here.

" As for another Parliament, it would be eaſie 1674.

" a nature, that as there is nothing to be hop'd

" Chriſtian Majeſty and to all the World, &c.

And by this other Letter from Mr. Coleman to the French King's Confeſſor without Date, but noted by him to have been written by him in Anſwer to a Letter of Sept. 25. 1674.

" HIS Royal Highneſs has received the Letter " that you ſent him by Sir William Throck- " morton, which he has anſwer'd to you himſelf; " and beſides he hath commanded me to teſtifie " to you the great Eſteem he hath for the Friend- " ſhip of his moſt Chriſtian Majeſty, and for " yours, and to aſſure you that he will not fail " to cultivate it with all his Power; and that " preferring the ſincere Faith of a Chriſtian, and " the Word of a Man of Honour, before all Sub- " tilties and even all the Advantages of the " World, he gives you them both as a Pledge of " the ardent Deſire he has to continue always a " ſtrict Alliance with his moſt Chriſtian Maje- " ſty and to entertain alſo an intimate Correſ- " pondence with you.

" For the firſt Point of your Letter, his Royal " Highneſs has commanded me to tell you, that " he will govern himſelf according to your Ad- " vice, and treat of nothing concerning the Ca- " tholick Religion with Monſieur Rouvigny, nor " with any other Perſon than your ſelf, but that he " will communicate to you all things he ſhall " find neceſſary for the good of the Catholicks, " and ſhall be very well pleaſed to receive Ad- " vices from you thereupon.

" For the reſt, his Royal Highneſs does a lit- " tle wonder that he hears nothing from Mon- " ſieur Rouvigny touching the ſecond Point of " your Letter, ſince you have written ſo poſi- " tively, that he had Order to confirm and pro- " cure Execution of what his moſt Chriſtian Ma- " jeſty propoſed to him the ſecond of June laſt " by your Mediation, and you by that of Sir " William Throckmorton's. He (his Royal High- " neſs) has omitted, till this time, to acquaint " you with the ſmall Succeſs that he has had, as " expecting daily that Monſieur Rouvigny would " impart to him the Commiſſion of which you made " mention to him in your Letter; but having " heard nothing yet of that matter, and being " obliged to go out of Town for fifteen Days or " three Weeks, he thinks fit to ſend you back Sir " William Throckmorton, to acquaint you with the " the Progreſs of this Buſineſs, and to pray you " to inform yourſelf of what has been able to " hinder it.

" His moſt Chriſtian Majeſty made a very " generous offer to his Royal Highneſs of the aſ- " ſiſtance of his Purſe, to inable him to defend " them both from the Evils that threatned them, " and by good luck his Royal Highneſs has la- " bour'd with ſo much diligence and ſucceſs, that " the Dangers which they apprehended are a lit- " tle put off; but one thing more is neceſſary for " the perfect ſecuring their Affairs, and without " making one ſtep more, all that he has already " done will ſignifie nothing. For that the aſ- " ſiſtance of his moſt Chriſtian Majeſty is no leſs " neceſſary at preſent than heretofore, to ſubdue " intirely thoſe, who being exaſperated againſt " his moſt Chriſtian Majeſty, as much as againſt " his Royal Highneſs, only becauſe he is ſo un-

1674. 26 Car. II.

" alterably addicted to the Intereſt of his moſt " Chriſtian Majeſty, will exerciſe their Malice " and their Rage with more Brutality than ever, " if they find occaſion for it hereafter.

" If you can therefore, by your Credit, obtain " from his moſt Chriſtian Majeſty the Accom- " pliſhment of the Offer of his Purſe for raiſing " the Reputation of his Royal Highneſs in the " Opinion of his Britannick Majeſty, and for put- " ting him in condition to reſiſt the ſharpeſt Bat- " teries of the Adverſaries of his moſt Chriſtian " Majeſty and Royal Highneſs; to wit, the Poſ- " ſibility they pretend to get Money from the " Parliament, and the Impoſſibility of having a- " ny elſewhere, by which they often keep the " Mind of his Britannick Majeſty in ſuſpence, " and wherein they place the Hope they have " to conquer him at laſt.

" There will nothing more remain to be fear- " ed by his moſt Chriſtian Majeſty, or his Royal " Highneſs, but his Royal Highneſs will be able " to diſſolve the Parliament with eaſe; and af- " terwards, in recompence of the ſaid Aſſiſtance, " will perform on his part all that his moſt Chri- " ſtian Majeſty ſhall ask of him, and will pro- " ceed with Sincerity upon the Word of a Prince " (that no Man can reproach him with the Vio- " lation of) for the Intereſt of his moſt Ch. Maj.

In a third Letter of Mr. Coleman to the Pope's Internuncio, dated Septemb. 4. 1674, he tells him, " That the Duke's principal Deſign is, to uſe the " Pope's Interpoſition, and by that means to eſta- " bliſh himſelf in the Poſſeſſion of his Eſtate " through the Aſſiſtance of France and Spain, and " to turn all their Cares for the Eaſe of the Pope's " Friends, and particularly for the Catholicks of " the Church againſt their great Enemies; and " aſſures him he will find, that the Pope never " had an Occaſion ſo favourable as at this hour, " to enrich thoſe of his Family, and to augment " the Number of his Friends; and if he lets it " ſlip, he will never find the like: So that if ever " they propoſe to make uſe of the Treaſure of the " Church, it is now they ought to do it, for they " can demand nothing that the Duke will not be " capable to do for the Pope's Friends. And in another Letter of Octob. 23. 1674, Mr. Coleman to the Internuncio begins thus: " You agree with " me, that Money is the only means of bringing " the King into the Duke's Intereſt, and of diſ- " ingaging him from the Parliament; and you " muſt alſo agree with me, that nothing can " more promote the Intereſt of the Catholick " Party, which is the principal Object of the " Duke's Care and Affection, and of the Hatred " of the Parliament, and which muſt hope or " fear, according as the one or the other of them " increaſe in Power. Theſe Letters alone, with- out any other concurring Evidence, are more than ſufficient to prove, that the Roman Catholicks in England were full of Hopes and Expectations un- der the Influence and Protection of the Duke of York, and under the Proſpect of his Succeſſion to the Crown: not to ſay that they knew the King would fall into the ſame Meaſures ſo far as was conſiſtent with his preſent Peace and Quiet.

Honours and Preferments.

As to Offices, and Honours conferr'd this Year; On April 23. in a Chapter of the moſt no- ble Order of the Garter, the Earl of Mulgrave was elected a Companion, and was accordingly intro- duced and inveſted with the George and Garter a- midſt the uſual Ceremonies, and was inſtall'd at Windſor on May 28. And on May 30. the Atchieve- ments of Count Marcin, Knight of the Order, lately deceas'd, were offer'd up in the accuſtom'd manner. Robert Earl of Sunderland was, by his Majeſty's Favour, admitted into the Privy Coun- cil; and having taken the uſual Oaths, took his Place at the Board on May 27. And the Earl of Peterborough was ſworn into the ſame Honour of a Privy Counſellor, at Hampton-Court, on Jul. 10. The Duke of Buckingham, who had been a perſo- nal Favourite of the King, began now again to de- cline in the good Opinion of his Majeſty. He had by his own Intereſt made two Lord Treaſu- rers, but was not to be left able to make a third. Being Chancellor of the Univerſity of Cambridge, his Majeſty, by his Letters to the Univerſity, de- clared that Place vacant; and on July 15. the Senate of the Univerſity, in a full Aſſembly, u- nanimouſly elected his Grace the Duke of Mon- mouth to ſucceed him, who was inſtalled at Wor- ceſter-Houſe in London Sept. 3. the Vice Chancellor Dr. Spencer making an eloquent Speech in Engliſh, and Dr. Toaman the Univerſity Orator in Latin, upon that Occaſion: and when the Ceremony was over, the new Chancellor treated the whole Com- pany, being near 300 Perſons, with extraordina- ry Magnificence. Sir Leoline Jenkins and Sir Jo- ſeph Williamſon Knights, his Majeſty's Ambaſſa- dours Extraordinary and Plenipotentiaries for the Treaty at Cologne, arriv'd at Whitehall May 10. and were very graciouſly received by his Majeſty. And for a Reward of this Service, Sir Joſeph Williamſon, having been one of the Clerks of the Privy Council, was now made Principal Secreta- ry of State, and Privy Counſellor, having the Oaths adminiſtred unto him on Sept. 11. by the Advancement of the Earl of Arlington, who, upon the Reſignation of the Earl of St. Albans, receiv'd the Staff of Lord Chamberlain of his Majeſty's Houſhold, with this publick Reaſon given, That it was in Recompence of his long and faithful Service, and particularly for his having performed the Office of Principal Secretary of State for the ſpace of twelve Years, to his Majeſty's great Satisfaction. The place of one of the Clerks in Council being ſo vacated by the Preferment of Sir Joſeph Williamſon, his Majeſty was pleaſed to confer it Sept. 16. upon Philip Lloyd Eſq. The Earl of Strafford was ſworn of his Majeſty's moſt Honourable Privy Council on Dec. 8. His Majeſty being nobly entertain'd at Guild-Hall on Octob. 29. when Sir Robert Viner was ſworn Lord Mayor, did moſt graciouſly con- deſcend to the Acceptance of the Freedom of that City, in the Chamberlain's Office, from the Hands of Sir Thomas Player: Upon which the Lord May- or, Aldermen, and Common-Council unanimouſ- ly agreed to teſtifie their deepeſt Senſe of ſo un- parallell'd a Favour and Honour done to the City, beyond the Example of all his Progenitors. And cordingly the Lord Mayor, attended by his Bre- thren and the Commons, waited on his Majeſty Dec. 18. in the Banquetting-houſe; where, on his Knees, he preſented the King with the Copy of the ſaid Freedom, curiouſly written on Vellum, and adorned with Gilding after the beſt manner, in a large ſquare Box of maſſy Gold; the Seal of the ſaid Freedom hanging at it, incloſed in ano- ther Box of Gold, ſet all over with large Dia- monds to a conſiderable Value: which his Maje- ſty was pleaſed graciouſly to accept, with many Expreſſions of great Kindneſs to the City. At the beginning of Hilary Term, Sir Francis North, his Majeſty's Attorney General, being, in conſi- deration of his faithful Services, deſigned by his Majeſty to ſucceed Sir John Vaughan late Lord Chief Juſtice of the Court of Common-Pleas, ap- peared in the high Court of Chancery, and was ſworn Serjeant: After he had performed all the Formalities belonging to that Degree, the Lord Keeper of the Great Seal came into the Court of Common Pleas, and declar'd the King's Pleaſure to him in an eloquent Speech: Sir Francis North ſtanding in the middle of the Bar of the ſaid Court, made his Acknowledgments of the King's great

On Feb. 10. his Majesty was graciously pleased, in consideration of the eminent Loyalty and good Services of — Glascork Esq; to cause him to be sworn one of the Masters of Request, in the room of Jervis Holles Esq; deceased.

Abroad the great Action was the Battle of Seneff, between the French under the Command of the Prince of Conde, and the Confederates led by the Prince of Orange. —— The Confederate Army being on their March toward Binch, the French fell upon their Rear, which soon came to a furious Engagement. Sir William Temple, in his Memoirs, has thus described it: " As the " Numbers on both sides were not much different " when the Fight began, so were those esteemed " that fell in this Battle, and to amount to about " six or seven thousand on each side; but of the " French many more Officers and Gentlemen than " were usual in proportion to the common Soldiers. When the Night parted the Armies, the " French retired back to their former Quarters; " and next Morning the Confederates marched " to that which they designed when they broke " up the Day before. The Allies claimed the " Victory, because they were last upon the Field; " and the French, upon the greater Number of " Prisoners and Standards they carried away: " but whoever had the Honour, they both felt " the Loss. There was a Letter intercepted from the Prince of Conde to the French King; wherein he gave him an Account, that upon a general Review of his Army, he found himself but in a sorry condition, as having lost the Flower of his Infantry, and the best part of his Horse, and therefore did not think himself strong enough to hazard a second Engagement. And as this generous Prince was very ingenious in the Acknowledgment of his Loss, he was no less just to his great Adversary the Prince of Orange, by giving him the Character, that " He had acted like an old Captain in all, but " only venturing himself too much like a young " Man. But more full yet was that of General Zouch's Letter to the States; wherein, amongst others, he used these Expressions: " I have en- " deavoured to discharge my Duty in attending " his Highness the Prince of Orange during the " bloody and famous Battle between the Confe- " derate Army and that of the most Christian " King, the happy Issue of which has proved so " much to the Glory of the Prince of Orange, " who shewed upon that Occasion the Prudence " of an aged Captain, the Courage of a Cæsar, " and the undaunted Bravery of a Marius. All " which, my Lords, I speak without Flattery, " which is contrary to my Nature.

itations for ce.

While the Peace between England and Holland was in Agitation, the English Ambassadour Sir William Temple acquainted the Prince of Orange with the King's personal Kindness and Esteem for him, and with his Majesty's Resolution to observe and cultivate a Friendship with the States, and his Desires to see a General Peace restor'd to Christendom, wherein his Majesty intended to act wholly in concert with his Highness, whose Opinion, as to the Thing and Conditions most necessary, Sir William desir'd to understand as soon and as fully as he could. The Prince answer'd the Ambassadour with the Expressions of Duty and Kindness to his Majesty, and desires a new Union between the two Nations, which he thought alone could make his Majesty happy at home and abroad: But as to a Peace, his Highness seem'd averse to it, unless it could be made with good Advantage to the Spaniard, a firm Security to the States, and upon the lasting Ballance of Europe. The Ambassadour enter'd upon one thing more with him, which was upon occasion of the many discontented Persons in England, at the Course of the last Ministry and War, who were suspected to have trinkled at least with Holland, about the raising of Seditions, and perhaps Insurrections in England, if the War had continued; and to that end told his Highness what the King suspected of some of his Subjects, without naming any, and how much Service it would be to his Majesty to know them more certainly, and how kind it would be to discover them: But the Prince was stanch, and said, He was sure the King would not press him upon a thing so much against all Honour, as to betray Men that professed to be his Friends.

1674. 26 Car. II.

Sir William having transmitted an Account to England of all this, had no Orders nor Returns upon it: But about the beginning of Decemb. the Earl of Arlington was sent over into Holland with some Instructions to adjust all Matters with his Highness. His Lordship being arrived at the Hague, told Sir William Temple, that he was come over to set some Things right between the King and the Prince that he doubted were amiss, and to settle a perfect Kindness and Confidence between them for the future. The Prince did not seem inclinable to the Overtures made by the Lord Arlington, and only said, that the Fortune of the Parties might change in another Campaign, which none but his Majesty could prevent by inducing France to comply with such Terms as he thought just and safe for the rest of Christendom. And we are told, " That the Prince shew'd him- " self dissatisfied at the Arrogance and Insolence " wherewith Arlington had enter'd upon all his " Expostulations with him; and that not only " in the Subject of his Discourse, as if he pre- " tended to deal with a Child that he could by " his Wit make to believe what he pleased; but " in the Manner of it, as if he had taken himself " for the Prince of Orange, and him for Lord Ar- " lington; That all he said was so Artificial, and " he gave such false Colours to things, every bo- " dy knew that he, who was a plain Man, could " not bear it; and was never so weary of any " Conversation in his Life: And, in short, he " did not seem well satisfied with the King's In- " tentions upon that Errand, tho' he said he was " sure his Majesty never intended he should act " in the manner he had, if he remember'd he was " his Nephew, tho' nothing else.

State of Religion.

As to the nearer Concerns of Religion, the King, who had Apprehension and Judgment (when applied) equal to the greatest of his Predecessors, did clearly perceive it to be the Sense of his Council, and the Voice of his People, that he should support the Establish'd Church, with a strict Hand upon the Papists, and with a moderate Restraint of the Dissenters, chiefly because their Division gave Advantage to the other Enemy. On this Principle of Wisdom his Majesty commanded his own Inclination, and during the long Recess of Parliament, to quiet the Minds of his Subjects, he published this Declaration for enforcing a late Order made in Council.

And we " do ſtrictly Charge and Command, that no " Maſs be ſaid in any part of this Kingdom, " the Chapels of our deareſt Conſort the Queen, " and the Chapels of Foreign Miniſters only ex" cepted. And to prevent all extraordinary Re" ſort to thoſe Chapels, by ſuch who are not me" nial Servants to the Queen, or to Foreign Mi" niſters, we declare that every ſuch Offender " ſhall incur the Forfeiture of one hundred Marks, " provided by the Statute made in the twenty " third Year of Queen Elizabeth, whereof one " Third part ſhall be given to the Informer for " his farther Reward and Encouragement. And " we forbid all Papiſts, or reputed Papiſts, to " come into our Palace at Whitehall or St. James's, " or into any other place where our Court ſhall be, " contrary to our late Prohibition upon pain of " Impriſonment in the Tower, if he be a Peer of " the Realm, or in ſome other Priſon if he be of " leſſer Quality. And laſtly, we appoint, that " care be taken for the ſuppreſſion of Conventi" cles, hereby declaring, that all our Licences " were long ſince recalled, and that no Conven" ticle hath any Authority, Allowance or En" couragement from us. And our Pleaſure is, " that theſe our Commands be publiſhed and pro" claimed in the uſual manner.

1674. 26 Car. II.

Given at our Court at Whitehall this twelfth Day of February, in the twenty ſeventh Year of our Reign.

This Declaration referr'd to an Order in Council made on the third of February, wherein the King upon adviſeing with ſeveral of his Biſhops, agreed upon ſix Orders and Reſolutions then taken for the more effectual Conviction of Popiſh Recuſants and the Suppreſſion of Conventicles; of which the laſt was this. And his Majeſty doth farther Order and Appoint, that effectual Care be taken for the ſuppreſſion of Conventicles: And whereas divers pretend Licences from his Majeſty, and would ſupport themſelves by that pretence, his Majeſty declares, that all his Licences were long ſince recalled; and that no Conventicle hath any Authority, Allowance or Encouragement from his Majeſty. The Nonconformiſts on this occaſion thus partially expreſſed themſelves. " His Majeſty called the " Biſhops up to London to give him Advice what " was to be done for the ſecuring of Religion, &c. " and they after divers Conſultations with the " Miniſters of State, adviſed him to recal his " Licenſes, and put the Laws againſt the Non" conformiſts in execution. And this was done " by a Declaration and Proclamation, declaring " the Licenſes long ſince void, and requiring the " Execution of the Laws againſt Papiſts and " Conventicles. No ſooner was the Proclamati" on publiſh'd, but ſpecial Informers were ſet on " work to promote the Execution. A little be" fore the Licenſes were recalled, Mr. Baxter o" penly declar'd in his Pulpit, that it was not in " oppoſition to the publick Churches that he " kept up a Meeting, but to help the People in " their Neceſſity, who were many more than the " Pariſh Church could hold. Hereupon it was " confidently reported that he was conforming----. " Another Seſſion of Parliament approaching, Bi" ſhop Morley and Biſhop Ward were in appea" rance very ſenſible of the Danger of Popery, " and therefore very forward for Abatements and " taking in the Nonconformiſts, and mov'd it to " many. At length Dr. Tillotſon and Dr. Stilling" fleet deſired a meeting with Dr. Manton, Dr. " Bates, Mr. Pool and Mr. Baxter, in order to " conſider of an Accommodation, and ſaid they " had the Encouragement of ſeveral Lords both " Spiritual and Temporal. Mr. Baxter at firſt " met the two Doctors alone: And they conſi" der'd and canvaſs'd various Draughts; and at " length fix'd on one in which they agreed. " This being communicated to the Nonconfor" miſts was agreeable; but when they commu" nicated it to the Biſhops, there was an end of " the Treaty, a great many things could not be " obtain'd; upon which Dr. Tillotſon wrote Mr. " Baxter word, That as Circumſtances ſtood, ſuch " an Act could not paſs in either Houſe without the " Concurrence of a conſiderable part of the Biſhops, " and his Majeſty's Countenance, which at the preſent " he ſaw little reaſon to expect. The Terms agreed " on were much of the ſame nature with thoſe " abovemention'd, as propoſed to my Lord O" rery, with very little Variation.

Caſe of the Diſſenters as repreſented by themſelves

His Majeſty was graciouſly pleaſed to Tranſlate Dr. Nathaniel Crew Biſhop of Oxford, and Clerk of the Cloſet, to the See of Durham, which had been too long kept vacant, and the Revenues of it had been too ill employ'd: And his Majeſty made choice of the Honourable Dr. Henry Compton, Brother to the Right Honourable the Earl of Northampton

He was Conſecrated on Sunday Dec. 6. in the Chapel of Lambeth, by his Grace the Archbiſhop of Cant. aſſiſted by ſeveral other Biſhops, in the preſence of many of the chiefeſt Nobility, and other Perſons of Quality, who were afterwards entertain'd at a noble Dinner.

1675. urliament eet.

On Tueſday April 13. the two Houſes of Parl. purſuant to his Majeſty's late Prorogation met at Weſtminſter. His Majeſty being come into the Houſe of Lords, and with the uſual Solemnity ſeated in his Throne, and attired in his Royal Robes with the Crown upon his Head, was pleaſed to ſend for the Houſe of Commons up, who accordingly attended his Majeſty at the Bar of the Lords Houſe, his Majeſty made a very gracious Speech to the two Houſes on the Subject of their meeting. And the Lord Keeper having farther moſt eloquently and fully declar'd his Majeſty's Mind on that occaſion, the Commons went back to their Houſe and reſolv'd, that the humble and hearty Thanks of the Houſe ſhould be return'd to his Majeſty for his gracious Promiſes and Aſſurances expreſt in his Speech, &c. The Lords having likewiſe Reſolv'd, that the humble Thanks of their Houſe ſhould be return'd to his Majeſty for his gracious Speech. And this Day accordingly his Majeſty receiv'd the Thanks of the two Houſes, of the Lords by a ſelect Committee of their Houſe; and of the Commons in the Banquetting-Houſe at Whitehall, where they this Afternoon attended his Majeſty in Body.

heir Proceedings.

At the opening of this Seſſion, my Lord Keeper told the Houſes, No influence of the Stars, no Configurations of the Heavens are to be fear'd, ſo long as theſe two Houſes ſtand in good diſpoſition to each other, and both in an happy Conjunction with their Lord and Soveraign, but they ought not Quieta movere, nor res parvas magnis motibus agere. But ſeveral unhappy Occaſions offer'd of Difference, and a general Diſcontent: For firſt an Addreſs was preſented to the King againſt his great Miniſter the Duke of Lauderdale, who is charged to have declar'd his Inclinations to arbitrary Councils to the Terror of his Majeſty's good Subjects; and therefore they deſired his Majeſty would be pleaſed to remove the ſaid Duke from all his Employments, and from his Majeſty's Preſence and Counſels for ever, as a Perſon obnoxious and dangerous to the Government. But the King excuſed it by ſending them notice, that the Words of which the Duke was accuſed in the Addreſs, if ſpoken at all were ſpoken before the laſt Act of general Pardon.

The Houſe of Commons had been thought full-len in their two laſt Seſſions, and had proceeded contrary to the Humour and Deſign of the Court, and therefore to purge them, or refine them, a Bill was brought into the Houſe of Lords intituled, An Act to prevent the Danger that may ariſe from Perſons diſaffected to the Government: Wherein was to be impoſed an Oath or Teſt of Abhorence by all who enjoy'd any Beneficial Offices Eccleſiaſtical, Civil or Military, and by all Privy Counſellors, Juſtices of Peace and Members of Parliament. It was at firſt propoſed to be in the ſame Form with that Oath requir'd from the diſſenting Clergy, by the Oxford five Miles Act. And my Lord Keeper was pleaſed to ſay, That it was a moderate ſecurity to the Church and Crown, which no honeſt Man could refuſe, and whoever did would give great Suſpicion of dangerous and Anti-Monarchical Principles. It was carried on vehemently by the Court Party, and as vehemently oppoſed by the Earl of Shaftsbury, and thoſe Peers who were reputed to be more in the Intereſt of their Country, who look'd upon it as a Project to divide the Proteſtants and to ſtrengthen the Popiſh Party. It was debated in Paragraphs for ſeventeen Days together, and ſhewn by the Country Lords to be in the ſeveral parts of it either vain and ſuperfluous, or inconſiſtent with itſelf, or oppoſite to the preſent Conſtitution of this Kingdom. The Hiſtory of the Diſſenters makes bold to give this Account of it. " When the Parliament met, there was great heat in the Houſe " of Lords, upon the bringing in an Act to impoſe " ſuch an Oath on Lords, Commons and Magiſtrates, as was impoſed by the Oxford Act upon " Miniſters. The Sum of it was, that none " Commiſſion'd by the King, may be by Arms reſiſted, " and that they would never endeavour any alteration " of the Government of Church or State. The great " ſpeakers for it were the Lord Treaſurer and the " Lord Keeper, with Biſhop Morley and Biſhop " Ward. The great ſpeakers againſt it were the " Earl of Shaftsbury, the Lord Hollis, the Lord " Hallifax, the Duke of Buckingham and the Earl " of Salisbury: who jointly with the Marquis of " Winchester, and the Earls of Briſtol, Barkſhire " and Alesbury enter'd their Proteſtations againſt " it. They pleaded that this Oath would be de-" ſtructive to the Privileges of their Houſe, which " was to Vote freely, and not to be pre-oblig'd by " an Oath to the Prelates. After a great many " Debates, tho' the Teſt was carried by a Ma-" jority, yet it was ſo alter'd as made it incapa-" ble of ſerving the Purpoſes of thoſe who at firſt " were moſt zealous for it; it was not to their " Guſt, for they reduc'd it to theſe Words of a " Declaration and an Oath.

1675. 27 Car. II.

Diſſenters account of it.

A Bill for a Teſt of Abhorence.

I A. B. do declare, that it is not lawful on any pretence whatſoever, to take Arms againſt the King, and I do abhor the Traiterous Poſition of taking Arms, by his Authority againſt his Perſon, or againſt thoſe that are Commiſſioned by him according to Law, in time of Rebellion and War, in acting in purſuance of ſuch Commiſſion. I A. B. do ſwear that I will not endeavour an Alteration of the Proteſtant Religion now eſtabliſhed by Law in the Church of England, nor will I endeavour any alteration in the Government of this Kingdom in Church or State, as it is by Law eſtabliſh'd.

And when it paſt, the Lords got in this Proviſo, That it ſhould be no hindrance to their free Speaking and Voting in the Parliament.

Another occaſion of Difference between the two Houſes.

It ſeems probable that theſe Debates would have proceeded to greater Heats and Animoſities, if they had not been interrupted by another Difference ariſing between the two Houſes, in a caſe of Judicature and Privileges, occaſion'd by Dr. Sherley's bringing an Appeal in the Houſe of Lords, from a Decree in Chancery, againſt Sir John Fagg a Member of the Houſe of Commons, the Diſpute was carried to ſuch a height that Serjeant Pemberton, Serjeant Peck, Sir John Churchill and Mr. Porter being concern'd as Council in this Cauſe were taken up in Weſtminſter-Hall by the Speaker's Warrant, and committed to the Tower for Breach of Privilege. The Managements in this Affair growing ſtill more vehement, his Majeſty ſeem'd to be glad of this occaſion for Proroguing the Parliament; and therefore on Wedneſday June 9. his Majeſty came to the Houſe of Lords, and being attir'd in his Royal Robes with the Crown upon his Head, and ſeated in his Throne attended with the uſual Solemnity, was pleaſed to ſend for the Houſe of Commons up, who accordingly attended his Majeſty at the Bar of the Lords Houſe, his Majeſty was pleaſed to paſs ſeveral private Bills, and to make a moſt gracious Speech to the two Houſes on the Subject of their Prorogation; which done, the Lord Keeper by his Majeſty's Command Prorogued the Parliament till October 13. next.

Parliament Prorogued.

1675. 27 Car. II.

In the Interval of this Receſs, the Debates of the Abhorring Oath were made publick; which ſo offended the Court, that an Order was given for the burning of them. And the King ſeem'd to be much diſpleas'd at thoſe who were called the Country-Party, becauſe their Judgment and Intention was, to bring his Majeſty into a nearer Alliance with the States of Holland, and into an open War with France: Upon which his Majeſty is ſaid to have told Sir William Temple (newly commanded out of Holland) That ſome warm Leaders in both Houſes had a mind to engage him in a War againſt France; which they ſhould not do, becauſe he was ſure they would make uſe of it to the ruin of his Miniſters.

The King averſe to a War with France.

On October 13. the two Houſes of Parliament met again: His Majeſty being come into the H. of Lords, was pleaſed to ſend for the Houſe of Commons, and to make this gracious Speech to the two Houſes on the Subject of their Meeting.

My Lords and Gentlemen,

K.'s Speech.

I Meet you now with a more than uſual Concern for the Event of this Seſſion; and I know " it is but what may reaſonably be expected from " that Care I owe to the Preſervation of the Government. The Cauſes of the laſt Prorogation, as I for my part do not deſire to remember, ſo I hope no Man elſe will, unleſs it be to learn from thence, how to avoid the like Occaſions for the future. And I pray conſider " how fatal the Conſequences may be, and how " little Benefit is like to redound to the People " by it. However, if any thing of that kind " ſhall ariſe, I deſire you would defer thoſe Debates till you have brought ſuch publick Bills " to Perfection as may conduce to the Good and " Safety of the Kingdom: And particularly, I " recommend to you, whatever may tend to the " Security of the Proteſtant Religion, as it is " now eſtabliſhed in the Church of England.

" I muſt likewiſe deſire your Aſſiſtance in " ſome Supplies, as well to take off the Anticipations which are upon my Revenue, as for the " building of Ships: and tho' the War has been " the great Cauſe of theſe Anticipations, yet I " find, by a late Account I have taken of my Expences, that I have not been altogether ſo good " an Husband as I might have been, and as I reſolve to be for the future; altho' at the ſame " time I have had the Satisfaction to find, that " I have been far from ſuch an Extravagancy in " my own Expence, as ſome would have the " World believe. I am not ignorant that there " are many who would prevent the Kindneſs of " my Parliament to me at this time; but I as " well know, that your Affections have never " failed me: and you may remember, it is now " above three Years ſince I have asked you any " thing for my own Uſe. The reſt I refer to my " Lord Keeper.

Then the Lord Keeper made a Speech; which, for the Importance of it, deſerves to be here given at large.

My Lords, and you the Knights, Citizens, and Burgeſſes of the Houſe of Commons,

Lord Keeper's Speech.

" THE Cauſes of this preſent Aſſembly, and " the Reaſons which have mov'd his Ma" jeſty to command your Attendance upon him " at this time, are of the higheſt Importance. " The King reſolves to enter into Terms of ſtrict" eſt Correſpondence and Endearment with his " Parliament; to take your Counſel in his moſt " weighty Affairs; to impart all his Cares to " you; to acquaint you with all his Wants and " Neceſſities; to offer you all that can yet be " wanting to make you enjoy your ſelves; to " eſtabliſh a right Underſtanding between him" ſelf and his three Eſtates, and between the E" ſtates themſelves; to redreſs all your juſt Com" plaints, and to put all his Subjects at eaſe as " far as in him lies, and can conſiſt with the " Honour and the Safety of the Government.

1675. 27 Car. II.

" And having made all theſe Advances towards " you, he doubts not but you will behave your" ſelves like thoſe that deſerve to be called the " King's Friends, and that you will put him at " Eaſe too.

" There is no Cauſe why any Fears of Religion or Liberty ſhould divert you.

" For, his Majeſty hath ſo often recommended " to you the Conſiderations of Religion, ſo very " often deſir'd you to aſſiſt him in his Care and " Protection of it, that the Defender of the Faith " is become the Advocate for it too, and hath " left all thoſe without Excuſe who ſtill remain " under any kind of Doubts or Fears.

" Again, the Care of your Civil Rights and " Liberties hath been ſo much his Majeſty's, that " the more you reflect upon theſe Concerns, the " more you will find your ſelves obliged to ac" knowledge his Majeſty's Tenderneſs of you " and Indulgence to you.

" Search your own Annals, the Annals of thoſe " Times you account moſt happy, you will ſcarce " find one Year without an Example of ſome" thing more ſevere, and more extraordinary than " a whole Reign hath yet produced.

" Peruſe the Hiſtories of Foreign Nations, and " you ſhall find, Statues and Altars too have " been erected to the Memories of thoſe Princes " whoſe beſt Virtues never arriv'd to half that " Moderation which we live to ſee and to en" joy.

" No King did ever meet a Parliament with " juſter Cauſe of Confidence in their Affections.

" And therefore his Majeſty will not ſuffer " himſelf to doubt, but relies firmly upon it, that " you will never forſake him when he is under " any kind of Difficulties. He doth aſſure him" ſelf that you will now think fit to provide for " his Honour and your own Safety, by helping " him to pay ſome part of his Debts, and to " make his Navy as great and as conſiderable as " it ought to be.

" For, the Greatneſs of a King is the Greatneſs " and the Safety of his People. The Springs and " Rivers which pay Tribute to the Ocean, do not " leſſen but preſerve themſelves by that Contri" bution.

" It is impoſſible that thoſe Affections which " Piety and Allegiance firſt planted, which Per" ſecution could not abate, which the gracious " Influences of his Majeſty's happy Government " have hitherto encreaſed, ſhould now appear to " wither and decay.

" But then the beſt Indication of the Heart is " the Hand. And becauſe it is of infinite mo" ment to the King's Affairs that there ſhould be " a chearful Concurrence to his Supply; there" fore let Hand and Heart both join together in " the Oblation, for that will make it a Sacrifice " well-pleaſing indeed.

My Lords and Gentlemen,

" The Happineſs of this preſent Age, and the " Fate and Fortune of the next too, is very much " in your Hands at this time: All that you would " deſire to Settle and Improve, All that you " would wiſh to Secure and Tranſmit to your " Poſterities, may now be accompliſhed.

" Would

1675. 27 Car. II.

" Would you raiſe the due Eſtimation and Reverence of the Church of England to its juſt Height? Would you provide for the Safety and Eſtabliſhment of it?

" Do there want any Laws to ſecure the Peace and Quiet of the State?

" Would you at once enrich and adorn this Kingdom, by providing for the Extent and Improvement of Trade, by introducing new and uſeful Manufactures, and by encouraging thoſe we have already?

" Would you prevent all Frauds and Perjuries, all Delays and Abuſes in the Adminiſtration of Juſtice?

" Would you preſerve a famous City from being depopulated by the Suburbs? Would you reſtrain the Exceſs of thoſe new Buildings which begin to ſwarm with Inhabitants unknown?

" All your Petitions of this kind will be grateful to the King, and you may with eaſe effect all this and much more which your great Wiſdoms will ſuggeſt to you. A little Time will ſerve many excellent Laws, and to give you the Honour of being the Repairers of all our Breaches, ſo as that Time be wholly employ'd upon the Publick, and not taken up by ſuch Conſiderations as are leſs meritorious.

" If therefore there be any without doors that labour to diſunite your Counſels, or to render them ineffectual; if they can hope that the Occaſions for this may ariſe from ſome Differences within yourſelves, or hope by thoſe Differences to diſguiſe their own Diſaffections to your good Proceedings: 'Tis in your Power to defeat thoſe Hopes, to pull off this Diſguiſe, and to ſecure a happy Concluſion of this Meeting, by ſtudying to preſerve a good Correſpondence, and by a careful avoiding of all ſuch Queſtions as are apt to engender Strife.

" And if ever there were a time, when the Gravity and the Counſel, the Wiſdom and the good Temper of a Parliament were neceſſary to ſupport that Government which only can ſupport theſe Aſſemblies; certainly this is the Hour.

You ſee with what Zeal the King hath recommended to you a good Agreement between yourſelves, and that he doth it with all the Care and Compaſſion, all the Earneſtneſs and Importunity, fit for ſo great a Prince to expreſs, who would be very ſorry that any ſuch Misfortune as your Diſagreement ſhould either deprive him of your Advice and Aſſiſtance, or his People of thoſe good Laws which he is ready to grant you.

" There is no other way our Enemies can think of, by which 'tis poſſible for this Seſſions to miſcarry; for Fears and Jealouſies cannot enter here, Calumnies and Slanders will find no place amongſt wiſe and good Men.

" They that uſe theſe Arts abroad will quickly be diſcredited, when the World ſhall ſee the generous Effects of your Confidence. Men will deſpair of attempting any Diſturbance in the State, when they ſee every Step that tends that way ſerves only to give you freſh Occaſions to teſtifie your Loyalty and your Zeal.

" You have all the Reaſon in the World to make Men ſee this; for you have the ſame Monarchy to aſſert, the ſame Church to defend, the ſame Intereſts of Nobility and Gentry to maintain, the ſame excellent King to contend for, and the ſame Enemies to contend againſt.

And now, my Lords and Gentlemen,

" Since the whole Seſſion of Parliament is, in the Judgment and Conſtruction of our Law, but as one Day; Let us all endeavour that the Morning of it, the firſt Entrance upon it, may be with ſuch fair and ſuch auſpicious Circumſtances, as may give the whole Kingdom an Aſſurance of a bright and chearful Day.

" Let no ill Humours gather into Clouds to darken or obſcure it; for this Day is a critical Day, and more depends upon that Judgment of our Affairs which will be made by it, than can eaſily be imagin'd.

" It imports us therefore to take care, that no part of this Time be loſt. Let every precious Minute of this Day be ſpent in receiving ſuch Acts of Grace and Goodneſs as are ready to flow from the King, and in making ſuch Retributions for them as may become the grateful Hearts of the beſt of Subjects to the beſt of Kings.

" So ſhall this Day become a Day of Diſappointment and Diſcomfort to our Enemies; but to us and all good Men a glorious Day, a Day of Triumph and Deliverance; a memorable and a joyful Day to this preſent and to all future Generations.

Proceedings of the Commons.

The Commons, in this Seſſion, had many good Bills before them for the Security of Property and of Religion; viz. The Habeas Corpus Bill. A Bill againſt ſending Men Priſoners beyond Sea. Againſt raiſing Money without Conſent in Parliament. Againſt Papiſts ſitting in either Houſe. For more ſpeedy Convicting of Papiſts. And for Recalling his Majeſty's Subjects out of the French Service. But before they could come to any Reſolutions, the late Controverſie was reaſſumed concerning the Lords Juriſdiction in Appeals from Chancery: On which occaſion the Commons voted, that whoſoever ſhall Sollicit or Proſecute any Appeal againſt any Commoner of England from any Court of Equity before the Houſe of Lords, ſhall be deemed and taken a Betrayer of the Rights and Liberties of the Commons of England, and ſhall be proceeded againſt accordingly. And in their other Debates, the Majority ſeem'd to be much diſpoſed to a War with France, and a nearer Union with Spain and Holland: Upon which the King took this Occaſion to Prorogue them to another time. And therefore on Monday Nov. 22. his Majeſty came to the Houſe of Lords; and being with the uſual Solemnity ſeated on his Throne, he was pleaſed to ſend for the Houſe of Commons, who attending at the Bar, his Majeſty was graciouſly pleaſed to give his Royal Aſſent to three Acts: viz. 1. An Act for the better and more eaſie Rebuilding the Town of Northampton. 2. An Act for the better enabling Mary Counteſs Dowager of Warwick to perform the laſt Will and Teſtament of her deceaſed Husband Charles late Earl of Warwick. 3. An Act for veſting Lands of Alexander Davies Gent. deceaſed in Truſtees for the Payment of his Debts.

Bills paſs'd and Parliam. Prorogu'd.

It muſt be obſerved, That tho' his Majeſty was not willing to engage in a War with France, yet he thought it juſt and honourable to ſatisfie the Dutch, that he would be at leaſt a Neuter, and not aſſiſt the French King againſt them. And therefore he did by Proclamation, dated May 19. ſtrictly command the immediate Return of all his Majeſty's Subjects who had gone into the Service of the French King as Soldiers ſince the late Treaty of Peace with the States General of the United Provinces, and prohibiting all other his Subjects whatſoever, for the time to come, from going beyond the Seas to ſerve as Soldiers under the ſaid French King, or in his Wars.

The King willing to be Neuter.

At the beginning of this Year his Highneſs the Prince of Newburgh was pleaſed to pay a Viſit to England; and coming over in one of his Majeſty's Yachts, appointed to Tranſport him from Calais, he arriv'd at Greenwich on Thurſday May 13. and immediately came to Town incognito, with a Train of about fifty Perſons, among which were ſeveral Perſons of Quality, on the 15th he was introduced at Court to ſalute their Magiſtrates, and afterward their Royal Highneſſes, by whom he was received with very particular Demonſtrations of Kindneſs and Eſteem, for the ſake of the Duke his Father. On Tueſday June 1. his Highneſs came to Oxford, and being there received in a very reſpectful manner was created Doctor of Laws, and was very much pleaſed with the Civilities and the Curioſities of that Place.

Honours and Preferments.

The Collation of Offices and Honours in this Year was not very conſiderable. On March 31. his Majeſty was graciouſly pleaſed in conſideration of the good and faithful Services of Thomas Povey Eſq; to cauſe him to be ſworn one of the Maſters of Requeſts, in the room of Sir Thomas Beverley deceaſed. On June 23. his Majeſty was pleaſed in conſideration of the eminent Loyalty and Sufferings of Giles Strangwayes, Eſq; to cauſe him to be ſworn of his moſt Honourable Privy Council, and accordingly he took his Place at the Board. On October 15. his Grace the Duke of Albemarle was ſworn of his Majeſt's moſt Honourable Privy Council. On December 19. his Majeſty as a particular Mark of his Grace and Favour to the Right Honourable Heneage Lord Finch, Baron of Daventry, was pleaſed to change his Title of Lord Keeper of the Great Seal of England, into that of Lord High Chancellour of England. On Jan. 19. his Majeſty conſidering the very good Services of Richard Bulſtrode, Eſq; as his Agent with the Governour of the Spaniſh Netherlands, has been pleaſed to appoint him his Reſident in that Court; and as a farther Mark of his Favour, this Day to confer the Honour of Knighthood upon him. On January 22. his Majeſty was pleaſed to cauſe the Right Reverend Father in God Henry Lord Biſhop of London, to be ſworn one of the Lords of his Privy Council, and accordingly his Lordſhip took his Place at the Board.

Actions at Sea.

There was a good Action perform'd this Winter by Sir John Narborough Admiral of his Majeſty's Fleet in the Mediterranean, who being ſent chiefly to ſcour thoſe Seas from publick Pirates, burnt in the Port of Tripoly four Men of War belonging to the Corſairs, as he himſelf gave this Account in a Letter dated Jan. 20. near Maltha, and is as follows. "Theſe are to let you know, "that on the fourteenth inſtant in the Night I "burnt four of the Tripoline Ships of War of conſiderable Force, viz. The white crown'd Eagle with "50 Guns, the Looking-Glaſs with 36, the Sancta "Claria with 24, and the French Petach with 20. "as they lay under the Caſtle and Walls of Tri"poly, being all that were in Port. It was done "by a Surprize by our Boats, commanded in "chief by my Lieutenant Cloudſley Shovel; he took "the Enemies Guard Boat, and in it one Turk "and one Moor, the reſt having been kill'd. I "bleſs God I did not loſe one Man in the Action; "I am now off of Maltha, and am ſtanding over "again for Tripoly, and doubt not, but by the "help of God to deſtroy more of thoſe Corſairs. "I have with me the Henrietta, Portſmouth and "two Fireſhips, which I met with here. This I "I write in haſte, but by the next will give "you an Account at large. The Succeſs of this Action was, that on the 5th of March following Sir John Narborough concluded a Peace with the Government of Tripoly, in 23 Articles, much to the Honour of his Majeſty, and to the Advantage of our Kingdom in Trade and Navigation.

Prince of Orange not eaſily brought into a general Peace.

The Prince of Orange was made ſenſible that the great Deſign of my Lord Arlington's Negotiation with him was firſt to draw him into ſuch meaſures of Peace as France then ſo much deſir'd, and ſecondly into the diſcovery of Perſons in England, who had made Advances to the Prince or States of raiſing Commotions there during the War. Thirdly, into ſecret Meaſures with King Charles of aſſiſting him againſt any Rebels at home or Enemies abroad. And laſtly, into the Hopes or Deſigns of a Match with the Duke of York's eldeſt Daughter. But it is ſaid the Prince would not at all enter upon the firſt, was obſtinate in the ſecond, and treated the third Point with a wonder of thinking, That the King of England could be ſo ill belov'd, or ſo imprudent as to need ſuch Aſſiſtance. And upon mention made of the laſt by the Earl of Oſſory, he took no farther hold of it than by ſaying, his Fortunes were not in a Condition for him to think of a Wife.

1675. 27 Car. I

However, by the Advice of the Penſionary and Count Waldeck, he drew up this Scheme of a general Peace, That a Match ſhould be made between the King of Spain and the Duke of Orleans's eldeſt Daughter; that France ſhould give her in Dowry the late conquer'd places in Flanders. That King Charles the ſecond ſhould make this Match, and upon theſe Terms. That he ſhould have 200000 l. for his good Offices in it. By this means a Peace would be made with ſafety to Spain and Holland, by ſecuring again the Frontiers of Flanders with Honour to France, who parted with the Conquer'd Towns only as a Dowry to a Daughter of France, without any blemiſh to the Prince's Honour, Faith to his Alliances, and with Honour and Profit to the King of England.

Conference between the Prince and Engliſh Miniſters.

The Engliſh Ambaſſadour wrote two Letters to the King upon this Subject, but had no hopes given him that a Peace could be effected on ſuch Terms; but a little before the meeting of the Parliament in April the King in a Letter to Sir William Temple at the Hague took notice of ſome Advices given him, that the Prince intended to go over for England againſt the approaching Seſſions, and commanded him to hinder it, as if the King believ'd that the Prince had form'd a Popular Deſign by ſuch a journey. The Ambaſſadour inform'd the Prince of it, yet pretended not to have had it from his Majeſty, but only that ſuch a thing had been whiſper'd to him. The Prince anſwer'd, The Lord Arlington had indeed talk'd of a Journey after the Peace ſhould be concluded, in the mean time he hop'd the King would not ſuſpect him Guilty of any diſreſpectful Thought; he was his Majeſty's Servant, and if he could do him no Service he would at leaſt do him no Hurt: But if the King would be otherwiſe poſſeſs'd he could not help it, he had deſired the Ambaſſadour to aſſure him there had been no ground for ſuch a Report. And yet about the ſame time the Prince receiv'd a Letter from my Lord Arlington, of which his Highneſs complain'd in a great Heat to Sir William Temple, and ſaid, It was impertinent, and that he therein mention'd the foreſaid imaginary Reſolution of his going over for England as a thing certain, and intended by him for raiſing Heats in the Parliament and Commotions in the Kingdom, and added it was like to prove but ill Friendſhip between him and the King, if it was to be made with blows. And the Earl putting him in mind, that there were ſome old Wounds among them that would ſtill bleed if there were not care taken of them. The Prince ſaid, he knew well enough what was meant by that Expreſſion, for Arlington had told Monſieur Read in England, when he went over upon the firſt Motions of the laſt Peace, that the King could make the Prince to be ſerved in the ſame manner as De Wit was, if he would ſet himſelf about it: Hereupon he fell into great Rage againſt Arlington, calling this proceeding Malicious and Inſolent, and ſaid, he would write to him what he deſerved, but never have any thing more to do with any of the King's Miniſters, he would write to the King himſelf, and deſired the Ambaſ-

Ambaſſadour to convey his Letters ſo that they might come to no other Hand.

Campaign abroad.

The French this Summer began their Campaign with the Siege of Limburgh, with one part of their Army, while the French King with the reſt lay incamped in a Poſt moſt convenient to oppoſe any Attempt of relieving it. The Prince of Orange was upon his March for that purpoſe; but the place after a ſhort and weak Reſiſtance was taken before he could approach it. After this Surrendry of Limburgh the French King encamp'd near Tillemont, and ravag'd all the Country near Louvain, Bruſſels and Malines, and he had a mighty deſire to make himſelf Maſter of the firſt of theſe Places; but the Prince and the Duke of Villa-Hermoſa watch'd him all along ſo narrowly that he durſt not undertake it, ſo that about the end of July growing weary of a dull Campaign, the King left the Command of the Army to the Prince of Conde and return'd to Verſailles. The French having now received a ſevere Blow by the Death of the great Mareſchal Turenne upon the Rhine, the Prince of Conde was ſent thither to Command the Army, and the Duke of Luxemburg took his Poſt in Flanders, but with Orders not to hazard a Battel, but only to obſerve the Prince of Orange's Motions, and to cover any Town that was like to be endanger'd, which he performed ſo well, that no farther Action paſſed this Summer beſides the Prince's taking and raiſing of Binch, and that his Highneſs had this farther Advantage of the Duke, that he hinder'd him from ravaging the Territories of Treves, and diſturbing the Confederates in the Siege of that place, which was at laſt ſurrender'd to them. The Prince at this time being put in mind of the Apprehenſions the King and States might have of the Greatneſs of the Houſe of Auſtria, if their Succeſs continued, he ſaid, There was no need of that till they ſhould go beyond the Peace of the Pyrenees, when ever that ſhould happen, he ſhould be as much a French-Man as he was now a Spaniard, but not before. Then he cloſed the Diſcourſe in deſiring, that whatever Plan his Majeſty thought fit to propoſe for a Peace, he would do it at the Congreſs at Nimeguen, the place appointed for the Treaty, for the Number and Variety of Pretenſions and Intereſts were grown ſo great, by all the Parties then engaged in the War, that it could not be in any other place; that he believed they would be reaſonable, and in caſe France would be ſo too the Peace might be made; if not, perhaps another Campaign might bring them to Reaſon. Upon this juncture his Majeſty ſent over the Lord John Berkley his Ambaſſadour extraordinary to Paris, who arriving there December 6. after an Audience of the French King, was to begin his Journey for Nimeguen, the place appointed for the general Treaty, whither Sir William Temple Ambaſſadour at the Hague was to repair, together with Sir Leoline Jenkins Judge of his Majeſty's High Court of Admiralty, who took leave of his Majeſty in order to his departure December 13.

Treaty at Nimeguen.

Popular Diſcontents.

The People of England were ſo impatient for a Peace, and ſo jealous of the Growth of Popery and the French Power, that they took the Liberty of reflecting on the King and his Miniſtry to ſuch a high Degree, that it was thought fit to put down all Coffee-Houſes by Proclamation, order'd in Council December 29. "Becauſe in ſuch Houſes "and by occaſion of the meeting of diſaffected "Perſons in them, divers falſe, malicious and "ſcandalous Reports were deviſed and ſpread a-"broad, to the Defamation of his Majeſty's Go-"vernment, and to the diſturbance of the Quiet "and Peace of the Realm. And on Jan. 7. another Proclamation was publiſh'd for diſcovering and puniſhing "Malicious and Diſaffected Per-"ſons who did daily deviſe and publiſh as well "by writing as printing ſundry falſe, infamous "and ſcandalous Libels, endeavouring thereby "not only to Traduce and Reproach the Eccle-"ſiaſtical and Temporal Government of this "Kingdom, and the publick Miniſters of the "ſame, but alſo to ſtir up and diſpoſe the Minds "of his Majeſty's Subjects to Sedition and Re-"bellion. But upon Petition of the Merchants and Retailers of Coffee and Tea, a permiſſion was granted to keep open their Coffee-Houſes to June 24. next, provided that every Keeper of ſuch Houſe ſhould uſe his utmoſt Endeavour to prevent and hinder all ſcandalous Papers, Books or Libels, concerning the Government or the publick Miniſters thereof, from being brought into his Houſe, or to be there read, peruſed or divulged; and to prevent and hinder all and every Perſon or Perſons from declaring, uttering and divulging in his ſaid Houſe all manner of falſe or ſcandalous Reports of the Government, or any the Miniſters thereof.

State of Religion.

As to Religion it is very manifeſt, that the Papiſts had a mighty Influence on publick Affairs, and were afraid of nothing but an Engliſh Parliament, and flatter'd themſelves that they had gained over Members enough to carry on the Intereſt and Deſigns of the Duke of York and that Party. Mr. Coleman in a Letter to the Internuncio dated at Windſor Aug. 30. 1675. does applaud the Coleman's Letter. "Clear and evident Mark of the Pope's affection "towards the Catholicks of England, and then ſay, "That the Duke hath almoſt ſurmounted "all the Difficulties which have oppoſed his E-"ſtabliſhment. The Face of his Affairs are well "changed, for we now paſſionately wiſh to ſee "the coming on of the Parliament which we ſo "much feared before: And while it was held "doubtful whether it ought to meet or no, we "imploy'd all our Power to bring it on; which "point we have gained but within theſe few "Days. And for my part, I no ways doubt but "that we ſhall receive as much good by it as we "apprehended ill, provided that the Duke fail not "in the Execution of the good Reſolutions which "he hath taken. And by many other Papers and Letters dated this Year, it does abundantly appear that a vigorous Deſign was carried on to extirpate the Northern Hereſie. And even during the ſecond Seſſion of Parliament, the Papiſts in London were ſo inſolent that they ſet upon Monſieur Luzancy a late Convert from Popery, and offer'd extream Indignity and Violence to him, with ſo great Scandal that on Nov. 10. his Majeſty in Council order'd a Proclamation to be publiſhed, for the Diſcovery and Apprehenſion of a French Jeſuit, ſtiling himſelf Monſieur St. Germain, and his Accomplices, in the late Violence offer'd to Monſieur Luzancy alias Chaſtelet, declaring, "That whereas it had appeared to his "Majeſty upon Oath, that the ſaid Monſieur "Luzancy being lately converted from the Ro-"miſh to the Proteſtant Religion eſtabliſh'd in "the Church of England; and having in a late "Sermon by him preach'd and publiſh'd expreſſed "the Cauſes and Reaſons of his Converſion, the "ſaid Monſieur St. Germain, with other Perſons "unknown, did in a moſt preſumptuous and in-"ſolent manner repair to the Lodging of the "ſaid Monſieur Luzancy, and did there by "Threats and Terrors of Aſſaſſinating the ſaid "Monſieur Luzancy, or of carrying him away by "Force into parts beyond the Seas, induce and "compel the ſaid Monſieur Luzancy to tranſcribe "and ſign a pretended Retraction of what he "had ſo preached and publiſhed; his Majeſty "being highly ſenſible of this tranſcendent bold-"neſs, and to prevent the like inſolent Attempts, "and all other Violencies that may be offer'd

" to the ſaid Monſieur Luzancy, upon account of " his Converſion to the Proteſtant Religion, and " to encourage him to perſevere in the ſame, hath " taken him in a more eſpecial manner into his " Royal Protection, &c. But the Author of this " Inſolence, Father St. Germain eſcap'd, and took " a proper Refuge in France, where he wrote a " Letter from Paris, dated December 11. 1675. " to Mr. Coleman, and tells him a Friend had gi- " ven the King's Confeſſor to underſtand, that the " King of France ought not to do any thing with the " King of England but by the Duke of York, and " he had promiſed and engaged upon his Life to the " King's Confeſſor to make all ſucceed in caſe that " way be made uſe of. And in another Letter directed to Coleman in January, it is ſaid, " Mon- " ſieur St. Germain has obſerv'd to the Confeſſor " of the King of France, how great the Power of " the Duke of York is, by the diſgrace of the two " Perſons concerning which Mr. Coleman had writ " to Monſieur St. Germain, and that the vigorous " Counſels which were all abſolutely neceſſary, " whereby to ſucceed in the Traffick of the Ca- " tholicks, came from the Duke of York, by the " inſpiration of Mr. Coleman, who alſo alone was " the moſt truly link'd to the Welfare of the " Commerce of the King of England, the Duke of " York and the Catholicks.

Under theſe juſt Apprehenſions of Popery, raiſed by the Countenance and Protection of the Duke of York, it was the greater Comfort and Joy to obſerve that his Royal Highneſs could have no Influence upon the young Princeſſes his Daughters. The Lady Mary and the Lady Anne were ſtrictly bred up in the Principles of the Church of England, and were on Jan. 23. ſolemnly confirmed in his Majeſty's Chapel at Whitehall by the Biſhop, who was Dean of the ſaid Chapel.

Eccleſiaſtical Preferments.

The Biſhoprick of Worceſter being void by the Death of the late Reverend Father in God Dr. Blandford, and his Majeſty having been pleaſed to confer the ſame on the Reverend Dr. James Fleetwood Provoſt of King's College in Cambridge, on Sunday the 29th of Auguſt his Lordſhip Elect was conſecrated in St. Peter's Church in Broad-Street London, by the Right Reverend Father in God John Lord Biſhop of Rocheſter, his Grace of Canterbury's Commiſſioner for that purpoſe, being aſſiſted by the Biſhops of Ely, Chicheſter and Lincoln. And after the performance of the Solemnity, their Lordſhips, with many of the Nobility, and other Perſons of Quality, were entertain'd at a very noble Dinner at Draper's-Hall. His Majeſty was pleaſed upon the Death of Dr. Henchman to tranſlate the Right Reverend Father in God Dr. Compton late Biſhop of Oxford, and Dean of his Majeſty's Chapel to the See of London, and to promote the Reverend Dr. Fell Dean of Chriſt-Church to the Biſhoprick of Oxon; who having been accordingly elected Biſhop of that See, was on Feb. 6. Conſecrated by the Right Reverend Father in God the Biſhop of Winchester, his Grace of Canterbury's Commiſſioner for that purpoſe, in his Lordſhip's Chapel at Chelſey, being aſſiſted by the Biſhops of London, Rocheſter, Ely, Chicheſter and Worceſter; and after the performance of the Solemnity, their Lordſhips, with many of the Nobility and other Perſons of Quality, were entertained at a noble Dinner.

Caſe of the Diſſenters.

The Diſſenters had now ſome Advantage of improving in popular Reputation, by being generally averſe to the Meaſures conducing to Popery and the Grandeur of France, and by falling in with thoſe Patriots in both Houſes who ſeem'd moſt zealous in the Love and Service of their Country. And yet their own Hiſtory has little to boaſt of but the Proſecution of ſome of their Teachers, and a Story of Judgments upon ſome of the Informers: To which they add, that about this time (meaning Summer 1675.) twelve or thirteen of the Biſhops dining with that eminent Citizen Sir Nathaniel Hern, then Sheriff of London, and diſcourſing with him about putting the Laws againſt the Diſſenters in Execution; he told them, that they could not Trade with their Neighbours one Day, and ſend them to Goal the next. In the next Seſſion of Parliament the Duke of Buckingham made a Notable Speech againſt Perſecution, and deſir'd the Conſent of the Lords that he might bring in a Bill for the Eaſe of his Majeſty's Proteſtant Subjects, in matters of Religion; but while he was Preparing it, the Parliament was Prorogu'd. 1675. 28 Car. 1676.

The King labours to be Neuter between France and Holland.

The King having unwillingly made a Peace with Holland, and being in a Neutrality with other Princes, had nothing to do but to keep the Peace at home, and to ſecure a free Trade Abroad. But the Dutch ſuſpected, that he ſecretly gave aſſiſtance to the French; and the French Court pretended that ſome Engliſh Ships were retained in the Service of Holland. Hence upon Complaints made to His Majeſty by the Miniſters of ſeveral Princes now in Amity with his Majeſty, that divers of his Subjects had lately taken Commiſſions from ſome Princes and States now in Amity with his Majeſty to ſerve at Sea againſt others, who are likewiſe His Majeſties Allies; His Majeſty for the Preſervation and Continuance of Friendſhip and Amity between him and his Reſpective Allies, did by Royal Proclamation given at Whitehall 17 May, Strictly Prohibit and Forbid all his Subjects whatſoever to take any Commiſſion at Sea from any Foreign Prince or State, againſt any other Foreign Prince or State now in Amity with his Majeſty, or to ſerve as Mariners or Seamen in any Ship or Veſſel which ſhall be employed againſt any Prince or State now in Amity with His Majeſty during the War. And upon farther Complaints from Abroad, that Acts of Hoſtility at Sea were ſuffered to be Committed under the Protection of Engliſh Coaſts and Ports; his Majeſty was pleaſed to cauſe another Royal Proclamation to be publiſhed June 2. by which his Majeſty declared, That finding the Security of Navigation and Commerce to and from his Majeſty's Ports (in this time of War) hath been very much diſturbed, and that even the Reverence due to his Ports hath been violated, his Will and Pleaſure is, that theſe following Rules and Ordinances be obſerved.

I. That within his Majeſty's Ports, Havens and Crooks, and the Precincts thereof, no Hoſtilities ſhall be committed by any of the Parties whatſoever, but that all Ships during their being in the ſaid Ports, &c. ſhall be under his Majeſty's ſpecial Protection; that the Ships and Goods of all Aggreſſors or Offenders herein ſhall be ipſo facto Confiſcate, notwithſtanding any Commiſſion of War they may have.

II. That all his Majeſty's Officers and Subjects do as far as in them lies, prohibit the roving of Men of War ſo near his Majeſty's Ports or Coaſts, as may give apprehenſion to the Merchant-Men that their Paſſage is unſafe, or may hinder the Commerce of his Subjects. That all his Majeſty's Officers do ſuccour and reſcue all Merchant-Men and others, as ſhall be attack'd upon his Majeſty's Coaſts, and to apprehend and ſeize the Offenders, in order to bring them to condign Puniſhment. —— With five other Rules and Orders to inforce the like general Intention of Neutrality and equal Protection.

Inſolence of the French Privateers.

In the mean time, while his Majeſty did ſo generouſly protect the French Shipping, our own Veſſels could not be protected from the Injuſtice and Inſolence of the French Priviteers, who ſwarmed in the Chanel, and pick'd up many of our Merchantmen, and (as if in open War) made Prizes of them. And upon Complaint of this Grievance in the French Court, the Method of Redreſs was a greater Oppreſſion only: For Sir Ellis Leighton Secretary to the Lord Berkley, Ambaſſadour baſſadour in the Court of France, being appointed to ſollicit in that Court the Reſtitution of Engliſh Ships, and their Ladings, taken by French Privateers, did behave himſelf corruptly in that Negotiation, by bare-faced contracting for, and receiving Bribes in the Proſecution of the Merchants Affairs, and ſometimes making corrupt Agreements with the French Privateers to deſiſt from and relinquiſh all farther Sollicitation of the Intereſts of his Majeſty's Subjects, and to the great Detriment and Loſs of the Merchants concerned; as was made appear to his Majeſty in Council: for which Offence he was committed to the Cuſtody of one of the Meſſengers of his Majeſty's Chamber, in order to be carried Priſoner to the Tower of London, that he might be proſecuted and brought to condign Puniſhment: but being conſcious of his own Guilt, he made his Eſcape from the Meſſenger, and fled from Juſtice.

ition of Commit- for Trade.

Under theſe Indignities and Loſſes, the Lords of the Committee of Trade, by repeated Petitions from the Merchants and Sea-men, found themſelves obliged to preſent unto his Majeſty in Council at Whitehall, Aug. 4. a Report touching the Injuries which his Subjects did ſuſtain by the French Capers; with a Liſt of ſuch Engliſh Ships as had been ſeized by the French Privateers ſince December 1673. to the number of fifty three; concluding thus, Wherefore conſidering that the Root of all this Diſorder ariſes from the Violence and Rapine of the French Capers, who ought to be looked on as Diſturbers of the Publick Quiet, and Enemies to the good Friendſhip between the two Crowns; We are humbly of opinion, that your Majeſty has juſt occaſion, from the Injuries paſt, and thoſe which are now depending, and which do every day increaſe, to make a very ſerious Repreſentation of all unto his moſt Chriſtian Majeſty; and not only preſs for ſome better Method of Repairing the Grievances mentioned, but earneſtly to inſiſt on the calling in of all Privateers: Or elſe your Majeſty muſt do Right, and give Defence to your Subjects, from all the Inſolencies which they ſo frequently meet. Signed Finch C. Angleſey, Bath, Bridgwater, Craven, H. Coventry, J. Ernle, G. Carteret, Robert Southwell.

To which this Anſwer in Council was given:

s Anſwer.

"HIS Majeſty taking into his ſerious Conſideration the daily Complaints of his Subjects, and having a great Senſe and Reſentment of their ill Uſage, hath thought fit to approve the ſaid Report, and is therefore graciouſly pleaſed to order, as it is hereby ordered accordingly; That the Right Honourable Mr. Secretary Coventry do immediately tranſmit to his Majeſty's Ambaſſadour at Paris a Copy thereof, that ſo the evil and the unhappy ſtate of theſe things may be made known in that Court, and the Remedies preſſed for in his Majeſty's Name which are propoſed by the ſaid Report. And Maſter Secretary is alſo to attend the French Ambaſſadour here with the ſame Repreſentation, and to expoſtulate upon all theſe Hardſhips, and the little Remedy given to his Majeſty's Subjects, either on the Merits of their Cauſes, or the Recommendations of them by his Majeſty: that ſo his Excellency being made ſenſible of his Majeſty's Diſpleaſure herein, and the reaſonable Diſcontent of his Subjects, there may be by his Care ſuch lively Impreſſions hereof fixed with the King his Maſter, and the Miniſters of France, as may redreſs the Evils that are complained of, and obtain the juſt Remedies which are propoſed.

e People g for a fit- g Parliam.

Yet no other Satisfaction could be obtained than by doing Juſtice to ourſelves by a Repriſal on ſeveral of their Privateers; and this only Method did by no means repair the Loſſes of private Men; it ſeem'd only a ſort of Vindication of the publick Honour. Theſe Inſolencies of the French had however this good effect, that they made the People of England more and more impatient for a ſitting Parliament, as hoping and believing that this inſufferable Grievance would be then effectually redreſs'd by a Reparation of their Damages, or at leaſt by an open War. And the long Interval of Seſſions began ſo much to open the Eyes and the Mouths of the City and Country, that on Decemb. 23. his Majeſty thought fit to quiet his loving Subjects by the Proſpect of a ſitting Parliament, and by Proclamation to declare, that having been pleaſed to continue this preſent Parliament by Prorogation until the 15*th day of* February now next coming, he had a full Purpoſe and Reſolution that the Parliament ſhould be then holden: and he was deſirous, for divers weighty Conſiderations, to have them a full Aſſembly of the Members of both Houſes. 1676. 28 Car. II.

The Meeting of it.

Accordingly, on Thurſday Feb. 15. the two Houſes of Parliament met at Weſtminſter; and his Majeſty being ſolemnly ſeated in his Throne, ſent for the Houſe of Commons, who attended his Majeſty at the Bar of the Lord's Houſe: His Majeſty made a moſt gracious Speech to the two Houſes on the Subject of their Meeting; which done, the Lord Chancellour farther moſt eloquently declared his Majeſty's Mind to them on this Occaſion. Upon which the Commons returned to their own Houſe, and enter'd upon the Debate of ſeveral Matters. The general Diſpoſition of the Houſe was to a War with France, or to ſtricter Alliances at leaſt for preventing the Progreſs of the French Conqueſts made in Flanders and on the Rhine. And therefore ſoon after their Meeting they addreſs'd the King, ſetting forth, Proceedings of the two Houſes.

Addreſs a- gainſt the French.

"That his People were much diſquieted with the "manifeſt Danger ariſing to theſe Kingdoms, by "the Growth and Power of the French King, by "his Acquiſitions in the Spaniſh Netherlands, in "the Preſervation whereof, they humbly con- "ceive, the Intereſt of his Majeſty and the Safe- "ty of his People are highly concern'd, and there- "fore beſeech the King to take it into his Care, "and ſtrengthen himſelf with ſtricter Alliances. To which the King anſwer'd, "That he was of "the ſame Opinion with both Houſes, and that "he will uſe all means for the Preſervation of "Flanders, that can conſiſt with the Peace and "Safety of the Kingdom.

A Queſtion in Parl. about their legal Being.

But that which moſt interrupted the Proceedings in both Houſes, was an important Queſtion, Whether they were any longer a legal Body? and, Whether their long Prorogation were not, in its true effect, a Diſſolution of them? This Conteſt was higheſt in the Houſe of Lords, where the Duke of Buckingham ſtood up firſt, and argu'd with great appearance of Reaſon, and with greater Wit, That according to the Law and Conſtitution of Parliaments, an unprecedented Prorogation was null, and conſequently the Parliament was in truth Diſſolved; offering to maintain it to the Face of all the Judges, and deſiring (as is uſual in ſuch caſes) that they might give their Opinion in it: But this Motion reliſh'd ſo ill with the Lords that were in the Miniſtry, that one of them moved that the Duke, for that Speech, might be called to the Bar. The Earl of Shafisbury oppoſed this Motion, as improper and extravagant; and did with Courage, and Sharpneſs of Application, ſecond and enforce the Duke of Buckingham's Argument: and the Earl of Salisbury and the Ld. Wharton fell in boldly on the ſame ſide: But the majority were ſo warm upon them, that they were all ſent Priſoners to the Tower for Contempt of the Authority and Being of the preſent Parliament, and were to remain there during his Majeſty's and the Houſe's Pleaſure. The ſame Matter was debated in the Houſe of Commons, and there too the Majority resolved not to be dissolved; yet they committed none of their Members for arguing the contrary. It was indeed no wonder that both Houses should agree in their own Preservation and Continuance: for the great Lords in the Ministry could not bear to think of parting with a Parliament which they had been at a prodigious Expence to keep in a giving Humour; and they had indeed managed them so well, that they had given the King more Money than ever had been granted in a Parliamentary way to all the Kings of England from William the Norman to the Union of the two Kingdoms: And the major part of the Commons had as good reason to desire to keep their Places in the House, that by Offices or Pensions were so beneficial to them, and which indeed had cost them a dear Purchase; for upon the Death of any of the old Members, few or none had been chosen to succeed them without a prodigious Expence; which must have been as great a Folly in them as it was a Shame to the Nation, if they had not known how by their Votes and Engagements to reimburse themselves. The Duke of Buckingham, the Earl of Salisbury, and the Lord Wharton, Petition'd the King, and were discharg'd; but the Lord Shaftsbury was kept thirteen Months in Prison; and for not complying with a formal Recantation of his Speech, all his Petitions were rejected: when finding it in vain to apply longer to his Majesty, he had recourse to the King's Bench, whither he was brought by a Habeas Corpus on the 27th of January next ensuing, where Mr. Williams, Mr. Wallop, and Mr. Smith, his Council, argued that the Court ought to relieve him; and the Earl spoke himself with great Reason and Eloquence for the Liberty of the Subject and his own Discharge: yet the Judges deny'd him Redress, one of them declaring before the Cause was heard, That the Court could not help him; and being absent when it came to a Hearing, deputed Judge Jones to speak for him, that the Bench might be unanimous. So the Earl was remanded to Prison, and staid there till another Session of Parliament, when his Application to an inferiour Court was voted a Breach of Privilege by the Lords, for which the Earl was to answer his Contempt at the Bar of the House. On the 22d of February he was accordingly brought to the Bar, where he offer'd to acknowledge his asserting the Dissolution of the Parliament to be an unadvised Action, and to beg their Lordship's Pardon for his Offence in bringing his Habeas Corpus. The Lord Treasurer produced a Paper which one Blaney had deliver'd him, pretending to give Information of some Words spoken by the Lord Shaftsbury in the Court of King's Bench: yet Blaney being call'd into the House, could not affirm that what was written in that Paper was really spoken by the Earl: Upon which the Lord Treasurer drop'd the Matter, and the House proceeded to a Resolution, That the Lord Shaftsbury should make his Submission and Acknowledgment in a Form prescribed by that House. And accordingly a Declaration was prepared much to the same effect with what the Earl himself had before offer'd. The Lord Chancellour read the Words to him, and the Lord Shaftsbury kneeling repeated them at the Bar, and then withdrew. So the House order'd the Lords with White Staffs to acquaint his Majesty, that they had receiv'd Satisfaction from the Earl of Shaftsbury in the Matter of the Habeas Corpus, and the other Contempt, and prayed him to discharge the Earl from his Confinement; which was done.

E. of Shaftsbury kept Prisoner in the Tower.

Submits and is discharg'd.

Honours and Preferments.

In Places and Honours there was no considerable Alteration. On April 26. the Lord Bishop of Durham was sworn one of the Lords of his Majesty's Privy Council. The Honour of Knighthood was conferr'd (as had been of late usual) on the two Sheriffs of London and Middlesex, Sir John Peak and Sir Thomas Stamp. And on October 28. their Majesties accompanied by their Royal Highnesses, and the Lady Mary and the Lady Ann, and attended by many of the principal Nobility and other Persons of Quality, were pleased to accept of an humble Invitation from the City, and to Honour the new Lord Mayor, Sir Thomas Davis, with their Presence, first at the Show in Cheapside, and afterwards in the Guild-Hall at Dinner, where the Entertainment was great and magnificent in all kinds, very much to the Satisfaction of their Majesties and the whole Court. On February 21. Sir Thomas Doleman, Knight, was sworn one of the Clerks of his Majesty's most Honourable Privy Council in the room of Sir Edward Walker, Esq;.

Progress of the Treaty Nimeguen.

The Treaty of Nimeguen went on very slowly; Sir William Temple and Sir Leoline Jenkins, the two English Mediators, arrived at the Place in July, but they found there only two of the Parties concern'd, viz. the French and Dutch Plenipotentiaries. The former of which were exceeding eager to set the Negotiation on foot, and betray'd their Design of procuring a separate Peace if possible with Holland: for which they had made their Application both to the Prince of Orange and to Pensionary Fagal, though with little hopes of Success. The other Allies took as many occasions as they could of delaying the dispatch of their Ministers to the Congress, that they might see the Effect of this Campaign, that they might then be the better able to take their Measures for the Conditions of a general Peace. Hence, about the end of September, the French Ambassadors gave the Mediators notice that their Master having made so many Advances towards a Peace, but having been so ill seconded by the Proceedings of the Confederates, and observing their slowness in coming to the Treaty, he was resolved to recal his Ambassadours, unless the Allies should send their respective Ministers to the place of Treaty within the space of one Month; tho' after all, the Count Kinkski, the second Person in the Imperial Embassy, whether through real Indisposition, or under pretence thereof is uncertain, staid at Cologne till the New-Year began, and neither of his Collegues came in many Months after, without one of which, to wit, the Bishop of Gurck, the first in Commission, Count Kinkski had no power to agree on any thing farther than Preliminaries.

Campaign abroad.

In the mean time the Campaign began with sufficient Glory to the French, for before the middle of April the Mareschal Crequi invested the Town of Conde with 16000 Men. This hasten'd the Prince of Orange's March from Rosendale to join the Spanish General, the Duke De Villa-Hermosa, which he did at Cambron on April 26. but the French King and his Brother the Duke of Orleance with a Reinforcement of 10000 Men came before Conde, and order'd the Town to be so furiously batter'd and storm'd on every side, that the Garison was forc'd to surrender at discretion, tho' the Prince of Orange was march'd as far as Granville in order to relieve them. After this the French sat down before Bonchain, a small strong Town between Cambray and Valenciennes, and keeping the Communication between those two places, which in a short time was likewise surrender'd to them; and then the French King, who had made a shew of commanding his Army in Person, in the beginning of June return'd to Paris, leaving the Command of his Army in the Netherlands to the famous Mareschal Schonberg.

The Prince of Orange having invested Maestricht resolved about the end of July to lay a formal

Siege of Maestricht

Siege

1676. 28 Car. II. Siege to it, it being the only Town of the Dutch Provinces remaining in the French Hands, and fortified by them with all the Advantages of Art and Expence, having a Garison of 8000 chosen Men under a daring Commander Monsieur Calvo: This Siege was carried on with great Bravery and many desperate Assaults. About the middle of August, as the Prince of Orange exposing himself upon all occasions received a Musket shot in his Arm, at which, perceiving that those who were about him were daunted, he immediately pull'd off his Hat with that Arm that was hurt, and waved it about his Head, to shew the Wound was but in the Flesh and the Bone safe; at which they all revived, and the Prince went on without interruption in all the Paces of the Siege; but there were two principal Reasons why the Prince could not master the Place; for first, the River was grown so shallow that he was forc'd to stay some Days for his heavy Artillery from Ruremond for want of Water; then the Forces which he expected from the Bishop of Munster and Princes of Lunenburgh, never came to his Assistance; to which if we add, that a cruel Sickness fell into his Army which weaken'd it more than all the Assaults they had made upon the Town; it's no wonder it could not be carried, for this not only gave Monsieur Schomberg an opportunity to besiege and take Aire, but encouragement to march even thro' the Heart of the Spanish Low-Countries, to the Relief of Maestricht: Upon whose Approach it was agreed in a Council of War, that the Siege should be raised, with which the Campaign ended in the Dutch and Spanish Provinces.

The Campaign being over, all Parties began to turn their Thoughts toward the Motions of the Treaty of Peace, and the Prince of Orange not at all satisfied with the dilatory Conduct of the Emperor and German Princes and the King of Spain, was by Pensionary Fagel advised of the Necessity of making a separate Peace, if no other could be obtain'd. Sir William Temple had several Conferences with the Prince upon this Subject, and told him one Day, that Pensionary Fagel in a Discourse with him, was of opinion that nothing else could be done but to make a separate Peace, and that he knew not a Man in Holland who was not of his Mind. The Prince here interrupting him said, "Yes, I am sure I know one, and that "is myself, and I'll hinder it as long as I can: "but if any thing should happen to me, I know "it would be done in two Days. Then the Ambassadour ask'd him, whether he was of the Pensionary's Mind as to what he thought likely to happen the next Campaign? He said, "the "Appearances were ill, but that Campaigns did "not always end as they began, that Accidents "might happen which no Man could foresee, and "that if they came to one fair Battel, none could "answer for the Event; that the King of England "might make the Peace if he pleased before it be-"gan; but if we were so indifferent as to let that "Season pass, for his part, he was obliged to "go on and take his Fortune: That he had that "very Morning seen a poor old Man tugging "alone in a little Boat with his Oars against "the Eddy of a Shrine upon a Canal, that when "with the last Efforts he was just got up to the "place intended, the force of the Eddy carried "him quite back again, and thus three or four "times while the Prince saw him; and concluded that this old Man's business and his were "too like one another, and that we ought how-"ever to do just as the old Man did, without "knowing what would succeed, any more than "what did in the poor Man's Case.

ate of Reli-ion.

As to the Affairs of Religion, the Archbishop of Canterbury by direction from the Court, took care to be inform'd of the Strength and Number of Friends and Enemies of the Church of England, by ordering an Inquiry to be made in every Diocess of the Number of Church Communicants, Popish Recusants and Protestant Dissenters in every Parish. And Returns were generally made from every Diocese, by Account taken about the time of the Easter Visitation. 1674. 26 Car. II.

The dangers of Popery were indeed more visible and more scandalous every Day; and tho' the intermissions of a sitting Parliament gave Impunity and Connivance to the Priests and Jesuits, yet Complaints were publickly made to the King and Council, who particularly in October were "informed of the bold and open repair made to "several Places, and especially to her Majesty's "Chapel at Somerset-House, and the Houses of "Foreign Ambassadours, Agents and other pub-"lick Ministers, for the hearing of Mass, and o-"ther Worship and Service of the Romish Church, "and that the said Ambassadors, Agents and "Ministers do permit and suffer, both daily "Masses to be said and other Worship and Ser-"vice to be performed in their Houses in a pub-"lick manner, by English, Scottish and Irish Priests, "and also Sermons in English, to be preached in "their said Houses and Chapels, which the Laws "and Statutes of this Kingdom do expresly for-"bid the King's Subjects to frequent or do. Hence in Council held October 3. an Order was publish-ed, declaring, "That his Majesty had taken the "said Complaint into serious Consideration, and "being sensible thereof as a matter highly tend-"ing to the Violation of the Laws of the Realm, "and the Scandal of Religion and Government, "and Breach of good Order, and in his Prince-"ly Wisdom weighing the dangerous Conse-"quence thereof, was resolv'd to take strict Or-"der for the stopping this Evil before it spread "any farther, his Majesty therefore by the Ad-"vice of his Council, forbids any of his said Sub-"jects hereafter to offend in the like kind at their "utmost perils, and likewise Orders that his "principal Secretaries of State should repair to "the Foreign Ministers to make known unto "them his Majesty's Pleasure, and to expect "their Compliance that they would not per-"mit Masses or other Service to be said by "any of the said Priests, or Sermons to be preach-"ed in English in their Houses or Chapels, things "never heard of or attempted by any precedent "Ambassadors or Agents here. His Majesty "thinking fit that notice should be first given "to the said publick Ministers (the rather to "testifie his Respects unto them) before the "stricter Course his Majesty hath Resolv'd be "taken with his own Subjects, by a vigorous "Prosecution and Infliction of Penalties and "Punishments for the preventing and repressing "the like hereafter.

Dangers of Popery.

Complaints in Council.

His Majesty was pleased to translate Dr. Anthony Sparrow Bishop of Exeter to the See of Norwich, and to make choice of the Reverend Dr. Thomas Lamplugh Dean of Rochester, to succeed in the Bishoprick of Exeter, who on Sunday November 12. was solemnly Consecrated in the Chapel of Lambeth by the Right Revetend Henry Lord Bishop of London, his Grace's Commissioner for that purpose, assisted by several other Bishops, in the presence of many of the chiefest of the Nobility and other Persons of Quality, who were afterwards entertained at a noble Dinner.

Eccleſiaſtical Preferments.

The Dissenters by favour of the Court had Indulgence and Kindness shewn to them, after some little Offers at a legal Prosecution of them; as their own History thus relates. "Mr. Baxter ha-"ving been kept a whole Year from preaching in Case of the Dissenters by their own Report.

1676. 28 Car. II. " in his new Chapel, in Apr. 1676. began in another in St. Martin's Parish; a little before the " King importunately commanded and urg'd the " Judges and London Justices to put the Laws against the Nonconformists in Execution, and " Sir Joseph Sheldon the Lord Mayor, the Archbishop's near Kinsman, accordingly did so for " some time, and many Ministers were clapt up " in Goals, Mr. Baxter was forcibly kept out of " his new Meeting-House in Swallow-Street, by a " Guard of Constables and Officers, for many " Lord's-Days together. But Mr. Wadsworth dying, he preach'd to his Flock in Southwark " many Months in peace, no Justice being willing to disturb them; and when Dr. Lloyd succeeded Dr. Lamplugh in St. Martin's Parish, he " offer'd him his Chapel in Oxenden-Street for " publick Worship, and he accepted it. This latter part of the Relation, as to the offer of a Chapel, is known to be very false.

1677. The Parliament were now sitting, and to encourage the King to a seasonable Breach with France, they gave him an effectual Aid for the speedy Building of thirty Ships of War; and had before them many other Bills for the Honour and Safety of the Nation. His Majesty seem'd to be afraid of their sitting too long, and making too bold with the great depending Affair of Peace and War, which his Majesty at this Juncture above all other had Reason to reserve to his own Will and Pleasure. And therefore on Monday April 16. his Majesty came suddenly in the Evening into the House of Lords, and being seated in his Throne with usual Solemnity; he sent for the House of Commons, and gave his Royal Assent to several Bills presented to him. The publick Acts were as follow:

Parliament inclin'd to a War with France.

Acts passed.

1. " An Act for raising the Sum of Five hundred eighty four thousand nine hundred seventy eight Pounds two Shillings and two Pence " Half-penny, for the speedy building thirty " Ships of War.

2. " An Act for an Additional Excise upon " Beer, Ale and other Liquors for three Years.

3. " An Act for the better Observation of the " Lord's-Day, commonly called Sunday.

4. " An Act for prevention of Frauds and Perjuries.

5. " An Act for taking of Affidavits in the " Country, and to be made use of in the " Courts of King's-Bench, Common-Pleas and Exchequer.

6. " An Act for confirming and perpetuating " Augmentations made by Ecclesiastical Persons " to small Vicarages and Curacies.

7. " An Act for taking away the Writ De Heretico Comburendo.

8. " An Act for Naturalizing of Children of " his Majesty's English Subjects born in Foreign " Countries during the late Troubles.

9. " An Act for erecting a Judicature to determine Differences touching Houses Burnt and " Demolished by the late dreadful Fire in Southwark.

10. " An Act for the better Repairing and " Maintaining the Peer of Great Yarmouth.

After which, the Lord Chancellour, by his Majesty's Command, acquainted the two Houses, that his Majesty gave them leave to Adjourn till the 21st of May next: And accordingly the two Houses Adjourned till that time.

The Commons Address for a War with France.

When they met again, the Commons were so alarm'd at the Progress of the French Arms in Flanders, that they presented an Address to his Majesty on the 23d of May, humbly desiring, that he would be pleased to enter into an Offensive and Defensive League with the States-General of the United Provinces, and make such other Alliances with other Confederates, as his Majesty should think fit against the Growth and Power of the French King, for the Preservation of the Spanish Netherlands. Upon Delivery of this Address, the King grew very angry, and signified his Pleasure to the Commons, that they should attend him on Monday Morning in the Banquetting-house at Whitehall; where his Majesty was pleased to shew his Resentment in this following Speech:

1677. 29 Car. II.

Gentlemen,

" COuld I have been silent, I would rather have chosen to be so, than to call to mind things so unfit for you to meddle with as are contained in some parts of your last Address, " wherein you have intrenched upon so undoubted a Right of the Crown, that I am confident " it will appear in no Age (when the Sword was " not drawn) that the Prerogative of making " Peace and War hath been so dangerously invaded.

The King expresses his anger.

" You do not content your selves with desiring me to enter into such Leagues as may be " for the Safety of the Kingdom, but you tell me " what sort of Leagues they must be, and with " whom, and (as your Address is worded) it is " more liable to be understood to be by your " Leave than at your Request, that I should make " such other Alliances as I please with other of " the Confederates.

" Should I suffer this fundamental Power of " making Peace and War to be so far invaded " (tho' but once) as to have the Manner and " Circumstances of Leagues prescribed to me by " Parliament; it's plain that no Prince or State " would any longer believe that the Soveraignty " of England rests in the Crown; nor could I " think my self to signifie any more to Foreign " Princes than the empty Sound of a King: " Wherefore you may rest assured, that no Condition shall make me depart from, or lessen so " essential a part of the Monarchy: And I am " willing to believe so well of this House of Commons, that I am confident these ill Consequences are not intended by you.

" These are, in short, the Reasons why I can " by no means approve of your Address: And " yet tho' you have declined to grant me that " Supply which is so necessary to the Ends of it, " I do again declare to you, That as I have done " all that lay in my Power since your last Meeting, so I will still apply myself, by all the " means I can, to let the World see my Care both " for the Security and Satisfaction of my People, " altho' it may not be with those Advantages to " them which by your Assistances I might have " procured. And his Majesty was farther pleased to declare his Pleasure to them, that the House should be Adjourned till the 16th of July next; telling them, he would give them Notice by his Proclamation when his Majesty intended they should sit again; which his Majesty was pleased to say should not be till the Winter, unless there were some extraordinary Occasion of calling them sooner. A late Historian has thus expresst himself on this Occasion: " The King, to shew his farther Indignation to the Commons, and to take " French Counsels for Reparation of their dangerous Invasion of his Prerogative, signified to " the Commons that they should adjourn till the " 16th of July following; which was so absolutely obeyed by the Speaker, then Mr. but now " Sir E. S. that without the Consent of the House, " or so much as putting the Question, he Adjourned them to the 16th of July, tho' Sir John " Finch

1677. 29 Car. II.

" Finch was Impeached, for the ſame thing, of " High Treaſon in Parliament in 1640. So that " if the Parliament were not Diſſolved by the " laſt Prorogation, another Queſtion may now " ariſe whether it was not ſo by their Separa- " tion, without either Prorogation or Adjourn- " ment.

The legal Being of the Parliam. queſtion'd without Doors.

Among the Proceedings in this Seſſion, it ſhould be farther obſerved, that a Queſtion was made without doors (as had been formerly within) whether the Parliament were not truly and legally Diſſolved. But to reſtrain and terrifie People from any ſuch Freedom of Diſcourſe, an Order was made in the Houſe of Lords, That the Serjeant at Arms attending that Houſe ſhould take into his Cuſtody Aaron Smith, and bring him to the Bar of the ſaid Houſe, there to Anſwer for ſpeaking certain dangerous and ſeditious Words againſt the Being of this preſent Parliament. And Mr. Smith prudently abſconding, they preſented their humble Deſires to his Majeſty, That he would by his Royal Proclamation ſtrictly charge and command, that the utmoſt and moſt effectual Endeavours ſhould be uſed for apprehending the Perſon of the ſaid Aaron Smith, and bring him before the ſaid Houſe of Peers (if the Parliament ſhould be ſitting at the time of his Apprehenſion) or in caſe the Parliament ſhould not be then ſitting, before one of his Majeſty's principal Secretaries of State, to the intent the ſaid Aaron Smith might be ſecured, in order to his Appearance before the ſaid Houſe of Peers, to anſwer for his ſaid Offence. To which his Majeſty comply'd by a Proclamation given at Whitehall on June 1.

Commands the Houſes to adjourn.

On Monday July 16. the two Houſes of Parliament, purſuant to their laſt Adjournment, met at Weſtminſter, and, according to his Majeſty's Pleaſure ſignify'd to them, did immediately adjourn again till the 3d of December next. This Pleaſure of his Majeſty was ſignify'd in the Houſe of Commons by Mr. Secretary Coventry; and in great Submiſſion to it, Mr. Speaker is ſaid again to have pronounced the Adjournment by his own Authority. On Octob. 26. the King publiſh'd a Proclamation, That he had by Advice of his Privy Council, upon weighty Conſiderations, reſolved upon a farther Adjournment of his two Houſes of Parliament; and therefore declares his Royal Intention, that his Houſe of Peers may adjourn themſelves, and alſo his Houſe of Commons may adjourn themſelves, on the third Day of December (being the Day prefixed for their Aſſembling) untill the fourth Day of April next enſuing. But however, at the time of Meeting, on Monday December the third, the two Houſes received a Meſſage from his Majeſty, that his Majeſty having given notice by his Proclamation, that he intended the Houſes ſhould be adjourned till the fourth of April; had now, for weighty Conſiderations, thought fit to meet both Houſes ſooner: And therefore his Pleaſure was, That they ſhould be adjourned to the fifteenth of January next. And accordingly the two Houſes were ſo adjourn'd, Mr. Secretary Coventry delivering the Meſſage in the Houſe of Commons, and the Speaker again executing of it, in a profound Deference to his Majeſty's Pleaſure. Upon which, the forementioned Hiſtorian has left this Remark: " Thus did the Speaker " make a threefold Invaſion upon the Privilege of " the Houſe, for the Houſe's once preſuming to " invade his Majeſty's Prerogative of making " War and Peace. After this laſt Receſs of the two Houſes, his Majeſty by Proclamation dated Dec. 7. declared himſelf deſirous, in reſpect of ſeveral important Matters intended to be debated and conſidered, to have on the ſaid fifteenth Day of January a full Aſſembly of the Members of both Houſes of Parliament: and therefore, with the Advice of his Privy Council, thinks fit to require and command the Lords and Commons to give their Attendance at Weſtminſter on the ſaid Day, in a ready Conformity to his Royal Will and Pleaſure.

In the mean time came on the happy Match between William Prince of Orange and the Lady Mary eldeſt Daughter of James Duke of York. The firſt Motion of this Deſign was made by the Prince to Sir William Temple at the beginning of the Spring 1676; when being ready to take the Field, he told the Engliſh Ambaſſadour that he had a mind to have ſome Diſcourſe with him in private, and appointed him a Time to meet in his Garden at Hounſlair-dike, where the Prince told Sir William, " That he might eaſily believe, " being the only Son left of his Family, he was " often preſſed by his Friends to think of Mar- " rying, and had Perſons propoſed to him as " their ſeveral Humours led them; that for his " own part, he knew it was a thing to be done " at one time or another, but that he hitherto " excuſed the thoughts of it, otherwiſe than in " general, till the War was ended; that beſides " his own Friends, the Deputies of the States " began to preſs him more earneſtly every Day, " and the more as they ſaw the War like to con- " tinue; and perhaps they had more Reaſon to " do it than any others: That he had at laſt pro- " miſed them he would more ſeriouſly and parti- " cularly think of it, and ſo he had, and reſol- " ved he would Marry; but that the Choice of " a Perſon he thought more difficult: That he " found himſelf inclined to no Propoſals that " had been made him from France or Germany, " nor indeed to any thing that had been menti- " oned upon that Occaſion by any of his Friends, " but that of England: That before he concluded " to make any Paces that way, he was reſolved " to have the Ambaſſadour's Opinion upon two " Points; but yet would not ask it, unleſs he " promiſed to anſwer him as a Friend, or at leaſt " an indifferent Perſon, and not as the King's " Ambaſſadour. When he told him he ſhould be obey'd, he proceeded, and ſaid, " That he would " confeſs to him, that during the late War, nei- " ther the States, nor himſelf in particular, were " without Application made to them from ſeve- " ral Perſons, and conſiderable ones too in Eng- " land, who would fain engaged them to Head " the Diſcontents that were raiſed by the Con- " duct of the Court in that whole War, which he " knew was begun and carried on quite contra- " ry to the Humour of the Nation, and might " perhaps have proved very dangerous to the " Crown, if it had not ended as it did: That all " thoſe Perſons who pretended to be much his " Friends were extreamly againſt any Thought of " his Marrying in England; and their Reaſons " were, That he would loſe by that, all the " Eſteem and Intereſt he had there, and be be- " lieved to have run wholly into the Diſpoſitions " and Deſigns of the Court, which were gene- " rally thought ſo different from thoſe of the Na- " tion, eſpecially upon the Point of Religion: " That his Friends there did not believe the Go- " vernment could be long without ſome great " Diſturbance, unleſs they changed their Mea- " ſures, which was not eſteem'd very likely to " be done. In the next place, he muſt be ſatiſ- " fied with the Perſon and Diſpoſition of the " young Lady; for though the World might per- " haps imagine, that a Prince need not be con- " cern'd in thoſe Particulars, yet ſo far as he " knew himſelf, he muſt declare, That no Cir- " cumſtances of Fortune or Intereſt would en- " gage him, without an agreeable Perſon of good " Humour and Diſpoſition: That he might per-

1677. 29 Car. II.

" haps be a Man not very eaſie for a Wife to " live with; he was ſure he could not be eaſie to " ſuch Wives as were generally in the Courts of " the preſent Age: That if he ſhould meet with " One that would give him Trouble at home, it " was what he ſhould not be able to bear, for " he was likely to have enough abroad: He muſt " have a Wife eaſie and agreeable, which he " thought chiefly depended upon a natural Diſ- " poſition and good Education. And therefore " if the Ambaſſadour knew any thing in particu- " lar of the Lady Mary, in thoſe Points, he de- " ſir'd to tell him freely.

The Ambaſſadour anſwer'd his Highneſs, That he was very glad to find he was reſolv'd to marry, as being what he owed his Family and his Friends; that he was much more pleaſed, that his Inclinations led him to endeavour a Match in England, which would be much for his Intereſt and Honour: But as to the Character of the Lady Mary he could ſay little to it, only he had often heard his Wife and Siſter ſpeak with all the Advantage imaginable, of what they could diſcern in a Princeſs ſo young, and more from what they had been told by the Governeſs, with whom they had a particular Friendſhip. The Reſult of this Diſcourſe was, that the Prince wrote both to the King and the Duke to beg their Favour to him in it, and their Leave that he might go over into England at the end of the Campaign. The Prince was long diverted from this Inclination by his Fatigues in the Camp, and by the perplexity of the Affairs of Europe, and eſpecially by the Suſpence of the Treaty at Nimeguen.

Campaign abroad.

The French were early in the Field this Year, and took Valenciennes, and Cambray, and St. Omer. The Prince of Orange, about the end of July, made an Attempt upon Charleroy; but fail'd in his intended Surprize of that Place: And now at laſt perceiving that there could be no Stop put to the Fury of the French Arms, but by Calling in the Aſſiſtance of England, he reaſſum'd his Thoughts of Marriage, and ſent over Monſieur Bentink (now Earl of Portland) into England to ſollicit that Affair, and to make way for the Prince's Journey thither. And ſo good Encouragement was given for his kind Reception, that on Tueſday the ninth Day of October, about Ten in the Morning, his Highneſs arriv'd at Harwich, accompany'd by a great many Perſons of the chiefeſt Quality in Holland. Here his Majeſty's Coaches met him, and carry'd him immediately to New-market, where he arriv'd at about Seven in the Evening, and was receiv'd by his Majeſty and his Royal Highneſs with all the Marks of Affection and Eſteem. They invited him often into Diſcourſes of Buſineſs, which they wonder'd to ſee him avoid, and induſtriouſly divert: So that the King commanded Temple to find the Reaſon of it; upon which the Prince frankly told him, He was reſolved to ſee the young Princeſs before he enter'd upon any other Affair of Peace or War. The King laughed at this piece of Nicety, but ſaid he would humour the Prince in it, and ſaid he would go ſome Days ſooner than he intended from New-market. And accordingly on October the 13th the King and whole Court return'd to Whitehall. The Prince, upon ſight of the Lady, was ſo well pleaſed with her Perſon and Temper, that he immediately made his Application to the King and Duke for their Conſent: By whom he was well received, and they allow'd of it, but with this Condition, That the Terms of the Peace abroad might be firſt adjuſted between them. The Prince excuſed himſelf, and ſaid, He muſt end this firſt Buſineſs before he began the other. The King and the Duke were both poſitive in their Opinion, and the Prince as firm in his Reſolution, ſaying at laſt, that his Allies, who are like to have hard Terms of Peace as things then ſtood, would be apt to believe that he had made this Match at their coſt; and that for his part, he never could ſell his Honour for a Wife. The Lord Treaſurer, and thoſe in the ſecret Miniſtry, did verily believe, that the whole Buſineſs would break off upon this Punctilio: And Sir William Temple happening to go to his Highneſs after Supper, found him in the worſt Humour he had ever ſeen him, complaining, that He repented he had ever come into England, and reſolved he would ſtay but two Days longer, and then would be gone, if the King perſiſted in his Reſolution of treating about the Peace before the Marriage was conſummate: But that before he went, the King muſt chooſe how they ſhould live together from thenceforward: He was ſure it muſt be either as the greateſt Friends, or as the greateſt Enemies: deſiring Sir William to let his Majeſty know ſo much the next Morning, and give him an Account of what he ſhould ſay upon it. In purſuance of this, Sir William Temple, early in the Morning, acquainted the King with all that the Prince had ſaid the Night before, and the ill Conſequences of a Breach between them, conſidering the ill Humour of many of his Subjects upon our late Meaſures with France, and the Invitations made the Prince by ſeveral of them, during the late War. The King gave great Attendance to what was ſaid, and anſwer'd, Well, I never was yet deceived in judging of a Man's Honeſty by his Looks (of which he gave ſome Examples;) and if I am not miſtaken in the Prince's Face, he is the honeſteſt Man in the World, and I will truſt him, and he ſhall have his Wife; and you ſhall go immediately and tell my Brother ſo, and that it's a thing I am reſolved on. Sir William having accordingly acquainted the Duke with it, he ſeemed at firſt a little ſurprized; but when the other had done, he ſaid, The King ſhall be obey'd; and I ſhould be glad all his Subjects learn'd of me to obey him: I do tell him my Opinion freely upon any thing; but when that is done, and I know his Pleaſure upon it, I obey him. From the Duke he went to the Prince, and told him the whole Tranſaction; which, at firſt, his Highneſs would hardly believe; but then embraced him, and ſaid, He had made him a very happy Man, and that very unexpectedly.

1677. 29 Car. I.

The Prince of Orange comes into England.

His Reception.

On October the 24th, in the Morning, his Majeſty was pleaſed to declare to the Lords of his Privy Council (who he had cauſed to meet extraordinarily for that purpoſe) that he had concluded a Marriage between her Highneſs the Lady Mary and his Highneſs the Prince of Orange. Upon which their Lordſhips, about Three in the Afternoon, went in a Body to make their Compliments firſt to the Lady, and afterwards to the Prince. The News of which being ſpread in the Town, was followed at Night with Bonfires, Ringing of Bells, and all other Demonſtrations of Joy. On Sunday November the 4th, being the Birth-day of the Prince, the Marriage was privately celebrated at St. James's, about Eleven at Night, by the Biſhop of London, in the Preſence of his Majeſty (who gave the Bride) their Royal Highneſſes, and ſome of the chiefeſt Nobility.

The King declares the intended Marriage.

Within a few Days after this auſpicious Wedding, the King, the Duke and the Prince, with none others admitted but the Lord Treaſurer and Sir William Temple fell into Debates upon the Terms of a Peace, and after much diſputing did agree upon this Scheme, that all ſhould be reſtored by France to the Empire and Emperor, that had A Scheme for General Peace.

1677. 29 Car. II. had been taken in the War, the Dutchy of Lorain to that Duke, and all on both ſides between France and Holland; and to Spain the Towns of Aeth, Charleroy, Oudenard, Courtray, Tournay, Conde, Valenciennes, St. Giſlain and Binch; that the Prince ſhould endeavour to procure the Conſent of Spain, and the King that of France; for which end he ſhould ſend ſome Perſon over immediately with the Propoſal, who ſhould be inſtructed to enter into no Reaſonings upon it, but demand a poſitive Anſwer in two Days, and after that Term immediately return. My Lord Duras, a Creature of the Duke's, was at laſt the Perſon pitch'd upon and ſent over: But he, after the delivery of his Meſſage, was prevailed with to ſtay longer than his time; and after all, came away without any poſitive Anſwer, and ſo the Buſineſs was left to be drawn out into many Meſſages from England, and prevaricating Returns from France, which at laſt dwindled into nothing. The Prince after his Return to Holland, preſt the King by Letters not to recede from his late Engagements to him, of entering into the War with all the Confederates, in caſe of no direct and immediate Anſwer from France, upon the Terms of a Peace propoſed to that Court. But his Majeſty rather contented himſelf to ſend Mr. Thynne over into Holland with a Draught of an Alliance to be made with the Dutch, in order to force France and Spain into a compliance with the Propoſitions agreed on; and to conſign the ſame into the hands of Hyde then at the Hague, which was done, and the Treaty ſign'd on the ſixteenth of January, tho' not without great Difficulties and much Diſatisfaction on the part of the Prince of Orange, who was brought into it by the private Conſent of the Spaniſh Miniſter there, in behalf of his Maſter, ſo that the War could not break out but upon France, in caſe of their refuſal.

leeting of ie Parl. Under theſe new Meaſures the King was diſpoſed to meet his Parliament ſooner than he had before declared his intention of doing. On January 15. the two Houſes met at Weſtminſter, purſuant to their laſt Adjournment, and received this Meſſage from his Majeſty, That his Majeſty had Matters of very great Importance to Communicate to both Houſes, in order to the Satisfaction of their late Addreſſes for the preſervation of Flanders. But it ſo happening, that Matters are not yet ſo ripe as within a few Days they will be; therefore his Majeſty's Pleaſure was, that they ſhould be immediately adjourn'd till Monday the twenty eighth of this inſtant January. On that Day his Majeſty came into the Houſe of Lords, and ſending for the Commons, made this moſt gracious Speech to them on the occaſion of their meeting.

My Lords and Gentlemen,

King's Speech. " WHEN we parted laſt I told you, " that before we met again I would " do that which ſhould be to your Satisfa- " ction; I have accordingly made ſuch Al- " liances with Holland as are for the preſer- " vation of Flanders, and which cannot fail of " that End, unleſs prevented either by the " want of due Aſſiſtances to ſupport thoſe Al- " liances, or by the ſmall regard the Spaniards " themſelves muſt have to their own Preſer- " vation.

" The firſt of theſe I cannot ſuſpect, by " Reaſon of your repeated Engagements to " maintain them, and I know you are ſo " wiſe as to conſider, that a War, which " muſt be the neceſſary Conſequence of " them, ought neither to be proſecuted by " halves, nor to want ſuch Aſſurances of " Perſeverance as may give me Encourage- " ment to purſue it; beſides, it will not be " leſs neceſſary, to let our Enemies have ſuch " a proſpect of our Reſolutions, as may let " them ſee certainly that we ſhall not be " weary of our Arms, till Chriſtendom be " reſtored to ſuch a Peace as ſhall not be " in the Power of any Prince alone to di- " ſturb. 1677. 29 Car. II.

" I do acknowledge to you, that I have " uſed all the means poſſible, by a Media- " tion, to have procured an honourable and " ſafe Peace for Chriſtendom; knowing how " preferable ſuch a Peace would have been " to any War, and eſpecially to this King- " dom, which muſt neceſſarily own the vaſt " Benefits it has received by Peace, whilſt " its Neighbours only have yet ſmarted by " the War. But finding it no longer to " be hop'd for by fair Means, it ſhall not " be my Fault if that be not obtain'd by " Force, which cannot be had any other " ways.

" For this reaſon I have recalled my Troops " from France, and have conſider'd that al- " tho' the Dutch ſhall do their parts, we can- " not have leſs on ours than ninety Sail of " Capital Ships conſtantly maintained, nor " leſs than thirty or forty thouſand Land- " men (with their Dependencies) to be " employ'd upon our Fleets and elſewhere. " And becauſe there ſhall be no fear of Miſ- " employing what you ſhall give to theſe " uſes, I am contented that ſuch Money be " appropriated to thoſe Ends as ſtrictly as you " can deſire. I have given Teſtimony enough " of my Care in that kind by the Progreſs " I have made in building the new Ships, " wherein, for the making them more uſeful, " I have directed ſuch larger Dimenſions as " will coſt me above one hundred thouſand " Pounds more than the Acts allows. I have " gone as far as I could in repairing the old " Fleet, and in buying of neceſſary Stores for " the Navy and Ordnance; and in this and " other Proviſions, for better ſecuring both " my Foreign Plantations and the Iſlands " nearer home, I have expended a great deal " more than the two hundred thouſand Pounds " you enabled me to borrow upon the Ex- " ciſe, altho' I have not found ſuch a Credit " as I expected upon that Security. I have " born the charge both of a Rebellion in Vir- " ginia, and a new War with Algiers: I ſtand " engaged to the Prince of Orange for my " Nieces Portion, and I ſhall not be able to " maintain my conſtant neceſſary Eſtabliſh- " ments, unleſs the new Impoſt upon Wines " &c. be continued to me, which would o- " therwiſe turn only to their Profit to whom " we leaſt intend it.

" I hope

1677. 29 Car. II.

" I hope these things will need little Re
" commendation to you, when you consi-
" der your Promises in some, and the neces" sity of the rest; and to let you see that I " have not only employ'd my Time and " Treasure for your safety, but done all I " could to remove all sorts of Jealousies. I
" have marry'd my Niece to the Prince of O-
" range, by which I hope I have given full
" Assurances that I shall never suffer his In-" tereſt to be ruin'd, if I can be assisted as I
" ought to be to preserve them.

" Having done all this, I expect from you
" a plentiful Supply suitable to such great
" occasions, whereon depends not only the " Honour but (for ought I know) the Be" ing of an English Nation, which will not " be saved by finding Faults afterwards, but " may be prevented by avoiding the chief
" Fault of doing weakly and by halves, what " can only be hop'd from a vigorous and
" through prosecution of what we under" take.

" These Considerations are of the greatest " Importance that ever concern'd this King" dom, and therefore I would have you en-
" ter immediately upon them, without suf" fering any other Business whatsoever to di-
" vert you from bringing them to good Re-
" solutions.

Proceeding of the two H.

The Commons returned to their own House, and on January 31. address'd the King with Thanks for marrying his Niece to the Prince of Orange, and besought him to make no Treaty of Peace with France, whereby the French King should be left in Possession of any greater Power or Dominion than was left him by the Pyrenean Treaty. This again mightily offended the King, who look'd upon it as too bold an Invasion of his Prerogative: but however, the Commons would give no Money without an express Condition of applying it to a maintenance of a War with France; and being exceedingly more alarmed by the Success of the French in taking of Ghent and besieging Ypres, they fell into a Resolution of Addressing the King, that he would forthwith enter into an actual War with France. Upon which, this Message from his Majesty was read in the House by one of the Secretaries of State.

Address for a War with France.

Charles R.

The King offended.

" HIS Majesty having been acquainted
" with the Votes of the fourteenth In" stant, is very much surpriz'd both with
" the Matter and Manner of them. But if " his Majesty had exception to neither, yet
" his Majesty having ask'd the Advice of " both Houses, doth not think fit to give " any Answer to any thing of that Nature,
" till he hath the Concurrent Advice of both " Houses.

However, his Majesty to secure the Money Bill, came into the House of Lords on Wednesday March 20. and being seated on his Throne with the Commons attending, he was pleased to give his Royal Assent to the two Acts following, as also to several private Acts. 1677. 29 Car. II.

Acts passed.

1. " An Act for raising Money by a Poll and
" otherwise, to enable his Majesty to enter into " an Actual War against the French King,
" and for prohibiting several French Commo" dities.

2. " An Act for continuance of two former
" Acts, for preventing of Theft and Rapine up-
" on the Northern Borders of England.

Honours and Preferments.

As to the Honours and Preferments of this Year, his Grace Henry Duke of Newcastle, and the Right Honourable Thomas Earl of Denbigh Lord High Treasurer of England, were Install'd Knights of the most Noble Order of the Garter at Windsor, on Thursday April 19. in the room of William Duke of Newcastle and George Earl of Bristol. At the beginning of August the Duke of Ormond was again constituted Lord Lieutenant of Ireland and began his Journy towards that Kingdom on Aug. 4. being attended with an Equipage agreeable to the Dignity of that Employment, and accompanied out of Town by most of the Principal Nobility and Persons of Quality, in a numerous Train of Coaches, and landing in Ireland on August 23. his Grace was the next Day conducted to the Council Chamber, where he was sworn into that great Office, and received the Sword from the Earl of Essex, who soon after departed for England. On October 29. the King being invited to Guild-Hall upon the Solemnity of a new Lord Mayor, conferr'd the Honour of Knighthood upon Mr. Edward Waldoe, at whose House his Majesty was placed in a Balcony, under a Canopy of State, and afterwards upon William Royston and Thomas Beckford, the present Sheriffs. On November 23. his Majesty was pleased to confer the same Honour of Knighthood upon Robert Hackett, Esq; Inhabitant of the Barbadoes, being presented to his Majesty in his Bed Chamber by his Royal Highness. On January 10. his Majesty was pleased in consideration of the good and acceptable Services perform'd unto him and his Royal Father of blessed Memory by George Wharton, Esq; and of his Sufferings in the late times of Usurpation to confer on him the Dignity of a Baronet of this Kingdom.

Birth and Death of the Duke of Cambridge.

Within few Days after the Marriage of the Prince of Orange, his future prospect seem'd to be interrupted by the delivery of the Dutchess of York, who on Wednesday November 7. was brought to Bed of a Son, intituled Duke of Cambridge, who on Thursday Afternoon was Christen'd by the Bishop of Durham, by the Name of Charles, his Majesty and the Prince of Orange being Godfathers, and the Lady Isabel, represented by the Lady Frances Villars her Governess, being Godmother; but on December 12. this young Prince died at St. James's, to the unspeakable Grief of their Royal Highnesses.

As

1677. As to the State of Religion, the Prophaneneſs of the Times was in ſome meaſure reform'd, by a wholſom and ſeaſonable Law for the better Obſervation and keeping Holy the Lord's-Day, commonly call'd Sunday; whereby it was Enacted, "That all "the Laws already in force, concerning the Obſer- "vation of the Lord's-Day, and repairing to the "Church thereon, ſhould be carefully put in Exe- "cution. And it was further Enacted, "That "no Drover, Horſe-courſer, Waggoner, Butcher, "Higgler, their or either of their Servants, ſhall "Travel or come into their Inn or Lodging upon "the Lord's-Day, upon pain of forfeiting Twenty "Shillings for every Offence: And that no Perſon "ſhall Uſe, Employ or Travel upon the Lord's-Day with any Boat, Wherry, Lighter, or Barge, "Except it be upon Extraordinary Occaſion, to "to be allowed by ſome Juſtice of the Peace, under "the Penalty of Five Shillings for every Offence. It was likewiſe Provided, "That if any Perſon "Travelling upon the Lord's-Day ſhall be then "Robb'd, no Hundred, or the Inhabitants there- "of, ſhall be charged with, or anſwerable for "any Robbery ſo committed; but the Perſon or "Perſons ſo robbed, ſhall be barred from bringing "any Action for the ſaid Robbery. And laſtly, "That no Perſon, upon the Lord's-Day ſhall "ſerve or execute any Writ, Proceſs, Warrant, "Order, Judgment, or Decree, (Except in Caſes "of Treaſon, Felony, or breach of Peace,) but "that the Service of every ſuch Writ, &c. ſhall "be void to all Intents and Purpoſes whatſoever; "and the Perſon ſo ſerving or executing of the "ſame, ſhall be as liable to the Suit of the Party "grieved, and to anſwer Damages, as if he had "done the ſame without any Writ, &c.

Prophaneneſs of the Times reform'd, by an Act for the better Obſervation of the Lord's-Day.

There was a good Benefit intended to the poorer Clergy, by an Act for Confirming and Perpetuating Augmentations made by Eccleſiaſtical Perſons to ſmall Vicarages and Curacies, referring to His Majeſty's Letters, bearing Date the Firſt Day of June, in the Twelfth Year of His Majeſty's Reign, requiring Arch-Biſhops, Biſhops, Deans and Chapters, and other Eccleſiaſtical Perſons, to take Care for the Improvement of poor Vicarages and Curacies, where the Indowment thereof was found too ſmall to afford a competent Maintenance to thoſe who ſerve the Cure, upon their Renewing of Leaſes of Rectories, or Tythes Impropriate, by making Reſervations beyond the ancient Rent, to the intent the ſame might become payable to the ſame Vicars or Curates in Augmentation of their Endowments. But in regard that ſuch Reſervations were not made to the Vicars or Curates; or if they were, no convenient Remedy could be had by ſuch Vicars or Curates for the Recovery thereof, and they were not at the time thereof capable of taking any Intereſt to their own uſe, whereby the ſaid Proviſions will depend upon the good Pleaſure of the Succeſſors, and may in time be diſappointed. Therefore it was Enacted, That all Augmentations made ſince the ſaid Firſt Day of June, or hereafter to be made for the Uſe or Benefit of any Vicar or Curate, by any Eccleſiaſtical Corporation or Perſon, by way of Reſervation out of any Rectory Impropriate, or Portion of Tythes, ſhall continue during the Eſtate upon which they are reſerved, and afterwards for ever. And that the ſaid Vicars and Curates ſhall have Remedy for the ſame either by Diſtreſs or Action of Debt, provided the Augmentation do not exceed one moiety of the clear Yearly Value of the Rectory Impropriate. And to the end the ſaid Vicars and Curates might the better make appear the Certainty of the ſaid Augmentations, it was Provided, That every Arch-Biſhop, Biſhop, Dean and Chapter, ſhould cauſe every Leaſe or Grant whereon any ſuch Augmentation was made, to be fairly entred in a Book of Parchment, to be kept by their reſpective Regiſter for that purpoſe, and a true Copy of the ſaid Entry examin'd and atteſted, ſhould be taken for a Record and Evidence at Law. And if any Queſtion ſhould ariſe, there ſhould be ſuch favourable Conſtructions and ſuch farther Remedy as in Caſe of Charitable Uſes. And any future Leaſe, without expreſs continuance of the ſaid Augmentation, ſhall be utterly void.

An Act for Relief of the poorer Clergy.

1677. Under the Apprehenſions of Popery, it was thought to be ſome wiſdom of Prevention, to make an Act for taking away the Writ de Hæretico Comburendo, whereby it was Enacted, That the Writ commonly call'd Breve de Hæretico Comburendo, with all Proceſs and Proceedings thereupon, in order to the executing ſuch Writ, or following or depending thereupon, and all Puniſhment by Death, in purſuance of any Eccleſiaſtical Cenſures, be from henceforth utterly taken away and aboliſhed.

An Act for Taking away the Writ de Hæretico Comburendo.

The Dangers of Popery, and the Advances of the Popiſh Intereſt at Court, were freely repreſented by Mr. Andrew Marvel, in a Tract Intituled An Account of the Growth of Popery, &c. This Book was ſo offenſive to the Miniſtry, that at the end of this Year His Majeſty cauſed an Order to be publiſh'd, in theſe words, Whereas there have been lately Printed and Publiſh'd ſeveral ſeditious and ſcandalous Libels againſt the Proceedings of both Houſes of Parliament, and other His Majeſty's Courts of Juſtice, to the Diſhonour of His Majeſty's Government, and the Hazard of the Publick Peace: Theſe are to give Notice, That what Perſon ſoever ſhall Diſcover unto one of the Secretaries of State, the Printer, Publiſher, Author, or Hander to the Preſs of any of the ſaid Libels, ſo that full Evidence may be made thereof to a Jury, without mentioning the Informer, eſpecially one Libel intituled, An Account of the Growth of Popery, &c. And another call'd A Seaſonable Argument to all the Grand-Juries, &c. the Diſcoverer ſhall be Rewarded as follows: He ſhall have Fifty Pounds for ſuch Diſcovery, as aforeſaid, of the Printer, or the Publiſher of it from the Preſs; and for the Hander of it to the Preſs, One Hundred Pounds, &c.

Marvel's Account of the Growth of Popery.

Dr. William Lucy, Lord Biſhop of St. David's, Died on the 4th of October, and was Buried in the Collegiate-Church of Brecknock, with a Black Marble Monument, and a Latin Inſcription in Golden Letters; to whom ſucceeded Dr. William Thomas. The Arch-Biſhop of Canterbury, Dr. Gilbert Sheldon, had for ſome Years retir'd from the Court, and from a Concern in all State-Affairs, and lived for the moſt part in a Retirement at Croydon, where he Died on Friday, November 9th, and his Body was privately Interred in the Parochial-Church, near to the Tomb of Arch-Biſhop Whitgift, according to his own ſpecial Direction. Soon after, a ſtately Monument was erected over his Grave, by his Nephew and Heir Sir Joſeph Sheldon, late Lord-Mayor of London, with a large and elegant Inſcription on it. The King was under ſome Difficulty to find a proper Succeſſor; but at laſt, by the Recommendation of his Brother the Duke of York, he reſolved upon Dr. William Sancroft, Dean of St. Paul's, as a Perſon of great Prudence and Moderation, and gave his Congé d'Eſlire and Letter Miſſive for him, on January the 7th, who was accordingly Conſecrated in the Abbey-Church of St. Peter at Weſtminſter, on Sunday, January the 27th; at which Ceremony were preſent, and afterward were very nobly Entertained, the Lord Chancellor, Lord Treaſurer, Lord Privy-Seal, Duke of Monmouth, and many other of the Principal Nobility.

Eccleſiaſtical Preferments.

The Convocation Met occaſionally with this and every other Seſſion of Parliament: But ſince the Reviſal of the Liturgy, and the Settlement of the Church by the Act of Uniformity, they had enter'd upon no manner of Buſineſs; nor had they thought it proper to attempt any by their own Authority, or to deſire any Royal Commiſſion for it; only thoſe Members who were near the Town, did, in purſuance of the Arch-Biſhop's

Convocation without Buſineſs.

1677. Prorogation, Aſſemble from time to time, upon Wedneſdays and Fridays, to ſay their Prayers, and then to entertain themſelves by ſome private Conferences with one another. However, to keep up the Dignity, and at leaſt the Being of a Convocation, whenever any Prolocutor died, or was promoted, the Lower Houſe, by the Arch-Biſhop's Direction, choſe a Succeſſor: So now, Dr. Sancroft, Prolocutor, being confirmed in the See of Canterbury on January the 24th, Dr. Stillingfleet, who ſucceeded him in the Deanery of St. Paul's, was likewiſe choſen Prolocutor, and confirmed on the 14th of March.

Care for Re-building the Church of St. Paul, London.

The Re-building of the Cathedral of St. Paul in London went on but very ſlowly; and therefore, to excite and encourage Benefactors, A Brief Account of all Receipts and Expences in the Work of St. Paul's Church, was in September printed and publiſhed, for the Satisfaction of ſuch Perſons as have contributed to the ſame, or ſhall hereafter promote ſo Honourable a Building.

Profaneneſs puniſh'd.

On January the 3d, the Earl of Pembroke was committed by His Majeſty's Command, to the Tower, for Blaſphemy, Abuſe of the Celebration of the Sacrament of the Lord's-Supper, and other his Miſdemeanors (altogether unfit to be named) towards the Lord North's Chaplain, and Others: But on the 30th of January he was releaſed from his Impriſonment, upon the Hearing of his Caſe in the Houſe of Lords, who upon the ſame Declared and Adjudged, That the ſingle Teſtimony (although upon Oath) of a Commoner, was not ſufficient Evidence againſt a Peer denying the Fact upon his Honour. His Lordſhip ſoon after fell under the Accuſation of Murther, for which he ſome time abſconded; but on Tueſday, April the 2d, 1678. he ſurrendred himſelf, at Turnham-Green, to Sir Edward Carteret Gentleman-Uſher of the Black-Rod, who the ſame Evening convey'd him to the Tower of London, in order to his being brought to a Tryal before the Houſe of Peers, and on Thurſday following he was brought thither by Sir John Robinſon Lieutenant of the Tower, and after Eight Hours ſpent in the Formalities of the Tryal, his Lordſhip was by the Votes of the major-part of the Peers there preſent declared Not Guilty of Murther, but Guilty of Manſlaughter, and had the benefit of his Peerage allowed him for the ſame by the Lord High-Chancellor (who was High-Steward pro hac Vice) purſuant to the Privilege granted to the Nobility in this behalf for their firſt Offence, made in the Firſt Year of the Reign of King Edward VI.

1678. The King began this Year 1678, with ſome Teſtimony of his being willing to gratifie his Parliament, and his People, by putting a ſtop to the Victories and Violencies of the French King, and therefore he cauſed his Proclamation to be publiſh'd, for Recalling and Prohibiting Seamen who were his Natural-born Subjects, from ſerving of Foreign Princes; it being made appear, that the French Ships were in great part Mann'd by Engliſh Mariners. And on March 30th, as if on the Proſpect of a ſudden War, His Majeſty iſſued his Proclamation for a General Faſt to be obſerved on Wedneſday April the 10th, within London and Weſtminſter, and on Wedneſday April the 24th, throughout the reſt of the Kingdom, for the Imploring a Bleſſing from Almighty God upon His Majeſty, and all His Dominions, and for the averting of thoſe Judgments which our manifold Sins and Provocations have moſt juſtly deſerved.

Approaches to a War with France.

The Parliament more enclin'd than the King to ſuch a War.

The Parliament were much more forward than the King to enter into a Neceſſary War with France, for the Preſervation of the Spaniſh Netherlands, and for Reſtoring the Balance of Europe, and ſhew'd their Zeal for it, in ſome Votes and Reſolutions that made the King uneaſie; and therefore, on Monday May 13th, his Majeſty came to the Houſe of Lords, and after giving his Royal Aſſent to ſeveral Private Acts, he was pleaſed to Command the Lord Chancellor to Prorogue the Parliament till Thurſday the 23d of this Month, and accordingly the Parliament was Prorogued to that time; and then Meeting again at Weſtminſter, his Majeſty came in his Robes, and the Commons attending, his Majeſty made a Gracious Speech to the Two Houſes on the Subject of their Meeting; which done, the Lord Chancellor more fully declared his Majeſty's Mind to them on this Occaſion. They Met on Monday May 27th; the Commons being impatient of all further delay in Declaring War againſt France, came to this Reſolution, That the Army lately raiſed, and now in being, was a great Charge and Burden to the Nation: That if His Majeſty thought fit to enter into a War againſt the French King, this Houſe is always ready to aſſiſt him in it; but if otherwiſe, they will proceed to the Conſideration of providing for the ſpeedy Disbanding of the Army. Theſe Proceedings made the King more and more uneaſie; and at laſt, on Monday, July 15th, his Majeſty brought this Seſſion to an End, after the giving his Royal Aſſent to the Publick Acts following, as well as to Twelve Private.

1678.

9. " An Act for Preſervation of Fiſhing in the " River of Severne.

After which, the Lord Chancellor, by His Majeſty's Command, acquainted the Two Houſes, That His Majeſty had thought fit, in the preſent Conjuncture of Affairs, to Prorogue them to the Firſt of Auguſt next, and ſo to keep them in Call by ſhort Prorogations, His Majeſty not knowing how ſoon he might have need of their further Service and Aſſiſtance: But that His Majeſty's Intention was, they ſhould not Meet till towards Winter, unleſs there were Occaſion for their Aſſembling ſooner, of which He would give them timely Notice by his Proclamation, and accordingly the Parliament was Prorogued till the Firſt Day of Auguſt next.

Parliament Prorogu'd.

On Thurſday the 1ſt of Auguſt the Two Houſes Met at Weſtminſter, and were, by Commiſſion, further Prorogued till the 29th Inſtant, with a Declaration, " That it was His Majeſty's Plea-
" ſure, they ſhould at that time not only Meet,
" but ſhould continue to Sit, for the Diſpatch of
" divers weighty Affairs." And accordingly a Proclamation was publiſh'd, to require the Attendance of the reſpective Members, in a Full Aſſembly, on the ſaid 29th of Auguſt. But for all this Aſſurance, His Majeſty publiſhed another Proclamation, Declaring, That having now taken into his Conſideration, That the State of Affairs Abroad was much changed ſince his laſt Proclamation, He had now therefore thought fit, with the Advice

Treaty of Nimeguen.

In the mean Time the Treaty of Nimeguen was managed with great Artifice by the French, and with too much Remiſsneſs and Negligence by moſt of the Confederates. The King of France about the Beginning of April made a Publick Declaration of the Terms upon which alone He was reſolved to make a General Peace: But it being diſhonourable and unſafe for the ſeveral Confederates to accept of them; and the Dutch finding the Councils of England to be uncertain, and being weary of a War that loſt their Trade, and drain'd their Treaſure, they re-aſſum'd their Inclinations to a Separate Peace. Under this Diſpoſition the King ſent over Sir William Temple once more to Holland, who conſulting with the Prince of Orange, and the Chief Burgo-Maſters concluded a Treaty in Six Days, whereby France was Obliged within Fourteen Days after the Date of it, to declare, That they would evacuate the Spaniſh Towns, or in Caſe of their Refuſal, Holland was engaged to go on with the War, and England immediately to declare againſt France, in Conjunction with Holland and the reſt of the Confederates.

Dutch inclined to Separate Peace.

Siege of Mons.

In the mean time the City of Mons, one of the beſt Frontiers remaining to Flanders, was ſtrongly blocked up by the French Army under Command of the Duke of Luxemburgh, who was ſo confident of the good Poſture he was in, that he ſent Word to the Mareſchal D'Eſtrades, one of the French Plenipotentiaries at Nimeguen, He was ſo poſted, That if he had but 10000 Men, and the Prince of Orange 40000, yet he was ſure he cou'd not be forced, much leſs while He took his Army to be much ſtronger than That of the Prince. But however the Prince reſolved to break through all Diſadvantages whatever, and on Sunday, Auguſt 17. decamped from Soignes, Marched towards Roches, and from thence Reſolv'd to Advance to the Enemy, whoſe Right Wing was poſted at the Abby of St. Dennis, and the Left at Mamoy St. Pierre, with ſuch Advantage of Situation, that they thought themſelves inacceſſible; for beſides the Woods, there was only a Precipice led to them, and that by narrow Paths. About 12. the Cannon began to play upon St. Dennis, and ſoon after the Confederate Dragoons behav'd themſelves ſo gallantly that they drove the French from their Faſtneſs; and made themſelves Maſters of the Cloyſter; while Adjutant General Collier advanc'd towards the Abby, and paſſing his Battalions in a Defile through the narrow Paſſages, and ſliding down the Precipices with an invincible Reſolution, and after a Vigorous Reſiſtance, made the French retire within their Lines. The Duke of Monmouth arrived in the Confederate Camp about Noon, and Din'd with the Prince in the open Field; they were both preſent at the deſperate Attack upon the Abby after Dinner, animating the Soldiers very much by their Preſence and Example. From hence they both wheeled off to Chalteau, which was Attack'd by the Spaniards in the Right Wing under the Duke De Villa Hermoſa, aſſiſted by ſome Engliſh and Scotch Regiments, commanded by the Brave Earl of Offery, who indeed did Wonders. Here the Prince of Orange advanced ſo far that he was in great Danger of being loſt, had not Monſieur Overkirk come in ſeaſonably to his Relief, and killed a French Captain that was juſt ready to let a Piſtol fly at him. At laſt, by Favour of the Night, the Duke of Luxemburgh made his Retreat without any Noiſe, withdrew towards Mons, and cover'd himſelf with a Wood on one Side, and a River on the other, leaving to the Prince, as a Teſtimony of Victory, the Field where the Battle was fought, the greateſt Part of the wounded, ſeveral Tents and ſome Baggage, with a great Quantity of Powder and other War-like Ammunition; One of the French Officers was heard to ſay after the Battle, That he eſteem'd this the only Heroick Action that had been done in the whole Courſe or Progreſs of the War. Next Morning the Prince received Advice from the States of the Separate Peace between them and the French Signed at Nimeguen. The News whereof he immediately ſent to the Duke of Luxemburgh, who with a great Compliment deſir'd an Interview with him, which being agreed to, They met in the Field at the Head of their Chief Officers, where all Things paſt with great Civility and Gallantry on both Sides, the French crowding about a Young Prince, that had made ſo much Noiſe in the World, and but the Day before had given Conduct and Vigour to ſuch a deſperate Action. Yet many Reflections were made upon it by the Prince's Friends as well as Enemies; ſome ſaying, that he knew the Peace was Signed before the Fight began; (but if this was really ſo, it ſignify'd nothing, ſince he was not obliged to take Notice of it till he had Advice from the States) and that it was too great a Venture both to himſelf and the States, and too great a Sacrifice to his own Honour, ſince it could be to no other Advantage: Others laid the Blame upon the Marqueſs of Grana, who, they ſay, had intercepted and concealed the States Packet to the Prince, which came into the Camp the Day before the Battle was fought, but after it was reſolved on; and that he had hopes by ſuch a Breach of the Peace even after it was Signed, that the Progreſs of it would be defeated; whether this were real Fact or no, could never be made appear, but ſo much was true, that the Prince could not have ended the War with greater Glory nor with greater Spight, to ſee ſuch a mighty Occaſion wreſted out of his Hand, by the ſudden and unexpected Signing of the Peace, which he had aſſured himſelf the States would not have conſented to without the Spaniards; yet upon the certain News of it, he drew back his Army, returned to the Hague, and left the States to purſue their own Paces in order to the finiſhing of the Treaty between France and Spain, wherein the Dutch Ambaſſadors at Nimeguen imployed themſelves with great Zeal and Diligence, and no longer like Parties and Confederates but as Mediators, while the Engliſh Plenipotentiary who continued ſtill there in that Figure, declined the Function, as being a Matter wherein he found the Court of England would not take any Part, nor allow themſelves to have had any in the Peace between France and Holland.

Engliſh Court now inclin'd to a War.

And it ſeem'd indeed a Myſtery in the Politicks of the Engliſh Court, that having been hitherto averſe to a War with France, They were now as Angry at the Proſpect of a Peace. They did this either to fall in with the general Inclination of the Parliament and People of England, who were forward to Quarrel with the French: Or elſe they did it in hopes that the Proſecution of ſuch a grateful War, would cover the Duke of York and his Friends from the Conſequence of the Popiſh Plot, that began now to be diſcover'd. But whatever the Reaſon was, 'tis certain that about the Middle of Auguſt, Mr. Hyde was ſuddenly diſpatcht over from England to the Surprize even of all in Holland, and more eſpecially of our Ambaſſador there, who had not the leaſt Intimation of it. He preſented the States with a Memorial to this Effect, " That His Majeſty having underſtood that " a ſeparate Treaty of Peace had been Concluded " and Signed between the Moſt Chriſtian King's " Ambaſſadors and thoſe of the States. He was Memorial to the States of Holland.

1678. " extreamly Surprized at that manner of Proceedure, there being no Security given for the " evacuating the Towns in Flanders, nor for providing a ſufficient Barrier on this Side of the " Empire, and therefore He had ſent over this " Ambaſſador in his Name and on his Part, to " aſſure them, That if the Lords, the States, will " refuſe to ratify that which was Signed by their " Ambaſſadors at Nimeguen; His Majeſty, Three " Days after ſuch a Declaration ſhall be notified " to him, will Declare Actual War againſt France " and carry it on in all Points according to the " Articles and Obligations of his late Treaty with " the States.

When the Prince of Orange was made acquainted with this Proceedure of England, by Mr. Hyde, who went on Purpoſe to Hounſlerdike to do it, he was no ſooner withdrawn, but the Prince lift up his Hands two or three Times, and ſaid to Sir William Temple, then preſent, Was ever any thing ſo hot and ſo cold as this Court of yours? Will the King that is ſo often at Sea ever learn the World that I ſhall never forget, ſince my laſt Paſſage, when in a great Storm, the Captain was crying out to the Man at the Helm all Night, Steddy, Steddy, Steddy? If this Diſpatch had come Twenty Days ago, it would have changed the Face of all Things in Chriſtendom, and the War might have been carried on till France had yielded to the Treaty of the Pyrenees, and left the World in quiet for the reſt of their Lives; but it is my Opinion as it comes now, it will have no Effect at all, at leaſt it's my Opinion, tho' I would not ſay ſo to Mr. Hyde: And indeed the Event proved anſwerable to the Prince's Judgment. For the French at Nimeguen managed their Affairs with ſo much Art and Application, That another Separate Peace with the Spaniards was firſt concluded and ratified, and before the End of January, another Peace with the Emperor, and Princes of the Empire, to the Excluſion of none, but the Brave Duke of Lorrain. And all this without the Intervention of Sir William Temple and Sir Leoline Jenkins the Engliſh Mediators, becauſe the Imperial Plenipotentiaries would not allow them the Precedency of Signing.

Other Separate Peaces.

We come now to a great Criſis in Politicks, The Diſcovery of the Popiſh Plot, firſt made by Titus Oats, who had been Educated and Admitted into Orders in the Church of England and employed upon a Cure in Kent, but afterwards (ſeemingly at leaſt) was reconciled to the Church of Rome, and going over to St. Omers, was enter'd into the Engliſh College there; and being thence ſent into Spain, he ingratiated himſelf with the Jeſuits and Prieſts in thoſe Parts, and ſo by Degrees came to the Knowledge of what he now inform'd the King and Council of, A Plot carried on by the Jeſuits and other Roman Catholicks againſt His Majeſty's Life, the Proteſtant Religion, and the Government of this Kingdom. It ſeem'd to make no great Impreſſion on the King; But the Privy Council ſat twice a Day, from Saturday the 28th of September for a Week and more, and ſeveral Perſons were Examin'd and Committed by them, viz. Sir George Wakeman, Mr. Coleman, Mr. Langhorne, Thomas Whitehead, John Gauan, Anthony Turner, William Ireland, William Marſhall, William Rumſey, James Corker, Thomas Pickering, of which Number the laſt Eight were Jeſuits and Prieſts, with divers others. Mr. Oats for a Confirmation of his Teſtimony, referr'd himſelf to Letters and Papers, which he ſaid were in the Cuſtody of Mr. Coleman, then Secretary to the Dutcheſs of York, who before his Houſe was ſearcht had Time enough to convey away all the Papers of the Two laſt Years, with his Book of Entries of them. However, thoſe Letters that were found, and afterwards publiſhed, did enough convince the World of the dangerous and deſperate Intrigues of the Popiſh Party. An Ingenious Writer has left this Remark upon it,

" queſtion. How far the near Proſpect of a Popiſh Succeſſor ripen'd the Hopes, and gave new Vigour to the Deſigns of that Party, and what Methods they were then upon, to bring thoſe Deſigns about, Coleman's Letters alone, without any other concurring Evidence, are more than ſufficient to put the Matter out of doubt. But what Superſtructures might have been afterwards built upon an unqueſtionable Foundation, and how far ſome of the Witneſſes of that Plot might come to darken Truth by ſubſequent Additions of their own muſt be deferr'd till the Great Account, to be made before a Higher Tribunal: And till then, a great Part of the Popiſh Plot, as it was then ſworn to, will in all Human Probability lie among the darkeſt Scenes of our Engliſh Hiſtory.

But the moſt unhappy Demonſtration of the Truth of this Conſpiracy, was given by the Death of Sir Edmund-Bury Godfrey, a Juſtice of Peace for Middleſex, before whom the Depoſitions of Mr. Oats had been taken, and who had appear'd very zealous for the Diſcovery and Proſecution of the Plot. For which Reaſon He was extreamly hated by the Papiſts, and ſo much threatned with their Revenge upon him, that he himſelf was apprehenſive of his own Danger, as Mr. Mulys gave this Information to the Houſe of Commons, About Five or Six Days before Sir Edmund-Bury Godfrey was miſſing from his Houſe, I met him in St. James's Park, and in Diſcourſe, told him that I underſtood he examined Mr. Oats about a Plot that was much diſcours'd of, and deſired to have ſuch an Account from him as might be fit to be communicated: Whereupon he gave me ſome ſhort Relation, agreeing for the moſt part with what was the common Diſcourſe of the Town.— But I muſt not talk much (ſaid he) for I lie under ill Circumſtances: Some great men blame me for not having done my Duty, and I am threatned by others, and very great ones too, for having done too much. He then preſſed to leave me, and without ſaying much more we parted, And farther Mr. Robinſon gave this Account to the Houſe of Commons, " That he met Sir Edmund-Bury Godfrey at the " Seſſions at Weſtminſter on Tueſday and Wedneſday " before he was miſſing; and that he asked him " whether he had any hand in taking the Informations touching the Plot; and that he made " him Anſwer, That he had taken them, though " very unwillingly: and deſiring of him that he " might ſee them, he told him he could not, for " that he had left them with my Lord Chief " Juſtice Scroggs; And that Dining with him on " Wedneſday, and diſcourſing concerning the Plot, " and the Examinations touching the ſame, Sir " Edmund-Bury Godfrey ſaid theſe Words: I have " taken them, and I know not what will be the Conſequence of them, but I believe I ſhall be the firſt " Martyr": According to theſe Preſages, He was found miſſing from his Houſe on October the 14th and ſome Days after his Dead Body was found in the Fields caſt into a Ditch, and as it appear'd by concurring Evidence, walking by Somerſet-Houſe he had been thruſt in at the Water-Gate, thence hurried to a private Chamber, there barbarouſly Aſſaſſinated and his Body afterwards expoſed in ſuch manner as that the World might imagine he had killed himſelf. The Diſcovery of this Murder was firſt made by Mr. William Bedloe, and afterwards confirm'd by the Confeſſion of Mr. Miles Prance, and the Execution of the Actors in it, Green, Berry, and Hill, who yet at their Death deny'd it.

Meeting of the Parliament

1678. Matter, which had rais'd ſuch an univerſal Amazement and Abhorrence in the Nation, and therefore his Majeſty thus deliver'd himſelf to the Two Houſes.

King's Speech.

My Lords and Gentlemen,

" I Have thought the Time very long ſince We " parted laſt, and would not have deferred " your Meeting by ſo many Prorogations if I " could well have met you ſooner.

" The Part which I have had this Summer in " the Preſervation of Our Neighbours, and the " Well-ſecuring what was left of Flanders, is ſuffi- " ciently known, and acknowledged by all that " are abroad.

" And though for this Cauſe I have been obli- " ged to keep up my Troops, without which our " Neighbours had abſolutely deſpaired, yet both " the Honour and the Intereſt of the Nation have " been ſo far improved by it, that I am confident " no Man here would repine at it, or think the " Money raiſed for their disbanding to have been " ill employed in their Continuance; and I do " aſſure you, I am ſo much more out of Purſe " for that Service, that I expect you ſhould ſup- " ply it. How far it may be neceſſary (conſider- " ing the Preſent State of Chriſtendom) to reduce " the Land and Sea-Forces, or to what Degree, " is worthy of all our Serious Conſiderations.

" I now intend to acquaint you (as I ſhall al- " ways do with any thing that concerns Me) " That I have been informed of a Deſign againſt " my Perſons by the Jeſuites, of which I ſhall for- " bear any Opinion, leſt I may ſeem to ſay too " much or too little; but I will leave the Matter to " the Law, and in the mean time will take as much " Care as I can to prevent all manner of Practices " by that ſort of Men, and of others too, who " have been tampering in a high Degree by Fo- " reigners, and contriving how to introduce Po- " pery amongſt us.

" I ſhall Conclude with recommending to you " my other Concerns.

" I have been under great Diſappointments by " the Defect of the Poll-Bill.

" My Revenue is under great Anticipations, " and at beſt, was never equal to the conſtant and " neceſſary Expence of the Government whereof " I intend to have the whole State laid before " you, and require you to look into it, and con- " ſider of it with that Duty and Affection which " I am ſure I ſhall ever find from you.

" The reſt I leave to the Lord-Chancellor.

Addreſs on Occaſion of the Popiſh Plot.

The Firſt Buſineſs of the Two Houſes was to Agree in an Addreſs to His Majeſty, " That In- " formation had been given of an horrible Deſign " againſt his Sacred Life, and being very ſenſible " of the fatal Conſequence of ſuch an Attempt, " and of the Dangers of the Subverſion of the " Proteſtant Religion and Government of this " Realm, They humbly beſeech His Majeſty, That " a Solemn Day of Faſting and Humiliation " may be appointed to Implore the Mercy and " Protection of Almighty God to His Majeſty's " Royal Perſon, and in Him to all His Loyal " Subjects, and to pray that God will bring to " light more and more all ſecret Machinations " againſt His Majeſty and the whole Kingdom". Which was accordingly done by Proclamation, dated 25th of October, requiring that Wedneſday the 13th of November ſhould be kept for a General Faſt. Soon after, Both Houſes again Agreed in another Addreſs, " That having taken " into their Serious Conſideration the Bloody and " Traiterous Deſigns of Popiſh Recuſants againſt " His Majeſty's Sacred Perſon and Government, " and the Proteſtant Religion, They do for Pre- " vention thereof moſt humbly beſeech His Ma- " jeſty to iſſue forth his Royal Proclamation, " commanding all Perſons being Popiſh Recuſants, " or ſo reputed, to depart from the Cities of " London and Weſtminſter, and all other Places " within Ten Miles of the ſame, on or before the " 7th Day of November next enſuing, under Pain " of His Majeſty's higheſt Diſpleaſure, and of " the ſevereſt Execution of the Laws againſt " them". To which His Majeſty comply'd, and gave out a Proclamation to that Effect, dated October 30. 1678.

Another Addreſs on the ſame Occaſion.

And becauſe this Plot was by ſome Perſons artificially ſuppreſt, and even by ſome others inſolently Ridicul'd. Therefore on Thurſday, October the 31ſt. The Commons Reſolved Nemine Contradicente, " That upon the Evidence that has al- " ready appeared to this Houſe, this Houſe is of " Opinion, that there is and hath been a Dam- " nable and Helliſh Plot, contrived and carried " on by Popiſh Recuſants, for aſſaſſinating " and murthering the King, for ſubverting the " Government, and rooting out and deſtroying " the Proteſtant Religion. Reſolution of the Commons declaring the Truth of a Popiſh Plot.

Ordered, " That this Vote be communicated " to the Lords at a Conference, and that the " Lords be deſired to join with this Houſe in pro- " viding Remedies for Preſervation of His Ma- " jeſty's Perſon and Government, and the Prote- " ſtant Religion"; And in a Conference between the Two Houſes on this Subject, November the 1ſt. this Report was made, " The Lords have conſi- " dered the Vote of the Houſe of Commons com- " municated to them at the Conference, and have " moſt readily and unanimouſly concurred with " them in it Nemine Contradicente; and their " Lordſhips are very glad to ſee that Zeal which " the Commons have ſhewed upon this Occaſion, " and do fully concurr with them, That the moſt " ſpeedy and ſerious Conſiderations of Both " Houſes are neceſſary for Prevention of the " imminent Dangers; in order whereunto, their " Lordſhips have reſolved to Sit de Die in Diem, " Forenoon and Afternoon, and deſire that the " Houſe of Commons would do ſo, &c. Concurrence of the Lords.

The King willing to remove their Fears.

One Great Danger was the Number of Papiſts, and even of new Converts to Popery, retained in his Majeſty's Guards, and therefore to take away this Apprehenſion of the Parliament, on November the 2d. his Majeſty was pleaſed to Declare in Council, " That whoſoever ſhall make Diſcovery " of any Officer or Soldier of his Majeſty's Horſe " or Foot-Guards, who, having formerly taken " the Oaths of Allegiance and Supremacy, and " the Teſt, Enjoined by a Late Act of Parliament, " For preventing Dangers which may happen from " Popiſh Recuſants, hath ſince been perverted to the " Romiſh Religion, or hear Maſs, ſuch Diſcoverer, " upon Information thereof given to his Grace " the Duke of Monmouth, Lord General of his " Majeſty's Forces, ſhall have a Reward of Twen- " ty Pounds for every Officer or Soldier ſo diſco- " vered as aforeſaid. And to the End his Ma- " jeſty's Pleaſure herein may be fully known, His " Majeſty doth Command that this Order be forth- " with Printed and Publiſhed.

Bill againſt Popiſh Peers.

A Second Danger was from the Intereſt of Popiſh Members of Parliament, but eſpecially in the Houſe of Peers, and therefore the Commons prepared a Bill, which with ſome Difficulty was Agreed to by the Lords, and with ſome Reluctancy paſſed by his Majeſty into an Act, For the more effectual Preſerving the King's Perſon and Government, by diſabling Papiſts from Sitting in either Houſe of Parliament.

Bill of Excluſion.

But that which moſt threatned the Security of the Proteſtant Religion, was the Proſpect of a Popiſh Succeſſor, and therefore the Leading Members in Both Houſes began to form the Deſign of a Bill of Excluſion, as the only Means to extinguiſh the 1678. the Hopes and Expectation of the Popiſh Faction. The Commons began gently on this Occaſion, and on November the 4th let a Debate ariſe in their Houſe, for an Addreſs to be preſented to his Majeſty, That his Royal Highneſs may withdraw himſelf from his Majeſty's Perſon and Councils. But then they Adjourned this Debate till Friday, November the 8th, and then again Adjourned it over till Tueſday following. The King underſtood their Meaning; and being extremely Tender of his Brother, on Saturday, November the 9th, he came to the Houſe of Lords, and made this Gracious Speech:

Which offends the King.

My Lords and Gentlemen,

The King's Speech, in favour of the Duke.

"I Am ſo very ſenſible of the great and extraordinary Care you have already taken, and ſtill continue to ſhew for the Safety and Preſervation of my Perſon, in theſe Times of Danger, that I could not ſatisfie my ſelf, without coming hither on purpoſe, to give you All my moſt hearty Thanks for it.

"Nor do I think it enough to give you my Thanks only, but I hold my ſelf obliged to let you ſee withal, that I do as much ſtudy your Preſervation too, as I can poſſibly; and that I am as ready to join with you in all the Ways and Means that may Eſtabliſh a firm Security of the Proteſtant Religion, as your own Hearts can wiſh.

"And this not only during my Time, (of which, I am ſure, you have no fear) but in future Ages, even to the End of the World.

"And therefore I am come to aſſure you, That whatſoever reaſonable Bills you ſhall preſent to be Paſſed into Laws, to make you ſafe in the Reign of any Succeſſor, (ſo as they tend not to Impeach the Right of Succeſſion, nor the Deſcent of the Crown in the true Line, and ſo as they reſtrain not My Power, nor the juſt Rights of any Proteſtant Succeſſor) ſhall find from me a ready Concurrence.

"And I deſire you withal, to think of ſome more effectual Means for the Conviction of Popiſh Recuſants, and to expedite your Counſels as faſt as you can, that the World may ſee Our Unanimity, and that I may have the Opportunity of ſhewing you how ready I am to do any thing that may give Comfort and Satisfaction to ſuch Dutiful and Loyal Subjects.

The Houſe of Commons went after Dinner to the Banquetting-Houſe of Whitehall, and by their Speaker return'd his Majeſty their humble and hearty Thanks, for his moſt Gracious Speech this Day made to Both Houſes of Parliament. To which his Majeſty was pleaſed to give this Anſwer, Gentlemen, It ſhall always be my ſtudy to preſerve the Proteſtant Religion, and to advance and ſupport the Intereſt of my People.

The Commons diſſatisfied.

But ſtill the Commons were hearty and zealous in the Proſecution of the Plot, and would not be diverted by any fine Words; and therefore, on November the 12th, they Reſolved, "That there "being an Accuſation of High-Treaſon againſt "Sir William Godolphin, his Majeſty's Ambaſſador "in Spain, That an humble Addreſs be preſented "to his Majeſty, to deſire his Majeſty to call "home Sir William Godolphin to Anſwer the Accuſation." To which his Majeſty was pleaſed to Anſwer, That he had already Order'd his Letters of Revocation; and that he had a Perſon in his Eye, who he deſigned ſhould ſucceed him in that Service. And on the ſame Day the Commons preſented another Addreſs to his Majeſty, deſiring, "That a Special Commiſſion may be iſſued forth, "for tendring the Oaths of Allegiance and Supremacy to all the Servants of his Majeſty and his "Royal Highneſs, and to all other Perſons (except her Majeſty's Portugal Servants) reſiding "within his Majeſty's Houſes of Whitehall, "St. James's, and Somerſet-Houſe, and all other "his Majeſty's Houſes; and that there may likewiſe Special Commiſſions be iſſued forth, for "tendring the ſaid Oaths to all Perſons reſiding "within the Two Serjeants-Inns, all the Inns of "Court, and Inns of Chancery." To which his Majeſty returned an Anſwer in Writing, That as to all his Majeſty's own Servants, all the Servants of his Royal Highneſs, all other Perſons reſiding in Whitehall, St. James's, Somerſet-Houſe, or in any other of his Majeſty's Palaces or Houſes, except the Menial Servants of the Queen and Dutcheſs; as alſo all Perſons within either of the Serjeants-Inns, or any of the Inns of Court, or Chancery, his Majeſty willingly grants it: But as to the Queen's Menial Servants, who are ſo very inconſiderable in their Number, and within the Articles of Marriage, his Majeſty does not think it fit. And his Majeſty cannot but take notice, That in a late Addreſs from the Houſe of Peers, the Menial Servants of the Queen and Dutcheſs are excepted; and his Majeſty hopes this Houſe will proceed with the ſame Moderation as to that Particular. Given at the Court at Whitehall, the 14th Day of November, 1678. 1678.

King's Anſwer.

Make ſeveral Addreſſes.

But the Commons, in another Addreſs, did humbly Adviſe his Majeſty, and did renew their Deſires, That the Perſons excepted in his Majeſty's Meſſage, may be compreliended in the ſame Commiſſion: For which they do in all Duty lay before his Majeſty the Reaſons following: "1. For "the Quieting the Minds of your Majeſty's good "Proteſtant Subjects, who have a more than ordinary Care and Solicitude for the Safety of "your Majeſty's Perſon, by reaſon of the Notorious Conſpiracy of the Popiſh Party at this "time, even againſt the Life of your Sacred Majeſty. 2. By your Majeſty's Proclamation, "ſet forth upon the Addreſs of Both Houſes, "for Baniſhing Popiſh Recuſants Ten Miles "from London, there is no ſuch Reſtriction. "3. The Diſcouragement it would be to this "Kingdom, to ſee ſo great a Neglect; and the "Occaſions that Papiſts would take to ſay from "thence, That all our Fears are groundleſs. "4. It is too great a Countenance to the dangerous Factions, which are already come to that "height, that it renders all manner of Diſcouragement on that ſide neceſſary. 5. It is againſt "the Laws and Statutes of the Realm; which, as "they are preſerved and maintain'd by Your "Majeſty's Authority, ſo We aſſure our ſelves, "You will not ſuffer them to be thus violated "in your own Family and Royal Preſence, and "upon the Account of Popiſh Recuſants.

Commons inſiſt on their Deſires.

On Novemb. 18th, the Houſe being informed that there were ſeveral Commiſſions granted to Popiſh Recuſants, and Warrants alſo that they ſhould be Muſtered, notwithſtanding they have not taken the Oaths, and ſubſcribed the Declaration, according to the Act of Parliament, and that they were ſigned by Mr. Secretary Williamſon; they immediately ſent him to the Tower. This much offended the King, who next Day ſent for the Houſe of Commons to attend him in the Banquetting-Houſe, and told them, Tho' they Committed his Servant, without acquainting him; yet he intends to deal more freely with them, and acquaint them with his Intention to Releaſe his Secretary. Upon which immediately, the ſame Day, the Commons drew up an Addreſs to his Majeſty, to preſent to him theſe Reaſons of their Proceedings in the Commitment of Sir Joſeph Williamſon as a Member of their Houſe: "1. That divers Commiſſions "were Granted to Popiſh Officers, and Counter-"ſigned by the ſaid Sir Joſeph Williamſon, and "deliver'd 1678. " delivered out in October laſt, ſince the Meeting " of this Houſe, and the Diſcovery of the preſent " Popiſh Conſpiracy. 2. Diverſe Warrants have " alſo been produced before Us, of Diſpenſations " contrary to Law, for Popiſh Officers to con- " tinue in their Commands, and to be paſſed in " Muſter, notwithſtanding they have not taken " the Oaths of Allegiance and Supremacy, and " received the bleſſed Sacrament of the Lord's- " Supper, according to the late Act of Parliament " in that behalf: All which ſaid Warrants were " likewiſe Counter-ſigned by the ſaid Sir Joſeph " Williamſon. Which being complained of to Us, " and Confeſſed by the ſaid Sir Joſeph Williamſon; " We Your Majeſty's moſt Dutiful Subjects having " the immediate Conſideration before Us, of the " imminent Danger of Your Majeſty's Perſon, " the Safety whereof is above all things moſt dear, " and likewiſe the Dangers from Popiſh Plots ſo " nearly threatning the Peace and Safety of your " Majeſty's Government, and the Proteſtant Re- " ligion, were humbly of Opinion, we could not " diſcharge our Duty to your Majeſty and the " whole Kingdom, without the Committing the " ſaid Sir Joſeph Williamſon, and therefore moſt " humbly deſire that he may not be Diſcharged " by your Majeſty.

Secretary Williamſon ſent to the Tower.

This offends the King.

Commons give their Reaſons.

" And we do further moſt humbly deſire your " Majeſty, to Recall all Commiſſions Granted to " all Papiſts within the Kingdom of England and " Ireland, or any other your Majeſty's Dominions " and Territories.

To this His Majeſty return'd Anſwer in Writing, deliver'd to the Houſe by Mr. Secretary Coventry, Nov. 23d.

CHARLES REX.

King's Answer. HIS Majeſty having received an Addreſs the 19th Inſtant from this Houſe, is pleaſed to return this Anſwer:

That he Releaſed Mr. Secretary Williamſon before your Addreſs came, as he told you in the Banquetting-Houſe he would do.

As to the Reaſons of Granting thoſe Commiſſions, his Majeſty acquainted you at large with them, in his Speech, when you laſt attended him.

But in Anſwer to your preſent Addreſs, his Majeſty promiſes to Recall all his Commiſſions whatſoever, given to Papiſts, or reputed Papiſts, either in England or Ireland, immediately; and for his remoter Dominions, they ſhall likewiſe be Recalled with all the expedition the Safety of thoſe Places will permit.

The King betray'd himſelf to be very weary of theſe Proceedings, and was in haſte to get a Bill for Money, and ſo to Diſmiſs the too buſie Houſes: And therefore on Monday Novemb. 25th, his Majeſty was pleaſed to make this Speech to both Houſes:

My Lords and Gentlemen,

King's Speech. I Told you in the beginning of this Seſſion, how much I had been obliged to keep up my Forces in Flanders: That without it, our Neighbours had abſolutely deſpaired; and by this means, whatever has been ſaved of Flanders, is acknowledged to be wholly due to my Interpoſition: And I ſhewed you withal, that I had been forced to employ that Money which had been raiſed for Disbanding thoſe Troops, in the Continuance of them together; and not only ſo, but that I had been much more out of Purſe for that Service; a Service by which the Honour and Intereſt of the Nation hath been ſo far improv'd, that as I am confident no Man would repine at it, ſo I did not doubt but you would all be willing to ſupply it.

I have now undergone this Expence ſo long, that I find it abſolutely impoſſible to ſupport the Charge any longer, and did therefore think of putting an end to that Charge, by recalling my Troops with all poſſible ſpeed, who are already expoſed to the utmoſt extremity of Want and Miſery, being without any proſpect of further Pay or Subſiſtance. 1678.

But whilſt I was about to do this, I have been importun'd by the Spaniſh Miniſters to continue them a little longer, until the Ratifications of the Peace be exchanged: without which, all that hath been hitherto ſaved in Flanders, will inevitably fall into the hands of their Enemies.

And now, between their Importunity to keep up thoſe Troops, and my own Inability to Pay them any longer, I find my ſelf in great Difficulties what to reſolve. If you do not think that the Publick Safety may require the Continuance, I do wiſh as heartily as any Man, that, for the Publick Eaſe, they may be ſpeedily Disbanded, and Paid off.

I have thought fit thus to lay the Matter before you; and having acquitted my ſelf to all the World, by asking your Advice and Aſſiſtance; I deſire it may be Speedy, and without any manner of Delay.

The Houſe of Commons had before them a Bill for Raiſing the Militia; which, with Amendments, was Ingroſſed immediately after the King's Speech: Which Paſſing the Lords, was Rejected by the King, for this Reaſon, ſent in a Meſſage to the Commons by Mr. Secretary Coventry, Decemb. 4. The King rejects the Bill for the Militia.

CHARLES REX.

HIS Majeſty, to prevent all Miſunderſtandings that may ariſe, from his not Paſſing the late Bill of the Militia, is pleaſed to Declare, That he will readily Aſſent to any Bill of that kind, which ſhall be rendred to him, for the Publick Security of the Kingdom by the Militia, ſo as the whole Power of Calling, Continuing, or not Continuing of them together during the Time limited, be left to his Majeſty, to do therein as he ſhall find moſt expedient for the Publick Safety. A Meſſage to the Commons.

The Commons apprehended another Danger from the Engliſh Army in Flanders, which, upon the late Juncture of a Separate Peace, had nothing to do, but to be ready to be employed in ſome ill Service; and therefore on Wedneſday Nov. 27. it was Reſolved, Nemine Contradicente, " That it is " neceſſary, for the Safety of his Majeſty's Perſon, " and preſerving the Peace of the Government, " that all the Forces which have been raiſed ſince " the 29th of Septemb. 1677. and all others that " ſince that time have been brought over from " beyond Seas from Foreign Service, be forthwith " Diſbanded: And Reſolved it to be the humble " Opinion and Deſire of this Houſe, That the Forces " which are now in Flanders may be immediately " called over, in order to their Disbanding. And they preſented an Addreſs for this Purpoſe to his Majeſty, and made an Entry of his Majeſty's Anſwer, as a Refuſal to comply with their Deſire. But his Majeſty ſoon after was pleaſed to Declare, That he never gave any Order for ſuch Anſwer; but that his Intention was only in relation to the Forces that were in Flanders, and the Circumſtances as to thoſe Forces were altered ſince that time; and that his Majeſty had already given Orders for calling them over, in order to their Disbanding. And ſo his Majeſty fell eaſily into this Deſign, becauſe it depended on a Bill for granting a Supply to his Majeſty, by a Land Tax, for Diſbanding the ſaid Forces. Commons inſiſt on Diſbanding the Army. The King complies.

The Intrigues of the Miniſtry with the Court of France, was another Danger which raiſed the Jealouſie of the Commons: This appeared more eſpecially by a Meſſage from the King, on December 19th, delivered to the Houſe of Commons, That his Majeſty having received Information, That his Intrigues of France, 1678. his late Ambaſſador in France, Mr. Mountague, a Member of That Houſe had held ſeveral private Conferences with the Pope's Nuncio there, without any Directions or Inſtructions from his Majeſty, His Majeſty to the End that he might know the Truth of that Matter, had given Orders for the Seizing Mr. Montague's Papers. Upon which Mr. Mountague in his own Defence acquainted the Houſe, "That he had in his Cuſtody ſeveral Papers which "he conceived might tend very much to the "Safety of his Majeſty's Perſon and the Preſer- "vation of the Kingdom." And accordingly a Box of Writings was ſent for and opened in the Houſe, and Two Letters were produced and read in the Houſe, Subſcribed Danby, in the firſt of which, Dated London, 17. January, 1677. were theſe Expreſſions. My Lord, Yeſterday Monſieur Rouigny came to me with Monſieur Barrillon, (having given me his Father's Letters the Day before) and diſcourſed much upon the Confidence his King hath of the Firmneſs of Ours to Him, of the good Opinion his Maſter hath of me, and of his King's Reſolution to condeſcend to any thing that is not infamous to him, for the Satisfaction of our King, how certainly our King may depend upon all ſorts of Aſſiſtances and Supplies from his Maſter, in caſe the Friendſhip be preſerved.——The main of their Drift was to engage me to prevail with the King to prevail with the Prince of Orange.——The King muſt come to ſome Declaration of his Mind to the Parliament when it meets: That which makes the Hopes of Peace yet leſs probable is, that the Duke grows every Day leſs inclin'd to it, and has created a greater Indifferency in the King, than I could have imagined, which being added to the French King's Reſolution not to part with Tournay, do, I confeſs, make me deſpair of any Accommodation: Nevertheleſs, I am aſſured that One Principal Cauſe of the Adjournment for Thirteen Days, has been to ſee if any Expedient for the Peace could have been found in that Time, and the Effect of the Adjournment hath hitherto been, that no body will now believe other than that the Peace is already concluded betwixt Us and France, In another Letter, Subſcribed Danby, and dated London, March 25th, 1678. is among other Things what follows, In Caſe the Conditions of the Peace ſhall be Accepted, the King expects to have Six Millions of Livres Yearly for Three Years from the Time that this Agreement ſhall be Signed betwixt his Majeſty and the King of France, becauſe it will be Two or Three Years before he can hope to find his Parliament in an Humour to give him Supplies after the having made any Peace with France, and the Ambaſſador here has agreed to that Sum, but not for ſo long a Time; if you find the Peace will not be accepted, you are not to mention the Money at all, and all poſſible Care muſt be taken to have this whole Negotiation, as private as is poſſible, for Fear of giving Offence at home, where for the moſt part, we hear it Ten Days after any thing that is communicated to the French Miniſters: Upon reading theſe Letters, it was immediately Reſolved, That there was ſufficient Matter of Impeachment againſt Thomas Earl of Danby, Lord High-Treaſurer of England, and Articles of Impeachment were drawn up, and Agreed to on December 21ſt. "Firſt, That he hath "Traiterouſly Incroached to himſelf Regal Power "by Treating in Matters of Peace and War with "Foreign Princes and Ambaſſadors, and giving "Inſtructions to his Majeſty's Ambaſſadors a- "broad, without communicating the ſame to the "Secretaries of State, and the reſt of his Majeſty's "Council, &c. Secondly, That he hath Traite- "rouſly Endeavoured to Subvert the Ancient and "well-eſtabliſhed Form of Government, and in- "ſtead thereof, to introduce an Arbitrary and "Tyrannical Way of Government. And the "better to effect this his Purpoſe, he did deſign "the raiſing of an Army under Pretence of a War a- "gainſt the French King, and then to continue 1678. "the ſame, as a Standing Army within this "Kingdom, &c. Thirdly, That he Traiterouſly "intending to alienate the Hearts and Affections of "his Majeſty's good Subjects from his Royal "Perſon and Government, and to hinder the "Meeting of Parliaments, and to deprive his "Majeſty of their Safe and Wholſome Counſels, "&c. Fourthly, That he is Popiſhly affected, and "hath Traiterouſly concealed, after he had No- "tice of the late horrid Plot or Conſpiracy con- "trived by the Papiſts againſt his Majeſty's Per- "ſon and Government, and hath Suppreſt the "Evidence, and reproachfully diſcountenanced "the King's Witneſſes in the Diſcovery of it in "Favour of Popery, &c. Fifthly, That he hath "waſted the King's Treaſure by iſſuing out of his "Majeſty's Exchequer, and ſeveral Branches of "his Revenue, divers great Sums of Money for "unneceſſary Penſions and ſecret Services, to the "Value of 231602 l. within Two Years, &c. "Sixthly, That he hath by indirect Means procu- "red from his Majeſty for himſelf divers conſi- "derable Gifts and Grants of Inheritance of the "ancient Revenue of the Crown even contrary to "Acts of Parliaments". Theſe Articles were carried up to the Lords, with a Deſire, That the ſaid Thomas, Earl of Danby, might be Sequeſtred from Parliament, and forthwith committed to ſafe Cuſtody. There had been before an Impeachment carried up of Treaſon and other high Crimes and Miſdemeanours againſt Henry, Lord Arundel of Wardor; William, Earl of Powys, John, Lord Bellaſis; William, Lord Petres, and William, Viſcount Stafford, who had been all Committed to the Tower.

The King was ſo much diſturb'd with theſe Proceedings, that on Monday, December 30th. he came to the Houſe of Lords, and declared in a Speech, That it was with great Unwillingneſs that he was come to tell them that he intended to Prorogue them, That all of them were Witneſſes, he had not been well uſed, the Particulars of which he would acquaint them at a more ſeaſonable Time, in the mean time he would immediately enter upon the diſbanding of the Army, and do what good he could for the Kingdom, and Safety of Religion, and that he would proſecute the Diſcovery of the Popiſh Plot, to find out the Inſtruments of it, and take all the Care that is in his Power to ſecure the Proteſtant Religion as it is now Eſtabliſhed. And accordingly his Majeſty was pleaſed to Prorogue the Parliament till the 4th of February next.

This Prorogation ſo Incouraged the Papiſts, that they flock'd to London and Weſtminſter in great Numbers, and began to talk with ſo great Inſolence, that the King, by the Advice of his Council, was forced to publiſh a Proclamation, dated January 3d. declaring, That whereas ſeveral Popiſh Recuſants, and Perſons reputed to be ſuch, had, ſince the late Prorogation of the Parliament, taken the Boldneſs to reſort to the ſaid Cities, his Majeſty was moſt highly offended with that their Preſumption, and did Order, That a diligent and ſpeedy Search and Inquiry ſhould be made after them, and they ſhould be proceeded againſt with the utmoſt Severity. And on January 11th his Majeſty publiſhed another Proclamation, Commanding the immediate Return of all his Majeſty's Subjects who were in any Foreign Seminaries, and forbidding Relief to be ſent to them, according to a Statute made 27. Eliz.

But his Majeſty having no Hopes of Eaſe and Satisfaction from the preſent Parliament, was now at laſt inclined to diſſolve them, and therefore by Proclamation dated 24th January, his Majeſty declared, "That He had taken into his ſerious Con- "ſideration the many Inconveniences ariſing by "the over-long Continuance of One and the ſame "Parliament, wherefore he publiſhes and declares "his Royal Will and Pleaſure to Diſſolve this "preſent nd of this ong Par- iament, nd Re- exions n it.

Thus ended, with Honour to themſelves, the Long Parliament; which being firſt Called, and Begun on the 8th of May, 1661. had been Continued by ſeveral Prorogations and Adjournments for Seventeen Years, Eight Months, and Seventeen Days. Many Reflections were made on the prime Reaſon of their Diſſolution: Some Reſolv'd it into the King's Anger at the Commitment of, and Impeachment of his Firſt Miniſter, the Lord Treaſurer: but Sir William Temple is poſitive, " That the Treaſurer was before fallen into the " King's Diſpleaſure, for bringing the Popiſh Plot " into Parliament, againſt the King's abſolute " Command." Others think it was rather done upon Account of Protecting the Popiſh Lords in the Tower, and diverting, if poſſible, the Noiſe of the Popiſh Plot: For it is certain, the King did all along frown upon the Evidence, tho' Thomas Killigrew is ſaid to have told him, Your Majeſty knows more of the Plot than any body elſe; and Your Diſcovery of it, would quickly ſatisfie your People. But undoubtedly, the greateſt Reaſon of all, was, to cover the Duke of York from the Reſentment of the Commons, and the general Indignation of the People: And therefore, to prevent any Queſtion of him in the next Seſſion, His Majeſty thought fit to ſend him out of the Way, that his Abſence, if poſſible, might drop the Diſputes about him: ſo, on Feb. 28. he ſent him this Letter:

ing's Let- r to his other to ithdraw.

I Have already given you my Reſolves at large, why I think it fit that you abſent your ſelf for ſome time beyond the Seas: I am truly ſorry for the Occaſion; ſo may you be ſure, I ſhall never deſire it longer than it ſhall be abſolutely neceſſary for your Good, and my Service. In the mean time, I think it proper to give it you under my Hand, That I expect this Compliance from you, and deſire it may be as ſoon as conveniently you can. You may eaſily perceive with what Trouble I write this to you; there being Nothing I am more ſenſible of, than the conſtant Kindneſs you have ever had for me. I hope you are as juſt to me, to be aſſur'd, That no Abſence, nor any thing elſe, can ever change me from being truly and kindly,

Yours, C. R.

In purſuance to this Command, the Duke, with his Dutcheſs and Family, left St. James's, took Shipping, and for a while retired to the Hague, and from thence, to Bruſſels.

lonours nd Pre- rments.

As to Honours and Preferments Conferred this Year: On July 17th, the Right-Honourable George Lord Berkeley, of Berkeley-Caſtle, was Sworn of his Majeſty's Moſt-Honourable Privy-Council: On Octob. 18th, the Earl of Ailesbury was admitted to the ſame Board; as was James Earl of Salisbury on Jan. 3d; and the Earl of Clarendon on Jan. 8th. The Right Honourable James Earl of Arran, Son to his Grace the Duke of Hamilton, was on Jan. 14th Sworn one of the Gentlemen of his Majeſty's Bed-Chamber in Ordinary; which Mark of his ſpecial Favour his Majeſty was graciouſly pleaſed to Confer upon him, in Conſideration of the great and Loyal Services of that Ancient and Noble Family. Mr. Secretary Williamſon having fell into an high Diſpleaſure of the Houſe of Commons, not only for the reaſon of his Commitment, but, as they thought, of his irregular Diſcharge, thought fit to reſign his Place; and on Feb. 9th, His Majeſty was pleaſed to Conſtitute the Right-Honourable Robert Earl of Sunderland, one of his Principal Secretaries of State, in the room of Sir Joſeph Williamſon, who did then reſign the Seals into his Majeſty's Hands; and reſolving to retire and enjoy the Country, he did on the 14th of January Marry the Relict of the Lord O Bryan, who Deceaſed on the 1ſt of December, 1678.) Siſter and Co-heir of Charles late Duke of Richmond and Lenox, who Died at Elſeneur in Denmark on the 2d of December, 1672. being then his Majeſty's Ambaſſador Extraordinary to that Crown. Sir William Temple was call'd over from Holland by His Majeſty, in order to take upon him this Office; who acquainted the Prince of Orange and the States with his Journey, and the Deſign of it; who made him Compliments upon that Occaſion, and would have had him believe, that the Secretariſhip was to make Amends for the Loſs of his Ambaſſage. But Sir William told the Prince, " That though he muſt go, yet if he found the " Scene to be what it appear'd at that Diſtance, " he would not Charge himſelf with that Employ- " ment, upon any Terms that could be offer'd." Whether Sir William did refuſe it, or whether it was never in earneſt offer'd to him, this is certain, that it was diſpos'd of before Sir William's return to England: And it was not long a Secret, that the Earl of Sunderland paid Sir Joſeph Williamſon Six thouſand Pounds, and Five hundred Guinea's, in Conſideration of his Surrender of the ſaid Place. The Earl of Danby lying in the Tower under a like Diſpleaſure of the Commons, His Majeſty thought fit to Diſmiſs him from the Office of Lord High-Treaſurer of England; and the Lord Latimer, his Son, having deliver'd the White Staff into His Majeſty's Hands, His Majeſty was pleaſed to Appoint the Right-Honourable the Earl of Eſſex, Laurence Hyde Eſq; Sir John Ernle, Sir Edward Deering, and Sidney Godolphin Eſq; to be Commiſſioners of his Majeſty's Treaſury.

In Proſecution of the Popiſh Plot, Mr. William Staley being Convicted of Treaſonable Words againſt His Majeſty's Life, was Drawn, Hang'd and Quarter'd at Tyburn on the 26th of November. Edward Coleman Eſq; found Guilty of High-Treaſon, in Conſpiring the Death of the King, and Subverting his Government, and Extirpating of the True Proteſtant Religion, was Executed upon the like Sentence, on the 3d of December, having depended on a Promiſe of Pardon with ſo much Aſſurance, that ſome of his laſt Words were ſaid to be, There is no Faith in Man. On the 24th of January, William Ireland a Jeſuit, and John Grove, having been on the 14th of December Convicted at the Old-Bailey, of having Conſpired the Deſtruction of the King's Royal Perſon, the Subverſion of his Government, and the Extirpation of the Proteſtant Religion, were accordingly Executed at Tyburn; but their Heads and Quarters were delivered to their Friends to be buried, through His Majeſty's extraordinary Grace and Mercy. Green, Hill, and Berry, who were Indicted at the King's-Bench-Bar, on the 10th of February, for the Murther of Sir Edmund-Bury Godfrey, and upon a Full Evidence found Guilty, were ſoon after Executed: But Mr. Samuel Atkins being likewiſe Indicted as an Acceſſory to the ſaid Murther, was, after a Full Hearing of the Evidence againſt him, Acquitted, and thereupon Diſcharged. And at the latter-end of January, Roger Earl of Caſtlemain, Mr. Daniel Arthur of London, Merchant, and Eſq. Sheldon, were Executions of Popiſh Plotters.

1678. were, upon their Habeas Corpus, brought reſpectively into the Court of Kings-Bench, and Diſcharg'd of their Impriſonment, giving ſufficient Bail for their Appearance when thereunto required.

It ſeems fit to be remembred as an Extraordinary Event, that on Sunday Jan. 12th, 167$\frac{8}{9}$. for above a Quarter of an Hour, between Ten and Eleven in the Morning, was ſo great and ſudden a Darkneſs in and about the Cities of London and Weſtminſter, that People within the Churches could not ſee to read in their Bibles, and were not able in the Streets to diſtinguiſh one Perſon from another. It was, for the time, a deeper Blackneſs than that of an Eclipſe, (which did not now happen) and was thought to equal, if not exceed the great Solar Eclipſe, which in the late Times left the name of Black-Munday.

A ſtrange Darkneſs.

The Year concluded in great Strife and Diviſion, about Electing Members for the New Parliament; thoſe Gentlemen were generally moſt Popular, who were moſt averſe to Popery, and leaſt inclined to the Court: The City of London ſet an Example, by Chuſing for their Repreſentatives Sir Robert Clayton, Kt. and Alderman; Sir Thomas Player, Kt. and Chamberlain of the City; William Love, Eſq; late Alderman; and Thomas Pilkinton, Eſq; a Turkey Merchant.

State of Religion.

The State of Religion, in reference to the Deſigns and horrid Attempts of Popery, has been already repreſented. It may be further obſerved, That upon Meeting of the Parliament Octob. 21ſt, when a Day of Faſting and Humiliation was Appointed, and a Form of Prayer was drawing up for that Occaſion, the Commons Addreſs'd the King with a Deſire, "That there might be a "particular Prayer or Prayers Compoſed for the "Cities of London and Weſtminſter, relating to "the Plot and Conſpiracy contriv'd and carry'd "on by the Papiſts, againſt His Majeſty's Perſon "and Government." To which His Majeſty Anſwer'd, That it ſhould be ſo done. But on the 10th of November they Reſolve to repreſent unto his Majeſty, "That thoſe his Majeſty's Com-"mands have not as yet been Obey'd, there being "no mention in the Prayers to be uſed on Wed-"neſday next, of the Papiſts who are the Con-"trivers of this Damnable and Helliſh Plot; And "therefore they humbly Deſire his Majeſty to give "effectual Orders, That his Commands may be "Obey'd." On Tueſday Nov. 12th, the Day before the Faſt, Mr. Secretary Williamſon acquainted the Houſe, "That he had attended his Majeſty "with their Second Addreſs, touching a particular "Prayer to be uſed on Wedneſday next; And that "His Majeſty was pleaſed to give Orders, That "the Prayers ſhould be Altered.

Commons deſire a particular Prayer relating to the Popiſh Plot.

Bill to Exclude Papiſts from either Houſe of Parliament.

The Commons were ſo Zealous in their Bill for the more effectual Preſerving the King's Perſon and Government, by Diſabling Papiſts to Sit in either Houſe of Parliament, that they Voted it to be a Bill upon which the Safety of the King and Kingdom, and the Proteſtant Religion, do entirely depend. And when the Bill was likely to ſtick in the Houſe of Lords, they ſent up this Meſſage to them; "The Commons in Parliament Aſſembled, "reflecting on the imminent Dangers wherein the "Kingdom is involved, by the reſtleſs Conſpira-"cies of Popiſh Recuſants againſt his Majeſty's "Perſon, and the Religion and Government "Eſtabliſh'd; do find themſelves neceſſitated to "remind your Lordſhips, for a ſpeedy Proceeding "on the Bill before you, Intituled, An Act for "the more effectual Preſerving the King's Perſon "and Goverment, by Diſabling Papiſts from Sitting "in either Houſe of Parliament: without which, "they think themſelves unable to prepare any "effectual Remedies to prevent the Evils that "hang over Us.

After the Riſing of the Parliament, there ſeemed to be a Diſpoſition in the Court to relax the many Orders that had been lately given for putting all the Laws in Execution againſt the Roman Catholicks; and it ſeems to have been upon this View, that the Juſtices of the Peace for Middleſex preſented to His Majeſty, in Council, theſe Six Quæries: 1678.

Quæries of the Juſtices of Peace, in relation to putting the Laws in Execution againſt the Papiſts.

1. "Whether Foreigners (Popiſh Recuſants) "that are and have long been here ſettled Houſe-"keepers, and are Tradeſmen, viz. Chirurgeons, "Tailors, Perriwig-makers, or Ordinary Shop-"keepers following Employments for their own "Advantage, but not otherwiſe Merchants, but "are certified to be Merchant-Strangers, ſhall be "excuſed from taking the Oaths, or finding Sure-"ties, or either of them?

2. "Whether ſuch Foreigners, being certified "by Ambaſſadors, or other Foreign Miniſters, "to be their Servants at this time, ſhall be "Excuſed?

3. "Whether Foreigners (Popiſh Recuſants) "ſettled here Houſe-keepers, but neither are "Tradeſmen, Travellers, or Foreign Miniſters "Servants, ſhall be Excuſed?

4. "Whether Native Subjects of our Sovereign "Lord, that are Menial Servants of Foreign "Miniſters, ſhall be Excuſed?

5. "Whether Married Women, being Popiſh "Recuſants, but their Husbands Proteſtants, ſhall "be Excuſed?

6. "Whether Popiſh Recuſants that have taken "the Oaths, found Sureties, have Appeared, and "are Convict, ſhall find new Sureties, or be "Continued over?

And His Majeſty had from the Judges, to whom the ſame were referred, received Anſwer in Writing in the Words following:

May it Pleaſe Your Majeſty,

Anſwer of the Judges.

"WE have Met and Conſider'd of the Que-"ſtions propoſed to us, and do hereby "humbly return our Opinions.

"To the Firſt, We are of Opinion,

1. "That Foreigners (being Popiſh Recu-"ſants) and exerciſing Ordinary Trades (but "not Merchants) are not Excuſed from taking "the Oaths, or finding Securities.

2. "To the Second; That Foreigners, though "certified by Ambaſſadors to be their Servants, "except they are their Menial Servants, are not "Excuſed.

3. "To the Third; That Foreigners, though "ſettled Houſe-keepers, being no Travellers, or "Foreign Miniſters Servants, are not Excuſed.

4. "To the Fourth; That the King's Native "Subjects are not Excuſed from taking the Oaths, "by being Menial Servants to Foreign Maſters.

5. "To the Fifth; We find no Law that "Excuſes a Feme-Covert, being a Papiſt, from "taking the Oaths, though her Husband be a "Proteſtant.

6. To the Sixth; That a Popiſh Recuſant having "taken the Oaths, is not bound to find new Sureties; "unleſs upon a new tender of the Oaths, he ſhall "refuſe to take them.

"All which, with great Humility, we ſub-"mit to Your Majeſty's Judgment.

1678. " His Majeſty is graciouſly pleaſed to Approve " the ſaid Report and Opinion of his Judges, and " did this Day (Jan. 31.) Order, as it is hereby " Ordered accordingly, That the Juſtices of the " Peace in their reſpective Precincts, do, in Exe- " cution of their Duties touching the Particulars " there mentioned, take Notice of the ſame, and " Conform themſelves thereunto. And this Order " is to be ſent to the Cuſtos Rotulorum of each " County, that he may give Information of the " ſame.

The Juſtices being too remiſs, are complained of in Council.

There ſeem'd to be a like Remiſſneſs in ſome Parts of the Country, as well as nearer Court; for Complaint was made to the King in Council, That ſeveral Juſtices of the Peace, of ſeveral Counties, Cities, and Liberties within this Kingdom, notwithſtanding the many Proclamations which his Majeſty had been pleaſed lately to publiſh for the better Security of his Majeſty's Perſon and Government, and of the True Proteſtant Religion, did refuſe or neglect to put the ſame in Execution. Whereupon his Majeſty, on January 31ſt, was pleaſed in Council to Order, " That all his Majeſty's " Juſtices of the Peace ſhould with all Care and " Diligence purſue the ſaid Commands in Execu- " tion of the Laws; and upon due Complaint " made of their Neglect or Refuſal, ſhould be put " out of Commiſſion, as Perſons Diſaffected to " his Majeſty's Government, and the True Pro- " teſtant Religion, and in their Places other Per- " ſons ſhould be put who were likely to Act with " more Vigour and good Affection." And at the beginning of this ſame Month, his Majeſty, by Advice of his Privy-Council, iſſued out his Royal Proclamation, dated Jan. 8th, Commanding the immediate Return of all his Majeſty's Subjects who are in any Foreign Seminaries, and forbidding Relief to be ſent to them.

The King forc'd to quicken them.

The Diſſenters Behaviour, upon the Popiſh Plot.

The Diſſenters knew how to make ſome Advantage of the Popiſh Plot, and generally falling into the Wiſhes and Endeavours of a zealous Proſecution of it, became thereby the more Popular; and thoſe Members in each Houſe who were thought to be in their Intereſt, had now an Opportunity of being eſteem'd the greater Patriots, and the better Friends of the Proteſtant Religion: while many of thoſe who were more profeſſedly for the Eſtabliſhed Church of England were drawn into the Meaſures of the Court, and into the Perſonal Intereſt of the Duke of York, and thereby fell under the Character of being Popiſhly affected, and the Promoters of Arbitrary Power. The Diſſolution of the Long Parliament was a ſpiteful Satisfaction to many of the Old Nonconformiſts, becauſe of their Suffering by ſome Laws that had been made by them. And upon the Choice of a New Parliament, this ſame Party were very induſtrious to recommend thoſe Gentlemen who had been moſt their Friends and Abettors, making the World at this Juncture believe, That they were the Chief Aſſertors of Engliſh Liberty, and the Reformed Religion. Their own Hiſtory betrays this Truth: " At length, on the 14th of " January, 1678. this Parliament, which ſo long " Comply'd with the Court in all their Deſires, " which, to gratifie the Clergy, caſt ſo many " Worthy Miniſters out of the Church by the " Act of Uniformity, and afterwards laid ſuch " heavy Burdens on the Poor Nonconformiſts, which " improv'd by Sitting, and grew more and more " concern'd for the Publick Welfare, as they were " awakened by a Senſe of the Common Danger, " was ſuddenly Diſſolved. This Diſſolution oc- " caſion'd a General Ferment in all Parts of the " Country; it was generally eſteemed the Com- " mon Concern in the next Election to Chuſe " firm Proteſtants, who ſhould heartily apply " themſelves to make Proviſion for the Common " Security.

Abridgment of Mr. Baxter's Life.

On March the 9th, Dr. Joſeph Henſhaw Biſhop of Peterborough (who ſucceeded Dr. Benjamin Lancy, Tranſlated to Lincoln in 1663,) Died ſuddenly, at his return Home from the Evening Service at the Abbey-Church in Weſtminſter, whoſe Succeſſor in that See was Dr. Francis Davies, Tranſlated thither from Llandaff. 1678.

There is little more of Eccleſiaſtical Matter in this Year, excepting the Excellent Directions from the Arch-Biſhop of Canterbury to his reſpective Suffragans, concerning Letters Teſtimonial to be granted unto Candidates for Holy Orders in theſe Letters dated from Lambeth, Aug. 23. 1678.

Salutem in Chriſto.

My Lord,

Directions of the Arch-Biſhop of Canterbury for giving Teſtimonials for Holy Orders.

" WHereas the Eaſie and Promiſcuous Granting of Letters Teſtimonial, (which is in " it ſelf a Sacred Thing, and, in the firſt Intention, " of great and very weighty Importance) is, by " the Lapſe of Time, and the Corruption which " by inſenſible degrees is crept into the beſt Inſti- " tutions, come to be both in the Univerſities, " and elſewhere in the Dioceſes, a matter of meer " Formality, a piece of common Civility, ſcarce " deny'd to any that ask it, and many times, " upon the Credit of the firſt Subſcriber, Atteſted " by the reſt, who have otherwiſe no knowledge " of the Perſon ſo adorn'd; or elſe, where more " Conſcience is made of bearing Falſe-witneſs, " even for a Neighbour, is done ſo perfunctorily, " and in ſo low and dilate Terms, as ought to ſig- " nifie nothing at all to the great End which 'tis " deſigned to ſerve, and yet is ſometimes with a " like Eaſineſs and Remiſſneſs received and pro- " ceeded upon, whereby great Miſchiefs in the " Church and Scandals daily enſue; Perſons alto- " gether Undeſerving, or at leaſt not duly Qua- " lified, being too often, upon the Credit of ſuch " Papers, admitted into Holy Orders; and in " Conſequence thereupon, thruſting themſelves into " Employments of high Truſt and Dignity and " Advantage in the Church, and by their nume- " rous Intruſions preventing and excluding Others " of greater Modeſty and Merit: concerning " all which, your Lordſhip cannot but remember " how many and how great Complaints we met " with both from our Brethren the Biſhops, and " Others, during the late Seſſion of Parliament, " and what Expedients for Remedy thereof were " then under Debate and Conſideration amongſt " us. Now, as the Reſult of thoſe Counſels, and for " the effectual redreſſing of thoſe Inconveniences, " and preventing the like for the future, though it " would be abundantly ſufficient, to call all Perſons " concerned on both Sides to the ſerious Peruſal of, " and exact Compliance with thoſe excellent Con- " ſtitutions and Canons Eccleſiaſtical made in the " Year 1603, which have moſt wiſely and fully " provided to obviate all thoſe Evils, yet (becauſe " in the Modern Practice they ſeem not duly to " be attended to) it is thought fit and neceſſary " again to limit and regulate the Grant, the " Matter, and the Form of Teſtimonials, as fol- " loweth, viz.

1. " That no Letters Teſtimonial be Granted " only upon the Credit of Others, or out of a " Judgment of Charity, which believes all things, " and hopes all things, but from immediate and " Perſonal Knowledge, and that own'd and ex- " preſſed in the Letters themſelves.

2. " That (as to the Form of theſe Letters) " every ſuch Teſtimonial have the Date both as to " Time and Place expreſsly mentioned in the Body " of it, before it be Subſcribed by any, and paſs " alſo (as the Canon requires) under Hand and " Seal; Thoſe, namely, from the Univerſities, 1678. " under the Common Seal of their reſpective Colleges, atteſted by the Subſcription of the Maſter, Head, or Principal Perſon there; And thoſe from other Places, under the Hands and Seals of three Prieſts at the leaſt, of known Integrity, Gravity and Prudence, who are of the Vicinage where the Perſon teſtified of reſides, or have otherwiſe known his Life and Behaviour by the ſpace of three Years next before the Date of the ſaid Letters.

3. " And as to the Matter of them, That they particularly expreſs the preſent Condition of the Perſon in whoſe behalf the Teſtimony is given, his Standing and Degree in the Univerſity, his Place of preſent Abode, and Courſe of Life: his End and Deſign for which he would make Uſe of the ſaid Teſtimonial, whether for obtaining the Order of Deacon or Prieſt, or the Employment of a Parſon, Vicar, Curate, or School-Maſter, and that the Subſcribers know him to be worthy, and in regard of Learning, Prudence, and Holy Life, duely qualified for the ſame reſpectively: And if he deſire Holy Orders, his Age too, if the Subſcribers know it, or elſe that they admoniſh him to bring it otherwiſe credibly and ſufficiently Atteſted.

Laſtly, " If ſuch Teſtimonial be to be made uſe of in another Dioceſe than that where it is given, that it be by no means received, without the Letters Dimiſſory of the Biſhop, or other Ordinary of the Place, atteſting in Writing the Ability, Honeſty, and Good Converſation of the Perſon commended, in the Place from whence he came.

" My Lord, This is (I think) the Summ of what was Diſcourſed and Reſolved between us, when we were laſt together: I therefore Deſire you, with all convenient ſpeed, to cauſe Copies hereof to be Tranſcribed, and tranſmitted to the ſeveral Biſhops of this Province, and Vice-Chancellors of the Univerſities reſpectively, and to be by them communicated (as ſoon as may well be) to as many as are herein concerned, that they may not be diſappointed, by coming furniſhed with ſuch Teſtimonials only, as will not (nor ought to) be received to ſuch great Purpoſes, for which they are ſo often made uſe of. Commending Your Lordſhip and your great Affairs to the Bleſſing of God Almighty, I remain, My Lord,

Your Lordſhip's Aſſured Loving Brother,

W. CANT.

Mr. Robert Foulkes, Miniſter of Stanton Lacy in the County of Salop, having been Convicted and Sentenced at the Seſſions in the Old-Bailey, Lond. on the 16th of January, for the Murther of a Baſtard Child begotten by him, was on Jan. 31. Executed at Tyburn, leaving behind him a very ſerious Declaration of Repentance, which was ſhortly after publiſh'd; and by the Strains of Devotion in it, did, in great meaſure, wipe away the Scandal he had given to Holy Orders.

1679. On Thurſday March 6. the New Parliament Met: At which time the King acquainted them " what had been done in Proſecution of the Plot; " as, the Excluſion of the Popiſh Lords from their " Seats in Parliament, and the Execution of ſeveral Perſons, as well for the horrid Conſpiracy " againſt his own Royal Perſon and Government, " as for the Murther of Sir Edmund-Bury Godfrey: " And that he had Commanded his Brother to " depart the Kingdom, becauſe he would not leave " malicious Men room to ſay, That he had not " removed all Cauſes which could be pretended to " Influence him towards Popiſh Counſels: That " as he had not been ſlack in putting the preſent " Laws in Execution againſt Papiſts, ſo he was " ready to join in making ſuch further Laws as 1679. " might be neceſſary for ſecuring the Kingdom " againſt Popery. He then demanded a Supply, " and Concluded with his earneſt Deſires to have " this a Healing Parliament, aſſuring them, He " would Defend the Proteſtant Religion with his " Life, and expects to be Defended by them from " the Calumny as well as Danger of theſe worſt " of Men, who endeavour to render both Him and " his Government odious to the People." The Chancellor enlarged on all the Heads; and in reference to the Plot, reminded the Two Houſes, " not to Over-doe their Buſineſs, and by being " too far tranſported with the Fears of Popery, " neglect the Opportunity of making Sober and " Laſting Proviſions againſt it; which (ſays he) " are the only Hopes of Papiſts, thus to ſee our Zeal " out-run our Diſcretion, and that we our ſelves " ſhould become the unhappy Occaſion of making " our own Councils abortive.

Meeting of the New Parliament.

The King's Speech.

The Lord Chancellor proceeds.

The Commons returning to their Houſe, at the Motion of Colonel Birch, Choſe for their Speaker Edward Seymour Eſq; Knight of the Shire for the County of Devon, Treaſurer of His Majeſty's Navy, one of His Majeſty's Moſt-Honourable Privy-Council, and Speaker of the former Parliament. But the King taking this to be an ill Preſage, that this Parliament would Begin where the laſt did End, would not approve their Choice, commanding the Houſe to Return, and to proceed to the Election of a New Speaker, and to preſent him at Eleven a Clock on Saturday March 8th: At which time the Houſe being in ſome Surprize, at the Rejecting their Speaker Elect, made an humble Application to His Majeſty, " That he " would be pleaſed to grant them ſome further " Time to take that Matter into their Conſideration." To which His Majeſty ſent this Anſwer in Writing; Gentlemen, I have Conſider'd of your Meſſage, and do conſent to a further Time, which I appoint to be on Tueſday next, unleſs you ſhall find ſome Expedient in the mean time; for as I would not have my Prerogative intrench'd upon, ſo I would not do any thing againſt the Privileges of this Houſe.

Edw. Seymour Eſq; choſen Speaker.

Rejected by the King.

Common offended, make ſeveral Addreſſes,

And the King gives them ſeveral Anſwers.

On Tueſday March 11. the Commons delivered an humble Repreſentation to His Majeſty, " To " deſire him to reſt ſatisfied with their Proceed- " ings, and not to deprive them of ſo neceſſary a " Member as their Speaker Elected and Preſented " according to Cuſtom," &c. To which His Majeſty gave this ſhort Anſwer; Gentlemen, All this is but loſs of Time, and therefore I deſire you to go back again, and do as I have directed you. The Commons not yet ſatisfied, Reſolved upon another Addreſs, preſented on Wedneſday March the 12th, " humbly to deſire His Majeſty to take " the Repreſentation Yeſterday made to him into " further Conſideration." To this Addreſs, His Majeſty gave this quick and ſharp Return; Gentlemen, I will ſend you an Anſwer to-Morrow. On that Morrow, being Thurſday March 13th, His Majeſty was pleaſed to Prorogue the Parliament till Saturday following, to convince them that he would have a New Speaker. On that Day, March 15th, His Majeſty came into the Houſe of Lords in his Royal Robes, and the Houſe of Commons attending, his Majeſty was pleaſed to put Both Houſes in mind of what he had ſaid to them at the Opening of the Parliament: And then the Lord Chancellor, by His Majeſty's Command, directed the Commons to return to their Houſe, and to proceed to the Choice of a Speaker. Which they accordingly did, and, by the Recommendation of the Lord Ruſſell, did immediately Elect William Gregory, Serjeant at Law; who, the next Morning, was Preſented by the Commons to His Majeſty, and Approved by him.

The Parliament Prorogued.

Address for a Fast.

On Friday March 21. the Lords and Commons Agreed in an Address to be Presented to His Majesty for Appointing a Solemn Day of Humiliation, being deeply sensible of the Sad and Calamitous Condition of this Kingdom, occasioned chiefly by the Impious and Malicious Conspiracies of a Popish Party, who have not only Plotted and Intended the Destruction of His Majesty's Royal Person, but the total "Subversion of the Government, and True Religion Established among Us. And accordingly His Majesty Commanded a General and Publick Fast, to be kept throughout the Kingdom, on Friday April the 11th.

The King speaks in favour of the Earl of Danby,

But the Commons Resolve to Proceed against him.

On Saturday March 22. the Commons Ordered a Bill to be brought in, to Secure the King and Kingdom against the Danger and Growth of Popery. And being Commanded to Attend His Majesty in the House of Peers, the King spoke to them in Favour of the Earl of Danby: But Returning to their House, they Resolved, "That a Message be "immediately sent to the Lords, to remind their "Lordships of the last Message sent them from "this House, relating to Thomas Earl of Danby, "and to Demand that he might be forthwith "Sequestred from Parliament, and Committed to "Safe Custody." Upon which the Lords Desired a present Conference with the Commons, where the Duke of Monmouth spake thus; I am Commanded by the Lords to Acquaint you, That their Lordships having taken into Consideration, Matters relating to the Earl of Danby, together with what his Majesty was pleased to say upon that Subject; have Ordered that a Bill be brought in, by which Thomas Earl of Danby may be made for ever incapable of coming to his Majesty's Presence, and of all Offices and Employments, and of receiving any Grants or Gifts from the Crown, and of Sitting in the House of Peers. In the mean time, the Commons hearing that the King had Signed a Pardon for the Earl, they appointed a Committee to repair to the Lord Chancellor, to enquire into the manner of Suing forth that Pardon. The Lord-Chancellor did inform the Committee, "That the "Pardon was Passed with all Privacy, the King "Commanding him to bring the Seal to Whitehall; "and being there, he laid it upon the Table; "whereupon his Majesty Commanded the Seal to "be taken out of the Bag, which his Lordship "was obliged to submit unto, it not being in his "Power to hinder it; and the King writ his "Name upon the top of the Parchment, and "then directed to have it Sealed; whereupon the "Person that usually carried the Purse affixed the "Seal to it." Upon this Report from his Lord- 1679.
"ship, the Commons Resolved, "That an humble "Address be made to his Majesty, to represent "the Irregularity and Illegality of the Pardon "mentioned by his Majesty to be granted to the "Earl of Danby, and the dangerous Consequence "of granting Pardons to any Persons that lie under "an Impeachment of the Commons of England.

Commons Address against it.

On Tuesday March 25. the Lords sent a Message to acquaint the House of Commons, That they had sent to Apprehend Thomas Earl of Danby, both to his House here in Town, and to his House at Wimbleton; and that the Gentleman-Usher of the Black-Rod had returned their Lordships Answer, That he could not be found. Whereupon the Commons Ordered, "That a Bill be brought in to Summon "Thomas Earl of Danby to Render himself to "Justice by a certain Day to be therein limited, "or in default thereof, to Attaint him. On Thursday March 27. the Lords sent down a Bill, Intituled, An Act for Banishing and Disabling Thomas Earl of Danby, &c. But the Commons immediately Resolved, That the Bill be Rejected; And on April 1. Passed a Bill for the Attainder of Thomas Earl of Danby of High-Treason; which they sent up to the Lords by Sir Robert Peyton.

The Earl then withdraws.

Attainted by the Commons.

On April 3. the Commons Agreed upon the Articles of Impeachment of High-Treason, and other high Crimes and Offences against William Earl of Powys, William Viscount Stafford, Henry Lord Arrundell of Warder, William Lord Petre, and John Lord Bellasis, now Prisoners in the Tower of London. The next Day there was a Conference between the Two Houses, in the Painted Chamber, concerning the Bill sent up against Thomas Earl of Danby, where the Lord Privy-Seal managed the Conference for their Lordships, and delivered himself to this effect, "That the Lords chose to deliver "back by Conference, rather than Message, to "preserve a good Understanding, and to prevent "Debate or Controversie between them: The "Lords observe, That the great Affairs of this "Nation are at a stand, at a time of greatest "Danger and Difficulty that this Kingdom ever "laboured under: That the King hath always "in his Reign enclined to Mercy and Clemency "to all his Subjects: Therefore to a King so "Merciful and Compassionate, the first Interruption of his Clemency they did desire should "not proceed from the Two Houses, pressing the "King to an Act of the greatest Severity; therefore have Passed the Bill, with some Amendments, which he delivered." The Commons Disagreed to the Amendments made by the Lords, and drew up Reasons to be offered in another Conference, implying, That their Lordships Amendments had wholly altered the Nature of their Bill, and from a Bill of Attainder, had converted it into a Bill of Banishment: And at the same time drew up an Address to be presented to his Majesty, to desire him to issue out his Royal Proclamation for Apprehending the said Earl; and had the same Day another Conference with the Lords, upon the Earl of Danby's Case, where the Lord Huntington managed the Conference, and what he delivered was to this Effect; "The Lords have "desired this Conference with the Commons, not "so much to Argue and Dispute, as to Mitigate "and Reconcile: They have already observed, "That the Debate of this Bill hath given so long "and so great an Obstruction to Publick Busi-"ness and therefore they desire you to believe, "that that is the Reason which hath chiefly prevailed with their Lordships in a Matter of this "Nature. And upon this Ground it is, that if "a Way may be found to satisfie and secure the "Publick Fears, by growing less than the Bill "you have proposed, the Lords do not think it "advisable to insist upon the utmost and most "rigorous Impeachment of the Popish Lords.

A Conference upon the Case of the Earl of Danby.

Another Conference on the same Subject-Matter.

1679. " rigorous Satisfaction, to prevent Juſtice, which " might be denied. To induce you to this " Compliance, the Lords do acknowledge, that " Baniſhment is ſo far from being the Legal Judg- " ment in Caſe of High-Treaſon, that it is not " the Legal Judgment in any Caſe whatſoever, " ſince it can never be inflicted but by the Legiſla- " tive Authority: But they ſee no reaſon why the " Legiſlative Authority ſhould always be found to " act to the utmoſt extent of its Power; for there " may be a prudential neceſſity ſometimes of " making Abatements, and it might be of fatal " Conſequence if it ſhould not be ſo. And the " Lords, to remove all Jealouſies of the Precedents " of this kind, do declare, That nothing which " hath been done in the Earl of Danby's Caſe, " ſhall be ever drawn into Example for the time " to come, and will ſo enter it upon their Journal. " And thereupon their Lordſhips inſiſt upon their " Amendments ſo far, as to exclude all Attainders; " and do promiſe themſelves, the Commons will " in this Point comply with their Lordſhips, who " do again aſſure them, That their Reſolutions " are grounded only upon their Tenderneſs and " Conſideration of the Publick." His Majeſty had reaſon to Value himſelf upon this Eſtabliſhment of a Council ſo generally Grateful to the Two Houſes, and to all his Faithful Subjects; and therefore His Majeſty came the next day into the Houſe of Lords, and made this Speech on that Occaſion:

My Lords and Gentlemen,

The King's Speech on this Occaſion.

I Thought it requiſite to acquaint you with what I have done now this Day; which is, That I have Eſtabliſh'd a New Privy Council, the conſtant Number of which ſhall never exceed Thirty.

I have made Choice of ſuch Perſons as are Worthy, and Able to Adviſe Me; and am Reſolved, in all My Weighty and Important Affairs, next to the Advice of my Great Council in Parliament (which I ſhall very often Conſult with) to be Adviſed by this Privy Council.

I could not make ſo great a Change, without Acquainting Both Houſes of Parliament.

And I Deſire you all to apply your ſelves heartily, as I ſhall do, to thoſe Things which are neceſſary for the Good and Safety of the Kingdom, and that no Time may be loſt in it.

April 28. the Committee appointed to Examine and Peruſe the Nature of the Plea of Thomas Earl Report of of Danby, made this Report; " 1. We find no the Com- " Precedent that ever any Pardon was Granted to mittee, in " any Perſon Impeached by the Commons of High-the Caſe " Treaſon, or other High Crimes depending the of the Earl " Impeachment. 2. As to the Manner of the of Danby. " Paſſing the Earl of Danby's Pardon, it hath been
" formerly Reported to the Houſe, and the Com" mittee refer themſelves to that Report. 3. That
" by what Means it was obtained, the Time al" lowed the Committee hath been ſo ſhort, that
" we cannot as yet diſcover the Adviſers or Pro-
" moters thereof, any further than what is men-
" tion'd in the ſaid Report relating to the Lord
" Chancellor. Reſolved, That a Meſſage be ſent
" to the Lords, to Deſire their Lordſhips to De" mand of the Earl of Danby, Whether he will rely
" upon, and abide by the Plea of his Pardon? Accordingly the next Day the Earl was again brought to the Bar of the Lords Houſe, where kneeling, and then ſtanding up, the Lord Chancellor acquainted him, That the Commons had returned to their Lordſhips the Plea delivered by him at the Bar of their Houſe on the 25th Inſtant, with a Deſire that their Lordſhips would ask him, Whether he will rely upon, and abide by his ſaid Plea? The Earl praying Time to Anſwer, their Lordſhips allow'd him till Saturday next, and then he Withdrew, and was conducted back to the Tower. 1679.

On Wedneſday April 30. His Majeſty came to the Houſe of Lords, and ſending for the Commons, ſpake thus:

My Lords and Gentlemen,

THE Seaſon of the Year advancing ſo faſt, I thought it neceſſary to put you in mind of Three Particulars. 1. Proſecution of the Plot. 2. Diſbanding of the Army. 3. Providing a Fleet for Our Common Security. And to ſhew, that whilſt you are Doing Your Parts, My Thoughts have not been Miſ-imployed, but that it is my conſtant Care to do every thing that may Preſerve Your Religion, and Secure it for the future in all Events. The King's Speech.

I have Commanded my Lord Chancellor to mention ſeveral Particulars; which, I hope, will be an Evidence, that in all things that concern the Publick Security, I ſhall not Follow your Zeal, but Lead it.

Then the Lord Chancellor added:

My Lords, and you the Knights, Citizens and Burgeſſes of the Houſe of Commons,

" That Royal Care which His Majeſty hath Ld. Chan-
" taken for the General Quiet and Satisfaction of cellor's
" all his Subjects, is now more evident, by theſe Speech.
" new and freſh Inſtances of it which I have in " Command to open to You.

" His Majeſty hath conſidered with himſelf,
" that 'tis not enough that your Religion and " Liberty is ſecure during his own Reign, but he " thinks he owes it to his People to do all that
" in him lies, that theſe Bleſſings may be tranſ-
" mitted to your Poſterity, and ſo well ſecured to " them, that no Succeſſion in after-Ages may be " able to work the leaſt Alteration.

" And thereof His Majeſty, who hath often ſaid Promiſing
" in his Place, That He is ready to Conſent to Limitati-
" any Laws of this kind, ſo that the ſame extend ons be-
" not to alter the Deſcent of the Crown in the longing to " Right Line, nor to defeat the Succeſſion, hath a Popiſh
" now Commanded this to be further Explained. Succeſſor.

" And to the end it may never be in the Power
" of any Papiſt, if the Crown deſcend upon him,
" to make any Change either in Church or State;
" I am Commanded to tell You, That His Ma-
" jeſty is willing that Proviſion may be made,
" firſt, to diſtinguiſh a Papiſt, from a Proteſtant
" Succeſſor; then ſo to Limit and Circumſcribe the " Authority of a Popiſh Succeſſor, in theſe Caſes
" following, that he may be diſabled to do any " Harm:

" Firſt, in reference to the Church; His Ma-
" jeſty is content that Care be taken, that all
" Eccleſiaſtical and Spiritual Benefices and Pro-
" motions in Gifts of the Crown, may be Con-
" ferred in ſuch a manner, that we may be ſure
" the Incumbents ſhall always be of the moſt
" Pious and Learned Proteſtants: And that no
" Popiſh Succeſſor (while he continues ſo) may " have any Power to Controll ſuch Preſent-
" ments.

" In reference to the State, and Civil part of " the Government; as it is already Provided, That
" no Papiſt can Sit in either Houſe of Parliament:
" ſo the King is Pleaſed that it be Provided too,
" That there may never want a Parliament, when
" the King ſhall happen to Die, but that the Par" liament then in being may continue Indiſ-
" ſolvable for a competent Time; or if there be no

1679. " no Parliament in being, then the laſt Parliament " which was in being before that Time, may " Re-aſſemble and Sit a competent Time, with- " out any New Summons, or Elections.

" And as no Papiſt can by Law hold any Place " of Truſt, ſo the King is content that it may be " further Provided, That no Lords, or other of " the Privy Council, no Judges of the Common " Law, or in Chancery, ſhall at any time during " the Reign of any Popiſh Succeſſor, be Put in, " or Diſplaced, but by the Authority of Par- " liament.

" And that Care alſo be taken, that none " but Sincere Proteſtants may be Juſtices of the " Peace.

" In reference to the Military Part, The King " is willing, that no Lord Lieutenant, or Deputy- " Lieutenant, nor no Officer in the Navy (during " the Reign of any Popiſh Succeſſor) be Put out, " or Removed, but either by Authority of Par- " liament, or of ſuch Perſons as the Parliament " ſhall Intruſt with ſuch Authority.

" 'Tis hard to invent another Reſtraint to be " put upon a Popiſh Succeſſor, conſidering how " much the Revenue of the Succeſſor will depend " upon Conſent of Parliament, and how impoſſible " it is to Raiſe Money without ſuch Conſent. " But yet, if any thing elſe can occur to the " Wiſdom of the Parliament, which may further " ſecure Religion and Liberty againſt a Popiſh " Succeſſor, without defeating the Right of Suc- " ceſſion it ſelf, His Majeſty will moſt readily " Conſent to it.

" Thus Watchful is the King, for all Your " Safety; and if He could think of any thing " elſe, that you do either want or wiſh to make " you Happy, He would make it his Buſineſs to " effect it for You.

" God Almighty long continue this Bleſſed " Union between the King, and His Parliament, " and People.

The Commons not ſatisfied.

Theſe were good Words: but the Commons, on May 1. Revived a Committee formerly Appointed to Conſider what Part of the Money given for Diſbanding of the Army, is yet Undiſpoſed of, and Remaining in the Exchequer. And they fell at the ſame time upon the further Conſideration of Securing and Preſerving the King, and the Proteſtant Religion, againſt the Attempts of the Papiſts, both in the Reign of His Majeſty and his Succeſſors: And read a Second time, A Bill for better Prevention of Illegal Exaction of Money from the Subject; and Ordered, That Leave be given to " bring in a Bill, That when any Member of this " Houſe is Preferred to any Office or Place of " Profit, a New Writ ſhall immediately iſſue out " for Electing a Member to Serve in his ſtead." On May 5. they Reſolved, " That it was the Opi- " nion of that Houſe, That the Pardon Pleaded by " the Earl of Danby was Illegal and Void, and " ought not to be allowed in Bar of the Impeach- " ment of the Commons of England." And Mr. Speaker, with the Houſe, went up to the Lord's Bar, and demanded Judgment againſt the ſaid Earl. On the ſame Day, the Lord Ruſſel acquainted the Houſe, " That His Majeſty Com- " manded him to let the Houſe know, That His " Majeſty is willing to Comply with the Requeſt " made to Him by the Houſe, concerning Pickering, " and that the Law ſhall Paſs upon him accor- " dingly. As to the Condemned Prieſts, the " Houſe of Peers have ſent for them, in order (as " His Majeſty conceives) to ſome Examinations. " And further to acquaint you, That he repeateth " his Inſtances to you, To think of putting the " Fleet in ſuch a Poſture, as may quiet Mens " Fears, and at leaſt ſecure us from any ſudden " Attempt; which His Majeſty doubts not but Addreſs againſt the Earl of Lauderdale.

On May 8. the Commons Agreed upon an Addreſs to His Majeſty, To Remove the Duke of Lauderdale from all Offices, Employments, and Places of Truſt, and from His Majeſty's Council in England and Scotland, and from His Preſence for Ever; as being the Chief of thoſe, who by their Arbitrary and Deſtructive Counſels, tending to the Subverſion of the Rights, Liberties and Properties of His Majeſty's Subjects, and the Alteration of the Proteſtant Religion Eſtabliſh'd, have endeavoured to Alienate the Hearts of his Loyal Subjects from his Perſon and his Government. To which the King only made this Cold Return, That He would Conſider of it, and return an Anſwer.

The King and Both Houſes Agreed in one Thing, The Neceſſity of a Tax: And therefore, on May the 9th, after their Lordſhips had receded from their Amendments of the Money Bill, His Majeſty came to his Throne, and the Commons Attending, their Speaker preſented the Bill, and His Majeſty gave his Royal Aſſent to it, For Granting a Supply to His Majeſty of Two hundred and ſix thouſand four hundred ſixty two Pounds, Seventeen Shillings, and Three Pence, for Paying off and Disbanding the Forces Raiſed ſince the Nine and twentieth of September, One thouſand ſix hundred ſeventy ſeven. After this, the Commonns underſtanding that the Lords would admit the Earl of Danby to have the Validity of his Pardon Pleaded at their Bar, they Reſolved, " That no Com- " moner whatſoever ſhould preſume to maintain " the Validity of the Pardon Pleaded by the Earl " of Danby, without the Leave of this Houſe firſt " had; and that the Perſons ſo doing, ſhould be " accounted Betrayers of the Liberties of the Com- " mons of England.

Money-Bill Paſſe by the King.

Addreſs of both Houſes againſt Popiſh Prieſts.

On May the 10th, the Lords and Commons, in an Addreſs to His Majeſty, taking Notice of the great Reſort of the Multitude of Jeſuits, Popiſh Prieſts, and other Popiſh Recuſants, to the Cities of London and Weſtminſter, and Parts adjacent, and their obſtinate Continuance there, in Contempt of His Majeſty's Laws, and Royal Proclamations; humbly Beſeech His Majeſty, That the Militia of London, Weſtminſter, Southwark, the Tower-Hamlets, and the Counties of Middleſex and Surrey, may immediately be Raiſed, and put in a Poſture of Defence. In the mean time, ſome Differences did ariſe, about the Manner of Proceeding upon the Impeachments depending before the Lords; for which Purpoſe the Comons had Propoſed, That a Committee of both Houſes might be Nominated, to Conſider of the moſt proper Ways and Methods of Proceeding upon Impeachments. The Lords refuſed to Agree, for this Reaſon aſſign'd, That they did not find it Conformable to the Rules and Orders of Proceedings of this Court. Upon this, the Houſe of Commons deliver'd this Reſolution, in a Conference with their Lordſhips; That Things ſtanding thus, they cannot Proceed in the Tryals of the Lords, before the Methods of Proceedings be adjuſted between the Two Houſes. Upon which, a Committee of Both Houſes was accordingly Appointed to Conſider of Propoſitions and Circumſtances relating to the Tryals of the Lords in the Tower.

Committee for Impeachments.

Under theſe Difficulties and Dangers, Both Houſes Sate, on the Sunday, May 11. And the Commons Reſolved, Nemine Contradicente, " That in Defence " of 1679. Resolution of the Commons.

" of the King's Perſon, and the Proteſtant Religion, " this Houſe doth Declare, That they will " Stand by His Majeſty with their Lives and " Fortunes; And that if His Majeſty ſhould " come by any Violent Death (which God forbid) " that they will Revenge it to the utmoſt upon " the Papiſts: —— And Ordered, That the Vote ſhould be drawn in Form of an Addreſs, to be preſented to His Majeſty. To which His Majeſty returned this Gracious Anſwer; Gentlemen, I Thank you for your Zeal for the Preſervation of the Proteſtant Religion, and of my Perſon; And I aſſure you, I ſhall do what in me lies, to Secure the Proteſtant Religion; and am willing to do all ſuch Things as may tend to the Good and Benefit of my Subjects.

The King's Anſwer.

On Wedneſday May 14. Mr. Powle delivered a Meſſage from His Majeſty, as followeth:

CHARLES REX.

King's Meſſage for Setting out a Fleet.

" THough His Majeſty hath already, at the firſt " Meeting in Parliament, and ſince, by a " Word or two, mentioned the Neceſſity of having " a Fleet at Sea this Summer: yet the Seaſon " for Preparing it being far advanced, and our " Neighbours before us in their Preparations, he " cannot hold himſelf diſcharged towards his " People, if he do not now with more Earneſtneſs " again recommend the ſame to your preſent Care " and Conſideration; and the rather, from the " daily Expectation of the return of the Fleet from " the Streights, to which a great Arrear is Due; " and hereby he muſt acquit himſelf of the Evil " Conſequences, which the want of a Fleet in ſuch " a Juncture may produce: And he hath not " done this without conſidering, That the entring " on the Work preſently, can be no Hindrance to " the other great Affairs upon your Hands, but " rather a Security, in the Diſpatch thereof."

A Debate ariſing in the Houſe, upon the Meſſage, they Reſolved, That the further Conſideration of it be Adjourned till Monday Seven-night next.

Queſtion if the Vote of the Biſhops in Capital Caſes?

In the propoſed Method for the Tryal of the Lords, a new Queſtion did ariſe, How far the Biſhops ought to Vote, or to be Preſent in Capital Caſes? On which Occaſion, on Tueſday May 13. it was Reſolved, by the Lords Spiritual and Temporal in Parliament Aſſembled, That the Lords Spiritual have a Right to Stay in Court, in Capital Caſes, till ſuch time as Judgment of Death comes to be Pronounced. And on May the 15th, the Lords explained themſelves, That the Meaning of the Reſolution Paſſed Yeſterday, concerning the Lords Spiritual, is, That the Lords Spiritual have a Right to Stay, and Sit in Court, till the Court proceed to the Vote of, Guilty, or Not Guilty? After this Preliminary, on May the 16th, it was Reſolved, by the Lords Spiritual and Temporal in Parliament Aſſembled, That Thurſday next be Appointed to begin the Tryals of the Five Lords in the Tower, (viz.) the Earl of Powys, Lord Viſcount Stafford, Lord Petre, Lord Arundel of Wardour, and Lord Bellaſis. (But the Day of Tryal was afterwards Adjourned till Tueſday May 27. On which very Day the Parliament was Prorogued.) After which Reſolution Paſſed, the Lords Spiritual asked the Leave of the Houſe, " That they might With- " draw themſelves from the Tryals of the ſaid " Lords, with the Liberty of Entring their uſual " Proteſtations." But the Commons Voted, and Inſtructed their Committee to Inſiſt upon it, That the Lords Spiritual ought not to have any Vote in any Proceedings againſt the Lords in the Tower.

Bill of Excluſion.

On Thurſday May 15. a Bill had been brought in to the Houſe of Commons, to Diſable the Duke of York from Inheriting the Imperial Crown of England: Which was read the Second time, on May 21. and Reſolved, by a great Majority, That the Bill ſhould be Committed to a Committee of the Whole Houſe. This enclined His Majeſty to bring this Seſſion to a ſpeedy Period: And therefore, on May 27. His Majeſty came to the Houſe his of Lords, and the Commons Attending, he gave Royal Aſſent to, 1. A Bill for the better Securing the Liberty of the Subject, and for Prevention of Impriſonments beyond the Seas. 2. A Bill for Re-ingroſſing the Records of Fines, burnt in the late Fire in the Temple. 3. A Private Bill, concerning Charles Dale of Rutlandſhire, Eſq; Then His Majeſty intimated to the Two Houſes his Reſolution to Prorogue them; And the Lord Chancellor accordingly, by His Majeſty's Command, did Prorogue the Parliament till the 14th of Auguſt next.

1679. Bills Paſſed. Parliament Prorogued.

Soon after, this Parliament was Diſſolv'd, and another Summon'd to Meet at Weſtminſter on the 17th Day of October next: But before the Meeting, His Majeſty, by Proclamation the 24th, was pleaſed to Declare, That the ſaid Parliament ſhould be Prorogued till the 30th Day of the ſame Month: And afterward Order'd a Commiſſion for Proroguing the ſaid Parliament till the 26th of January next: At which time His Majeſty made a ſhort Speech to the Two Houſes, and without allowing them to enter upon any Debates, Commanded the Lord-Chancellor to Prorogue them till the 15th of April next.

And ſoon after Diſſolv'd.

About the End of Auguſt, the King was much Indiſpoſed by Two or Three Fits of a Tertian-Ague. The News of this, and of the Parliament's Diſſolution, coming to the Duke of York in Flanders, he reſolved upon an immediate return into England; and the Report of his ſudden Return was thus made, by Authority: " Windſor, Sept. 2d. This Morning His Royal " Highneſs the Duke of York Arrived here, contrary to Expectation, and told His Majeſty, " That hearing of his Indiſpoſition, he thought " he could do no leſs than come to wait upon " him, and ſee how he did: adding, That he " was ready, as ſoon as His Majeſty Pleaſed, to " return to Flanders, or any other Part of the " World His Majeſty ſhould Command him to."

Duke of York returns to England.

This Return of the Duke, was very Surprizing to the Court it ſelf, and very Alarming to the greater Part of the Nation, who had ſo much Reaſon to fear a Plot upon the King's Life, even for the ſake of a Popiſh Succeſſor. The King himſelf was ſenſible that he could not enjoy his Brother's Company, without an univerſal Diſcontent among his Subjects. But the Duke was very unwilling to croſs the Seas again; and therefore when he ſaw that he muſt leave the Court, he deſir'd rather to Retire into Scotland, where his Figure might be greater than Abroad, and his Return, upon any Exigence, might be more quick and eaſie. This Compromiſe between the King and the Duke, had this Notice given of it by Authority: New-Market, Octob. 7. His Royal Highneſs having repreſented to His Majeſty, That he conceives it, for many Reſpects, more proper for him to be in His Majeſty's Dominions, rather than thoſe of another Prince, and made it his humble Requeſt to His Majeſty, to have his Leave to go into Scotland, His Majeſty hath Granted it; and, it's preſumed, His Royal Highneſs will in a ſhort time repair thither.

A Surprize to the Court, and Offence to the Country.

On Monday Octob. 27. Their Royal Higneſſes, attended by many of the Nobility, and other Perſons of Quality, followed with a numerous Train of Coaches, began their Journey towards Scotland, and lodg'd the firſt Night at the Earl of Salisbury's at Hatfield, and was received at Edinburgh with great Solemnity, where, Decemb. 4. His Royal Highneſs took his Place in the Council, and ſpoke to them in a very affectionate manner; " expreſſing his " great Satisfaction at the Civilities he had met

The Duke retires into Scotland.

His Speech to the Council.

1679. " with ſince his entring into the Kingdom, and " declaring his Readineſs to do every thing that " lay in his power, to promote the Honour and " Service of the King, and the Intereſts of this " Kingdom." It was ſome Advantage to the Intereſt and Deſigns of the Duke and his Friends, that the Rigid Presbyterians, or Field-Conventiclers, had in the beginning of this Year moſt barbarouſly Murdered the Arch-Biſhop of St. Andrews, and afterward took Arms, ſeized the City of Glaſcow, , and encreas'd into a formidable Army, that was Routed by the Duke of Monmouth, at Bothwell-Bridge.

Duke of Monmouth grows Popular.

The Duke of Monmouth improv'd every Day in the Affections of the People of England, and by his Zeal in Proſecution of the Plot, and his Joining heartily with thoſe Members of Both Houſes who were thought the beſt Proteſtants, and the greateſt Patriots, that he began to be invited to caſt an Eye upon the Crown; and a Report was induſtriouſly given out, That the King had been Lawfully Married to his Mother. Upon which, His Majeſty cauſed a Declaration to be entred in the Council Book,

The King declares he was never Marry'd to the Duke's Mother.

THat to avoid any Diſpute, which may happen in Time to come, concerning the Succeſſion to the Crown, He Declares in the Preſence of Almighty God, That He never gave nor made any Contract of Marriage, nor was Married to any Woman whatſoever, but to His preſent Wife Queen Catherine now Living.

Whitehall, March 3. 1679.

Charles Rex.

Another Proteſtation.

Three Months after, His Majeſty thought fit to renew a Proteſtation, On the Word of a King, and the Faith of a Chriſtian, That he was never Marry'd to Mrs. Barlow, aliàs Walters, the Duke of Monmouth's Mother, nor to any other Woman Whatſoever, beſides the now Queen. Which Royal Proteſtation was Recorded in the High Court of Chancery.

The Duke of York was ſo Jealous of the Competition of Monmouth, that at the beginning of September he had prevailed with the King to take from him his Commiſſion of Captain-General, and to take from him all his other Places, and to Command him to Depart the Kingdom. Accordingly the Duke of Monmouth went over to Utrecht, and reſolved to reſide there, whilſt the Duke of York ſtaid at Bruſſels: But hearing of the Duke's ſudden going back to England, he thought fit to follow him; and on the 27th of November he arrived at London about Mid-night: and the Watch ſpreading the News of it, the Bells rang, and Bonfires were made through the City and Suburbs in a very diſtinguiſhing manner.

Petitions for Sitting of the Parliament.

Upon the ſeveral Prorogations of the Parliament, the Members were very uneaſie, and the People much grieved; ſo that very many Petitions were preſented to the King, for the Sitting of the Parliament, as highly neceſſary for the Safety of His Majeſty's Perſon, and the Peace of his Kingdoms. But the King reſolving that there ſhould be no Seſſion, this manner of Petitioning was called Tumultuous and Unlawful: And the King in Council, December the 10th, Ordered the Lord-Mayor of London to ſuppreſs them, and puniſh thoſe that went about collecting Hands to ſuch Petitions. The King alſo publiſh'd a Proclamation, dated December the 12th, wherein he called this Way of Petitioning, " a Me- " thod ſet on foot by ill Men, to Promote Dif- " contents among the People, and to raiſe Sedi- " tion and Rebellion:" and ſtrictly Commanded all his Loving Subjects, of what Rank or Degree ſoever, That they preſume not to promote any ſuch Subſcriptions, nor in any-wiſe join in any Petition of that manner to be preferred to His Majeſty, upon Peril of the utmoſt Rigour of the Law that may be inflicted for it. And yet this Buſineſs of Petitioning was zealouſly carried on, and many were prepared, and ſome Preſented: But the King received them very coldly, and often Reprimanded thoſe that brought them, particularly when Sir Gilbert Gerrard, accompany'd by many Eminent Citizens, did on Jan. 13. preſent to His Majeſty ſuch a Petition for the Sitting of the Parliament; His Majeſty was pleaſed to Anſwer, That he look'd upon himſelf to be the Head of the Government, and the only Judge of what was fit to be done in ſuch Caſes, and that he would do what he thought moſt for the Good of Himſelf and his People: adding to Sir Gilbert, That he did not expect to find one of his Name, and particularly Him, in ſuch a Thing, and that he was very ſorry for it.

Diſcountenanc'd by the King.

Duke of York weary of Scotland.

During theſe Intervals of Parliaments, the Duke of York thought it ſafe and proper for him to return out of Scotland: And to break the Deſign with more ſoftneſs to the People, on Jan. 28. His Majeſty was Pleaſed to Declare in Council, That He had ſent for His Royal Highneſs, not having found ſuch an Effect from his Abſence as ſhould encline him to keep him longer from him. That ſome Queſtions had been ſtarted of late, of ſuch a Nature, and of ſo great Concern to the Duke, as made it reaſonable to have him preſent at the next Seſſion of Parliament; and that though His Majeſty would take Care to preſerve his Right, yet it might be for his Satisfaction to be here Himſelf. That His Majeſty was ſo well aſſured of the Duke's Compliance, that he could Anſwer, his Return ſhould have no ill Influence upon the Publick. So on Febr. 24. Their Royal Highneſſes arrived at Deptford, and went up the River in a Barge, and were Saluted by the Guns from the Ships, and from the Tower; and at their Landing at the Privy-Stairs, His Majeſty received them in a moſt affectionate manner, and led the Dutcheſs to the Queen's Appartment, and from thence to her own; whither many of the Nobility, and other Perſons of Quality immediately repaired, to Compliment Their Royal Highneſſes, and to Kiſs their Hands: And two Days after, they were Attended by the Lord-Mayor, Court of Aldermen, Recorder, and Common-Council of London, where the Recorder made a Speech, and in all their Names Congratulated the Duke's ſafe Arrival, and Pray'd for his Health and Proſperity. So great Labour was employed to make the World (if poſſible) to believe, That the Duke of York was now the beſt Friend, and even a Favoutite of the People.

Honours and Preferments.

There were this Year many and great Advances and Changes in Honours and Preferments: On April 13. His Majeſty Signed a Warrant for Conſtituting Captain Thomas Cheek to be Lieutenant of the Tower of London, in the Room of Sir John Robinſon. On April 25. Richard Coling, Eſq; was Sworn Clerk Extraordinary of His Majeſty's Moſt-Honourable Privy-Counil. The Duke of York, to decline the Compliment of the Commons, laid down his Admiralty; and His Majeſty appointed Sir Henry Capel, Knight of the Bath, Daniel Finch, Eſq; Sir Thomas Lee, Sir Humphry Winch, Sir Thomas Meers, Barts. Edward Vaughan and Edward Hales, Eſqrs; Commiſſioners for the Execution of the Office of Lord-High-Admiral of England. On April 23. Sir Gilbert Gerrard, Sir Thomas Player, and Colonel Birch and Colonel Whitley, were Appointed Commiſſioners to Diſband the Army. On July 20th, His Majeſty was graciouſly pleaſed, in Conſideration of the many and faithful Services performed unto him by the Right-Honourable George Lord-Viſcount Hallifax, John Lord Roberts, and Charles Lord Gerrard of Brandon, to conferr upon them the Dignities of Earls of this Kingdom, creating the ſaid Lord-Viſcount Hallifax Earl of Hallifax; the Lord Gerrard

1679. Earl of Newberry, Viſcount Brandon ; and the Lord Roberts, Earl of Falmouth, Viſcount Bodmyn: But on July 26. His Majeſty was pleaſed to change the Title of Earl of Falmouth, which he had conferr'd on the Lord Roberts, and inſtead thereof to create him Earl of Radnor. And His Majeſty was then pleaſed, as a Mark of his Grace and Favour to the Lord Viſcount Yarmouth, to create him Earl of Yarmouth. And again, on Aug. 20. His Majeſty changed the Title of Earl of Newberry, which he had conferred on the Lord Gerrard of Brandon, and inſtead thereof created him Earl of Macclesfield. In the beginning of October, the Earl of Shaftsbury was removed from the Place of Preſident of the Privy-Council: For he had been now an hearty Oppoſer of Popery, and of the Duke's Succeſſion: And though he had been once in the moſt Arbitrary Meaſures of the Court ; yet now, either to make an Atonement, or to ſhew his Reſentment, he was the greateſt Patron of the Eſtabliſh'd Religion and Laws. He had, at the Opening of this Seſſion, made a famous Speech, wherein were theſe Odd and Notable Things : We have a little Siſter, and ſhe has no Breaſts ;

Speech of the Earl of Shaftsbury

What ſhall we do for our Siſter in the day when ſhe ſhall be ſpoken for, and we have ſeveral little Siſters without Breaſts ? the French Proteſtant Churches, the two Kingdoms of Ireland and Scotland. The Protection of the Proteſtants Abroad, is the greateſt Power and Security the Crown of England can attain, and which can help us to give a Check to the Growing Greatneſs of France. Scotland and Ireland are two Doors, either to let in Good or Miſchief upon us. Popery and Slavery, like two Siſters, go Hand in Hand ; ſometimes the one goes firſt, ſometimes the other : but where-ever the one enters, the other is always following cloſe at the heels. In England, Popery was to have brought in Slavery : In Scotland, Slavery went before, and Popery was to follow, &c. Upon this Removal of the Earl of Shaftsbury, His Majeſty was pleaſed to make the Earl of Radnor Preſident of the Council, who took his Place at the Board on October the 25th.

About the Middle of September, His Majeſty, in Conſideration of the conſtant Loyalty of the Family of George Lord Berkeley of Berkeley-Caſtle, and of his Lordſhip's conſiderable Services and good Affection to His Majeſty's Perſon, was graciouſly pleaſed, by his Letters Patents under the Great Seal of England, to conferr upon his Lordſhip the additional Honours of Viſcount Durſely, and Earl of Berkeley, in the County of Glouceſter. On Octob. 20th, His Majeſty conferred the Honour of Knighthood upon Jonathan Raymond and Simon Lewis, Sheriffs, and William Ruſſel one of the Common-Council of London, giving them the Character of Perſons of whom His Majeſty had received a very good Account as to their Principles and Affections to the Government, and to the Proteſtant Religion as now Eſtabliſh'd in the Church of England.

In the Heats and Fatigues of proſecuting the Popiſh Plot, Sir William Jones, Attorney-General, humbly beſought His Majeſty, that he might Reſign his Place, wherein he was unable longer to Serve His Majeſty, becauſe of the Affliction lately befallen him in his Family, and the Diſtempers of Body which he had contracted by a Sedentary Life. The King was pleaſed to gratifie him therein, and to permit him to quit that Employment, with an Aſſurance of his being very well ſatisfied with the good and faithful Services performed by him while he was in it ; and His Majeſty was then pleaſed to make Choice of Sir Creſwel Levinz, one of His Majeſty's Councel Learn'd in the Law, to be his Attorney-General.

On November the 19. His Majeſty was pleaſed to declare in Council, That he had given Leave to the Right-Honourable the Earl of Eſſex to Reſign his Place of Firſt Commiſſioner of the Treaſury, but that His Majeſty intended his Lordſhip ſhould continue of his Privy-Council. And the Right-Honourable Lawrence Hyde, Eſq; being by his Lordſhip's ſaid Reſignation become the Firſt in that Commiſſion, His Majeſty cauſed him to be Sworn a Privy-Councellor, and accordingly he took his Place at the Board. And His Majeſty was pleaſed to make Sir Stephen Fox, Kt. one of the Commiſſioners of the Treaſury. 1679.

On the Removal of the Duke of Monmouth, His Majeſty was pleaſed to make the Duke of Albemarle Captain of his Life-Guards of Horſe : And the Earl of Mulgrave Governor of Hull, and Lord-Lieutenant of the Eaſt-Riding of Yorkſhire. And about the ſame End of November, His Majeſty created Edward Lord Viſcount Conway Earl of Conway, and Granted to the Earl of Cheſterfield the Offices of Warden and Chief-Juſtice in Eyre of all His Majeſty's Foreſts, Parks, &c. on this ſide Trent. On December the 5th, His Majeſty was pleaſed in Council to Declare, That deſigning to Employ Sir Robert Southwell, Kt. in his Service Abroad, he had given him Leave to Reſign his Place of one of the Clerks of the Council, to Francis Gwynne, Eſq; who being Called in, was Sworn accordingly. On December the 26th, His Majeſty was pleaſed to Grant the Office of Receiver and Pay-Maſter of his Forces, to Nicholas Johnſon and William Fox, Eſquires. On Jan. 7th, His Majeſty conferr'd the Honour of Knighthood upon Edward Deering, Eſq; Younger Son of Sir Edward Deering, Kt. and Bar. deceas'd, in Conſideration of ſeveral Services by him rendred both before and ſince His Majeſty's happy Reſtauration

Nothing was become more acceptable to the Court, than the Humour of Stifling and Ridiculing the Popiſh Plot. For this Cauſe, Articles of Complaint were preferred by Dr. Oates and Mr. Bedlowe, againſt the Lord Chief-Juſtice Scroggs ; which, with his Lordſhip's Anſwer, were openly Heard and Debated before His Majeſty in Council, on Wedneſday Jan. 21. where his Lordſhip was favoured and Vindicated in all Particulars by the King and Council, who therefore Diſmiſs'd the Matter from the Board, and left his Lordſhip to take ſuch Courſe at Law as he ſhould think fit. Theſe and other Proceedings in Council were thought to be ſo Partial, that on Jan. 31. the Lord Ruſſel, the Lord Cavendiſh, Sir Henry Capell, and Mr. Powle, prayed His Majeſty to give them Leave to withdraw from the Council-Board. To which His Majeſty was pleaſed to Anſwer, With all his heart. And on Febr. 4th, Daniel Finch, Eſq; Firſt Commiſſioner of the Admiralty, and Sidney Godolphin, Eſq; one of the Commiſſioners for the Treaſury, were Sworn of His Majeſty's Privy-Council, and took their Places at the Board.

Humour of Ridiculing the Popiſh Plot.

Privy-Councellors withdraw.

At the Beginning of Hillary-Term, Mr. Baron Raymond was Sworn one of the Judges of the Common-Pleas, in the Room of Sir Robert Atkyns, who the Day before receiv'd his Diſcharge, under the Great-Seal ; and Sir Richard Weſton, one of His Majeſty's Serjeants at Law, was Sworn one of the Barons of the Exchequer, in the Place of Mr. Juſtice Raymond. On Febr. 7th, Charles Littleton was made Governor of Sheereneſs, in the Room of Major Dorrell, deceas'd. And about the ſame time, His Majeſty thought fit to add the Lord Brownkard and Sir Thomas Littleton to the Commiſſion for Executing the Office of Lord High-Admiral of England.

Other Honours and Preferments.

On Febr. 11th, His Majeſty was pleaſed to Declare in Council, " That Mr. Secretary Coventry " had long ſolicited him, on account of his " Infirmneſs of Body, for his Leave to Reſign his " Place of one of his Principal Secretaries of State :

1679. " That His Majesty had at last been prevailed " upon to grant it, though with some unwillingness, because of the great Satisfaction His Majesty had always had in his Services: That " His Majesty's Intention was, he should however continue of his Privy-Council: And " that His Majesty had made Choice of " Sir Leoline Jenkins (Judge of the High Court " of Admiralty, and his late Embassador Extraordinary and Plenipotentiary at the Treaty " at Nimeguen) to succeed him in that Station, " which Mr. Secretary Coventry would quit, so " soon as he had put his Affairs in order: And " in the mean time, His Majesty was pleased to " Command Sir Leoline Jenkins to be Sworn of " his Privy-Council, who accordingly took his " Place at the Board.

Ambassadors and Envoys.

On Febr. 17th, His Majesty appointed Sir Robert Southwell, Kt. to go his Envoy Extraordinary to the Elector of Brandenburgh: And Sir Francis Pemberton, one of the Justices of the King's-Bench, received his Discharge, under the Great-Seal. On Febr. 21st, His Majesty declared Sir Palmes Fairborne to be left Lieutenant-Governor of Tangier, in the Room of Colonel Duncan: upon whose Arrival, the Earl of Inchiquin the Governor had obtained Leave to come for England, in whose Absence the said Sir Palmes was to Command in Chief. The Lord Bodmyn went Envoy Extraordinary to the King of Denmark; and Sir Gabriel Silvius, in the same Quality, to the Dukes of Brunswick and Lunenburgh. On March 6th, His Majesty going to Blackwall to see some Frigots there Building, Dined with Henry Johnson, Esq; and conferr'd upon him the Honour of Knighthood.

State of Religion.

As to Religion; While the Nation and the Parliament were so justly Apprehensive of the Dangers of Popery, the King was pleased to keep them in some Amusement, by seeming himself to shew a great Affection and Zeal for the Protestant Church Established. He fell in readily with all the Parliamentary Addresses for Executing the Laws against the Papists, though nothing was more averse to his own Inclination and Judgment. On May the 4th, he caused a Proclamation to be publish'd, Commanding all Papists, or Reputed Papists, forthwith to Depart from the Cities of London and Westminster, and from within Ten Miles of the same. And on the same Day he publish'd another Proclamation for the Discovery and Apprehending Maurice Gifford a Popish Priest, and several other Persons of the Romish Religion, who had, (out of their detestable and barbarous Malice) Conspired and Agreed together to set on-Fire the City of London, the Suburbs thereof, and the Places thereunto adjacent. On June 13th, Thomas White, alias Whitebread, Provincial of the Jesuits in England; William Harcourt, pretended Rector of London; John Fenwick, Procurator for the Jesuits in England; John Gaven, alias Gawen, and Anthony Turner, all Jesuits and Priests, were brought to their Tryal at the Old-Bailey, by Virtue of a Commission of Oyer and Terminer, being Indicted of High-Treason, for Conspiring the Death of His Majesty, and the Subversion of the Government and Protestant Religion; and, upon Full Evidence, were found Guilty. And the next Day, Richard Langhorne, Councellor at Law, who was Indicted for the same Crimes, was, after a long Tryal, likewise found Guilty. And then Sentence Passed upon them all Six, to be Drawn, Hang'd, and Quarter'd. When they came to Execution, they all Protested, upon their Salvation, at the very moment of Death, That they were wholly Innocent of the Crimes objected against them, and for which they were about to Suffer. Many People were surprized at these Dying Asseverations; when the Evidence was so clear in all the Facts, and in every Circumstance of them: some imputed their obstinate Denial, to an Expectance of Pardon; others, to an extravagant Notion of Merit; and few believed them, but those who had been Proselyted to them. On July 18th, Sir George Wakeman the Queen's Physician, Mr. William Marshall, Mr. William Rumsey, and Mr. James Corker, were Tryed upon a like Indictment of High-Treason, for Conspiring the Death of the King, and Subverting the Government, and the Protestant Religion. But the King's Witnesses were now so far Discountenanced, that the Jury brought the Prisoners in, Not Guilty. Yet His Majesty suffered William Plessington a Popish Priest, being Convicted of High-Treason, for Exercising his Function here, contrary to the Law, to be Executed at Chester, on Saturday the 19th of July; and connived at the like Execution of John Evans, and William Floyd, two Popish Priests, at Cardiff, on the 23d of July. His Majesty, by Proclamation Dated Septemb. 8th, Declares to the World, That it had appeared, at the Tryals and Arraignments of the Conspirators, in the Horrid and Traiterous Conspiracy now under Prosecution, That among the several Ways and Means contrived for the Murther of his Sacred Majesty, Four Ruffians were appointed to go to Windsor, and there to Assassinate his Royal Person; and that by Information upon Oath, there was just cause to suspect that Layallyan, Karney, and Brahall, Irishmen, and Wilson an Englishman, were the Persons Hired to commit that Execrable Crime, and were since fled from Justice: And therefore His Majesty proposes the Reward of an Hundred Pounds for the Discovery of any one of those Offenders. In another Proclamation Dated Octob. 31st, His Majesty further Declared, That the late Horrid Plot and Conspiracy of divers Priests and Jesuits, and other Papists, against His Majesty's Sacred Person, and for the Subversion of the Protestant Religion and Government Established, had been so far Discovered, that the sad Effects thereof, had, by his Majesty's Care, and the Blessing of Almighty God, been hitherto prevented, and the most Notorious Offenders therein brought to Condign Punishment. But His Maiesty considered, that nothing would more conduce to the lasting Safety of His Majesty, his Kingdoms, and the Protestant Religion therein Establish'd, than that there might be a full and perfect Discovery of the said Conspiracy, and therefore offers Pardon, and other Encouragement, to all that can make any further Discovery. Again, by Proclamation Dated November the 12th, His Majesty proposes a Reward of an Hundred Pounds to any Person who shall Discover and Apprehend any Jesuit; and Fifty Pounds to any Person who shall Discover any Estate Real or Personal belonging to any Jesuit, or College or Seminary of Jesuits, or to any Popish Priest, College, Seminary, Convent or Nunnery of Popish and Superstitious Foundation, (Except the same be issuing out, or Part of the Estate and Estates of Sir Thomas Preston, Sir John Warner, 2500 l. Charge upon the Estate of Henry Nevil, Esq; and 1500 l. in the Hands of Augustine Hungate, which are already Discovered, and now under Examination before the Lords-Commissioners of the Treasury.)

1679.

Some Papists Acquitted.

The King apprehends his own Life in danger.

And encourages a further Discovery of the Popish Plot.

Proclamations against Papists.

Tryal of Priests & Jesuits.

In December, His Majesty further Declared, " That out of his continual Care of the Protestant " Religion, he had Appointed a Committee of " the Lords of his Privy-Council, to Consider of " the most Effectual Means for putting the Laws " in Execution against the Papists, and for the " Suppression of Popery; who Reporting their " Opinions to His Majesty in Council, there was " a Reward of Ten Pounds to be Paid to the " Discoverer of any Papist, or suspected Papist, " who shall be Harboured in any of His Majesty's " Houses, and the Officer who Harbour'd them " should be Turn'd out of his Place. The Justices " of Peace were likewise permitted to Search

" Somerset-

1679. " Somerſet-Houſe, at any time in the Queen's " abſence, as alſo St. James's, for Prieſts and " Papiſts. And that no Popiſh Recuſant might " expect any Favour or Connivance for their ſtay- " ing in Town, His Majeſty Declared his Reſo- " lution, Not to Grant them any Diſpenſations or " Licenſes to that effect. And for preventing the " Reſort of all Perſons to the Chapels of Ambaſ- " ſadors and Foreign Miniſters of the Popiſh Re- " ligion, (except they be their Menial Servants) " the Conſtables and Beadles were directed to " ſeize all Perſons who ſhould be found unduely " reſorting thither. And that no Encouragement " might be wanting, in order to the Conviction " of Papiſts, a Privy-Seal was Paſſing, to Enable " all the Judges to Reward, according to their " Diſcretions, all Perſons that ſhould Proſecute " ſuch Popiſh Recuſants before them, to be pay'd " out of the Eſtates or Forfeitures of thoſe who " ſhould be Convicted by their Proſecutions. And " for ſuch Perſons as were already Impriſoned " any-where, upon Suſpicion of being Popiſh " Prieſts, It was further Ordered, That they be " forthwith Proſecuted to an Attainder. And " whereas Liſts of the Papiſts and Reputed Papiſts " of England and Wales had been lodg'd in the " Houſe of Commons by the Knights of the re- " ſpective Shires, and Copies thereof laid before " the Lords of the Committee, the Lord-Chan- " cellor was now Directed to cauſe Commiſſions " to be Prepared (in which the ſaid Liſts were " to inſerted) Impowering and Requiring the " Juſtices of the Peace of each County to tender " the Oaths of Allegiance and Supremacy to the " Perſons particularly named therein; And upon " their Refuſal, to Proceed againſt them according " to Law, in order to their ſpeedy Conviction." And after all theſe Opinions of the Committee, Confirmed and Enforced by the King in Council, a Proclamation was publiſhed the ſame Day, Declaring, That His Majeſty was ſenſible of the great Encreaſe of Popery within this Kingdom of late Years, by reaſon of the Neglect of putting in Execution thoſe good Laws which were provided for Suppreſſing the ſame, whereby Jeſuits and Prieſts had been emboldened to reſort hither from Parts beyond the Seas in great Numbers, and had openly Practiſed and Aſſerted the moſt pernicious and damnable Principles of that Religion, and to Perſwade and Withdraw divers of His Majeſty's good Subjects from their Obedience to His Majeſty, and to reconcile them to the Pope and See of Rome: Therefore, His Majeſty apprehending that many of his good Subjects might be ignorant of the good Laws made againſt Popery, His Majeſty thinks fit to publiſh and make known the Principal and moſt Penal of the ſaid Laws; as well to prevent and hinder any of his Loving Subjects from being Miſled into any ſuch Offences, through Ignorance, as to Guide and Encourage all Perſons knowing of any ſuch Offences, to a Legal Proſecution of the ſame.

Proclamation for putting the Laws in Execution againſt Papiſts.

On Jan. 17th, at the Seſſions for Middleſex and London, Eight Perſons were Arraigned for High-Treaſon, upon the Statute of 27 Eliz. cap. 2. who being born Subjects of the King of England, and having taken the Order of Prieſthood, by Authority derived from the See of Rome, had come and remained in England, contrary to the Statute; and Six of them were Convicted, And yet after all theſe ſolemn Declarations, and formal Proceedings, the King was believed, by all who beſt knew him, to be a Papiſt in his Heart, and a Profeſs'd Encourager of Suppreſſing and Ridiculing the Popiſh Plot; which never ended in his Reign, nor with his Life.

The King is not throughly convinc'd of the Popiſh Plot.

Omiſſion in the Teſt Act, about Members of Convocation.

There was little more of Eccleſiaſtical Concern; unleſs we take Notice, That the Houſe of Lords had obſerved an Omiſſion in the Teſt Act, and and other Acts of Security, " That no Proviſion " was made for requiring the Members of Convo- " cation to take the Oaths and Declaration." 1679. Upon which a Bill was brought in, Intituled, An Act to Diſable any Perſon from Sitting in any of the Houſes of Convocation, till he hath taken the Oaths, and made and Subſcribed the Declaration therein contained. Which Bill being ſent from the Lords, was on Apr. 3d Read the Firſt time, and on Apr. 8th a Second time, and then Committed, upon the Debate of the Houſe, to a Committee of Members expreſsly named; to which were to be added all the Members that ſerved for the Univerſities of Oxford and Cambridge. A Report from this Committee was made on Apr. 22d, That they had taken the Bill into Conſideration, and Agreed upon ſeveral Amendments and Clauſes: Which being Read, the Bill was re-Committed, and was afterwards dropt. The Foundation of this Bill was laid, in this Opinion of all People, That the Members of Convocation were not ſo Called to Parliament by the Premunientes Writ, as to be Intitled to the Privileges or Duties of Parliament-Men, by any Law or Statute, unleſs expreſsly named in it.

Unhappy Diſtinction of Whig and Tory.

The Nation was ſo Divided into Party and Faction, under the unhappy Names of Whig and Tory, that at Elections for Parliament, and other Publick Meetings, it occaſioned many Tumults and Riots, and other Perſonal Challenges and Combats. Upon which His Majeſty, by his Proclamation Dated March 9th, was pleaſed to Declare, " That it had become too frequent, eſpecially " with Perſons of Quality, under a vain Pretence " of Honour, to take upon them to be the Re- " vengers of their private Quarrels, by Duels and " ſingle Combat; which ought not to be, upon any " Pretence or Provocation whatſoever: Therefore, " His Majeſty conſidering, that the Sin of Murther " was deteſtable before God, and this Way of proſe- " cuting Satisfaction was ſcandalous to Chriſtian " Religion, and was a manifeſt Violation of the " Laws; out of his pious Care to prevent Un- " chriſtian and raſh Effuſion of Blood, He ſtrictly " Charges and Commands all his Loving Sub- " jects, That they do not, either by themſelves " or others, Challenge any Perſon, nor Accept of " any Challenge, nor actually Fight any Duel; " Declaring his Royal Pleaſure, That He will not " grant his Pardon to any Perſon that ſhall be " ſo concern'd in any Duel, but leave him to the " utmoſt Rigour and Severities of the Laws.

Proclamation againſt Duelling.

Unhappy Diviſions among the Clergy.

The Diſſentions among the Clergy were as apparent as among the People. Thoſe Divines who were hearty in their Zeal againſt Popery, and were ſtedfaſt in Aſſerting the Legal Rights and Liberties of Church and State, were unhappily Run down for Whigs, and even for Fanaticks, though Perſons of the greateſt Learning, Sobriety, and Affection to the Eſtabliſh'd Conſtitution: While other Clergy-men, who were Drawn in to Declaim againſt the Fanaticks more than againſt the Papiſts, and to pretend to be more afraid of a Republick than of a Popiſh Succeſſor, they Valu'd themſelves for the Diſtinguiſhing Name of Tories; and run into ſuch High Notions of Paſſive Obedience, and Unbounded Prerogative, that they really gave a great Advantage to the Papiſts, and help'd to make the Diſſenting Teachers the more Acceptable not only to the Common People, but even to many of the Nobility and Gentry, who were offended at thoſe new Marks of a High-Church. For, to uſe the Words of Sir John Hawles, late Solicitor-General, in his Remarks on Fitz-Harris's Tryal, Many of the Clergy of the Church of England had been prevailed with to cry-up the Popiſh, as a Fanatick Plot: The Papiſts and the Church of England being in the late Times equally Sufferers, and Oppreſs'd by the Fanaticks, they naturally grew to have a Kindneſs for each other, and both join'd in Hating

1679. Hating the Fanaticks; and therefore pretended at leaſt, that they did not believe any thing of the Popiſh Plot, but that that Report was given out by the Fanaticks, whilſt they themſelves were Deſigning ſomething againſt the Church of England.

1680. The Parliament, by the laſt Prorogation, was to have Met again on April the 15th. But on Monday April 5th, His Majeſty was pleaſed to Declare in Council, "That he thought fit, for "ſeveral weighty Conſiderations, to make a further "Prorogation till the 17th of May next." At which time the Two Houſes Met at Weſtminſter, and were Prorogued, by Commiſſion, till the 1ſt of July next: At which time it was further Prorogued, by Commiſſion, till the 22d Day of the ſame Month. But in the mean time, His Majeſty Declared in Council, on July 14th, "That he "thought fit to Prorogue the Parliament from "the 22d Inſtant, till the 23d of Auguſt;" when it was again Prorogued, by Commiſſion, till the 21ſt of October. On which Day, His Majeſty, by Proclamation, Declared, That the Parliament ſhould then Meet, and Sit, and therefore Required the Preſence and Attendance of all the Members.

The Parliament Prorogu'd from time to time.

Abhorrence of Petitioning.

In the mean time, Inſtructions were given, and great Intereſt was made to obtain, at ſeveral Seſſions and Aſſizes, a Declaration of Abhorrence of Petitioning for the Sitting of a Parliament; and many of theſe Forms of Abhorrence were preſented to the King, who ſeem'd to be very fond of them. The City of Weſtminſter was the firſt, who, by Francis Wythins, Eſq; (Knighted for that Service) preſented ſuch an Addreſs of Abhorrence, made by the Grand-Jury, and Subſcribed by the Juſtices. The like Addreſſes were brought up from the Counties of Surrey, Eſſex, Middleſex, and Norfolk; this laſt County particularly giving the King their humble Thanks for Recalling the Duke of York from Flanders.

Meeting of the Parliament.

On Thurday Octob. 21. the Parliament Met at Weſtminſter; And His Majeſty coming to the Houſe of Lords, with the Commons Attending, was pleaſed to make this Gracious Speech to Both Houſes:

My Lords and Gentlemen,

The King's Speech.

THE ſeveral Prorogations I have made, have been very Advantagious to our Neighbours, and very Uſeful to Me; for I have employed that Time in making and perfecting an Alliance with the Crown of Spain, ſuitable to that which I had before with the States of the United Provinces, and they alſo had with Spain, conſiſting of mutual Obligations of Succour and Defence.

I have all the reaſon in the world to believe, That what was ſo much deſired by former Parliaments, muſt needs be very grateful to you now: For though ſome, perhaps, may wiſh theſe Meaſures had been taken ſooner, yet no Man can with Reaſon think that it is now too late; for they who deſire to Make theſe Alliances, and they who deſire to Break them, ſhew themſelves to be of another Opinion.

And as theſe are the beſt Meaſures that could be taken for the Safety of England, and the Repoſe of of Chriſtendom; ſo they cannot fail to attain their End, and to ſpread and improve themſelves farther, if Our Diviſions at Home, do not render Our Friendſhip leſs Conſiderable Abroad.

To prevent thoſe as much as may be, I think fit to renew to you all the Aſſurances which can be deſired, That Nothing ſhall be wanting on my Part to give you the fulleſt Satisfaction your Hearts can wiſh, for the Security of the Proteſtant Religion, which I am fully reſolved to Maintain againſt all the Conſpiracies of Our Enemies, and to Concurr with you in any new Remedies which ſhall be Propoſed, that may conſiſt with Preſerving the Succeſſion of the Crown in its Due and Legal Courſe of Deſcent. 1680.

And in order to this, I do Recommend it to You, to purſue the further Examination of the Plot, with a ſtrict and an impartial Enquiry. I do not think my Self ſafe, nor You neither, till that Matter be gone through with; And therefore it will be neceſſary that the Lords in the Tower be brought to their ſpeedy Tryal, that Juſtice may be done.

I need not tell you what Danger the City of Tangier is in, nor of what Importance it is to Us to Preſerve it. I have, with a mighty Charge and Expence, ſent a very conſiderable Relief thither; but conſtantly to Maintain ſo great a Force as that War will require, and to make thoſe New Works and Fortifications, without which, the Place will not be long Tenable, amounts to ſo vaſt a Sum, that without Your Support, it will be impoſſible for Me to undergo it: Therefore I lay the Matter plainly before You, and do deſire Your Advice and Aſſiſtance.

But that which I value above all the Treaſure in the World, and which I am ſure will give Me greater Strength and Reputation both at Home and Abroad, than any Treaſure can do, is, A perfect Union among Our Selves.

Nothing but This, can Reſtore the Kingdom to that Strength and Vigour which it ſeems to have loſt, and Raiſe us again to that Conſideration which England hath uſually had.

All Europe have their Eyes upon this Aſſembly, and think their Own Happineſs or Miſery, as well as Ours, will depend upon it.

If We ſhould be ſo unhappy as to fall into ſuch a Miſunderſtanding amongſt Our Selves, as would render Our Friendſhip unſafe to truſt to; it will not be to be wondred at, if Our Neighbours ſhould begin to take new Reſolutions, and perhaps ſuch as may be Fatal to Us.

Let Us therefore take Care that We do not Gratifie Our Enemies, and Diſcourage Our Friends, by any unſeaſonable Diſputes.

If any ſuch do happen, the World will ſee it was no Fault of Mine; for I have done all that was poſſible for Me to do, to keep You in Peace while I Live, and to leave You ſo when I Die.

But from ſo great Prudence and ſo good Affection as Yours, I can fear nothing of this kind; but do rely upon You All, that You will uſe Your beſt Endeavours to bring this Parliament to a good and happy Concluſion.

After this Speech, the Lord-Chancellor, by His Majeſty's Command, Directed the Commons to Return to their Houſe, and to proceed to the Choice of a Speaker: Which they accordingly did, and Unanimouſly Elected William Williams, Eſq; of Grays-Inn, Councellor at Law, and Recorder of Cheſter; who, the next Day, was Preſented to His Majeſty ſeated in his Throne in the Houſe of Lords, and Approved by Him. On Tueſday Oct. 26. they entred on their Debates: And becauſe the Senſe of the Houſe, and the State of the Nation, will beſt appear by what was then deliver'd, we ſhall here inſert the Two leading Speeches. The Lord R. began thus:

W. Williams Choſen Speaker.

Mr SPEAKER;

SIR,

Speeches in the Houſe of Commons.

"SEeing, by God's Providence and His Majeſty's "Favour, We are here Aſſembled, to Conſult "and Adviſe about the greateſt Affairs of the "Kingdom, I humbly conceive it will become us, "to begin firſt with that which is of moſt Con"ſequence to our King and Country, and to take "into Conſideration how to ſave the Main, before "we ſpend any Time about Particulars.

"SIR, I am of Opinion, That the Life of "our King, the Safety of our Country and Pro-

"teſtant

1680. " teſtant Religion, are in great Danger from Popery; " and that either the Parliament muſt Suppreſs the " the Power and Growth of Popery, or elſe that " Popery will ſoon Deſtroy not only Parliaments, " but all that is Near and Dear to us. And there- " fore I humbly Move, That we may Reſolve to " take into our Conſideration, in the firſt place, " How to Suppreſs Popery, and Prevent a Popiſh " Succeſſor; without which, all our Endeavours " about other Matters will not ſignifie any thing, " and therefore this juſtly challengeth the Pre- " cedency.

He was Seconded by Sir H.C. in this Notable manner:

Mr. SPEAKER;

SIR,

" I Stand up to Second that Motion, and to give " ſome Reaſons, with your Permiſſion, why " I Agree in it; not doubting but other Perſons " will be of the ſame Opinion, if they have the " ſame Sentiments what Influence the Popiſh Party " have had in the Management of moſt of our Af- " fairs both at Home and Abroad, for many Years " laſt paſt; and how that Party hath Encreaſed, " and been Encouraged.

" SIR, I remember, that after His Majeſty's " happy Reſtauration, it was thought convenient " that an Act of Uniformity ſhould Paſs, as the " beſt Law that could be invented to Secure the " Church from the Danger of Popery and Fana- " ticiſm; and accordingly it did Paſs in the " Year 1662: but in the Year 1663, ſome that " then Managed the great Affairs of State, or at " leaſt had great Intereſt with His Majeſty, were " of another Opinion; for they had prevailed " with Him to Grant a Toleration and Indulgence, " and to make a Declaration to that Purpoſe. " The Parliament Aſſembling ſoon after, thought " it very ſtrange, that in one Year an Act of " Uniformity ſhould be the beſt Way to Preſerve " the Church, and that in the next Year a Tolera- " tion and Indulgence; therefore, after a ſerious " Debate about it, in Febr. 1663. they made an " Addreſs to His Majeſty, humbly repreſenting " how it would reflect on the Wiſdom of that Par- " liament, to have ſuch an Alteration made ſo " ſoon; and that ſuch Proceedings, for ought " they could foreſee, would end in Popery. Upon " which His Majeſty, out of his great Goodneſs, " ſtopt the Iſſuing out of the ſaid Toleration, " hearkening rather to the Advice of his Parlia- " ment, than to any private Counſellers.

" SIR, I cannot inform you Who it was that " gave that Advice to His Majeſty, nor certainly " affirm that they were Popiſhly Affected; but if " I may take the liberty to judge of a Tree by " its Fruit, I have ſome Reaſon to think ſo: be- " cauſe I find by Coleman's Letters, and other " Diſcoveries, That a Toleration and Indulgence " ſhould be one of the great Engines they intended " to uſe for the Eſtabliſhing of Popery in this " Nation. But the Project thus failing at this " Time, they were forc'd to wait with Patience " until they could have another Opportunity; " employing in the mean time their Diabolical " Counſels in Weakening the Proteſtant Intereſt " (in order to a General Deſtruction of it) by En- " gaging us in a War with Holland: In which " the French Acted the ſame Part in the Behalf of " the Dutch, as they did afterwards in our Behalf " againſt them in 1672, very fairly Looking on " both times, while we poor Proteſtants with " great fury Deſtroy'd one the other. But this " was not ſo ſtrange, nor ſo plain, as the Dividing " of our Fleet under the Command of Prince " Rupert and General Monk, and the Deſign of " Deſtroying them, as well as their Ships, and 1680. " the reſt of our Navy-Royal at Chatham. And " as they thus Acted their Part at Sea, ſo they " did not forget to do their beſt a-Shore; in " Apr. 1666, ſome Perſons that were then Hang'd, " Confeſs'd they had been treated with, and had " treated with others, to Burn the City of London " in September following; of which Confeſſion we " then took as little Notice, as we have of other " Diſcoveries ſince: however, accordingly in Sep- " tember, Thirteen thouſand Houſes of the City of " London were Burnt: And thoſe that were " Taken in Carrying on that Work, generouſly " Diſcharg'd without any Tryal; and one Papiſt " that Confeſs'd, that himſelf and others did ſet " the City on-Fire, was in great haſte Hang'd, " and ſo the Buſineſs was huſht up, as compleatly " as the laſt great Plot is like to be now, brand- " ing Hubert, that then made that Confeſſion, " with Madneſs; as now theſe laſt Witneſſes, with " Perjury, Sodomy, and what not. However, theſe " Buſineſſes were not ſo Carried on, but His Ma- " jeſty diſcern'd ſome of the Intrigues of them, " which made him alter his Councils, and, con- " trary to the Endeavours of that Party, enter " into New Alliances, by making up that excel- " lent League, uſually call'd the Tripple-League. " Which put a ſtop to theſe Mens Deſigns as to " Affairs Abroad, but not to their Deſigns here at " Home. For having obtained the Oxford Act, " and ſome others againſt the Diſſenters, great " Endeavours were uſed to have them executed " ſeverely, in expectation that the Diſſenters would " ſo be made weary of living quietly under them, " and in the end be glad of a Toleration: But the " Diſſenters deceived them, and ſubmitted to the " Laws, inſomuch that in 1670, till 1671. there " was hardly a Conventicle to be heard of in Eng- " land; and might never have been more, if that " Party had not been afraid of a great Diſap- " pointment thereby: Wherefore, to revive our " Diviſions, and to bring in (as they hoped) " their own Religion, they employed all their " Force again to get a Toleration; I ſay, They did " it, becauſe it cannot be imagin'd it could be " from any Proteſtant Intereſt, both Churchmen " and Diſſenters publickly declaring their Deteſta- " tion of it: And in 1672. it was Obtain'd, " Printed, and Publiſh'd; after we had, in order " to the Carrying it on, broke that never-to-be- " forgotten Tripple-League, ſacrificed our Honour " to the French, not only by making a ſtrong Al- " liance with them, but by ſeizing the Dutch " Smyrna Fleet, and then afterwards Proclaiming " War with them. Which War was Continu'd, " in order to Ruine us Both; for the French " proved but Lookers on at Sea, (as they had " done when Engaged with the Dutch in 1665.) " though great Conquerors at Land, eſpecially of " the Proteſtants in Germany and Holland. And " as this Toleration was accompanied with theſe " great Alterations in Affairs Abroad, ſo it was " back't, 1. With a great Miniſter of State at " the Helm at Home, who was ſo Confident of " the Re-fixing Popery here, that he could not for- " bear to declare himſelf to be of that Religion, I " mean my Lord-Treaſurer Clifford: As alſo, " 2. With a great Army at Black-Heath, Ready " upon all Occaſions: And, 3. With the greateſt " Violation on the Property of the Subject, that " ever happen'd in this Nation, the Seizing of " One Million and an Half, or thereabout, in the " Exchequer. All which indeed made our Condi- " tion Deſperate, and, as many thought, paſt " Retrieve. But, Mr. Speaker, here again the " Goodneſs and Wiſdom of His Majeſty Saved us, " refuſing to follow ſuch pernicious Counſels: " Upon which Clifford not only loſt his Place, but " his Life too, breaking his Heart (as is by moſt " believed) 1680. " believed) to ſee himſelf ſo diſappointed in this " great Deſign. And here, as we can never too

" much deteſt my Lord Clifford, and ſuch Others
" who Contrived our Ruine ; ſo we can never ſuf-
" ficiently admire His Majeſty's Royal Care, in " working out our Security, by refuſing to follow
" any Advice that tended to thoſe Ends. And " therefore, to the great Diſappointment of that " Party, at the Requeſt of the Houſe of Commons
" at their next Meeting, he Recalled the ſaid Tolera-
" tion, Disbanded the Army, and, in convenient
" time, made a Peace with Holland. But though
" this Party were thus defeated of their Deſign,
" yet not ſo diſcouraged as to give it over. They " changed their Meaſures, but not their Princi" ples ; and although they deſiſted from further
" aiming at a Toleration, yet they no ways neg-
" lected purſuing a Reformation, but, in order
" thereto, proſecuted a Correſpondence formerly
" begun for that Purpoſe with the French King,
" and by promiſing him conſiderable Supplies to " Carry on the War he was then Engaged in,
" ſecured themſelves, as they thought, of his Aſ-
" ſiſtance for Settling of Popery here. Accor" dingly it is not unknown, what a Party of " Men, and what Quantities of Ammunition, and
" other Neceſſaries for War, were ſent to the " French King, during the War he was then En" gaged in, and how it was done contrary to the " Advice of the Parliament, and the Solicitations
" of moſt of the Princes of Europe, and true In-" tereſt of England, to the Aſtoniſhment of all " good Men ; eſpecially becauſe it was contrary to " His Majeſty's own Proclamation, and when the " French had Declared they made that War
" for Religion, endeavouring to force the Dutch to " allow of Popiſh Churches. However, ſuch was
" the Strength of this Party, that this Aſſiſtance
" was continued until the French King was willing " to make a Peace ; and then, Who more Inſtru-
" mental than our Miniſters to effect it ? ſeveral
" Ambaſſadors, and Plenipotentiaries too, being
" ſent as well to the Court of Spain, as Germany
" and Holland, for that Purpoſe. And at laſt, the " Dutch being Weary, and Conſumed with the " War, they were perſuaded to be willing for a
" Peace ; and accordingly on Jan. 10th, 1667.
" entred into a Treaty with Us for a General
" Peace, to be accompliſhed by ſuch Ways and " Means as are therein preſcribed. Which League
" was kept private for ſome time ; and inſtead
" of any Diſcovery thereof, about the End of " February following (the Parliament being then
" ſoon after to Aſſemble) a great Noiſe was made
" of Entring into a War againſt France ; it being " concluded, That Nothing like That would en-
" cline the Parliament to give Money, nor the " People freely to part with it, becauſe it was " the only Way to extinguiſh thoſe Fears they
" lay under, by reaſon of the growing Greatneſs
" of France. At the Meeting of the Parliament,
" the Project was ſet on foot with all the Art
" and Induſtry imaginable ; and ſo far were the " Major-part of the Members perſuaded of the " Reality thereof, that they were enclinable to give
" a great Sum of Money for the Carrying on of
" the War : But while they were in Conſultation
" about it, the League formerly mention'd, Agreed
" at the Hague, was unluckily made (in ſome
" meaſure) publick, and occaſion'd a great
" jealouſie of the Reality of the Pretended War ;
" and the greater, becauſe, upon Enquiry, they " could not find there were any Alliances made
" to that Purpoſe. And yet notwithſtanding this,
" and the great Endeavours of ſome Worthy Mem-
" bers of that Parliament, (now of this) an " Army of Thirty thouſand Men were raiſed, and
" a Tax of above One million two hundred thou-
" ſand Pounds was given. And then, inſtead of " a War, a General Peace, according to that Treaty 1680.
" Agreed with Holland, was preſently made. By " which that Party thought they had ſecured not " only the Power of France, but the Men and
" Money here raiſed at Home, to be made ſer-
" viceable for their Ends ; there wanting nothing
" but a Popiſh King to perfect all theſe Deſigns.
" For which we have great Reaſon to believe they " had made all neceſſary Preparations, as well by " employing Men and Money to find out wicked
" Inſtruments to take away the King's Life, as
" by providing one Claypool to be a Sacrifice, to " make an Atonement for the Act, and to caſt
" the Wickedneſs thereof on the Fanaticks. To " which purpoſe, the ſaid Claypool was really Im-
" priſon'd ſome time before in the Tower, upon
" the Evidence of Two Witneſſes, That he ſhould
" ſay, That he, and Two hundred more, had Engaged
" to Kill the King, the next time he went to New-" Market. For which, in all probability, he had
" as really been Hang'd, if the breaking out of " the Plot had not prevented their Deſigns.
" Then was Claypool, the next Term after, pub-
" lickly Cleared at the King's-Bench-Bar, the Wit-
" neſſes Appearing no more againſt him. Thus
" were we again reduced to a Miſerable Condition :
" but it pleaſed God, by the Diſcovery of the " Plot by Dr. Oates, once more to Save us ; whoſe
" Evidence (he being but One Witneſs) they " thought at firſt to have Out-braved ; but ſome
" of them being ſo infatuated as to kill Juſtice
" Godfrey, and Coleman ſo unfortunate as to leave
" ſome of his important Papers in his Houſe, not-
" withſtanding the Time he had to convey them
" away, it wrought ſo great a Fermentation in the " People, as that there was no Remedy, but that
" the further Purſuit of the Plot muſt be again
" laid aſide, and a fair Face put upon Things :
" And ſo accordingly there was for a few Months ;
" but how, after Wakeman's Tryal, Things turn'd
" again, what Endeavours have been ſince uſed to " Ridicule the Plot, to Diſparage the Old Witneſſes,
" to Diſcourage New Ones, to ſet up Presbyterian
" Plots, and to Encreaſe our Diviſions, I ſuppoſe
" muſt be freſh in every Man's Memory here,
" and therefore I ſhall not offer to trouble you
" therewith.

" But, SIR, I cannot Conclude, without
" begging your Patience, while I Obſerve how " Things have been Carry'd on in Scotland and " Ireland, anſwerable to what was done here.

" In Ireland, the Papiſts are at leaſt Five to One
" in Number for the Proteſtants, and may pro-
" bably derive from their Cradle an Inclination
" to Maſſacre them again : At leaſt, the Proteſtants
" have no Security, but by having the Militia-
" Arms, and the Command of Towns and Forts
" in their Hands. But about the ſame time, or
" a little before that the Toleration came out here
" in 1672, an Order went from hence, which, after " a long Preamble of the Loyalty and Affection
" of the Papiſts to His Majeſty, Required the " Lord-Lieutenant and Council to Diſpenſe with
" the Papiſts wearing of Arms, and living in Cor-
" porations, and a great many other things in " their Favour ; of which they have made ſuch
" Uſe, as that the Plot There, was in as good
" Readineſs as that Here : but how Carry'd on,
" and what Endeavours were there alſo uſed to " Stifle it, will appear, when your Leiſure may " permit you to Examine thoſe Witneſſes.

" In Scotland, the Government is quite Altered,
" the Uſe of Parliaments, in a manner, aboliſhed,
" and the Power of that Government lodged in
" a Commiſſioner and Council, a Standing Army of " Twenty two thouſand Men Settled, all Endeavours
" uſed to Divide the Proteſtant Intereſt, and to " Encourage the Papiſts. By which we may con-
" clude, That the ſame Intereſt hath had a " great

1680. " great hand in the Management of Affairs " There alſo.

" And, SIR, may we not as well believe, that " the World was at firſt made of Atoms, or by " Chance, without the help of an Omnipotent " Hand, as that theſe Affairs in this our Little " World have been thus Carry'd on ſo many " Years together, ſo contrary to our true Intereſt, without ſome great Original Cauſe? by " which the Popiſh Intereſt hath ſo far got the " Aſcendant of the Proteſtant Intereſt, that notwithſtanding all His Majeſty's Endeavours, " Things have been ſtrangely Over-ruled in favour " of that Party; how, and which way, His Majeſty's Declaration, made in April 1679, is to " me a great Manifeſtation.

" SIR, I hope the Weight of the Matter I " have Diſcours'd on, will Plead my Pardon with " the Houſe, for having troubled you ſo long: I " ſubmit what I have ſaid to your Judgment, " humbly deſiring a favourable Conſtruction: " And although I have ſaid ſome Things that are " very Strange, and other Things grounded only " on Conjectures; yet I believe that no Man will " have juſt Reaſon to doubt the Probability of " the Truth, if they will but conſider what a " Potent Friend the Papiſts have had of James " Duke of York, and how Emboldened by the " Hopes of having him for King. And as " it is not to be doubted but that they have had " his Aſſiſtance, ſo they have had the French Ambaſſador's too, who, by his frequency at the " Palace, hath ſeemed rather one of the Family and King's Houſhold, than a Foreign Ambaſſador; and by his Egreſs and Regreſs to and from His Majeſty, rather a Prime Miniſter of State of this Kingdom, than a Counſellor to another Prince. " And the Truth of All hath been ſo Confirmed " by Coleman's Letters, making the Duke's Intereſt, the French Intereſt, and the Papiſts Intereſt ſo much one, and by the many Witneſſes that have come in about the Plot, that " I think we may rather be at a Loſs for our " Remedy, than in Doubt of our Diſeaſe. And " therefore, though I know the Difficulties I " may bring my ſelf under, by having thus " Laid open ſome Men's Deſigns; yet ſeeing my " King and Country have Call'd me to this " Service, I am reſolv'd, That as my Father loſt his Life for King Charles the Firſt, ſo I will not " be afraid to adventure mine for King Charles " the Second, and that makes me expoſe my ſelf " in his Service in this Place.

" SIR, I think (ſeeing Things are thus) " without neglecting our Duty to our King and " Country, nay, to our God too, we cannot deferr " Endeavouring the Securing of the King's Perſon, " and Proteſtant Religion, by all Lawful Means " whatſoever: And therefore I Second the Motion " that was made, That we may, in the firſt " place, take into our Conſideration, how to " Suppreſs Popery, and Prevent a Popiſh Succeſſor; " that ſo we may never return again to Superſtition, Idolatry and Slavery, but may always " preſerve that pure Religion, to be the Religion " of this Nation, for which ſo many of our Fore-" Fathers have ſuffer'd Martyrdom, I mean the " Proteſtant Religion, as long as the Sun and Moon " endure.

Reſolution againſt a Popiſh Succeſſor. At the End of the Debates of this Day, the Houſe Reſolved, That it is the Opinion of this Houſe, That they ought, in the firſt place, to proceed effectually to Suppreſs Popery, and prevent a Popiſh Succeſſor.

The Duke of York ſeem'd to expect a Vote of this nature, and therefore would not ſtay to bear the Affront of it, but the Day before the Seſſion, departed for Scotland, He and his Dutcheſs and Retinue going down the River in their Barges, to embark on the Men of War appointed to Attend them, His Majeſty being pleaſed to Accompany them as far as Woolwich. 1680.

On Octob. 27th, they firſt Reſolved, That an Addreſs be made to His Majeſty, Declaring the Reſolution of this Houſe, to Preſerve and Support the King's Perſon and Government, and the Proteſtant Religion at Home and Abroad. And then falling on the Debate of Diſſolving, and ſo often Proroguing the Parliaments, and the Diſcouraging of Petitions for the Sitting of them, they came to theſe Reſolutions:

Reſolution for the Right of Petitioning. Reſolved, " That it is, and ever hath been the " undoubted Right of the Subjects of England, " to Petition the King, for the Calling and Sitting " of Parliaments, and Redreſſing of Grievances.

Reſolved, " That to Traduce ſuch Petitioning " as a Violation of Duty, and to repreſent it to " His Majeſty as Tumultuous or Seditious; is to " Betray the Liberty of the Subject, and Contribute to the Deſign of Subverting the ancient " Legal Conſtitution of this Kingdom, and inducing Arbitrary Power.

Reſolved, " That a Committee be Appointed " to Enquire after all ſuch Perſons that have Offended againſt the Right of the Subject.

Sir Francis Wythins Expell'd the Houſe. After theſe Votes, a Complaint was made againſt Sir Francis Wythins a Member of the Houſe, who had preferred an Addreſs to the King, againſt the Peoples Right of Petitioning: And he not being in the Houſe, an Order was made, That he ſhould Attend the next Day; where, after he was Heard in his Place, he was Ordered to Withdraw, and this Sentence was Paſs'd upon him, That he ſhould receive the Cenſure of the Houſe upon his Knees, and be forthwith Expell'd the Houſe.

Proclamation for further Diſcovery of the Popiſh Plot. His Majeſty, to ſtop the Torrent of the Houſe, and to ſeem to fall in with them, in a like Zeal againſt Popery, did, on Octob. 30th, Publiſh a Proclamation, Declaring His Princely Care for Securing the True Proteſtant Religion, and for Satisfying the Minds of his Loving Subjects; And that therefore he thought fit to Encourage the more-effectual Diſcovery and Suppreſſion of the moſt Horrid and Execrable Popiſh Plot, by promiſing a Free Pardon to any Perſons who ſhould come in, and give further Information and Evidence concerning it.

Reſolutions againſt Popery. The Commons were ſo little ſatisfy'd with this Court-Promiſe of Suppreſſing Popery, that on Novemb. 2. they fell into a Debate of the Popiſh Plot, and came to theſe Reſolutions: " 1. That " the Duke of York's being a Papiſt, and the Hopes " of his coming ſuch to the Crown, hath given " the greateſt Countenance and Encouragement to " the preſent Deſigns and Conſpiracies againſt the " King, and Proteſtant Religion. 2. That in De-" fence of the King's Perſon and Government, " and Proteſtant Religion, this Houſe doth De-" clare, That they will Stand by His Majeſty " with their Lives and Fortunes; And that if " His Majeſty ſhould come to any Violent Death, " (which God forbid) they will Revenge it to the " utmoſt on the Papiſts." And after ſeveral Speeches, it was Reſolved, That a Bill be brought in, to Diſable James Duke of York to Inherit the Imperial Crowns of England and Ireland, and the Dominions thereto belonging. This Bill was Read the Firſt time on Novemb. 4th, when Sir Leoline Jenkins Argued, That it was, 1ſt, Contrary to Natural Juſtice, to Condemn a Man before the Conviction, or the Hearing of him. 2dly, That it was contrary to the Principles of our Religion, to Diſpoſſeſs a Man of his Right, becauſe he differs in Point of Faith. 3dly, It was againſt the Divine Right of Monarchy, and to give the Crown to the Diſpoſal of the People. 4thly, It was againſt the Oath of Allegiance, which did bind all Perſons to

Bill of Excluſion.

Arguments againſt it.

1680. the King, his Heirs and Succeſſors; by which the Duke, as Preſumptive-Heir, muſt be underſtood.

Arguments for it. Other Members Argued not only for the Legality, but for the Expedience, and even the Neceſſity of ſuch a Bill, as the only Way of Preſerving the King, the Government, and the Proteſtant Religion: And ſo it was, by a very great Majority, "Reſolved, "That the Bill ſhould be read "a Second time on Saturday Morning, Nov. 6th."

Proceeding in it. At which time it was Reſolved, "That the Bill "be Committed to a Committee of the Whole "Houſe. That it be an Inſtruction to the ſaid "Committee, That the Excluſion in the ſaid Bill "do extend to the Perſon of James Duke of York "only. And that this Houſe will Reſolve it ſelf "into a Committee of the Whole Houſe, on Mon"day Morning next at Ten of the Clock, to pro"ceed to the Conſideration of the ſaid Bill." Accordingly, on Novemb. 8th, the Houſe Reſolved it ſelf into a Committee, and Reported their Reſolution, "That the ſaid Bill for Diſabling James "Duke of York, &c. with the ſeveral Clauſes and "Amendments, be Ingroſs'd.

The King offended. The King was Incens'd at this Proceeding of the Commons againſt his Brother; but to ſhew his Reſentment in the calmeſt manner, he ſent this Meſſage to the Houſe, on Novemb. 10th: His Majeſty deſires this Houſe, as well for the Satisfaction of his People, as of Himſelf, to Expedite ſuch Matters as are depending before them, relating to Popery, and the Plot; And would have them reſt Aſſured, That all Remedies they can tender to His Majeſty conducing to thoſe Ends, ſhall be very Acceptable to him, provided they be ſuch as may conſiſt with Preſerving the Succeſſion of the Crown in its Legal Courſe of Deſcent. After a Debate upon this Meſſage, and a general Diſſatisfaction in it, the Houſe came to theſe Reſolutions: 1. "That "a Committee be Appointed to draw up an "humble Addreſs to His Majeſty, upon the De"bate of the Houſe, in Anſwer to His Majeſty's "Gracious Meſſage. 2. That this Houſe will "proceed in the Proſecution of the Lords in the "Tower, and will forthwith begin with William "Viſcount Stafford.

On Novemb. 11th, this Addreſs to His Majeſty was Read, and Agreed to be Preſented:

May it Pleaſe Your Moſt Excellent Majeſty,

Addreſs of the Commons. "WE Your Majeſty's Moſt Loyal and Obedient Subjects, the Commons in this "preſent Parliament Aſſembled, having taken "into our moſt ſerious Conſideration Your Ma"jeſty's Gracious Meſſage, brought unto us on "the 9th Day of this Inſtant November, by "Mr. Secretary Jenkins; do with all Thankful"neſs acknowledge Your Majeſty's Care and "Goodneſs, in Inviting us to Expedite ſuch Mat"ters as are depending before us, relating to Popery, "and the Plot. And We do, in all Humility, "repreſent to Your Majeſty, That We are fully "Convinced, That it is highly incumbent upon "us, in Diſcharge both of our Duty to Your "Majeſty, and of that great Truſt repoſed in us "by thoſe whom we Repreſent, to endeavour, by "the moſt ſpeedy and effectual Ways, the Sup"preſſion of Popery within this Your Kingdom, and "the bringing to Publick Juſtice all ſuch as ſhall "be found Guilty of the Horrid and Damnable "Popiſh Plot. And though the Time of our Sit"ting (abating what muſt neceſſarily be ſpent "in the Chuſing and Preſenting a Speaker, Ap"pointing Grand-Committees, and in taking the "Oaths, and Teſts enjoined by Act of Parliament) "hath not much exceeded a Fortnight, yet We "have in this Time not only made a conſiderable "Progreſs in ſome Things which to us ſeem, and "(when Preſented to Your Majeſty in a Parlia"mentary way) will, we truſt, appear to Your 1680.
"Majeſty to be abſolutely neceſſary, for the "Safety of Your Majeſty's Perſon, the effectual
"Suppreſſion of Popery, and the Security of the "Religion, Lives and Eſtates of Your Majeſty's
"Subjects: but even in relation to the Tryals of "the Five Lords Impeached in Parliament for
"the Execrable Popiſh Plot, we have ſo far Pro"ceeded, as we doubt not but in a ſhort time
"we ſhall be Ready for the ſame. But we cannot,
"without being Unfaithful to Your Majeſty, and
"to our Country, by Whom we are Intruſted,
"omit, upon this Occaſion, humbly to inform
"Your Majeſty, That our Difficulties, even as to
"theſe Tryals, are much encreaſed by the Evil
"and Deſtructive Counſels of thoſe Perſons who
"Adviſed Your Majeſty, firſt to the Prorogation,
"and then to the Diſſolution of the laſt Parlia"ment, at a Time when the Commons had taken
"great Pains about, and were Prepared for thoſe
"Tryals. And by the like Pernicious Counſels
"of Thoſe who Adviſed the many and long Pro"rogations of the preſent Parliament, before the
"ſame was permitted to Sit; whereby ſome of
"the Evidence which was prepared in the laſt
"Parliament, may poſſibly (during ſo great an "Interval) be forgotten, or loſt; and ſome Per"ſons, who might probably have come in as
"Witneſſes, are either dead, have been taken off,
"or may have been diſcouraged from giving their "Evidence. But of one miſchievous Conſequence
"of thoſe Dangerous and Unhappy Counſels, we "are certainly and ſadly ſenſible, namely, That
"the Teſtimony of a Material Witneſs againſt
"every one of thoſe Five Lords, (and who could
"probably have Diſcovered and brought in much
"other Evidence about the Plot in general, and "thoſe Lords in particular) cannot now be "given in Viva voce, foraſmuch as that Witneſs
"is unfortunately Dead, between the Calling and
"the Sitting of this Parliament. To prevent the "like, or greater Inconveniences for the future,
"We make it our moſt humble Requeſt to Your
"Moſt Excellent Majeſty, That, as You tender
"the Safety of Your Royal Perſon, the Security
"of Your Loyal Subjects, and the Preſervation of "the True Proteſtant Religion, You will not
"ſuffer Your ſelf to be prevailed upon by the like
"Counſels, to do any thing which may Occaſion
"in Conſequence (though, we are aſſured, never
"with Your Majeſty's Intentions) either the

On the ſame Day was Read the Ingroſſed Bill, Intituled, An Act for Securing the Proteſtant Religion, by Diſabling James Duke of York to Inherit the Imperial Crown of England and Ireland, and the Dominions and Territories thereunto belonging; and Paſs'd the Houſe, by a very great Majority. In the Debates, one of the Members ſpoke thus:

Mr. SPEAKER,

"THE Honourable Member that ſpoke before,
"made large Encomium's on the Duke, ex"tolling his Endowments, and Services to the "Nation.

1680. " Nation. For my part, I think, that the better " Qualify'd he is, the greater is our Danger. " But as to what he ſaid, of having fought our " Battels, and done great Things for the Nation, " I think he hath not done fairly by the Houſe; " for he ſhould alſo have told us, how the Tripple- " League was broken, and my Lord of Sandwich " loſt his Life; how he Chang'd his Religion, and " hath ever ſince Encouraged Popery, and Aſſiſted " that Intereſt; how the City of London was Burnt, " and the Actors Diſcharg'd; how the Diſcovery of " the Popiſh Plot was Prevented as much as it " could be, and the Presbyterian one Encourag'd; " that ſo we might have all afore us ——— He was going on more ſeverely, but was interrupted.

Meſſage from the King, about Tangier.

On Novemb. 12th, His Majeſty ſent this Meſſage to the Houſe of Commons: His Majeſty did in his Speech, at the Opening of this Seſſion, Deſire the Advice and Aſſiſtance of his Parliament, in relation to Tangier: The Condition and Importance of the Place, obliges His Majeſty to put this Houſe in mind again, That He relies upon Them for the Support of it; without which, it cannot be much longer preſerved. His Majeſty doth therefore very earneſtly recommend Tangier again to the due and ſpeedy Care and Conſideration of this Houſe.

Upon this Meſſage, a warm Debate aroſe; ſome Objected, That it was a Duty incumbent on them to Secure Things at Home, on which their All depended, before they entred into an expence of Time about Securing Things Abroad: Tangier might be of great Importance to Trade, but not ſo managed as to be any Security to the Proteſtant Religion. The Portugueſes, when they Deliver'd it up, did Covenant to have one Popiſh Church remain there, for the Conveniency of Prieſts and Fryars: And though it was then Agreed, That their Mortality ſhould not be ſupply'd, but after the Deceaſe of thoſe Perſons the ſaid Popiſh Church might be Demoliſh'd, or Converted to a Proteſtant Uſe; yet Things had been otherwiſe managed, and the Papiſts There were now more than ever: That my Lord Bellaſis, now a Priſoner in the Tower for the Plot, had been Governor of Tangier, and even ſtill the Soldiers and their Commanders were moſt of that Religion, ſo that the Place was but a kind of Nurſery for a Popiſh Army. —— Others Argued, That they were indeed afraid of Tangier, but more afraid of a Popiſh Succeſſor; and therefore till they were ſecured in the latter, they could not think themſelves concern'd in the former; and in the mean time, they could not give Money, without endangering the Religion and Government of the Nation: For they remembred when One million one hundred thouſand Pounds was given for Building of Ships, and not one Ship built; and above Two millions given to Support the Tripple-League, and then it was preſently employ'd for the Breaking of it; when One million two hundred thouſand Pounds was given for an Actual War with France, when at the ſame time we were under all the Obligations for Peace, and ſo continu'd. —— Others again Pleaded, That there was no need of Raiſing New Forces for the Security of Tangier; ſince there were ſeveral Regiments, beſides the Guards, in Pay at Home, which might be Tranſported thither, with little Charge, and be Maintained There, as cheap as Here. —— At laſt the Commons Reſolved, That a Committee be Appointed to Draw up an Addreſs to be Preſented to His Majeſty, upon the Debate of the Houſe, humbly repreſenting to His Majeſty, the Dangerous State and Condition of the Kingdom, in Anſwer to His Majeſty's Meſſage.

Severe Speeches.

Addreſs or Remonſtrance of the Commons.

This Addreſs was a Remonſtrance of Grievances, and Acts of Popery, and Arbitrary Power; " That " Tangier had been ſeveral times under the Com- " mand of Popiſh Governors: That the Supplies " ſent thither, had been in great part made up " of Popiſh Officers and Soldiers, and that the " Iriſh Papiſts had been the moſt Countenanc'd " and Encourag'd. That Here at Home the En- " deavours and Attempts of the Popiſh Party had " been ſo bold and ſucceſsful, that ſo it was Matter " of Admiration to them, and which they could " only aſcribe to an Over-ruling Providence, That " His Majeſty's Reign was ſtill continued over " them, and that they were yet Aſſembled to " Conſult the Means of their Preſervation. That " this Bloody and Reſtleſs Party had found " Countenance and Protection from the Laws " made againſt them: That they had form'd " Means to Diſgrace their Oppoſers; and if they " were Judges, Juſtices of the Peace, or other Ma- " giſtrates, to have them turn'd out of Commiſſion: " That after ſome Time, they became able to " Influence Matters of State and Government; " and thereby to Deſtroy Thoſe they could not " Corrupt. The Continuance, or Prorogation " of Parliaments, had been accommodated to ſerve " the Purpoſes of that Party. Money raiſed upon " the People, to ſupply his Majeſty's Extraordinary " Occaſions, had, by the Prevalence of Popiſh " Counſels, been employed to make War upon " a Proteſtant State, and to advance and augment " the dreadful Power of the French King. That " great Numbers of His Majeſty's Subjects were " ſent into, and continued in the Service of that " King. That even the Miniſters of England were " made Inſtruments to preſs upon the States of " Holland the Acceptance of one Demand (among " others) from the French King, for procuring " their Peace with him, That they ſhould admit " the Publick Exerciſe of the Roman Catholick Re- " ligion. That if ever any Command were given " for the Laws to be put in Execution againſt " the Papiſts, even from thence they gain'd Ad- " vantage to their Party, whilſt the Edge of thoſe " Laws was turn'd againſt Proteſtant Diſſenters, " and the Papiſts eſcaped in a manner untouch'd. " That the Teſt Act had little effect; for the " Papiſts, either by Diſpenſation obtained from " Rome, ſubmitted to thoſe Teſts, and held their " Offices themſelves; or thoſe put in their Places, " were ſo favourable to the ſame Intereſts, that " Popery it ſelf had rather gain'd than loſt Ground " ſince that Act. That a Popiſh Secretary (ſince " Executed for his Treaſons) had maintain'd a " Correſpondence at Rome, and in the Courts of " other Foreign Princes, for the Subduing (in their " own Words) that Peſtilent Hereſie which had ſo " long Domineer'd over this Northern World. That " out of thoſe Councils and Correſpondencies was " hatcht that Damnable and Helliſh Plot, by the " good Providence of Almighty God brought to " light about two Years ſince. That when this " Accurſed Conſpiracy was firſt Diſcover'd, the " Papiſts began to ſmother it, with the Barbarous " Murther of a Juſtice of the Peace, within one of " His Majeſty's own Palaces. That amidſt theſe " Diſtractions and Fears, Popiſh Officers for the " Command of Forces were allowed upon the " Muſters by Special Orders, Counter-ſign'd by a " Secretary of State: And in like manner, above " Fifty New Commiſſions were Granted about " the ſame time to known Papiſts. That when, " in the next Parliament, the Houſe of Commons " were prepared to bring to a Legal Tryal the " Principal Conſpirators in this Plot, that Par- " liament was firſt Prorogu'd, and then Diſſolv'd. " And the Interval between the Calling and Sit- " ting of this Parliament had been ſo long, that " the Papiſts had gained Time and Advantages of " Covering their paſt Crimes, and Practiſing them " more effectually. That Witneſſes had been Cor- " rupted, not only by Promiſes of Reward, but of " the Favour of His Majeſty's Brother. That " divers 1680. " divers of the most Considerable of His Majesty's " Protestant Subjects had Crimes of the highest " Nature forged against them, the Charge to " be supported by Subornation and Perjury, " that they might be Destroyed by Forms of " Law and Justice. That a Presentment being " prepared for a Grand-Jury of Middlesex, against " the Duke of York; the Grand-Jury were in an " unprecedented and illegal manner Discharged, " and that with so much haste and fear, lest " they should finish that Presentment. That " they were prevented from Delivering many " other Indictments by them at that time found " against other Popish Recusants. That because " a Pamphlet came forth Weekly, call'd, The " Weekly Pacquet of Advice from Rome, exposing " Popery (as it well deserv'd;) a New and Ar- " bitrary Court was made in the King's-Bench " (rather like a Star-Chamber, than a Court of " Law,) That the same should not, for the future, " be Printed by any Person whatsoever. That " notwithstanding all the Proclamations for the " Banishing Papists from about this great City, " and Residence of His Majesty's Court, and the " Parliament, yet great Numbers of them, " and of the most Dangerous sort, did daily " resort hither, and abide here. Under these " and other sad Effects and Evidences of the Pre- " valence of Popery, and its Adherents, They " His Majesty's Faithful Commons found this " His Majesty's Distressed Kingdom, and other " Parts of his Dominions, labouring when They " Assembled; They therefore humbly Desire to " be Secured from the Dreadful Design of In- " troducing Popery; and that whilst They shall " give a Supply to Tangier, They may be assured " they do not augment the Strength of their Popish " Adversaries, nor encrease their own Dangers. " Which Desires of his Faithful Commons if His " Majesty shall Graciously vouchsafe to Grant, " They shall not only be ready to Assist His " Majesty in Defence of Tangier, but do what- " soever else shall be in their Power, to Enable " His Majesty to Protect the Protestant Religion " and Interest at Home and Abroad, and to " Resist and Repell the Attempts of His Majesty's " and the Kingdom's Enemies.

On Novemb. 13th, several Persons were Exa- min'd at the Bar of the House of Commons, about the Dismissing of a Grand-Jury in Mid- dlesex: And after a Debate, the House came to these Votes: 1. That the Discharging of a Grand-Jury by any Judge, before the End of the Term, Assizes, or Sessions, while Matters are under their Consideration, and not Presented, is Arbitrary, Illegal, Destructive to Publick Justice, a manifest Violation of his Oath, and is a Means to Subvert the Fundamental Laws of this Kingdom. 2. That a Committee be Appointed to Examine the Pro- ceedings of the Judges in Westminster-Hall, and Report the same, with their Opinion therein, to this House.

Resolution against the Discharging of Juries.

On Novemb. 15th, the Bill for Securing the Protestant Religion, by Disabling James Duke of York to Inherit the Imperial Crown of England and Ireland, &c. was carry'd up to the House of Lords by William Lord Russell, Attended by almost the whole House of Commons. At the First Reading in the House of Lords, and its being put to the Vote, Whether it should be Read a Second time? It was Carry'd in the Affirmative by Two Votes only. On the Second Reading, it was Debated till Eleven a Clock at Night, the King being present all the while, to encourage an Opposition to it; and then it was Thrown out of the House, by a Majority of Thirty Voices, of which, some Men were pleased to Observe, that Fourteen were Bishops.

Bill of Exclusion thrown out of the House of Lords.

On Novemb. 25th, the Commons were so much Disgusted against the late Speaker, Edw. Seymour, Esq; that they now Impeached him upon Four Articles; and a Motion was made, for an Address to be Presented, To Remove him from His Majesty's Council and Presence, for Ever. Soon after, they fell upon Sir George Jefferies, then Recorder of the City of London, and Order'd, That an humble Address be made to the King, To Remove him out of all Publick Offices; and that the Members which Served for the City, should communicate this Vote to the Court of Aldermen. Upon the same Account, they Order'd Sir Giles Philips and Mr. Coleman to be sent for into Custody of the Serjeant at Arms, for Detesting and Abhorring the Petitioning for Sitting of the Parliament; and Voted it a Breach of Privilege of Parliament: The like the Commons did by Capt. William Castle, Mr. John Hutchinson, Mr. Henry Walrond, Mr. William Stavel, and Mr. Thomas Herbert; Sir Thomas Holt, Serjeant at Law, and Mr. Thomas Staples. And because Sir Francis North (Chief-Justice of the Common-Pleas) Advised and was Assisting in Drawing up a Proclamation against Petitioning for the Sitting of the Parliament, the Commons Voted, That it was a Sufficient Ground for the House to Proceed against him for High Crimes and Misdemeanors. The like Vote Passed against Sir Thomas Jones, one of the Judges of the King's-Bench; and Sir Richard Weston, one of the Barons of the Exchequer: And they Resolved actually to Impeach Sir William Scroggs of High-Treason.

1680. Edw. Seymour, Esq; Impeached.

Sir George Jefferies obnoxious.

And other Abhorrers of Petitioning.

Judges Voted Unjust.

On Tuesday Novemb. 30th, William Viscount Stafford, one of the five Lords Impeached by the House of Commons for the Horrid Popish Plot, was brought to his Tryal before the Lords in Westminster-Hall, a Committee of the Commons managing the Impeachment against him. This Day was taken up in Opening the Court, and in Hearing the General Evidence to Prove the said Popish Plot. Next Day, the Witnesses Proving the particular Charge against the Lord Stafford, were Heard, and Examin'd. The Tryal lasted a whole Week, when, on Decemb. 7th, he was brought to the Court, to receive the Judgment of the Lords; of whom Thirty one Pronounced him Not Guilty, and Fifty five Guilty: So that Sentence of Death was Passed upon him as in Cases of High-Treason. But his Execution was deferr'd till Wednesday Decemb. 29th, when he was Be- headed on a Scaffold for that Purpose erected on Tower-Hill; Protesting with his last Breath, That he was utterly Innocent of the Crimes for which he stood Condemn'd.

Tryal of Ld. Stafford.

He is Condemned.

And Executed.

On Wednesday Decemb. 15th, His Majesty came to the House of Lords, and made this Speech to Both Houses:

My Lords and Gentlemen,

King's Speech.

AT the Opening of this Parliament, I did ac- quaint You with the Alliances I had made with Spain and Holland, as the best Measures that could be taken for the Safety of England, and the Repose of Christendom.

But I told You withal, That if our Friendship became unsafe to trust to, it would not be wondred at, if Our Neighbours should begin to take New Resolutions, and perhaps such as might be Fatal to Us.

I must now tell You, That Our Allies cannot but see how little has been done since this Meeting, to encourage their Dependance upon Us: And I find by Them, That unless We can be so United at Home, as to make Our Alliances Valuable to them, it will not be possible to hinder Them from seeking some other Refuge, and making such New Friendships, as will not be consistent with Our Safety. Consider, That a Neglect of this Opportunity is never to be Repaired.

I did

1680. I did likewiſe lay the Matter plainly before You, touching the State and Condition of Tangier: I muſt now tell You again, That if that Place be thought worth the Keeping, You muſt take ſuch Conſideration of it, that it may be ſpeedily Supply'd: It being impoſſible for Me to preſerve it, on an Expence ſo far above My Power.

I did promiſe you the fulleſt Satisfaction Your Hearts could wiſh, for the Security of the Proteſtant Religion; and to Concurr with You in any Remedies, which might conſiſt with Preſerving the Succeſſion of the Crown in its Due and Legal Courſe of Deſcent: I do again, with the ſame Reſervations, renew the ſame Promiſes to You.

And being thus Ready, on My part, to do all that can reaſonably be expected from Me; I ſhould be glad to know from You, as ſoon as may be, how far I ſhall be Aſſiſted by You, and what it is You Deſire from Me.

The Commons returning to their Houſe, Reſolved themſelves into a Grand-Committee, How to Secure the Kingdom againſt Popery, and Arbitrary Government: And after ſome Debate, They Reſolved, That it is the Opinion of this Committee, That one Means to Suppreſs Popery, is, That the Houſe be Moved, That a Bill be brought in immediately, To Baniſh all the Conſiderable Papiſts out of the Kingdom. And upon a further Debate on the Dangers of Popery, They Reſolved, That it is the Opinion of this Committee, That as long as the Papiſts have any Hopes of the Duke of York's Succeeding the King in the Kingdoms of England and Ireland, and Dominions thereunto belonging; the King's Perſon, the Proteſtant Religion, and the Lives, Liberties and Properties of all His Majeſty's Proteſtant Subjects are in apparent Danger of being Deſtroy'd. And upon Reference made to an Act of Queen Eliz. for an Aſſociation, to Revenge her Death upon the Papiſts, They came to a like Reſolution, That it is the Opinion of this Committee, That the Houſe be Moved, That a Bill be brought in, For an Aſſociation of all his Majeſty's Proteſtant Subjects, for the Safety of His Majeſty's Perſon, the Defence of the Proteſtant Religion, and the Preſervation of His Majeſty's Proteſtant Subjects, againſt all Invaſions and Oppoſitions; And for Preventing the Duke of York, or any other Papiſt, from Succeeding to the Crown.

Proceedings of the Commons.

A Bill for Aſſociation.

On Decemb. 17th, the Houſe went on, to Conſider of Ways and Means to Secure the Kingdom againſt Popery, and Arbitrary Government; and after ſeveral Debates, They Reſolved, 1. That it is the Opinion of this Houſe, That the Houſe be Moved, That a Bill be brought in, For the more effectual Securing of the Meetings and Sittings of Frequent Parliaments. 2. That it is the Opinion of this Committee, That the Houſe be Moved, That a Bill be brought in, That the Judges may hold their Places and Salaries, quam diu ſe bene geſſerint. 3. That it is the Opinion of this Committee, That one Means to Prevent Arbitrary Power, is, That the Houſe be Moved, That a Bill be brought in, againſt Illegal Exaction of Money upon the People, to make it High-Treaſon.

Remarkable Votes.

His Majeſty's Speech, made Decemb. 15th to Both Houſes, was now Read and Conſidered by the Commons; and after many ſevere Reflections upon the French Ambaſſador, and the French Women, and the Duke, and the Duke's Creatures, They Reſolved, That a Committee be Appointed to Prepare an Humble Addreſs to His Majeſty, upon the Debate of the Houſe, in Anſwer to His Majeſty's Speech. This Addreſs was Agreed to, on December the 20th; in which the Commons repreſent, Addreſs of the Commons, in Anſwer to the King's Speech.

"That this Proteſtant Kingdom can never be "ſafe, while there is any Hopes and Expectation "of a Popiſh Succeſſor; And They Beſeech His "Majeſty, in great Wiſdom, to Conſider, Whether, in Caſe the Imperial Crown of this Proteſtant Kingdom ſhould Deſcend to the Duke of York; the Oppoſition which may poſſibly be made to his Poſſeſſing it, may not only Endanger the farther Deſcent in the Royal Line, but even Monarchy it ſelf? They therefore become Humble Petitioners to His Sacred Majeſty, That in tender Commiſeration of his Poor Proteſtant People, His Majeſty would be Graciouſly Pleaſed to depart from the Reſervation in his ſaid Speech; And whenever a Bill ſhall be tendred to His Majeſty, in a Parliamentary Way, To Diſable the Duke of York from Inheriting the Crown, His Majeſty will give his Royal Aſſent thereto. As alſo to another Act, whereby His Majeſty's Proteſtant Subjects may be Enabled to Aſſociate themſelves, for the Defence of His Majeſty's Perſon, the Proteſtant Religion, and the Security of His Kingdoms. And as ſome farther Means for the Preſervation both of their Religion and Property, They are humble Suitors to His Majeſty, That from henceforth ſuch Perſons only may be Judges, as are Men of Ability, Integrity, and known-Affection to the Proteſtant Religion, and that they may hold both their Offices and Salaries, quam diu ſe bene geſſerint. That no one may bear the Office of a Lord-Lieutenant, but who is a Perſon of Integrity, and known-Affection to the Proteſtant Religion. That Deputy-Lieutenants and Juſtices of the Peace may be alſo ſo Qualified, and may be moreover Men of Ability, of Eſtates and Intereſt in their Country. That None may be Employed as Military Officers, or Officers in His Majeſty's Fleet, but Men of known-Experience, Courage, and Affection to the Proteſtant Religion. And theſe their humble Requeſts being obtained, They ſhall, on Their part, be ready to Aſſiſt His Majeſty, for the Preſervation of Tangier, and for putting His Majeſty's Fleet into ſuch a Condition, as it may Preſerve His Majeſty's Sovereignty of the Seas, and be for the Defence of the Nation.

On Decemb. 23d, theſe Quæries relating to the Execution of William Viſcount Stafford, were offered to the Houſe by the Sheriffs of London and Middleſex: 1. Whether the King, being neither Judge nor Party, can Order the Execution? 2. Whether the Lords can Award the Execution? 3. Whether the King can Diſpenſe with any Part of the Execution? 4. If the King can Diſpenſe with ſome Part of the Execution, why not with All? After ſome Debate upon theſe Matters, the Wiſer Members came to apprehend, that ſuch a Diſpute might end in preventing the Execution of the ſaid Lord Stafford; and therefore it was Reſolved, That this Houſe is content that the Sheriffs of London and Middleſex do Execute William late Viſcount Stafford, by Severing his Head from his Body only.

Quæries of the Sheriffs.

On Decemb. 30th, upon a Debate of Freedom of Voting, and of the Corruption and Partiality occaſion'd by Offices and Penſions, They Reſolved, That no Member of this Houſe ſhall Accept of any Office or Place of Profit from the Crown, without the Leave of this Houſe; nor any Promiſe of any ſuch Office or Place of Profit, during ſuch time as he ſhall continue a Member of this Houſe.

Self-denying Vote.

On Jan. 5th, Articles of Impeachment were brought in againſt Sir William Scroggs, Chief-Juſtice of the King's-Bench; and it being the Senſe of the Houſe, That the late Order made in the King's-Bench, their Warrants for Seizing of Books, and their Diſmiſſing of Grand-Juries, doth tend to the Subverſion of the Government, and hath been, and ever ought to be, in Judges, Adjudged Treaſon; It was Reſolved, That the ſaid Sir William Scroggs be Impeached upon the ſaid Articles; And Impeachment of Sir William Scroggs.

1680. And that the said Articles be Ingross'd, and Carry'd up to the Lords, by my Lord Cavendish.

On Jan. 6th, this Message was brought from the Lords, and Read in the House of Commons; Resolved by the Lords Spiritual and Temporal in Parliament Assembled, That They do Declare, That they are fully satisfied that there now is, and for divers Years last past hath been a Horrid and Treasonable Plot, Contriv'd and Carry'd on by those of the Popish Religion in Ireland, for Massacring the English, and Subverting the Protestant Religion, and the Ancient Establish'd Government of that Kingdom: To which Their Lordships Desire the Concurrence of this House. The Commons soon Resolved, That this House doth Agree with the Lords in the said Vote, with the addition of these Words, "That the Duke of York's "being a Papist, and the Expectation of his coming "to the Crown, hath given the greatest Countenance "and Encouragement thereto, as well as to the "Horrid Popish Plot in this Kingdom of Eng-"land.

Vote of the Lords, for Belief of the Popish Plot.

On Friday Jan. 7th, His Majesty's Gracious Message to the Commons in Parliament, January the 4th, 1680. sent on Tuesday last, was Read, as followeth:

CHARLES REX.

"HIS Majesty received the Address of this "House with all the Disposition They "could wish, to Comply with their Reasonable "Desires: but upon perusing it, he is sorry to "see their Thoughts so wholly fix'd upon the Bill "of Exclusion, as to determine, that all other "Remedies for the Suppressing of Popery will be "ineffectual: His Majesty is Confirmed in an "Opinion against that Bill, by the Judgment of "the House of Lords, who Rejected it. He there-"fore thinks there remains nothing more for him "to say, in Answer to the Address of this House, "but to recommend to them, the Consideration "of all other Means for the Preservation of the "Protestant Religion; in which they have no "reason to doubt of his Concurrence, whenever "they shall be Presented to him in a Parliamentary "Way: And that they would Consider the pre-"sent State of the Kingdom, as well as the Con-"dition of Christendom, in such a manner as "may enable him to Preserve Tangier, and Secure "his Alliances Abroad, and the Peace and Settle-"ment at Home.

The King's Message.

Upon a Debate on this Message, the House seem'd readily to come into these Opinions: Resolved, That it is the Opinion of this House, That there is no Security nor Safety for the Protestant Religion, the King's Life, or Government of this Nation, without Passing a Bill for Disabling James Duke of York to Inherit the Imperial Crown of this Realm, and the Dominions and Territories thereunto belonging; And to rely upon any other Means and Remedies, without such a Bill, is not only Insufficient, but Dangerous.

A Popish Successor inconsistent with the Safety of the Protestant Religion.

Resolved, That His Majesty, in his last Message, having Assured this House of his Readiness to Concurr in all other Means for the Preservation of the Protestant Religion; this House doth Declare, That until a Bill be likewise Pass'd for Excluding the Duke of York, this House cannot Give any Supply to His Majesty, without Danger to His Majesty's Person, extreme Hazard of the Protestant Religion, and Unfaithfulness to those by whom this House is Intrusted.

After this, several Persons being named for giving ill Advice to His Majesty; and Motions, seconded by Arguments, That Addresses might be made, grounded on Common Fame, for their Removal from the King's Person, and from all Places of Trust and Power: The Result was, That they expressly named George Earl of Hallifax, Lawrence Hyde, Esq; Henry Marques of Worcester, Henry Earl of Clarendon, and Lewis Earl of Feversham; And Voted an Address to be Presented to His Majesty, To Remove them from all Offices of Honour and Profits, and from His Majesty's Councils and Presence, for Ever. Then the House entred into a Debate of Parliamentary Aids, and against all other Ways of Supplying the King's Occasions, as tending to Keeping off Parliaments, and Exhausting the Publick Treasure, and Contracting Debts, and Undermining the Government; and so came to these Concluding Votes:

1680. Ministers of State to be Remov'd.

Resolved, That Whoever shall hereafter Lend, or cause to be Lent, by way of Advance, any Money upon the Branches of the King's Revenue, arising by Custom, Excise, or Hearth-Money, shall be judged a Hinderer of the Sitting of Parliaments, and be Responsible for the same in Parliament.

Vote against Lending the King Money.

Resolved, That Whoever shall Accept or Buy any Tally, or Anticipation, upon any Part of the King's Revenue, or Whoever shall Pay such Tally hereafter to be Struck, shall be adjudged to Hinder the Sitting of Parliaments, and be Responsible therefore in Parliament.

Things growing to this height, the King was extremely Troubled, to find that he could not Protect his Ministers, his Brother, nor (as he thought) Himself, and resolved to put an End to their Session, on Jan. 10th. Which the Commons having private Notice of, Assembled early in the Morning, and before the Usher of the Black-Rod came in, They Resolved, That Whosoever Advised His Majesty to Prorogue the Parliament, to any other Purpose than in order to Passing a Bill for the Exclusion of James Duke of York, is a Betrayer of the King, the Protestant Religion, and of the Kingdom of England, a Promoter of the French Interest, and a Pensioner of France. After which, the House of Commons were sent for up to the Lords; where His Majesty, seated on his Throne, was Pleased to give His Royal Assent to, 1. An Act Prohibiting the Importation of Cattle from Ireland. 2. An Act for Supplying the late Act for Burying in Woollen: And, 3. To a Private Act, concerning Sir Charles Houghton. And then His Majesty was Pleased to Command the Lord-Chancellor to Prorogue the Parliament till Thursday the 20th of this Instant January. But on January 18th, His Majesty, by Proclamation, thought fit to Dissolve the present Parliament; and was Pleased to make known to all his Loving Subjects, "That he had given Directions to the "Lord-Chancellor of England, for the Issuing out "of Writs in due Form of Law, for the Calling "of a New Parliament, which should Begin and "be Holden at Oxford on the 21st of March "next.

Dissolved.

A New Parliament is Call'd.

His Majesty disposed his Honours and Preferments chiefly to those Persons who were in the Interest of the Duke, and had most Opposed the late Proceedings of the House of Commons: Though some few Popular Men had the like Titular Favours from His Majesty, to Sweeten and Reconcile them to the Court. On April 16th, the Earl of Offory was Sworn of the Privy-Council, who Died on July 30th, after some Days Sickness of a Violent Fever, leaving a Son and Heir, James now Duke of Ormond. On April 26th, Sir Leoline Jenkins was Sworn one of His Majesty's Principal-Secretaries of State, and received the Seals which Hen. Coventry, Esq; then delivered up to His Majesty. How far the being of a Party, was a Recommendation to His Majesty's Favour, was publickly shewn in the Case of the Lord Shandois, who having humbly acquainted the King, "That the Turkey-Company "had made Choice of him to be sent as Ambas-"sador to Constantinople, and Praying His Ma-"jesty's Approbation:" His Majesty was Pleased to Reply, That his Lordſhip having Countenanc'd and been Engag'd in the Buſineſs of Petitioning about the Parliament, (which His Majeſty look'd upon as Derogatory to his Prerogative, and tending to Sedition) His Majeſty could not think him ſo fit for his Favour. Whereupon his Lordſhip was forc'd, before the Committee of Foreign Intelligence, on April 26th, humbly to acknowledge his Fault unto His Majeſty, and to ſay, That in the Matter of Petitioning, he was Drawn in, and Miſled, by being given to underſtand, That that Proceeding was for His Majeſty's Service: But that being ſince better Inform'd, he Abhorr'd and Diſown'd all ſuch Practices, and humbly begg'd His Majeſty's Pardon for what was paſt, promiſing to behave himſelf more Dutifully for the future. Which humble Submiſſion of his Lordſhip the King accepted of, and then aſſur'd him of his Favour, and approv'd of him for his Ambaſſador to go for Turkey.

1680. Case of the Lord Shandois.

New Judges.

About the End of April, His Majeſty thought fit to Conſtitute Sir Job Charleton, Kt. one of the Judges of the Common-Pleas, (from whence Mr. Juſtice Raymond was Called up to the King's-Bench:) By whoſe Removal, the Place of Chief-Juſtice, and one of His Majeſty's Councel at Ludlow, for the Marches of Wales, being become void, the King conferred the ſame upon Sir George Jeffryes, Kt. Recorder of the City of London. For the moſt unhappy Partiality in the Diſpoſal of Royal Favours, was to find out thoſe Lawyers who were thought moſt inclinable to carry the Prerogative beyond the Law: And it ſeem'd to be upon this View, that Sir George Jeffryes, Sir John Keeling, Robert Hampſon, Edmund Weſt, Thomas Walcot, Eſq; Sir John Boynton, Edward Bigland, William Richardſon, William Bugby, Eſq; Sir Robert Wright, and Sir Francis Manly, received the King's Writs, Commanding them to take upon them the State and Degree of Serjeants at Law, and appear'd for that Purpoſe at the Court of Chancery on May the 12th.

Call of Serjeants.

Other Advancements.

On May 26th, the Earl of Clarendon was Sworn of His Majeſty's Privy-Council. On June 2d, His Majeſty was Pleaſed, in Conſideration of the great and eminent Services of the Earl of Rothes, Lord-Chancellor of Scotland, to conferr upon him the Honours and Dignities of a Duke and Marqueſs of that Kingdom, by the Title of Duke of Rothes, and Marqueſs of Brambreich, Earl of Leſlie, Viſcount of Lugtoun, Lord Aemutie and Caſcubery. His Majeſty, near the ſame time, made Choice of the Earl of Middleton to go his Envoy-Extraordinary to the Emperor; and the Earl of Mulgrave to Command the Forces going for Tangier. On Auguſt 5th, His Majeſty, in Conſideration of the great Abilities, and Twenty Years faithful Service of Phines Pett, Eſq; in the Employment of Maſter-Shipwright of his Yard at Chatham, was pleaſed to conferr upon him the Honour of Knighthood, and to advance him to the Place of one of the Principal-Officers and Commiſſioners of his Navy, in the Place of Sir Anthony Deane, whom His Majeſty (at his humble Suit) permitted to quit the ſame. On Auguſt 9th, His Majeſty Knighted Jonas Moore, Eſq; Maſter-Surveyor of His Majeſty's Ordnance and Armories, giving him this Mark of Royal Favour, as well in Conſideration of his known Abilities, as of the faithful Services of his Father, Sir Jonas Moore, deceas'd. On Auguſt 31ſt, at a Chapter of the Garter, held at Windſor, there were Elected into the Vacancies of that Order, his Grace the Duke of Grafton, who was then at Sea, and the Right-Honourable the Earl of Salisbury: And on Sept. 15th, the Prince-Elector Palatine, who this Summer made a Viſit to the Engliſh Court, was Elected a Knight-Companion of the ſame Order.

On Sept. 3d, Henry Savill, Eſq; was Sworn Vice-Chamberlain to the King, which Place had been Vacant ſince the Death of Sir George Carwright: And on Sept. 11th, the Earl of Feverſham was Declared Lord-Chamberlain to the Queen, in the Place of the Earl of Offory; And the Lord-Viſcont Lumley was made Maſter of the Horſe to Her Majeſty, in the room of the Earl of Feverſham. About the ſame time, His Majeſty was pleaſed to create the Lady Dacres, Mother to the preſent Earl of Suſſex, Counteſs of Sheppey. 1680.

Ambaſſadors. Envoys and Governors.

At the Beginning of October, Charles Fanſhaw, Eſq; was ſent over His Majeſty's Envoy-Extraordinary to the Prince-Regent of Portugal; Mr. Parry, His Majeſty's late Envoy at that Court, having obtained Leave to return Home. On Octob. 15th, Sir Robert Carr, Bar^t Chancellor of the Dutchy of Lancaſter, was Sworn of His Majeſty's Privy-Council. On Novemb. 20th, His Majeſty was pleaſed to conferr the Honour of Knighthood upon Captain John Wetwang. On Novemb. 17th, the Earl of Plymouth Died at Tangier of a Bloody-Flux; and the Governor, Sir Palmes Fairborn, was Wounded by a Muſket-Shot on the 24th of October, of which he Died three Days after, leaving the Chief Command of that Diſtreſſed Garriſon to Colonel Sackvile. About Chriſtmas, His Majeſty Appointed Sir Richard Dutton to ſucceed Sir Jonathan Atkyns in the Government of Barbadoes. On Jan. 22d, His Majeſty conferred the Honour of Knighthood upon George Treby, Eſq; Recorder of the City of London, who in that Office ſucceeded the Violent Sir George Jeffryes. On Jan. 26th, the Earl of Oxford, the Earl of Cheſterfield, and the Earl of Ailesbury were Sworn of his Majeſty's Privy-Council, and took their Places at the Board. And ſoon after, His Majeſty was pleas'd to Conſtitute the Right-Honourable Edward Earl of Conway, one of His Majeſty's Principal-Secretaries of State, in the room of the Earl of Sunderland, and on Febr. 2d his Lordſhip in Council took the Oaths of Secretary of State and Privy-Councellor. On Febr. 14th, Sir Robert Sawyer was Sworn His Majeſty's Attorney-General, in the room of Sir Creſwell Levinz, who was now made one of the Judges of the Common-Pleas, in the Place of Sir William Ellis, deceas'd. On March 9th, the Earl of Craven was Sworn of His Majeſty's Privy-Council.

State of Religion.

As to Religion, His Majeſty was under a Popular Neceſſity of Declaring his Affection to the Church of England, and of expreſſing a Zeal againſt Popery. At the Beginning of April, His Majeſty Commanded the Judges, who were returned from their ſeveral Circuits, to give an Account of what they had done in purſuance of the Directions they had received from His Majeſty in Council, for the more effectual Executing the Laws againſt Popiſh Recuſants: And accordingly All the Judges, on April 14th, Attended His Majeſty at the Committee of Popery, and made the following Report:

The King obliged to Declare againſt Popery.

Report of the Judges.

That in ſome Counties they found moſt of thoſe named in the Commiſſions, already Convicted, and their Convictions returned into the Exchequer; but that they had however cauſed them to be again Proclaimed as ſuch. That in other Counties, many Popiſh and reputed Popiſh Recuſants had taken the Oaths, and came to Church; That others, to avoid the Effect of the Law, ſhifted Counties; That in ſome Counties the Commiſſions were but newly come down; That however, all poſſible Care was taken for the ſpeedy and effectual Proceeding upon them: And laſtly, That in all their Circuits they had cauſed thoſe that were not already Convicted, to be Preſented; and had applied themſelves, with all poſſible Zeal and Vigour, for the punctual Performance of the Directions they had received in this Matter.

His Majeſty was pleas'd to Approve of what they had done, and to require them to proceed as they 1680. they had begun; letting them know, "That they "ſhould be ſupplied with all ſuch Orders and "Directions as ſhould be further neceſſary. And "that for ſuch Perſons as had abſented or with-"drawn themſelves from their reſpective Coun-"ties, effectual Care be taken for their Proſe-"cution at the next Aſſizes. And that His Ma-"jeſty would direct the Lords-Commiſſioners of "the Treaſury to Appoint ſeveral fit and able "Perſons to Solicite and Attend this Service, as well "at the Aſſizes, as where-ever elſe there ſhould "be Occaſion; His Majeſty's Intention being, "That the ſaid Laws againſt Popiſh Recuſants be "duly and effectually Executed." But indeed, all this was but a Feint in Politicks, and a Neceſſity upon the Court to be carry'd along with the Stream of the Country.

Inſtructions to the Judges.

As it had been formerly the Intereſt of the Papiſts to promote Indulgence and Toleration to the Proteſtant Diſſenters, that under the Effects of ſuch a Liberty they might ſhelter themſelves, and weaken the Church of England; ſo now, upon a Turn of Affairs, they chang'd their Opinion, or at leaſt their Meaſures: For that Party now encourag'd the ſevere Proſecution of the Proteſtant Diſſenters, thereby to take off the Edge of the Laws from themſelves, and to divert the Zeal of the Members of the Church of England againſt their Brethren in Separation from them, and ſo to irritate and alienate the Hearts of all Proteſtants from one another. The Bigottry of the Scotch Presbyterians, helpt much to raiſe an Odium upon all of that Denomination: For when James Skeyn, Brother to the Laird of Skeyn, Archibald Steward, and John Spreull, were on November the 13th Examin'd before His Majeſty's Privy-Council at Edinburgh, concerning the late Rebellion at Bothwell-Bridge, and Airdſmoſſe, the ſaid James Skeyn did own and declare, "That the "Perſons who were concern'd in either of the "ſaid Rebellions were not Rebels. That the Burn-"ing the Acts of Parliament at Rutherglen, and "the Proclamation made againſt His Majeſty, "were Juſt: That the Excommunication uſed "againſt the King by one Cargill, and the Reaſons "of it, are Juſt. That the Killing of the late "Arch-Biſhop of St. Andrews, was no Murther; "That the Actors were upon their Duty. That "he thinks there is a Declared War between thoſe "that ſerve the Lord, and thoſe that ſerve the "King, againſt the Covenant. That it is Lawful "to Kill any of the King's Council and Soldiers, "in Defence of the Goſpel. That he thinks, the "King being Excommunicated, and there being "now a Lawful Declared War againſt him, on "Account of the Breach of the Covenant, it is "Lawful to Kill him, and all thoſe that are in "Oppoſition to the Covenant.

The Papiſts now againſt the Diſſenters.

Fury of the Field-Conventiclers in Scotland.

"Archibald Steward Confeſs'd he was in the "Rebellion of Airdſmoſſe, and preſent at the Ex-"communication of the King; and that the King "was Juſtly Excommunicated. He declared, he "diſown'd the King's Authority, and thought "himſelf not obliged to Obey him. And being "ask'd, Whether he thought it Lawful to Kill the "King, being Excommunicated? he deſired Time "to Conſider of it, before he Anſwer'd; but "ſaid it was Lawful to Kill the late Arch-"Biſhop of St. Andrews, and own'd the Procla-"mation againſt the King, and the Burning the "Acts of Parliament.

As the Diſſenters were made the more Odious, by the Violence of their Brethren in Scotland; ſo many of the Church-men, and eſpecially the Clergy, fell under a Suſpicion of being Popiſhly-affected, becauſe they warmly eſpouſed the Intereſt of the Court, in Abhorring of Petitions, and in Oppoſing the Aſſociation, and the Excluſion Bill: For which one Richard Thomſon, Miniſter in Briſtol, did ſo hotly diſtinguiſh himſelf, that the Houſe of Commons Cenſur'd him, and ſent for him into Cuſtody; which turn'd only to his Merit at Court, and Preferr'd him ſoon after to the Deanery of Briſtol. Under this Diſpoſition of the Clergy, many ſevere Reflections were made upon them in the Houſe of Commons; particularly one of the Members, J. B. upon a Debate of the Aſſociation, ſaid thus: "Mr. Speaker; Sir, I retain a good Opinion of "an Aſſociation Bill, notwithſtanding what hath "been ſaid, as to the Weakneſs it may receive "from our unhappy Diviſions in Points of Re-"ligion and Intereſt, too much promoted by "ſome of our Clergy. For, Sir, when I conſider "how the Laudean Principles, as to Raiſing of "Money without Parliaments, in the late Times, "infected moſt of our Clergy, ſo as that they "not only Preach'd up the King's Abſolute Au-"thority over Mens Properties, but branded with "the Title of Rebels, and condemn'd to Hell, "thoſe that offer'd to Argue againſt it; I do "conclude, That it is uſual for one or two Bi-"ſhops to give Meaſures or Directions to the "reſt of the Biſhops, and they to the Clergy of "their ſeveral Dioceſſes; and that therefore the "Clergy derive the Politicks generally from one "or two Biſhops in ſome great Station —— "But People will diſcern, that the Clergy may be "good Divines, but not ſo good Politicians; "and that there may be ſome difference, in "Point of Intereſt, between them and the "Laity; becauſe Clergy-men may be in a poſſi-"bility of being Advanc'd by Popery, if they "ſubmit; but the Laity, under a probability of "Loſing all, notwithſtanding all Submiſſions. "Sir, I do not trouble you with this Diſcourſe, "out of a fear that our Clergy will not ſhew "themſelves good Proteſtants, for I have that "Veneration for them, and Opinion of them, as "to believe, that many of the Biſhops, and Clergy "too, would as ſoon Die for the Proteſtant Re-"ligion, as any Perſons in the Nation: But I am "jealous that there is ſome over-ruling Power got "in amongſt them, ſomething Anſwerable to that "of a Popiſh Succeſſor in the State." A further Advantage was taken, to bring the Biſhops under a Suſpicion, by their joining to throw out the Bill of Excluſion: Upon which Occaſion, one of the Commons ſpoke thus —— "If this be our "Caſe, and there be nothing wanting but a Popiſh "King to Compleat our Miſery, and the Art of "Man cannot find out any Way to Secure us "againſt a Popiſh King, without the Excluſion "Bill; Is it not ſtrange it ſhould be Rejected in "the Houſe of Lords? I cannot believe that "the Fathers of the Church ſhould join in that "which muſt infallibly give Opportunity for the "tearing out of the Bowels of their Mother, and "Deſtroying her for ever: If ſo, well may we "lie down, and cry, We have No-body to Help us, "but only Thee, O God!

During theſe Heats, and mutual Animoſities, ſome of the moſt Learned and Exemplary Clergy endeavour'd, both in Private and Publick, to bring the Diſſenters to a Senſe of the Neceſſity of Union among Proteſtants, hoping the Apprehenſion of preſent Danger, would have diſpos'd them to a better Inclination to the Things which belong'd to the Common Peace of the Reformation. With this Proſpect, the Learned and Judicious Dr. Stillingfleet being Appointed to Preach before the Lord-Mayor, on May 2d, being the Firſt Sunday in the Term, he thought fit to lay open the Unreaſonableneſs and Miſchief of the preſent Separation. Which Sermon he ſoon after publiſh'd, and proſecuted the Subject of it in an excellent Treatiſe, Intituled, The Unreaſonableneſs of Separation; or, An Impartial Account of the Hiſtory, Nature and Pleas of the preſent Separation from the

To promote this Return of the Diſſenters into the Communion of the Church of England, Henry Lord Biſhop of London had held in the Year preceding Three ſeaſonable Conferences with his Clergy upon the Two Sacraments, and upon Catechiſing Youth in the True Principles of Religion. And in this Year, His Lordſhip purſued the good Deſign in Three other Conferences; on, 1. The Half-Communion: 2. Prayers in an Unknown Tongue: 3. Prayers to Saints. And the Subſtance of this Converſation his Lordſhip publiſh'd in a Letter to the Clergy of his Dioceſe, Dated July 6th, 1680. His Lordſhip further hoped that it might tend to Pacifie and Reconcile the Diſſenters, by bringing in the Judgment of Foreign Divines, againſt their needleſs Separation: For this Purpoſe, his Lordſhip wrote to Monſieur le Moyne, Profeſſor in Divinity at Leyden; and Monſieur L'Angle, one of the Preachers of the Reformed Church at Charington near Paris; and to Monſieur Claude, another Eminent French Divine; who, in their ſeveral Anſwers (that are all publiſh'd to the World) do Agree in Vindicating the Church of England from any Errors in the Doctrine, or any Unlawful Impoſitions in the Service and Diſcipline of it; and therefore do Condemn a Separation from it, as Needleſs and Uncharitable.

The Commons in Parliament were ſenſible, that Nothing did more Encourage the Intereſt of Popery, than theſe Diviſions at Home, fomented by the Papiſts: It was under this Opinion that they firſt Agreed to bring in a Bill, For an Aſſociation of all His Majeſty's Proteſtant Subjects, for the Safety of His Majeſty's Perſon, the Defence of the Proteſtant Religion, and the Preſervation of His Majeſty's Proteſtant Subjects, againſt all Invaſions and Oppoſitions. And on Decemb. 21ſt, they Read and Commitied a Bill, For Uniting His Majeſty's Proteſtant Subjects. Which though Oppoſed by one Member, who thought it more convenient to have a Law for Forcing the Diſſenters to yield to the Church, and not to Force the Church to yield to Them: yet the Majority of the Houſe fell in heartily with this Bill of Comprehenſion, as the only Means of a firm Union among Proteſtants, and an effectual Supreſſion of the Dangers of Popery. And one of the Members ſpoke thus:

ie Com- ons for nion, & Bill of mpre- nſion.

Mr. Speaker,

"I Would not open my Mouth in favour of this Bill, if I thought it would any-ways prejudice the Church, or Church-Government; but I believe it may have a quite contrary Effect, and tend more for the Preſervation and Safety of the Church and Church-Government, than any Bill whatſoever that could be contriv'd—— The Presbyterians, Independants, and all other Diſſenters may be more in Number than the Papiſts, and may be willing enough to have the Church-Government Altered, if not Deſtroy'd; yet being they cannot have any Succour from Abroad, nor from the Government here at Home, I cannot ſee any great Danger of them; For it is not probable that they ſhall ever have a King of their Opinion, nor a Parliament, by the diſcovery they made of their ſtrength in the laſt Elections; for according to the beſt Calculation I can make, they could not bring in above One in Twenty: And therefore, becauſe they have not ſuch Bloody, Deſperate Principles as the Papiſts, and becauſe we agree in Points of Faith, and ſo no ſuch great Danger from them, as from the Papiſts; I think we have reaſon to conclude, That the Church is moſt in Danger from the Papiſts, and that therefore we ought to take care of them in the firſt place: and we cannot do that by any way more likely to prove effectual, than by ſome ſuch Bill as this. Becauſe, if it ſhould have the Effect deſign'd, of bringing in many of the Diſſenters into the Church, it would diſappoint them of the great Hopes they have grounded on our Diviſions, and make the Church ſtronger, not only to oppoſe the Papiſts, but ſuch Fanaticks as may not come in: And if we ſhould not have this Succeſs, I do not underſtand it will any way weaken the Church-Government." 1680.

The Act of 35 Eliz. for Payment of Twenty Pounds a Month for every Perſon not reſorting to their Pariſh-Church, was apparently made againſt the Popiſh Recuſants, but had been lately executed upon the Proteſtant Diſſenters. Upon which the Commons Reſolved, That it is the Opinion of this Houſe, That the Proſecution of Proteſtant Diſſenters, upon the Penal Laws deſign'd againſt the Papiſts, is at this time Grievous to the Subject, a Weakening the Proteſtant Intereſt, an Encouragement to Popery, and Dangerous to the Peace of the Kingdom. And therefore they prepared another Bill, For Exempting His Majeſty's Proteſtant Subjects Diſſenting from the Church of England, from the Penalties impoſed upon the Papiſts, by Repealing the ſaid Act of the 35 Eliz. This Bill Paſſed the Commons, and was Agreed to by the Lords, and lay ready for His Majeſty's Aſſent: But when His Majeſty came to the Throne, to Paſs this among other Bills, this was taken from the Lords Table, and never heard of after: Which no Man durſt have done, without the King's Command, or at leaſt his Privity and Connivance at it. The Loſs of this Bill was Complain'd of, in the next Parliament, at Oxford, but without Satisfaction or Redreſs.

The King, at Diſſolution of the laſt Parliament, had Summoned another to Meet on the 21ſt of March at Oxford. This Change of Place was very Diſpleaſing not only to the Cities of London and Weſtminſter, but generally to Both Houſes, who apprehended ſome Arbitrary Deſigns in it. Whereupon ſeveral of the Nobility, after mature Conſideration of the Matter, reſolv'd to Petition the King againſt it. Which Petition was deliver'd by the Earl of Eſſex, with this Speech to the King:

Oxford Parliament.

Petition againſt the Sitting of it.

May it Pleaſe Your Majesty;

"THE Lords here preſent, together with divers others of the Peers of the Realm, taking Notice, That by the late Proclamation, Your Majeſty has Declared an Intention of Calling a Parliament at Oxford; and obſerving, from Hiſtory and Records, how Unfortunate many Aſſemblies have been, when Call'd at a Place remote from the Capital City; as particularly the Congreſs in King Henry the IId's Time at Clarendon; Three ſeveral Parliaments at Oxford in Henry the IIId's Time; and at Coventry in Henry the VIth's Time; and divers others which have proved Fatal to thoſe Kings, and have been follow'd with great Miſchief on the whole Kingdom: And Conſidering the preſent Poſture of Affairs, the many Jealouſies and Diſcontents that are among the People, they have great Cauſe to apprehend, that the Conſequences of a Parliament now at Oxford may be as Fatal to Your Majeſty, and the Nation, as thoſe others mention'd have been to the then Reigning Kings. And therefore we do conceive, That we cannot Anſwer it to God, to Your Majeſty, or to the People, if we, being Peers of the Realm, ſhould not on ſo Important an Occaſion humbly offer our Advice to Your Majeſty, That, if poſſible, Your Majeſty may" Speech of the Earl of Eſſex.

1681. " may be prevail'd with to alter this (as we ap" prehend) unſeaſonable Reſolution. The Grounds
" and Reaſons of our Opinions are contain'd in
" this our Petition, which we humbly preſent to " Your Majeſty.

This Petition was ſo remarkable, that it deſerves to be here inſerted.

To the King's Moſt Excellent Majeſty:

The Humble PETITION and Advice of the Lords under-named, Peers of the Realm,

Humbly Sheweth,

The Petition it ſelf. " THat whereas Your Majeſty hath been
" pleas'd, by divers Speeches and Paſſages
" to your Houſes of Parliament, rightly to repre-
" ſent to them, the Dangers that threatned Your
" Majeſty's Perſon, and the whole Kingdom, from
" the Miſchievous and Wicked Plots of the Papiſts,
" and the ſudden Growth of a Power, unto which
" no Stop or Remedy could be provided, unleſs
" it were by Parliament, and an Union of Your
" Majeſty's Proteſtant Subjects in one Mind, and
" one Intereſt.

" And the Lord-Chancellor, in purſuance of " Your Majeſty's Commands, having more at " large demonſtrated the ſaid Dangers to be as " great as we in the midſt of our Fears could
" imagine them; and ſo preſſing, that our Liber-
" ties, Religion, Lives, and the whole Kingdom
" would be certainly loſt, if a ſpeedy Proviſion were " not made againſt them.

" And Your Majeſty, on the 21ſt of Apr. 1679,
" having call'd unto Your Council many Honoura-
" ble and Worthy Perſons, and declared to them,
" and the whole Kingdom, That being ſenſible of
" the evil Effects of a Single Miniſtry, or Private
" Advice, or Foreign Committee, for the general
" Direction of your Affairs, Your Majeſty would,
" for the future, referr all Things unto the Coun-
" cil; and by the conſtant Advice of them, toge" ther with the frequent Uſe of your great Council
" the Parliament, Your Majeſty had hereafter re-
" ſolved to Govern the Kingdom, we began to " hope we ſhould ſee an End of our Miſeries.

" But, to our unſpeakable Grief and Sorrow,
" we ſoon found our Expectation fruſtrated; the " Parliament then Subſiſting, was Prorogu'd and
" Diſſolv'd, before it could perfect what was " intended for our Relief and Security: And
" tho' another was thereupon Call'd, yet, by the " many Prorogations, it was put off till the 21ſt
" of October paſt; and notwithſtanding Your Ma-
" jeſty was then again pleas'd to acknowledge,
" That neither Your Majeſty's Perſon nor the " Kingdom could be ſafe, till the Matter of " the Plot was gone through, it was unexpe-
" ctedly Prorogu'd on the 10th of this Month,
" before any ſufficient Order could be taken
" therein; all their Juſt and Pious Endea-
" vours to ſave the Nation were overthrown;
" the good Bills they had been induſtriouſly Pre" paring, to unite all Your Majeſty's Proteſtant
" Subjects, brought to nought; the Diſcovery of
" the Iriſh Plot ſtifled; the Witneſſes that came
" in frequently more fully to Declare that, both
" of England and Ireland, diſcourag'd; thoſe Fo" reign Kingdoms and States, who, by a happy
" Conjunction with Us, might give a Check to " the French Power, diſheartned even to ſuch a
" Deſpair of their own Security againſt the grow-
" ing Greatneſs of that Monarch, as we fear may " induce them to take New Reſolutions, and per" haps, ſuch as may be fatal to us; the Strength
" our Enemies, both at Home and Abroad, en-
" creaſed, and our Selves left in the utmoſt
" Danger of ſeeing our Selves brought into utter " Deſolation.

" In theſe Extremities, we had nothing, un- 1681.
" der God, to Comfort us, but the Hopes that " Your Majeſty (being Touch'd with the Groans
" of your periſhing People) would have ſuffer'd
" your Parliament to have Met on the Day unto
" which it was Prorogu'd, and that no further
" Interruption ſhould have been given to their " Proceedings, in order to the Saving of the Na" tion; yet that failed us too. But when we
" hear'd that Your Majeſty, by the private Sug-
" geſtion of ſome wicked Perſons, Favourers of " Popery, Promoters of French Deſigns, and Ene" mies to Your Majeſty and the Kingdom, (with-
" out the Advice, and, as we have good Reaſon
" to believe, againſt the Opinion ev'n of your " Privy-Council) had been prevail'd with to
" Diſſolve it, and to Call another to Meet at " Oxford, where neither Lords nor Commons can " be in Safety, but will be daily expos'd to the " Swords of the Papiſts, and their Adherents, of " whom too many are crept into Your Majeſty's
" Guards: The Liberty of Speaking according to " their Conſciences, will be thereby deſtroy'd;
" and the Validity of all their Acts and Proceedings
" concerning it, left Diſputable. The Streightneſs
" of the Place, no way admits of ſuch a Concourſe
" of Perſons as now follows every Parliament:
" The Witneſſes that are neceſſary to give Evi" dence againſt the Popiſh Lords, ſuch Judges, or " others whom the Commons have Impeach'd, or
" had Reſolved to Impeach, can neither bear the " Charge of going thither, nor truſt themſelves
" under the Protection of a Parliament that is it
" ſelf evidently under the Power of Guards and " Soldiers.

" The Premiſſes conſider'd, We Your Ma-
" jeſty's Petitioners, out of juſt Abhorrence of " ſuch a Dangerous and Pernicious Council (which
" the Authors have not dared to avow) and the " direful Apprehenſions of the Calamities and
" Miſeries that may enſue thereupon; do make it
" our moſt humble Prayer and Advice, That the " Parliament may not Sit at a Place where it can" not be able to Act with that Freedom which is
" neceſſary, and eſpecially to give unto their Acts
" and Proceedings that Authority which they ought " to have amongſt the People, and have ever
" had, unleſs impair'd by ſome Awe upon them
" (of which there wants not Precedents;) And 1681. His Majesty, than for its Learning, and found Religion: In a word, That His Majesty had met in that Place with all the Demonstrations possible of Duty and Joy, at his having honour'd them with his Royal Presence.

Opening of the Parliament. On Monday March 21st, the Parliament Opened at Oxford; And His Majesty coming into the House of Lords (which was in the Publick Schools) and being in his Robes, seated on his Throne, and sending for the Commons to Attend Him, he was pleas'd to make this Gracious Speech:

My Lords and Gentlemen,

The King's Speech. THE Unwarrantable Proceedings of the last House of Commons, were the Occasion of My parting with the last Parliament; for I, who will never use Arbitrary Government My Self, am resolv'd not to suffer it in Others. I am unwilling to mention Particulars, because I am desirous to forget Faults; but whosoever shall calmly consider what Offers I have formerly made, and what Assurances I renew'd to the last Parliament; how I recommended nothing so much to them, as the Alliances I had made for Preservation of the General Peace in Christendom, and the further Examination of the Popish Plot, and how I desir'd their Advice and Assistance concerning the Preservation of Tangier; and shall then reflect upon the strange unsuitable Returns made to such Propositions, by Men that were call'd together to Consult; perhaps, may wonder more, that I had Patience so long, than that at last I grew weary of their Proceedings.

I have thought it necessary to say thus much to You, that I may not have any new Occasion given Me to remember more of the late Miscarriages: It is much My Interest, and shall be as much My Care, as Yours, to preserve the Liberty of the Subject; because the Crown can never be safe, when That is in danger: And I would have You likewise be Convinc'd, That neither Your Liberties and Properties can subsist long, when the Just Rights and Prerogatives of the Crown are invaded, or the Honour of the Government brought low, and into Dis-reputation.

I let you see, by my Calling this Parliament so soon, that no Irregularities in Parliament shall make Me out of Love with Them; And by this Means, offer You another Opportunity of Providing for Our Security here, by giving that Countenance and Protection to our Neighbours and Allies, which you cannot but know they expect from Us, and extremely stand in need of at this Instant; And at the same time give one Evidence more, that I have not neglected My Part, to give that General Satisfaction and Security, which, by the Blessing of God, may be attained, if You, on Your Parts, bring Suitable Dispositions towards it; And that the Just Care You ought to have of Religion, be not so manag'd and improv'd into unnecessary Fears, as to be made a Pretence for Changing the Foundation of the Government.

I hope the Example of the ill Success of former Heats, will dispose You to a better Temper; and not so much Inveigh against what is past, as to Consider what is best to be Done in the present Conjuncture. The further Prosecution of the Plot; the Tryal of the Lords in the Tower; the providing a more speedy Conviction for Recusants; and, if it be practicable, the ridding Our selves quite of all of that Party, that have any considerable Authority and Interest amongst them, are Things, though of the highest Importance, that hardly need to be recommended to You, they are so obvious to every Man's Consideration, and so necessary for Our Security: But I must needs Desire you, not to lay so much weight upon any One Expedient against Popery, as to determine that all Other are ineffectual; And among all your Cares for Religion, remember, That without the Safety and Dignity of the Monarchy, neither Religion nor Property can be preserved. 1681.

What I have formerly and so often Declared touching the Succession, I cannot depart from. But to remove all reasonable Fears that may arise from the Possibility of a Popish Successor's coming to the Crown, if Means can be found, that in such a Case, the Administration of the Government may remain in Protestants Hands; I shall be ready to hearken to any such Expedient, by which the Religion might be Preserv'd, and the Monarchy not Destroy'd.

I must therefore earnestly recommend to You, To provide for the Religion and the Government together, with regard to One Another, because they Support Each Other: And let Us be United at Home, that We may recover the Esteem and Consideration We used to have Abroad.

I Conclude, with this One Advice to You, That the Rules and Measures of all your Votes, may be the known and Establish'd Laws of the Land; which neither can, nor ought to be departed from, nor chang'd, but by Act of Parliament: And I may the more reasonably require, that You make the Laws of the Land Your Rule, because I am resolv'd they shall be Mine.

After this Speech, the Lord-Chancellor, by His Majesty's Command, directed the Commons to Return to their House, and to make Choice of a Speaker. Which they accordingly did, Unanimously Electing William Williams of Grays-Inn, Esq; Councellor at Law, and Recorder of Chester, who had been Speaker in the former Parliament. When the Commons Presented him to His Majesty, on Tuesday March 22d, he made this Speech: W. Williams is again chosen Speaker.

May it Please Your MAJESTY;

" THE Knights, Citizens and Burgesses in Parliament Assembled, with Duty and Loyalty agreeable to Themselves and the Persons whom they Represent, have, in Obedience to Your Royal Pleasure, for the disposing of themselves in that Great Assembly for Your Majesty's Service, Consider'd of a Speaker; and, to manifest to Your Majesty, and the World, they are not inclinable to Changes, have with one Voice Elected me their Speaker, having had the Honour to Serve Your Majesty and the Commons in that Trust in the last Parliament. His Speech to the King.

" With all Humility, I presume again, by Their Commands, to stand before Your Majesty, to receive your Pleasure, with a Head and Heart full of Loyalty to Your Sacred Person; arm'd with a settled Resolution never to depart from Your Well, Ancient and Establish'd Government.

Then the Lord-Chancellor, by His Majesty's Command, said to this Purpose:

" Mr. Speaker, for so I am Commanded to call you, His Majesty hath well Consider'd the Choice the Commons have made, and does very much Approve of that Election, and doth Accept and Allow you for Speaker.

After which, the Speaker made this further Speech:

Most Gracious Sovereign;

" Natural Allegiance commands Loyalty to Your Majesty from every Subject.

" Your singular Grace and Favour to me, in the last Parliament, continu'd by the Honour I have in this, add more than Dutifulness and Obedience to my Loyalty.

1681. " I am ſet in the Firſt Station of Your Commons, for Truſt and Quality ; an High and " Slippery Place : It requires a ſteady Head, and " a well-pois'd Body in him that will ſtand firm " there. Uprightneſs, is the ſafe Poſture, and " beſt Policy, and ſhall be mine in this Place, " guarded with this Opinion, That Your Majeſty's Service, in this Truſt, is one and the " ſame with the Service of your Commons, and " that they are no more to be divided than Your " Crown and Sceptre.

" They truly ſerve the Crown and Country, " (which ſhall be my Care and Induſtry) who " make the Safety of Your Sacred Perſon, the " Defence and Security of the Proteſtant Religion, " the Support of Your Majeſty's Government, " the Maintenance of the Laws, and Preſervation " of the Ancient Conſtitutions of Parliament, one " and the ſame undivided Intereſt, one and the " ſame Safety, one and the ſame inſeparable Security for Your Self and People.

" Theſe are the Deſires of all Good Men, but " muſt be the Effects of Good Counſels, for the " Enabling of Your Majeſty's Great Council now " in Parliament Aſſembled. To Compleat this " bleſſed Eſtabliſhment, with all Humility, I " Addreſs to Your Majeſty, in the Name, and " on the Behalf of the Commons in Parliament ;

1. " That We and our Servants may be free " in our Perſons and Eſtates, from Arreſts, and " other Diſturbances.

2. " That in our Debates, Liberty and Freedom of Speech be allow'd us.

3. " That, as Occaſion ſhall require, Your " Majeſty will vouchſafe us Acceſs to Your Royal " Perſon.

" I take Leave to join this humble Petition " for my Self, That nothing by me, in Weakneſs, or through Inadvertency, ſaid or done, " may turn to the Prejudice of the Commons ; " and that my Behaviour and Proceedings may " receive a Benign and Favourable Interpretation " with Your Gracious Majeſty.

Then the Lord-Chancellor, by Command from His Majeſty, ſaid to this effect :

Mr. SPEAKER,

Anſwer of the Lord-Chancellor to the Speaker.

" All your Petitions are fully and freely " Granted by His Majeſty, in as large and ample " a manner as ever any Houſe of Commons yet " enjoy'd them : The King is very ſure, the " Wiſdom of this Houſe of Commons will make " as prudent an Uſe of them, as any of your " Anceſtors ever did. Your own particular Petition is grateful to the King too ; becauſe he " knows you will be careful to avoid Miſtakes, " as His Majeſty is ready to forgive them.

" And now, Mr. Speaker, theſe Preliminaries being thus over, the King deſires you " wou'd haſten to the reſt that are neceſſary to " be diſpatcht, before we can enter upon Buſineſs ; " that ſo we may husband Time, which is now " more neceſſary than ever ; and he hopes that " this Parliament will come to a very Happy " and Proſperous Concluſion : And that it may " do ſo, God Almighty Direct and Proſper all " your Conſultations.

Printing of the Votes.

On Thurſday March 24th, the Debates of the Commons, began with a Motion for Printing the Votes : Which was Oppos'd by Mr. Secretary Jenkins, as againſt the Gravity of that Aſſembly ; That no Great Aſſembly in Chriſtendom did it ; That again, it was againſt their Gravity, and a ſort of Appeal to the People. But the Members, on the other ſide, Argu'd, That Printing their Votes, was like True Engliſh-men, who are not aſham'd of what they do ; and that the People who they Repreſent, may have a True Account of their Proceedings ; and ſo the Reſolution paſt for Printing. 1681.

A Complaint of the Loſs of a Bill, in the laſt Parliament.

Another Motion was made, To Enquire into the Miſcarriage of the Bill for Repeal of the Bill of 35 Eliz. &c. how it came to be ſlipt over in the laſt Parliament, and not Preſented, for the Royal Aſſent ? " Which (ſaid the Mover) I look upon " as a Breach of the Conſtitution of the Govern- " ment." But the farther Debate of this Matter was Adjourn'd to the next Day. While another Motion was made, " That, for the Preſervation " of the Proteſtant Religion, and the King's " Perſon, a Bill be brought in, To Prevent a " Popiſh Succeſſor, and in particular againſt James " Duke of York " ; the ſame Bill which Paſs'd " the laſt Parliament. Mr. Secretary Jenkins ſtood up and ſaid, " I muſt give my Negative to " this Motion ; and my Reaſon why I do ſo, is, be- " cauſe the King hath Declared in his Speech, That " as to the Point of Altering the Succeſſion, he can- " not depart from what he has ſo often Declared." He farther Argued, " That the King's Speech gave " them a Latitude for Expedience ; and therefore " he would not have the Bill any more put to the " hazard of Rejection, but hoped they would Conſider of ſome Expedients." Other Members declared, " That they could ſee no Expedient to " ſave Religion, and preſerve the King's Perſon, " but only the Bill to Exclude the Duke ; however to pay the King all the Reſpect in the " world, they would ſet a-part a Time to Conſider " Expedients, and Appointed Saturday for the " Debate of them.

Bill of Exclusion.

Oppoſed by Sir Lionel Jenkins.

On Friday March 25th, a Motion was made, for returning Thanks to thoſe Places who had freely and without Expence Choſen their Members ; and the Members ſo Elected, were Ordered to ſend their Thanks to thoſe who Choſe them. Then a Motion was made for Reſuming the Debate upon the Loſs of the Bill for Repeal of the Bill of 35 Eliz. Sir W. J. Argu'd thus ; This Matter deſerves material Conſideration, whether in reſpect of the Loſs of the Bill, or the Shaking of the very Conſtitution of Parliament. The Bill that is loſt, is of great Moment, and of great Service to the Country, and perhaps to their Lives, in the Time of a Popiſh Succeſſor. Thoſe Men that hindred the Paſſing that Bill, had a Proſpect of that ; and if it be ſent up again, we are like to meet with great Oppoſition. But be the Bill what it will, the Precedent is of the higheſt Conſequence. The King has his Negative to all Bills, but I never knew that the Clerk of the Parliament had a Negative —— If this Way be found out, That Bills ſhou'd be thrown by ; it may be hereafter ſaid, They were forgot, and laid by : and ſo we ſhall never know whether the King would Paſs them, or no. If this be ſuffer'd, it is in vain to ſpend Time here, &c. The Matter was at laſt referr'd to a Conference with the Lords, concerning the Conſtitution of Parliaments, in Matters relating to Paſſing of Bills. Then was read the Account of Fits-Harris, and the Libel wrote by him. For the underſtanding of which Matter, it muſt be obſerved, that this Fitz-Harris was the Son of Sir Edward Fitz-Harris, an Iriſh Papiſt, and conſequently a fit Tool to Ridicule the Popiſh Plot : With this Deſign, he became a Correſpondent with the Dutcheſs of Portſmouth, her Woman Mrs. Wall, and the French Ambaſſador's Confeſſor, from whom he had receiv'd ſeveral Sums of Money : And having been acquainted with one Everard beyond-Sea, when they were both in the French King's Service, he did about the Beginning of February, after the Parliament was Diſſolv'd, renew his ſaid Acquaintance with Everard, and repreſented to him the Advantages he might have, by Ingratiating himſelf into the French and Popiſh Intereſt ; and that for this Purpoſe, it would be proper to draw Libel of Fitz-Harris.

1681. draw up a ſharp Libel upon the King, and his Adminiſtration, and then charge the ſaid Libel among the Non-conformiſts, as a Deſign of theirs to raiſe a Rebellion, and ſubvert the Government. The Inſtructions that Fitz-Harris gave to Everard for the Subject-Matter of this Libel, were to this effect; "That the King, and Royal Family "ſhould be traduced, as being Papiſts, and Arbi- "trarily-affected from the Beginning: That "King Charles I. had an Hand in the Iriſh Re- "bellion; and that Charles II. did Countenance "the ſame, by preferring Fitz-Gerald, Fitz-Patrick, "and Mount-Garret, who were Engaged in the Iriſh "Rebellion: That the Act, forbidding to call the "King a Papiſt, was to ſtop Mens Mouths, when "he ſhould incline to further Popery; which ap- "pear'd by his adhering ſo cloſely to the Duke "of York's Intereſts, and hindred him from being "Proceeded againſt by the Parliament; and "hindring the Officers put in by the Duke of "York, to be turn'd out; and for that the Privy- "Councellors and Juſtices of Peace, who were "for the Proteſtant Intereſt, were turn'd out of "all Places of Truſt: That it was as much in "the Power of the People to Depoſe a Popiſh "Poſſeſſor, as a Popiſh Succeſſor; and ſeeing "there was no hopes the Parliament, when they "Met at Oxford, could do any Good, the People "were bound to Provide for themſelves." This was drawn up into a Traiterous Paper, or Libel, to be call'd, The True Engliſh-man ſpeaking plain Engliſh: In a Letter from a Friend to a Friend. It was to be fix'd upon the Proteſtant Diſſenters, and to be diſpers'd by the Penny-Poſt to the Pro- teſting Lords, and Leading Men in the Houſe of Commons, who were immediately thereupon to be Taken up and Search'd. Everard affirm'd, The Court had an hand in it, and that the King had given Fitz-Harris Money, and wou'd give him more, if it had Succeſs. And this is ſo much the more to be credited, ſince the King himſelf told Sheriff Corniſh, That Fitz-Harris had, Three Months before his Apprehenſion, been with him, and acquainted him, he was in purſuit of a Plot, which very much related to His Majeſty's Perſon, and the Government, &c. And that upon Sir William Waller's acquainting the King with the Particulars he had taken, while he was conceal'd, as aforeſaid; though he Thank'd him for it, and Commanded Secretary Jenkins to iſſue out a Warrant for the Apprehenſion of Fitz-Harris, and that Sir William ſhould take care of the Execution of it; yet he was no ſooner gone, but Sir William ſaid, He was inform'd by Two Worthy Gentlemen, That the King was highly offended with him, ſaying, He had broken all his Meaſures; and that he wou'd, one way or other, have him taken off. Fitz-Harris, however, was ſoon after Taken, and Committed to Newgate; where being Examin'd by Sir Robert Clayton, and Sheriff Corniſh, he diſcover'd a Diſpo- ſition, and at length a Willingneſs to Diſcover the whole Deſign the next Day after. But to prevent it, in all appearance, he was that Day remov'd into the Tower. The Commons thought that all this look'd ſo much like a Trick, and a Continuation of the Popiſh Plot, that they Reſolv'd to Impeach the ſaid Edward Fitz-Harris of High-Treaſon, and Appointed Sir Leoline Jenkins to carry up the Impeachment to the Houſe of Lords; who at firſt refus'd it, and ſaid, The ſending him upon that Meſſage, reflected upon the King his Maſter, and let them do what they would to him, he would not go: But being threatned by the Houſe, and better adviſ'd by his Friends, he ſaid at laſt, He was ready to Obey the Order of the Houſe, and was ſorry his Words had given Offence.

Impeachment of Fitz-Harris.

Expedients to prevent a Bill of Excluſion.

On Saturday March 26th, they fell upon De- bating of ſome Expedient to ſecure the Proteſtant Religion, and the King's Life, without the Bill for Excluding the Duke. Sir J. E. propos'd a Regency for the next Heir, leaving him the Name of a King, but not the Power. This was ſpoke againſt as a Dangerous and Impracticable thing; and the Houſe came readily into a Reſolution "That there was no Remedy, to ſave Reli- "gion, and the Government, but Excluding "the Duke of York, and all other Popiſh Suc- "ceſſors." In the Afternoon an Account was "brought to the Houſe, That the Lords had thrown out the Impeachment of Fitz-Harris, and had directed that he ſhould be Proſecuted at Common-Law. This Incens'd the Commons to a high degree, and carry'd them into a Vote, "That this Refuſal of the Lords, was a Denial "of Juſtice, a Violation of the Conſtitutions of "Parliaments, and an Obſtruction to the further "Diſcovery of the Popiſh Plot." They further Reſolved, "That if any Judge, Juſtice, or Jury, or "any inferior Court, ſhall Proceed againſt Edward "Fitz-Harris, or any other Perſon Impeach'd in "Parliament for the ſame Crimes for which he "or they ſtand Impeached, it is a high Breach of "the Privilege of Parliament.

The Com- mons of- fended.

On Monday March 28th, the Bill for Excluding the Duke of York, was Read the Firſt time, and Order'd a Second Reading; and they were re- ſuming the Debate about Fitz-Harris, when on a ſudden the Uſher of the Black-Rod commanded their Attendance in the Houſe of Lords; whither they immediately went; And the King being there in his Robes, told them, "He perceiv'd there "were great Heats between the Lords and the "Commons; and their Beginnings had been ſuch, "as He could expect no good Succeſs of this Par- "liament, and therefore thought fit to Diſſolve "them:" And accordingly the Lord-Chancellor Declared the Parliament Diſſolved.

The Par- liament Diſſolv'd.

The King immediately took Coach, and drove in great haſte to Windſor, where he lay that Night, and the next Morning he poſted away to Whitehall, ſeeming there extremely pleas'd that he had made his Eſcape, as it were, from Oxford, and had got a Deliverance from his Parliament. On Apr. 3d, Fitz-Harris was Arraign'd at the King's-Bench-Bar, where he Three times refus'd to hold up his Hand, inſiſting upon his being Impeach'd in Parliament, and therefore that he ought not to be Try'd by any inferior Court. The Court aſſign'd him for Counſel Sir Francis Winnington, Mr. Williams, Mr. Pollexfen, and Mr. Wallop, to Argue his Plea againſt the Judicature of the Court; and on Wedneſday the 4th of May the Priſoner was again brought to the Bar, and his Councel attended, where the King's Attorney-General, Sir Robert Sawyer, entred a Demurrer to the Priſoner's Plea, and inſiſted chiefly upon the manifeſt Defect of Forms, becauſe the Plea runs, That the ſaid Fitz-Harris was Im- peach'd at the late Parliament in Oxford, de alta Pro- ditione, but does not ſay of what ſort or manner of Treaſon; nor did it ſet forth the Impeachment at large, which a Plea ought to do, when it is againſt the Juriſdiction of the Court. The Priſoner's Council Mov'd for farther Time; which was given them till Saturday Morning, when the Matter was largely and Learnedly Debated on both Sides: The King's Council, and alſo the Court, declaring, That they meddled not at all with the Privilege of the Houſe of Commons, or the Juriſdiction of the Lords in Parliament, which was not the Queſtion; but only as to the Form of the Plea. After the Debates were ended, the Court took Time to Conſider, before they would proceed to Judgment. The 11th of May the Court ſat again; the Plea was over-rul'd; the Priſoner Pleaded, Not Guilty; and alledging, that a material Witneſs for him was abſent in Holland, his Tryal was put off till the 9th of June. On June the 8th, Dr. Oliver Plunket, Titular Arch-Biſhop of Dublin, was Try'd at

The Chief Matters Sworn against him were, That he was made Primate of Ireland by the Pope, at the French King's Recommendation; had actually Levy'd great Sums of Money among his Clergy, to introduce the French Dominion into that Kingdom, and to Exterminate the Protestants; and upon Evidence of this, was found Guilty. The next Day Fitz-Harris was Try'd at the same Bar: The Chief Evidences against him were, Sir William Waller, and Everard, upon whose Testimonies he was found Guilty of High-Treason; and on the 1st of July they were both Executed at Tyburn. Presently after his Tryal, Mrs. Fits-Harris, the Prisoner's Wife, Accused the Lord Howard of Escrick, for Contriving that Treasonable Libel for which her Husband was Condemn'd. Upon which that Lord was Committed to the Tower; and so was Rouse, Hains, White, and Colledge, commonly call'd the Protestant Joiner.

Plunket & Fitz-Harris Executed.

The Dissolution of Two Parliaments, especially of the last, in so abrupt a manner, raised up a general Spirit of Discontent and Distrust in the Body of the People of England. This made the King descend to an Apology for Himself, in an Appeal to the World, by a Royal Declaration of the Causes and Reasons that moved His Majesty to Dissolve the two last Parliaments. And on April 8th, 1681. it was Ordered by His Majesty in Council, That the said Declaration be forthwith Printed and Publish'd, and Read in all Churches and Chapels throughout this Kingdom. The Clergy Paid a Cheerful Compliance to the Reading of it, and thereby gave Offence to some of their Patrons, and to many of the People.

His Majesty's Declaration to all his Loving Subjects, touching the Causes and Reasons that moved him to Dissolve the Two last Parliaments.

Declaration of Reasons for Dissolving the two last Parliaments.

" IT was with exceeding great Trouble, that " We were brought to the Dissolving of the " Two last Parliaments, without more Benefit to " Our People by the Calling of them: But having " done Our Part, in giving so many Opportunities " of providing their Good, it cannot be justly imputed to Us, that the Success hath not answer'd " Our Expectation.

" We cannot at this time but take Notice of " the particular Causes of Our Dissatisfaction, " which at the Beginning of the last Parliament " We did recommend to their Care to avoid, and " expected We should have had no new Cause to " remember them.

" We Open'd the last Parliament, which was " Held at Westminster, with as Gracious Expressions of Our Readiness to satisfie the Desires of " Our Good Subjects, and to secure them against " all their just Fears, as the weighty Consideration, either of Preserving the Establish'd Religion, and the Liberty and Property of Our " Subjects at Home, or of Supporting Our Neighbours and Allies Abroad, could fill Our Hearts " with, or possibly require from Us.

" And We do solemnly Declare, That we did " intend, as far as would have consisted with the " very Being of the Government, to have Comply'd with any thing that could have been Propos'd to Us, to accomplish those Ends.

" We ask'd of them the Supporting the Al- " Alliances We had made for the Preservation of " the General Peace in Christendom; We recommended to them the further Examination of " the Plot; We desir'd their Advice and Assistance " concerning the Preservation of Tangier; We " offer'd to concurr in any Remedies that could 1681. " be propos'd for the Security of the Protestant " Religion, that might consist with Preserving " the Succession of the Crown in its Due and Legal " Course of Descent. To all which We met with " most unsuitable Returns from the House of " Commons: Addresses, in the nature of Remonstrances, rather than of Answers; Arbitrary " Orders for taking Our Subjects into Custody, " for Matters that had no relation to Privileges " of Parliament; strange illegal Votes, declaring " divers Eminent Persons to be Enemies to the " King and Kingdom, without any Order, or " Process of Law, any Hearing of their Defence, " or any Proof so much as offer'd against " them.

" Besides these Proceedings, they Voted as " followeth, on the 7th of January last.

" Resolved, That Whosoever shall Lend, or cause to be Lent, by Way of Advance, any Money upon the Branches of the King's Revenue, arising by Customs, Excise, or Hearth-Money, shall be adjudged to hinder the Sitting of Parliaments, and shall be Responsible for the same in Parliament.

" Resolved, That Whosoever shall Buy any Tally of Anticipation upon any Part of the King's Revenue, or Whosoever shall Pay any such Tally hereafter to be Struck, shall be adjudged to hinder the Sitting of Parliaments, and shall be Responsible for the same in Parliament.

" Which Votes, instead of giving Us Assistance to Support Our Allies, or enable us to Preserve Tangier, tended rather to disable Us from Contributing towards either, by Our Own Revenue or Credit; not only exposing us to all Dangers that might happen either at Home or Abroad, but endeavouring to deprive Us of the Possibility of Supporting the Government it self, and to reduce Us to a more helpless Condition than the meanest of our Subjects.

" And on the 10th of the same Month they " past another Vote, in these words:

" Resolved, That it is the Opinion of this House, That the Prosecution of Protestant Dissenters upon the Penal Laws, is at this time grievous to the Subject, a Weakening of the Protestant Interest, an Encouragement to Popery, and Dangerous to the Peace of the Kingdom.

" By which Vote, without any regard to the Laws Establish'd, they assum'd to themselves a Power of Suspending Acts of Parliament. Whereas Our Judges, and Ministers of Justice, neither can, nor ought, in reverence to the Votes of either or both the Houses, break the Oaths they have taken, for the due and impartial Execution of Our Laws; which by Experience hath been found to be the best Support, both of the Protestant Interest, and of the Peace of the Kingdom.

" These were some of the unwarrantable Proceedings of that House of Commons, which were the Occasion of Our parting with that Parliament.

" Which We had no sooner Dissolv'd, but We caus'd another to be forthwith Assembled at Oxford; at the Opening of which, We thought it necessary to give them warning of the Errors of the former, in hopes to have prevented the like Miscarriages; and We requir'd of them to make the Laws of the Land their Rule, as We did, and do resolve they shall be Ours. We further added, That what We had formerly and so often Declared concerning the Succession, We would not depart from; but to remove all reasonable Fears that might arise from the possibility of a Popish Successor's coming to the Crown, if Means could be found, that in such a Case, the Administration of the Govern-

" ment

1681. " ment might remain in Proteſtants Hands, We " were ready to hearken to any Expedient, by " which the Religion Eſtabliſh'd might be pre- " ſerv'd, and the Monarchy not deſtroy'd.

" But, contrary to Our Offers and Expecta- " tion, We ſaw, that no Expedient would be en- " tertain'd, but that of a total Excluſion, which " We had ſo often declar'd, was a Point, that " in Our Own Royal Judgment, ſo nearly con- " cern'd Us, both in Honour, Juſtice, and Con- " ſcience, that We cou'd never conſent to it. " In ſhort, We cannot, after the ſad Experience " We have had of the late Civil Wars, that Mur- " der'd Our Father (of Bleſſed Memory,) and " Ruin'd the Monarchy, conſent to a Law, that " ſhall eſtabliſh another moſt Unnatural War, or " at leaſt make it neceſſary to maintain a Standing " Force for the Preſerving the Government, and " the Peace of the Kingdom.

" And We have reaſon to believe, by " what paſs'd in the laſt Parliament at Weſt- " minſter, that if We cou'd have been brought to " give Our Conſent to a Bill of Excluſion; the " Intent was not to reſt there, but to paſs further, " and to attempt ſome other Great and Important " Changes, even in the preſent.

" The Buſineſs of Fitz-Harris, who was Im- " peach'd by the Houſe of Commons of High- " Treaſon, and by the Houſe of Lords referr'd to " the Ordinary Courſe of Law, was on the ſudden " carry'd on to that extremity, by the Votes " which the Commons Paſs'd on the 26th of " March laſt, that there was no poſſibility left of " a Reconciliation.

" The Votes were theſe:

" Die Sabbati 26 Martij, poſt Meridiem.

" Reſolved, That it is the undoubted Right of the " Commons in Parliament Aſſembled, to Impeach " before the Lords in Parliament any Peer or Com- " moner, for Treaſon, or any other Crime or Miſ- " demeanor; And that the Refuſal of the Lords to " Proceed in Parliament upon ſuch Impeachment, is " a Denial of Juſtice, and a Violation of the Conſti- " tution of Parliaments.

" Reſolved, That in the Caſe of Edward Fitz- " Harris, who by the Commons hath been Impeached " of High-Treaſon before the Lords, with a Decla- " ration, That in convenient Time they would bring " up the Articles againſt him, for the Lords to " Reſolve, That the ſaid Fitz-Harris ſhould be Pro- " ceeded with according to the Courſe of Common- " Law, and not by way of Impeachment at this " time; is a Denial of Juſtice, and a Violation of " the Conſtitution of Parliaments, and an Obſtruction " to the further Diſcovery of the Popiſh Plot, and " of great Danger to His Majeſty's Perſon, and the " Proteſtant Religion.

" Reſolved, That for any Inferior Court to Pro- " ceed againſt Edward Fitz-Harris, or any other " Perſon lying under an Impeachment in Parliament, " for the ſame Crimes for which he or they ſtand " Impeach'd, is a high Breach of the Privilege of " Parliament.

" It was a Matter extremely ſenſible to Us, " to find an Impeachment made uſe of to Delay " a Tryal, that We had directed againſt a profeſs'd " Papiſt, charg'd with Treaſons againſt Us, of an " extraordinary Nature: And certainly the Houſe " of Peers did themſelves Right, in refuſing to " give Countenance to ſuch a Proceeding.

" But when either of the Houſes are ſo far " tranſported, as to Vote the Proceedings of the " other to be a Denial of Juſtice, a Violation of " the Conſtitution of Parliaments, of Danger to " Our Perſon, and the Proteſtant Religion, with- " out Conferences firſt had, to examine upon " what Grounds ſuch Proceedings were made, and " how far they might be juſtify'd; This puts the " Two Houſes out of capacity of tranſacting 1681. " Buſineſs together, and conſequently is the " greateſt Violation of the Conſtitution of Par- " liaments.

" This was the Caſe; and every Day's Con- " tinuance being like to produce new Inſtances of " further Heat and Anger between the Two Houſes, " to the Diſappointment of all Publick Ends for " which they were Call'd, We found it neceſſary " to put an End to this Parliament likewiſe.

" But notwithſtanding all this, let not the " reſtleſs Malice of ill Men, who are labouring to " poiſon Our People, ſome out of fondneſs of " their Old Beloved Commonwealth-Principles, " and ſome out of Anger at their being Diſap- " pointed in the particular Deſigns they had for " the Accompliſhment of their own Ambition and " Greatneſs, perſuade any of Our Good Subjects, " that we intend to lay aſide the Uſe of Parlia- " ments: For We do ſtill Declare, That no Irre- " gularities in Parliaments, ſhall ever make Us " out of love with Parliaments, which We look " upon as the beſt Method for Healing the Di- " ſtempers of the Kingdom, and the only Means " to preſerve the Monarchy in that due Credit " and Reſpect which it ought to have both at " Home and Abroad.

" And for this Cauſe, We are reſolved, by the " Bleſſing of God, to have frequent Parliaments; " and both in and out of Parliament to uſe Our " utmoſt Endeavours to Exterpate Popery, and to " Redreſs all the Grievances of Our good Sub- " jects, and in all things to Govern according to " the Laws of the Kingdom.

" And We hope, that a little Time will ſo " far open the Eyes of all Our good Subjects, " that Our next Meeting in Parliament ſhall per- " fect all that Settlement and Peace which ſhall be " found wanting either in Church or State.

" To which, as We ſhall contribute Our utmoſt " Endeavours, ſo We aſſure Our Self, That We " ſhall be aſſiſted therein by the Loyalty and good- " Affections of all thoſe who conſider the Riſe and " Progreſs of the late Troubles and Confuſions, and " deſire to preſerve their Country from a Relapſe.

" And who cannot but remember, That Reli- " gion, Liberty and Property were all loſt and " gone, when the Monarchy was ſhaken off; " and could never be reviv'd, till that was re- " ſtored.

This Declaration, however ſmooth and fair, was by no means Popular. Some thought it nothing but a Torrent of Words: Others had a worſe Opinion of it, as a Stretch of Prerogative, and a profeſs'd Inſult upon the late Members of both Houſes. Many queſtion'd the Validity of it: Sir William Jones, in his Juſt and Modeſt Vindication of the Two laſt Parliaments, plainly ſays, That though the King did not communicate this Paper to the Council till Friday the 8th of April, yet M. Barillon, the French Ambaſſador, read it over three Days before, and demanded of a Gentleman there his Opinion of it: Which M. Barillon might the better remember, becauſe of the great liberty the Gentleman took to ridicule it to his face. Not acceptable to the People.

It is certain, that His Majeſty had taken great Offence at the Oxford Parliament, for the particular Zeal of the People in many of their Elections; and for the particular Reſpect paid the Members of the City of London, in a great Retinue waiting on them, &c. Of this number of Attendants was one Stephen Colledge, commonly known by the Name of the Proteſtant Joiner, a Buſie Man, and a great Zealot againſt Popery, who went down to Oxford, and there ſpoke Words, and recited Rhimes, that were ſaid to reflect upon the King. This Mechanick was to be made an Example of medling with Politicks; Caſe of Mr. Stephen Colledge.

1681. Politicks; ſo an Indictment of High-Treaſon was Exhibited againſt him to the Grand-Jury of Middleſex; but the Jury return'd an Ignoramus upon it: For which Mr. Wilmore (the Fore-man) was, out of all Courſe of Law, Apprehended, and Examin'd before the Council, Auguſt 16th. and ſent to the Tower; and was afterwards forc'd to flie beyond the Seas. When the Deſign had thus miſcarry'd in London, they laid a new Scene againſt this Offender at Oxford, where they hoped to find a more pliable Grand-Jury: And to make ſure that the Bill might not a ſecond time miſcarry, the Witneſſes were ſent down Poſt to the Aſſizes, and by ſecret Management were privately ſhut up with the Jury till they had found the Bill: Which was afterwards complain'd of, as an Intolerable Practice. As ſoon as the Bill was found againſt him, a Jailer and a Meſſenger were ſent away to hurry him down to his Tryal, who, by Order of the King's Councel, took from him all his Inſtructions for his Defence, and carry'd them to the Councel, for them only to make their Uſe and Advantage of 'em. This way of Procedure was thought to be very harſh and illegal; yet the poor Man, under theſe ſevere Circumſtances, was not wanting to himſelf, but ſtoutly made his Defence; and, as Sir John Hawles obſerves upon that Tryal, the beſt Defence, all Circumſtances conſider'd, that ever Man made for his Life. But indeed, it ſeem'd to be a Matter Reſolv'd upon Above, He muſt Die; and ſo he was, Auguſt 18th, found Guilty of High-Treaſon, and on the 31ſt of the ſame Month Executed in the Caſtle-Yard.

Caſe of the Earl of Shaftsbury.

It was propoſed to make an Example of a Peer, as well as of a poor Commoner; my Lord Shafiſbury was a Perſon moſt odious to the Court, and the more ſo, becauſe his Lordſhip (with ſeveral other Peers) had entred a Proteſtation againſt the Lords Rejecting the Impeachment of Fitz-Harris; and upon the Diſſolution of the Parliament, return'd immediately to London, as if he intended there to Influence the City againſt the Court. Soon after his Return, One Bryan Hans came to him and aſſur'd him, he could give great Light in the Matter of Sir Edmund-Bury Godfry's Murther, if he might have his Pardon. The Earl endeavoured to get one, but it could not be obtained. Hans being Taken, and carry'd before the Council, hoped to get Favour, by accuſing the Earl of attempting to Suborn him to do it; and on the Information of this Iriſh-Evidence, the Lord Shafiſbury was Apprehended at His Houſe in Alderſgate-ſtreet, and on the 2d of July Committed to the Tower, for High-Treaſon; and Capt. Wilkinſon, who had waited on the Earl to Oxford (among other Friends and Followers) was now tempted to charge this upon his Lordſhip, as a Deſign of Sedition and Treaſon: But Wilkinſon, tho' a Priſoner for Debt in the King's-Bench, reſiſted all their Temptations and Offers, and would not be drawn in to be an Evidence. The Earl, after his Commitment, preſented ſeveral Petitions for a Tryal, or Bail, according to the Habeas-Corpus Act; but he could not be Heard till November the 24th, and then a Bill of High-Treaſon was preferred to the Grand-Jury at the Seſſions-Houſe in the Old-Bailey. Mr. Blaithwaite and Mr. Guynne Swore, That the Papers produced in Court were taken in the Lord Shaftsbury's Houſe: And Sir Leoline Jenkins Depoſed, That one of them, which was a Project of an Aſſociation, was the ſame Paper, unaltered, that Mr. Blaithwaite gave him. But this Writing (ſaith Sir John Hawles) was no manner of Evidence of Treaſon, admitting what the Witneſſes Swore, as to the finding of it, to be true; becauſe it was not proved that it was Compos'd or Proſecuted by the Earl of Shaftsbury, or by his Order. Two Macknamarra's, and One Booth, Swore, That Capt. Wilkinſon was to have been Captain of a Troop of Horſe in the Army which the Lord Shafiſbury was to Raiſe. One Turbervile Swore, That the Lord Shaftsbury ſaid about February laſt, That there was little Good to be done to the King, as long as his Guards were about him. One Smith gave Evidence, That the Earl ſhou'd ſay, If the King ſhould offer any Violence to the Parliament at Oxford, he would meet with a ſtrong Oppoſition. And One Haynes Swore to theſe Words ſpoken by the Earl, The Duke of Buckingham has as much Right to the Crown, as any Stewart in England. But the Jury (of whom Sir Samuel Bernadiſton was Fore-man) Conſider'd of the Depoſitions of Capt. Wilkinſon, made before the King, giving a large Account of the Intrigue carry'd on by Booth, to engage him to be an Evidence againſt the Earl; and knew Booth to be a Fellow of infamous Character, who had been Condemn'd for Clipping and Coining: Nor had they reaſon to believe any thing ſaid by Turbervile, Smith, or Haynes; and there was ſo much of their Falſhoods and of their Deſigns to Perjure themſelves, prov'd againſt them in Colledge's Tryal, that they therefore brought in an Ignoramus. Upon which Sir John Hawles makes this Remark; The Grand-Jury (though ſome of them afterwards ſmarted for it, upon other Pretences) did like Honeſt, Underſtanding Gentlemen: And had they done otherwiſe, to avoid the Ignominy of being call'd (though in truth it was an Honour to be) an Ignoramus-Jury, they had juſtly deſerv'd the Reproach, which ſince has lighted on other Juries; ſuch as Mr. Corniſh's, and the like. The People were generally ſo well ſatisfy'd, that the Spite of the Papiſts was grounded on the Lord Shafiſbury's apparent Zeal for the Religion and Liberties, that they publickly Rejoyced in his Deliverance, and made Bonfires that Evening in ſeveral Parts of the City. Graham (who was the Solicitor againſt him, and had managed the Iriſh Evidence) had much a-doe to eſcape the Fury of the Multitude; and the Judges (as they themſelves confeſs'd in Graham's Tryal) were Affronted as they ſate on the Bench. The Earl being Clear'd by the Grand-Jury, mov'd to be Diſcharg'd, but could not obtain it till the End of the next Term. When he was at Liberty, he Proſecuted Graham, and his Accuſers, as his Declaration ſets forth, For Conſpiring to Indict him of High-Treaſon, for which they ſolicited Wilkinſon to give Falſe-Teſtimony againſt the ſaid Earl, &c. The Defendants mov'd, That they might not be Try'd in London, becauſe the Sheriffs, Mr. Pilkington and Mr. Shute, were the Lord Shafiſbury's Friends. The Judges allow'd their Plea; but the Earl would not Try his Cauſe elſewhere.

1681.

Addreſſes promoted.

In the mean time, by the Encouragement and Solicitations of the Court, a multitude of Addreſſes were brought up to the King, to Thank him for his late Declaration, and for his Maintaining the Succeſſion in the Right Line; with ſome Compliments and Flouriſhes, that gave no Reputation to this New Way of Addreſſing, when it did not ſo much prove the Affections of the People, as it really betray'd the Inclinations of the Court.

Duke of York in Scotland.

The Duke of York was all this while in Scotland, as His Majeſty's High-Commiſſioner, and found there an Obſequious Parliament, who being firſt amuſed with An Act Ratifying all former Laws for the Security of the Proteſtant Religion; fell readily into another Act, Acknowledging and Aſſerting the Right of Succeſſion to the Imperial Crown of Scotland, wherein they Declare, That no Difference in Religion, nor no Law, nor Act of Parliament made or to be made, can Alter or Divert the Right of Succeſſion and Lineal Deſcent of the Crown to the Neareſt and Lawful Heirs. After which, they made another Act for a Standing Army, under the Title of An Act for Continuing the Supply for the Maintaining His Majeſty's Additional Standing Forces for Five Years 1681. Years longer. And concluded with another Act, For Securing the Proteſtant Religion, againſt Popery and Fanaticiſm. The Earl of Argyle mov'd in Parliament, for a Security againſt a Popiſh Succeſſor. For which he could not be forgiven. He was immediately Committed, and ſoon after Proſecuted, under a Pretence of having put his own Senſe and Interpretation upon the Teſt, when he took it; and he was upon this trivial Account found Guilty of High-Treaſon; and muſt have then Suffer'd, if he had not made a ſhift to eſcape his Deſtiny at that time, by exchanging Cloaths with his Daughter, and ſo getting privately out of Edinburgh-Caſtle, and flying beyond the Seas; from whence he return'd too ſoon, and brought back his own Deſtruction with him.

Honours and Preferments.

As to Honours and Preferments: On April 7th, Charles Duke of Richmond was Elected a Knight-Companion of the moſt Noble Order of the Garter, in a Chapter held at Whitehall, and was Inſtall'd, with uſual Ceremonies on April 18th. At the Beginning of Eaſter-Term, His Majeſty was pleas'd to conſtitute Sir Francis Pemberton, Kt. Lord-Chief-Juſtice of the Court of King's-Bench; who having received his Commiſſion, and taken the Oaths, was on April 13th brought by the Lord-Chancellor to pay his Duty to His Majeſty; by whom he was moſt graciouſly receiv'd, ſuitable to the Opinion His Majeſty had of his great Integrity, Loyalty, and knowledge of the Laws. On April 19th, His Majeſty having appointed Thomas Dereham, Eſq; to be his Reſident at the Court of the Great-Duke of Tuſcany, was pleas'd to conferr upon him the Honour of Knighthood. On April the 27th, His Majeſty was pleaſed, in conſideration of the faithful Services perform'd by the Right-Honourable Lawrence Hyde, Eſq; Firſt Commiſſioner of His Majeſty's Treaſury, in that and other Employments of eminent Truſts, to create him Viſcount Hyde of Kennelworth, and Baron of Wooton-Baſſet. On May 14th, His Majeſty was graciouſly pleas'd to conferr upon the Right-Honourable Heneage Lord Finch, Lord-Chancellor of England (as a Mark of the great Satisfaction His Majeſty had in the many faithful Services which his Lordſhip had rendred the Crown) the Honour and Dignity of an Earl of this Kingdom, by creating him Earl of Nottingham. In July, His Majeſty being deſirous to place a laſting Mark of his Eſteem upon the Family of Sir George Carteret, Kt. and Bar. late Vice-Chamberlain of His Majeſty's Houſhold, as well for the long and Loyal Services of the ſaid Sir George at Home and Abroad, as for the Merit of his Son Sir Philip Carteret, who loſt his Life in His Majeſty's Service at Sea, was graciouſly pleas'd to create Sir George Carteret, Bar. (Eldeſt Son to the ſaid Sir Philip, and Grand-ſon and Heir of the aforeſaid Sir George) a Baron of England, by the Name of Baron Carteret of Hawnes in the County of Bedford. On Auguſt 3d, His Majeſty conferr'd the Honour of Knighthood upon Chriſtopher Buckley of Surrey, Eſq; Sir Samuel Morland had invented an Engine, which, with the ſtrength of Eight Men, would force the Water in a Continual Stream, at the rate of above Sixty Barrels an Hour, from the River Thames up to the Top of Windſor-Caſtle, and from thence into the Air above Sixty Foot high. This Experiment often repeated, gave ſo much Pleaſure and Admiration to the King, that on Auguſt 14th he ſent for Sir Samuel Morland, and in the Preſence of Prince Rupert, and many of the Nobility, declar'd, That he was highly ſatisfy'd with all the late Experiments and extraordinary Effects of Sir Samuel's New Water-Engine; and therefore, as an Earneſt of his particular Grace and Favour, gave him with his own Royal Hand, and commanded him to wear it on his Breaſt, as a Mark of Honour, during his Life, a fair Medal of Gold, faſten'd to a Green Ribbon, on the one ſide of which Medal was His Majeſty's Effigies, ſet round with Diamonds of a conſiderable Value; and on the other ſide the following Inſcription; CAROLO II^o Magnæ Britanniæ, Franciæ, & Hiberniæ, Regi, Samuel Morlandus Æques Auratus & Baronettus, Magiſter Mechanicorum, In rebus adverſis ſummo vitæ periculo, In Proſperis, fœlici Ingenio frequens adfuit. After which, the Lord-Chamberlain (by His Majeſty's Order) cauſed him to be Sworn Maſter of the Mechanicks, and the Inſcription on the Medal to be Regiſtred in the great Parchment Roll of the Office. On Septemb. 6th, His Majeſty conferr'd the Honour of Knighthood on George Raynsford of Lincolns-Inn, Eſq; Son to the late Lord-Chief-Juſtice Raynsford. 1681.

Election of Sheriffs for London and Middleſex.

Upon Occaſion of the Ignoramus-Juries, the Court-Party concern'd themſelves extremely much in the Election of New Sheriffs: But the Citizens, who thought their Liberties and Lives did depend upon it, Choſe Mr. Pilkington and Mr. Shute, by a very great Majority. The King was reſolv'd to expreſs his Diſpleaſure at it; and therefore, when on Octob. 13th, Sir George Treby Recorder, and theſe Two Sheriffs, were ſent to Invite His Majeſty, in the Name of the City, to do them the Honour of Dining at Guild-Hall on the 28th, His Majeſty gave them this Rebuke; Mr. Recorder, An Invitation from my Lord-Mayor, and the City, is very Acceptable to Me; and to ſhew that it is ſo, notwithſtanding that it is brought by Meſſengers that are ſo Unwelcome to Me as theſe Two Sheriffs are, yet I Accept it. His Majeſty had before condeſcended to a meaner thing, by diſtinguiſhing the Loyal Apprentices of London, and giving a Brace of Bucks for a Dinner at Sadlers-Hall, on Auguſt 4th, and ſending many of his Principal Courtiers to Dine with them, and directing his Son the Duke of Grafton to be one of the Stewards for another Year: All which, was thougth no leſs than to encourage Servants to oppoſe their Maſters.

Honours and Preferments.

On November the 6th, His Majeſty Knighted Major George Vernon of Farnham in the County of Surrey, for the Loyalty and Affection with which he had on all Occaſions promoted the Service of His Majeſty. On Decemb. 30th, His Majeſty was pleas'd to conſtitute his Grace the Duke of Grafton Colonel of his Firſt Regiment of Foot-Guards, in the room of Colonel Ruſſel, who had, with His Majeſty's Leave, reſigned that Command. On March 3d, George Legg, Eſq; Maſter-General of the Ordnance, was Sworn of His Majeſty's Privy-Council. On March 16th, His Majeſty conferr'd the Honour of Knighthood on John Knight, Eſq; one of the Sheriffs of Briſtol, and was pleas'd to declare, that it was in conſideration of his known Loyalty, and conſtant Adherence to the Church of England, and Intereſt of the Crown.

Lady Anne goes to Scotland.

The Lady Anne, in a Dutiful Reſpect to her Father, paid him a Viſit this Summer in Scotland, going by Sea, and attended by 3 of His Majeſty's Yachts, and arriv'd ſafe in Scotland on July 19th. The Prince of Orange came over to make another Viſit to the Engliſh Court, and Landing at Margate, came Poſt to Whitehall on July 23. and having Din'd with Sir Stephen Fox, went that Night to Windſor; and after ſome Diverſions, went back to Harwich on Friday Auguſt 5th, to imbark there for Holland.

Duke of York returns.

The Duke of York return'd from Scotland in one of His Majeſty's Yachts, and Landed at Yarmouth on March 10. and went that Night to Norwich, where his Reception was contriv'd to be with great Demonſtrations of Joy. The Picture of his Royal Highneſs in Guildhall had been Cut and Defaced by ſome unknown Hand: The Lord-Mayor, and Court of Aldermen, to take off the Imputation from the City, by a Solemn Order, dated Jan. 27th, 1681. declared their Abhorrence of this Indignity, which, they ſay, cannot be underſtood otherwiſe, than an effect of Malice againſt the Perſon of his Royal Highneſs; and therefore, out of a juſt and due Regard to the Honour of his Royal Highneſs, and their deep Reſentment of that Inſolent and Villainous Act, they offer a Reward of Five hundred Pounds for finding out the Author of it.

Murther of Thomas Thynne, Eſq;

On Sunday Febr. 12th, between Seven and Eight at Night, a barbarous Aſſaſſination was committed upon the Perſon of Thomas Thynne, Eſq; who paſſing the Pall-Mall in his Coach, was ſet upon by three Men on Horſe-back, one of which diſcharg'd a Muſquetoon into the Coach, and mortally Wounded him, four Bullets entring his Body; and having perform'd this piece of Villainy, made their Eſcape. His Majeſty having been inform'd of what had happen'd, was pleas'd to give immediate Orders for the ſtopping all Perſons that could not give a good Account of themſelves in the ſeveral Ports; and for the making diligent Search here in Town, in order to the Diſcovering the Aſſaſſinates. The Diligence of thoſe that made the Search, was ſo ſucceſsful, that upon ſome Information that was given them, they traced the Murtherers to their ſeveral Lodgings, and there Apprehended them, and brought them on Monday Morning before the Council, (which was Extraordinarily Aſſembled for that Purpoſe:) The Chief of them being call'd in, readily Confeſs'd the whole Fact, ſaid his Name was Vratz, that he was a German, and a Captain of Foot; That he had accompany'd Count Charles-John Coningſmark in his Travels, and came with him into England; That the Friendſhip and Acquaintance he had with him, and the Favours he had received from his Family, had made him take very much to Heart the Affronts which Mr. Thynne had put upon the Count, by his Diſcourſes and otherwiſe, and therefore reſolv'd to take Satisfaction of him; and being inform'd on Sunday, that Mr. Thynne was gone abroad in his Coach, he took Horſe, with a Friend, and Servant of his own, who was provided with a Muſquetoon, being themſelves armed with Swords and Piſtols: That meeting Mr. Thynne's Coach in the Pall-Mall, he rode up to it, and bid the Coach-man Stand, intending to Fight Mr. Thynne; but that his Servant, who was a Polander, not rightly apprehending what he ſaid, diſcharg'd his Muſquetoon upon Mr. Thynne; whereupon they made their Eſcape. Mr. Thynne Died on Monday about Six in the Morning. On Sunday Febr. 19th, about Eight at Night, Count Charles-John Coningſmark was Taken as he landed at Graveſend in a Diſguiſe, intending to imbark on a Veſſel that was going out: He was next Morning brought to Town, and Examin'd before His Majeſty in Council, who referr'd the Matter to the Lord-Chief-Juſtice, and his Lordſhip Committed him Priſoner to Newgate, in order to his Tryal, at which he was with great difficulty Acquitted of the Murther; while the other Actors, Captain Vratz, John Sterne, and George Borotski, were, according to a Sentence paſs'd on them at the Old-Bailey, Executed on March 10th, in the Pall-mall, where they committed that Barbarous Fact; and the Body of George Borotski (whoſe Hand did the Murther) was by His Majeſty's Command to be hung up in Chains.

Count Coningſmark Acquitted.

State of Religion.

In Matters of Religion, great Offence had been taken at a New Expoſition of the Lord's Prayer, the Creed, and the Ten Commandments, Written and Publiſh'd by Mr. Thomas Aſhenden, Rector of Dingley in the County of Northampton, who was thereupon Conven'd, and Cenſur'd by his Ordinary; and on Sunday June 5th, he did Publickly in the Cathedral-Church of Peterborough make this Recantation, at the time of Divine-Service, being enjoin'd thereto by the Right-Reverend William Lord-Biſhop of Peterborough, who was preſent, together with the Reverend Dean Dr. Patrick, ſome of the Prebendaries, and ſeveral Perſons of Quality: 1681.

Recantation of Mr. Thomas Aſhenden.

I Thomas Aſhenden, being deeply ſenſible of the ſoul Diſhonour I have done to our moſt Holy Religion, and the great Scandal I have given, by a late prophane Abuſe of the Lord's-Prayer, the Creed, and the Ten Commandments, which I Wrote, and cauſed to be Publiſh'd; Do here, in the Preſence of God, and of his Miniſters, and of this Congregation, moſt heartily bewail with unfeigned Sorrow, both that Notorious Offence, and alſo all my other Sins which betray'd me unto it: moſt humbly begging Forgiveneſs of God, and of his Church, whoſe heavieſt Cenſures I have juſtly deſerved. And as I earneſtly deſire that none of my Brethren (much leſs our Holy Function, or the Church) may be the worſe thought of by Any, by reaſon of my Miſcarriages; ſo I do faithfully Promiſe, by God's Grace, to endeavour to behave my ſelf hereafter ſo Religiouſly in my Place and Calling, that I may not be any more a Diſcredit to them. In which Reſolution that I may perſiſt, I beg and implore the Aſſiſtance of all your Prayers; And deſire withal, that this my Retractation, and ſincere Profeſſion of Repentance, may be made as Publick as my Crimes have been, that None may be tempted hereafter to do Evil by my Example.

Condition of the Diſſenters.

The Diſſenters were now Odious to the Court, not as Separatiſts from the Church, but as Enemies to the State, and eſpecially to the Duke's Succeſſion. And the Church-men were more Acceptable to the King, not as Members of a True Communion, but as the Promoters of Royal Prerogative, and Supporters of the Intereſt of his Royal Highneſs. Under this unhappy Way of Diſtinguiſhing Whigs and Tories, the former were ſo much ſuſpected by the Government, that it would not truſt them upon Common Juries, becauſe of the late Returns of Ignoramus, which they thought chiefly owing to that Party. Upon this Account, a very ſtrange Act of Partiality happened at the Seſſions at Hicks-Hall, on Auguſt 26th, as will appear by this Account, though given by Authority, to palliate that Matter: "Whereas a Panel "was Return'd by the Sheriff, of the Number of "Fifty four Perſons, to ſerve of the Grand-Jury "for this County, very few of which, if any, "were known to the Juſtices of Peace on the "Bench, or the High-Conſtables of the Hundreds, "which induced the Juſtices to enquire after the "Perſons ſo Returned, and moſt of them were "found to be Diſſenters, who frequented Conventicles, and ſeldom or never came to Church: "Whereupon the Juſtices thought fit, according to the Power given to them by the Statute of "3 Hen. VIII. to Command the Sheriff there preſent to put out ſome of the Panel, and put in "others in their ſtead; which the Sheriff refuſing "at three ſeveral Commands to do, the Juſtices, "that the Service of the County might not be "obſtructed, did take Fifteen of thoſe Return'd by "the Sheriff, and Swore them to ſerve for the "Grand-Jury: But to the intent they might make "the beſt diſcovery they could of the ſaid Perſons "ſo Sworn, the Court thought fit to tender them "the Oaths of Allegiance and Supremacy, which "they all took.

Caſe of a Grand-Jury.

His Majeſty took all Occaſions to expreſs his Satisfaction in the Loyalty of thoſe Church-men who came with their Addreſſes, Abhorring the Aſſociation, and declaring for the Unalterable Right of Succeſſion; as particularly Dr. Gower, Maſter of St. John's College, and Vice-Chancellor of Cambridge, waited on His Majeſty at New-Market, on Septemb. 18th, and made a fine Speech in the Name of the Univerſity, of which this was the moſt-Addreſſe of Abhorrence.

1681. moſt-pleaſing part: "We will ſtill believe and "maintain, That our Kings derive not their "Titles from the People, but from God; That "to Him only they are Accountable: That it "belongs not to Subjects, either to Create or "Cenſure, but to Honour and Obey their Sove-"reign, who comes to be ſo, by a Fundamental "Hereditary Right of Succeſſion, which no Reli-"gion, no Law, no Fault or Forfeiture can alter "or diminiſh," &c. To which His Majeſty was pleas'd to Anſwer; That he was fully ſatisfy'd of the Loyalty of the Univerſity, and that he did not at all doubt but they would always Act according to what they there Declared. His Majeſty likewiſe told them, That he would conſtantly Own and Defend the Church of England as Eſtabliſh'd by Law: This he bid them be aſſured of, for he would be as good as his Word, whatever Repreſentation either had or ſhould be made of him to the contrary. Being further pleas'd to add, That there was no other Church in the World that Taught and Practis'd Loyalty ſo Conſcientiouſly as that did.

French Proteſtants reliev'd.

Upon the Perſecution of the Proteſtants in France, His Majeſty had a good Opportunity of Pleaſing his own Proteſtant Subjects, by Receiving and Encouraging thoſe Diſtreſſed Sufferers and Refugees; and therefore, on Auguſt 28th, His Majeſty was pleas'd in Council to Declare, That he held himſelf obliged, in Honour and Conſcience, to Comfort and Support all ſuch Afflicted Proteſtants, who by reaſon of the Rigours and Severities uſed toward them, upon account of their Religion, ſhould be forced to quit their Native Country, and ſhould deſire to ſhelter themſelves under His Majeſty's Royal Protection, for the Preſervation and free Exerciſe of their Religion. And in order hereunto, His Majeſty was pleas'd further to Declare, That He will grant unto every ſuch Diſtreſſed Proteſtant who ſhall come hither for Refuge, and reſide here, his Letters of Denization, under the Great-Seal, without any Charge whatſoever; and will likewiſe recommend it to his Parliament, at their next Meeting, to Paſs an Act for the General Naturalization of all ſuch Proteſtants as ſhall come over, as aforeſaid, &c. When a Suſpicion was raiſed, That many of theſe Exiles from France, pretending to be Proteſtants, were really French Papiſts, and therefore Dangerous Enemies in Diſguiſe; His Majeſty was pleas'd in Council to Order, October the 19th, that this following Advertiſement ſhould be publiſhed:

WHereas ſeveral ſcandalous Reports are daily ſpread abroad, That a great part of thoſe who call themſelves Proteſtants, and are lately come from France, for Protection, into this Kingdom, are Papiſts; whereby many Well-diſpos'd People are diſcouraged from Contributing to the Relief of thoſe poor Proteſtants, who have forſaken their Livelihoods and Country, to preſerve a good Conſcience; Theſe are to give Notice, That all Care imaginable is taken by the Miniſters of the French Congregations, both at the Savoy, and in London, that according to His Majeſty's Gracious Declaration, made in Council, on July 28*th*, 1681. None be admitted into either of their Congregations, or receive any Benefit of the ſaid Collections, but ſuch as bring very good and authentick Teſtimonials of their being of the Proteſtant Religion, and of their receiving of the Holy Sacrament. And if any Perſon can Detect any of thoſe who pretend to be fled hither for Religion, to be really Papiſts; It is deſired that he give Information thereof to the Lord-Biſhop of London, or to the Miniſters of the ſaid French Congregations.

Proſecution of Diſſenters.

But while this Care was taken of Foreign Proteſtants, there was a vigorous Proſecution of the Proteſtant Diſſenters here at Home; which was generally thought a piece of Court-Artifice, to play the Church of England againſt the Diſſenters, and inrage the Diſſenters againſt the Church of England; that they might not Unite and ſee their Common Danger, but rather, by Deſtroying one another, might make room for a third Party, that lay behind the Curtain and watch't an Opportunity of the Duke's Succeſſion. The King, whoſe Principle and Practice (even againſt the Law) had been to Indulge the Diſſenters, was now drawn-in to be very ſolicitous for the Rigorous Proſecution of them; the Juſtices of Middleſex were very forward to obey the Inſtructions of the Court, by putting the Laws in Execution againſt them, and contriv'd to have His Majeſty's expreſs Command for it: For at the Beginning of December they humbly repreſented to His Majeſty, "That an Intimation of his Pleaſure "was neceſſary at this time, as to the putting "the Laws in Execution againſt Conventicles; in "regard that when it was lately given them in "Charge at the Council-Board, to put the Laws "in Execution againſt Popiſh Recuſants, there was "no mention made of Suppreſſing Conventicles, "and therefore it was pretended, that they were "not to be diſturb'd or medled with:" His Majeſty was pleas'd to take this Occaſion to Command the Lord-Mayor and Aldermen, and the ſaid Juſtices of the Peace, "To uſe their utmoſt "Endeavours to Suppreſs all Conventicles, and "Unlawful Meetings, upon pretence of Religious "Worſhip: His Majeſty Declaring, It is his "expreſs Pleaſure, That the Laws be effectually "put in Execution againſt them, both in City "and Country.

Act of 35 Eliz. turn'd upon Proteſtant Diſſenters.

In theſe Proceedings, it was thought the greater Hardſhip, that the Act of 35 Eliz. deſign'd againſt Popiſh Recuſants, which as ſoon as turn'd againſt Proteſtant Diſſenters, had a Bill of Repeal brought in the laſt Weſtminſter Parliament, was now rigorouſly executed upon all manner of Nonconformiſts; which at this time gave a general Diſcontent, and occaſion'd ſome Reflections on the King that were very rude and violent, as particularly on Novemb. 16th, Mr. Frederick Harvey was by Warrant of the Lords of His Majeſty's Privy-Council, Committed Priſoner to Newgate, for High-Treaſon, he having ſpoken divers Treaſonable and Dangerous Words againſt His Majeſty and the Government, viz. That His Majeſty's Conſenting to the Tyrannical Proceedings of Convicting Diſſenters, he did not queſtion but would make Him (meaning the King's Majeſty) the Head ſhorter; and that he did admire the City did not Secure him the laſt Lord-Mayor's-Day, when they had him there.

Partiality to Papiſts.

That which made the Diſſenters the more Pitied, was, that very great Partiality was ſhown in Protecting the Papiſts from thoſe Penal Laws, which had their Edge altogether turn'd upon the Proteſtant Diſſenters. This Partiality was ſo Notorious, that at laſt a Publick Complaint was made againſt the Deputy-Clerk of the Peace of the County of Wilts, for favouring certain Papiſts in that County, who were Order'd to be Proſecuted by the Seſſions, and yet were afterwards by him Diſmiſs'd with Indemnity. Upon this formal Complaint, no leſs could be done than to bring up the ſaid Offender, by one of His Majeſty's Meſſengers, to the Council-Board, where (it is ſaid) he receiv'd a ſevere Reprimand; and that it was likewiſe recommended to the Juſtices of the Peace for that County, at their next Quarter-Seſſions, to Proceed againſt him for ſuch Miſdemeanors as he ſhould be Charged with.

Inſolence of the Papiſts.

This Countenance of the Court, made the Papiſts not only Safe, but extremely Inſolent. On March 3d, Information was given in Council, "That on the 2d of February laſt, the Officers "of the High-Sheriff of Lancaſhire, having "Diſtrain'd the Cattle and other Goods of divers 1681. " Convicted Popiſh Recuſants, living at Altcarr " near Ormeskerke in that County, for their For- " feitures, were, in their return with the ſaid " Goods, Riotouſly Aſſaulted in the High-way by " the ſaid Popiſh Recuſants, and their Abettors; " and the Goods not only reſcued from them, but " they beaten and wounded in ſuch a manner, " that the Recovery of ſome of them was much " doubted." Thereupon His Majeſty was pleas'd to Order the Judges that go that Circuit, to cauſe ſuch of the ſaid Offenders as are already in Cuſtody, to be Proceeded againſt for the ſame, according to the utmoſt Severity of the Law, and to endeavour the Apprehending of all others concern'd therein, by Rewarding the Diſcoverers of them, that ſo they may receive an Exemplary Puniſhment.

1682. The Duke of Monmouth was now to be publickly Diſgrac'd, of whom this Character is given by a late Author: " This Gentleman ſtood poſ- " ſeſs'd of all the Qualities requiſite to gain him " the Love of the People, and ſtir up the Jealouſie " of the Duke of York. King Charles had heap'd " Honours upon him, and nothing pleas'd him ſo " much as to ſee him Great. He had been ſent " to Scotland in the Year 1679, to ſuppreſs an " Inſurrection which the Severity of Lauderdale's " Adminiſtration had occaſion'd; where his Le- " nity towards a People made by Oppreſſion Mad, " gain'd him the Ill-will of a Predominant Party " at Court. The Zeal he ſhew'd ſome time after " in the Proſecution of the Popiſh Plot, and his " Friendſhips with ſome that were proteſs'd Ene- " mies to the Duke, concurr'd to his Fall: yet " King Charles ſtill continu'd under-hand the ſame " Tenderneſs for him, though he was declar'd in " publick to be in Diſgrace. The Duke's Faction " at Home, and a Foreign Intereſt Abroad, were " too powerful for King Charles to grapple with, " even though the Fortune of a Favourite Son " was at Stake. The more he was depreſs'd by " the Envy of his Uncle, the higher he roſe in the " Affections of the People; till the breaking out " of what was call'd the Proteſtant Plot, over- " whelm'd not only him, but a whole Party with " him.

Duke of Monmouth in Diſgrace.

The firſt Mark of the King's new Anger to the Duke of Monmouth, was, to ſignifie his Pleaſure to the Univerſity of Cambridge, that they ſhould Chuſe another Chancellor in the Place of the Duke of Monmouth: With which Royal Will and Pleaſure the Univerſity comply'd, and made Choice of his Grace the Duke of Albemarle to be their Chancellor; and they afterwards put a greater Mark of Ignominy upon the Duke of Monmouth, by taking down his Picture that was hanging in their Publick Schools, and burning it in a very eager and ridiculous manner. This Humour of the Univerſity of Cambridge, in Rejecting and Affronting their Chancellor the Duke of Monmouth, was plainly owing as a Compliment to the Duke of York, who being lately return'd from Scotland, Dr. Cegar the Vice-Chancellor waited on him at New-Market, at the beginning of April, and in the Name of himſelf and the Univerſity made a ſhort Speech in Latin, " To Congratulate his " Royal Highneſs's Return into England, and to " acknowledge, that by his Royal Highneſs's " good Conduct, the Government of Scotland, " both in Church and State, is ſettled in Peace, " and therefore they would by no means doubt, " but that under His Majeſty, his Royal High- " neſs's Preſence would have a great Influence in " effecting the ſame here in England; by which " means, All Great Britain being join'd in One, the " Church of England, and Rights of the Crown, " may for ever Flouriſh." To which his Royal Highneſs was pleas'd to Anſwer to this effect:

Burnt in Effigie, at Cambridge.

In Complement to the Duke of York.

That he gave the Univerſity his Thanks, for their kind Expreſſions: That he was very glad of this, and all other Occaſions to declare, That he would ever Stand by the Church of England, as now Eſtabliſh'd, and Countenance the Members of it, as having ſeen by Experience, that they are the beſt Supporters of the Crown; and that he would uſe his Endeavours and Intereſt for the Preſervation of the King's Perſon, and the Government in the State, and the Church of England, as now Eſtabliſh'd by Law. The Duke, againſt his own Genius, was to purſue the Arts of Popularity; and therefore, on April 20th, he was pleas'd to honour with his Preſence the Artillery-Company, at their Annual Feaſt in Merchant-Taylors-Hall, where he retir'd after Dinner into another Room, and gave Acceſs to a great Number of Citizens, who were taught to Croud in, for the honour of Kiſſing his Hand. He had ſoon after an Occaſion of going once more to Scotland, purpoſing to make but a very ſhort Stay. So on May 3d he departed from Windſor, and went down in one of His Majeſty's Yachts to imbark on the Gloceſter, Commanded by Sir John Berry, and Attended by the Dartmouth, the Ruby, and the Happy Return. But on Friday May 5th, the Gloceſter Frigat ran upon the Sand call'd the Lemon and Ore, about 16 Leagues from the Mouth of Humber, and there was loſt: His Royal Highneſs went off in a Boat, and took as many Perſons of Quality with him as the Boat could well bear. Other Boats were ſent to take out the Men from the ſinking Ship, but ſhe ſunk ſo faſt, that ſeveral of the Paſſengers and Sea-men periſhed with her, among whom were the Earl of Roxborough, the Lord O-Brian, the Laird Hopton, Sir Joſeph Duglas, and Mr. Hyde Brother-in-Law to the Duke, with ſeveral of the Duke's Servants, and above an Hundred and thirty Seamen were miſerably loſt, the Commander Sir John Berry hardly eſcaping by a Rope over the Stern, into Capt. Wyborne's Boat; who being afterwards Examin'd before the Council, His Majeſty declared himſelf ſatisfy'd, that the ſaid Sir John was no way faulty in the Loſs of the Gloceſter, and therefore was pleas'd to give him the Command of the Henrietta a Third Rate Frigat, and of the Squadron deſign'd for the Coaſt of Ireland, in the ſame manner as was at firſt intended. The Duke got ſafe to Scotland on May 7th; and with great Expedition came back by Sea to London, in Twenty Days.

1682.

Duke of York goes again to Scotland.

Danger a Sea.

The Court was very ſolicitous for the Choice of New Sheriffs for London and Middleſex, and earneſtly recommended Mr. North and Mr. Box; but the Hearts of the Citizens were for Mr. Papillon and Mr. Dubois. This occaſion'd a very Riotous Controverſie; the Lord-Mayor complying with the Court, and the Old Sheriffs reſolving to aſſert the Rights of the City. Hence, on the Day of Election, June 24th, a great Noiſe and Clamour was made in Guild-Hall, where the Whig Party (as they were call'd) being much the more Numerous, the Lord-Mayor adjourn'd the Common-Hall till Tueſday Morning: But the Two Sheriffs thinking that Ajournment to be an Arbitrary Act for Interrupting a Regular Election, went on with the Poll. Upon which Mr. Pilkington and Mr. Shute, the two Sheriffs, were by Order of Privy-Council taken into Cuſtody by a Serjeant at Arms, and Committed Priſoners to the Tower, by a Warrant Sign'd by Twenty four Privy-Councellors, who made a further Order, " That Mr. Attorney- " General ſhould forthwith Exhibit an Informa- " tion in the King's-Bench againſt Thomas Pil- " kington and Samuel Shute, Eſqrs; Sheriffs of " London, and Henry Corniſh, Eſq; one of the Al- " dermen, and ſuch Others as, upon Examination, " ſhould be found to have been Promoters and " Encouragers of the late Enormous Riot, and that " he Contention for New Sheriffs.

1682. " he do Proceed againſt them according to the " utmoſt Severity of the Law.

On Friday June 30th, the Impriſon'd Sheriffs were, upon a Writ of Habeas Corpus, brought by the Lieutenant of the Tower to the King's-Bench-Bar; where, after having Pleaded Not Guilty, they were admitted to Bail. The Sheriffs being thus at liberty, met at a Common-Hall on July the 1ſt, when the Lord-Mayor being Sick, ſent Order by the Recorder to Adjourn the Hall to the 11th following: but the Sheriffs again denying the Validity of ſuch Adjournment, proceeded in the Election, and Declared their Choice of Papillon and Dubois. On Friday July 7th the Mayor and his Party met again, and heard Lawyers Argue the Regularity of the late Adjournments: But coming to no Concluſion, the Court was again Adjourn'd to the 14th of July; on which Day an Order of Council was produced, whereby His Majeſty thought fit, for the better keeping of the Peace of the City, to Direct and Require the Lord-Mayor to Maintain and Preſerve Intire the Ancient Cuſtoms of the City; and for the better doing thereof, to take effectual Order, That at the Common-Council to be held on July 14th, all Proceedings be Begun A-new, and Carry'd on in the uſual manner, as they ought to have been on the 24th of June laſt. But the manner of Proceeding, was thought to be by no means uſual: For Dudley North, Eſq; was only put up to be Confirm'd, as being already duely Elected by my Lord-Mayor; and while the Sheriffs were Polling in another Place, his Lordſhip came down to the Huſtings, and Declared the Election, by Majority of Voices, to fall upon Mr. Box: But he wiſely paid his Fine, and Peter Rich, Eſq; was Choſen in his Place, and he and Mr. North were Sworn before the Lord-Mayor in the Huſtings.

Court very Angry at the City.

This great Struggle, put the Court upon Conſidering, and in a manner Reſolving to take away the Election of Sheriffs out of the Power of the City; and no other Expedient could be found, but by taking away their Charter; which if once effected, would not only give the Court the Advantage of making a Common-Hall, but open a Gap to their making a Houſe of Commons too: For near Five Parts in Six of the Houſe of Commons were Burgeſſes, and Barons of the Cinque-Ports, who would not dare to Conteſt their Charters, if the City of London could not hold her own by Law.

Quo Warranto.

So that in Hilary-Term this Year a Quo Warrarnto was brought againſt the City, for two heinous Crimes, no worſe than theſe two: " 1ſt. That they had " made an Addreſs to the King, for the Parliament " to Sit for Redreſs of Grievances. 2dly. That " the City had Raiſed Money towards Repairing " Cheapſide-Conduit, Ruin'd by the Fire of London." The City Pleaded their Right. The Attorney-General Reply'd. Upon which there was a Demurrer; and here the Matter reſted for a time: the Novelty of theſe Pretenſions cauſing a great Amuſement in the Generality of the City and Nation, who well knew whereto this tended, but could hardly imagine how it would end. After a long Suſpence, two Arguments only were permitted on either ſide; one in Hilary-Term, 1682. and the other in Eaſter-Term following: And ſo Judgment againſt the City.

Judgment was given, in Trinity-Term next after, againſt the City. This Judgment was obſerv'd to be very ſtrange and unwarrantable, for it was without any Reaſon given, and by two Judges only, whereof the one was Sir Francis Wythens, (who had Heard but one Argument, and who afterwards, in the abſence of Sir Edward Herbert, deliver'd that for Sir Edward's Opinion, which Sir Edward himſelf, when preſent, diſown'd,) and the other was Sir Thomas Jones: however, to confirm their own Judgment with better Authority than their own, theſe two Judges declar'd upon the Bench, that their Brother Raymond was of the ſame Opinion with them, and that ſo was the Lord-Chief-Juſtice Sanders, though he indeed was paſt his Senſes, and had only Underſtanding enough left to expoſtulate with them, why they would trouble him, when he had loſt his Memory? 1682.

Many other Quo Warranto's.

While the City of London lay under this Awe and Menace of the Court, many other Quo Warranto's were iſſued out againſt other inferior Places; and ſeveral of them were ſo terrify'd, that they came and reſign'd their Charters, and accepted of New Patents, with Regulation at the Pleaſure of the Court. Upon which way of Proceeding, theſe Remarks of a late Writer are not improper:

Reflection on them.

" The Charters of the City of London, and other " Corporations, ſtood in the way of an Abſolute " Government; and it was reſolved to break " through this Barrier. In order to which, " Quo Warranto's were brought againſt them; and " in proceſs of time, they were either Surrendred by the Corporations themſelves, or Vacated in Weſtminſter-Hall by a Sett of Judges " pick'd out for that purpoſe. And it was reſolv'd thereby to make one of the Eſtates of " Parliament depend intirely upon the Will " and Nomination of the Prince. While theſe " Quo Warranto's were going on, whole Peals of " Anathema's were rung out againſt thoſe Patriots " that had ſtood up for the Liberties of their " Country in the preceding Parliaments: And it " was look'd upon as a Crime againſt the State, " for Any One to regret the approaching Fate of " his Country; even the Holy Scriptures themſelves were made a Stale for Arbitrary Power; " and the Laws which were given to the Jews, as " they were a Political State, were now brought " in, upon every occaſion, to Countenance the " Deſigns of the Court: As if thoſe Laws which " were intended only to ſupport the Political " Government of the Jews, were the real Foundation of the Chriſtian Religion; or, that the " Conſtitution of England was founded upon the " Jewiſh Doctrine. All which was not much for " the Honour of thoſe Gentlemen that broach'd " that Notion. This was a time never to be " forgot, when to Wiſh well to our Country, was " a Crime; and when Heaven it ſelf was rank'd " upon our Enemies ſide, by ſome that pretended " to Expound its Will. In ſome Places, new-" kind of Funeral Harangues came in Faſhion: " Our Laws, our Liberties, our Parliaments, our " Native Rights, were to be Buried: but inſtead " of dropping a Tear at their Funeral, ſulſom " Panegyricks were made upon their Murtherers, " and Curſes denounc'd againſt thoſe that would " have retriev'd them from Deſtruction.

Death of Great Men.

This Year was the more remarkable, for the Death of Three very Great Men. The Duke of Lauderdale Died Auguſt 24th, generally Fear'd in Scotland, and as univerſally Hated in England; a Man of Parts and Learning, not of Morals, nor reputed Integrity; of an Impetuous Spirit, a great Promoter of Arbitrary Power, and indeed the Underminer of Epiſcopacy in Scotland, by laying it on a New Foundation, the Pleaſure of the King. His Highneſs Rupert Prince Palatine of the Rhine, Duke of Cumberland, &c. Died at his Houſe in Spring-Garden, Novemb. 29th, in the Sixty-third Year of his Age, after ſome Days Sickneſs of a Pleuriſie and Fever; his Body, on Decemb. 6th, was privately Interred among others of the Royal Family in a Vault on the South-ſide of King Henry VIIth's Chapel: A Perſon of great Forwardneſs and Fire in his Youth, and afterwards of Good-temper and Sedateneſs: He had of late Years proved a Faithful Councellor to the King, and a great Patriot to the Engliſh Liberty; and therefore was towards his Latter-end neglected by the Court to that degree, that nothing paſs'd between

1682. between him and his Great Relations, but bare Civilities in the common Forms. On Decemb. 18th, in the Afternoon, the Right-Honourable Heneage Earl of Nottingham, Lord-Chancellor of England, Died at his Houſe in Queen-ſtreet, in the Sixty-firſt Year of his Age, after having ſerv'd His Majeſty Nine Years in that high Station with great Honour and Veracity.

Honours and Preferments.

There was a great Diſpoſal of Honours and Preferments: In the beginning of April, His Majeſty was pleas'd, upon the Death of the Lord Fretchevil, to give the Government of the City and Garriſon of York upon Sir John Beresly, Bar. And ſoon after, on the Death of Nicholas Johnſon, Eſq; His Majeſty conferr'd the Office of Pay-Maſter of his Forces upon Charles Fox, Eſq; On Aug. 22d, His Majeſty conferr'd the Honour of Knighthood on Mr. Cornwal Bradſhaw, as being well ſatisfy'd of his Loyalty, and of his Care and Induſtry in the Management of his Revenue of Hearth-Money, of which he was one of the Managers.

The Earl of Hallifax had at firſt gone along with the Duke of Monmouth, the Earl of Shaftſbury, &c. but had been lately brought-over to the Intereſt of the Duke of York; for which reaſon, about the middle of Auguſt, His Majeſty was pleas'd to conferr upon him the Honour and Dignity of a Marqueſs of this Kingdom, by creating him Marqueſs of Hallifax, in conſideration of the eminent and faithful Services which he had rendred His Majeſty and the Crown; and ſoon after, His Majeſty conferr'd upon him the Office of Lord-Privy-Seal. On Septemb. 20th, the Earl of Sunderland was by His Majeſty's Command readmitted a Privy-Councellor, and again took his Place at the Board. On Septemb. 25th, the Duke of Hamilton was Elected a Knight-Companion of the Garter, in a Chapter held at Whitehall. Towards the end of November, His Majeſty was pleas'd to conferr upon Sir John Bennet, Knight of the Bath, the Dignity of a Baron of this Kingdom, under the Stile and Title of John Lord Oſſulſton. And preſently after, His Majeſty was pleas'd to create James Duke of Ormond in Ireland, a Duke of this Kingdom, by the ſame Name and Title: And the Lord-Marqueſs of Worceſter, a Duke of this Kingdom, by the Name and Title of Duke of Beauford: And the Lord Norris, an Earl, by the Name and Title of Earl of Abingdon. And with a greater flood of Diſtinguiſhing Favours, cheap and grateful, at the beginning of December, His Majeſty was pleas'd to grant the Title and Dignity of an Earl of this Kingdom, to Edward Viſcount Cambden, by the Name and Stile of Earl of Gainsborough: And to Conyers Lord Darcy, by the Name and Stile of Earl of Holderneſs: And to Thomas Lord Windſor, Governor of His Majeſty's Town and Garriſon of Kingſton upon Hull, by the Name and Stile of Earl of Plymouth: As alſo, the Title and Dignity of a Viſcount of this Kingdom, to Horatio Lord Townſend, by the Name and Stile of Viſcount Townſend of Raynham. The Titles and Dignities of a Baron and a Viſcount, to Sir Thomas Thynne, Bar. by the Name and Stile of Baron Thynne of Warmiſter, and Viſcount Weymouth. The Title and Dignity of a Baron, to Colonel George Legg, of His Majeſty's Privy-Council, and Maſter-General of the Ordnance, by the Name and Stile of Baron of Dartmouth. The ſame Title and Dignity of a Baron, to William Lord Allington, Conſtable of His Majeſty's Tower of London, by the Name and Stile of Baron of Wcymondley. His Majeſty at the ſame time created the Honourable Colonel Churchill, John Lord Churchill of Aymouth in Scotland. And His Majeſty obſerving the extraordinary Inclination with which his Grace the Duke of Grafton had apply'd himſelf to Sea-Affairs, and the ſucceſsful Progreſs he had made therein, to encourage this Diſpoſition in him, was graciouſly pleas'd to conferr upon him the Office of Vice-Admiral of England, vacant by the Death of his Highneſs Prince Rupert; whoſe Offices of Conſtable and Governor of the Caſtle and Foreſt of Windſor, and Lord-Lieutenant of the Counties of Berks and Surrey, His Majeſty conferr'd upon Henry Earl of Arundel, Son and Heir to his Grace the Duke of Norfolk, Earl-Marſhal of England. After the Death of the Earl of Nottingham, His Majeſty was pleas'd, on Wedneſday Decemb. 20th, to commit the Cuſtody of the Great-Seal to the Right Honourable Sir Francis North, Lord-Chief-Juſtice of the Common-Pleas, with the Title of Lord-Keeper of the Great-Seal of England; and on Decemb. 22d, his Lordſhip was Sworn at the Council-Board, and took his Place as Lord-Keeper. On the ſame Day, the Lord-Chief-Juſtice Pemberton was Sworn of His Majeſty's moſt Honourable Privy-Council; and at the beginning of the next Term, was removed from the King's-Bench, to be Chief-Juſtice of the Common-Pleas. Upon which His Majeſty was pleas'd to conferr the Place of Lord-Chief-Juſtice of the King's-Bench upon Sir Edmund Sanders. On Jan. 1ſt, Humphry Mackworth and Thomas Montgomery, Eſqrs; Treaſurers of the Middle-Temple, with ſome Others of that Society, waited on His Majeſty, to Wiſh him a happy New-Year, and in a very Loyal Speech expreſs'd their Unanimous Reſolutions to Adhere to their former Addreſſes: Which His Majeſty was pleas'd to accept very graciouſly. They then paid the like Reſpect to the Duke, and were very kindly receiv'd by his Royal Highneſs: For which Compliments, His Majeſty conferr'd the Honour of Knighthood upon Humphry Mackworth, Eſq; as a Mark of his Royal Favour to the Loyal Society of the Middle-Temple. On Jan. 28th, the Earl of Conway (with whoſe Services His Majeſty was pleas'd to declare himſelf very well ſatisfy'd) reſign'd his Place of one of His Majeſty's Principal-Secretaries of State: And His Majeſty was pleas'd to conferr the ſame upon the Right-Honourable the Earl of Sunderland, who was Sworn in Council on the 31ſt of January. His Majeſty was pleas'd, on Febr. 11th, to conferr the Honour of Knighthood upon the Honourable Dudley North, Eſq; one of the preſent Sheriffs for the City of London and County of Middleſex. On Febr. 28th, the Right-Honourable Theophilus Earl of Huntingdon, and Henry Earl of Peterborough, were Sworn of His Majeſty's moſt Honourable Privy-Council. About the middle of March, His Majeſty was pleas'd, upon the Death of Sir Edward Carteret, to conferr the Place of Uſher of the Black-Rod upon Thomas Duppa, Eſq; Eldeſt Gentleman-Uſher to His Majeſty. And Henry Bulſtrode, Eſq; was Sworn into the vacant Place of one of His Majeſty's Gentlemen-Uſhers Daily Waiters.

State of Religion.

In Matters of Religion, His Majeſty was pleas'd to aſſert his Supremacy in the Right of Appointing Publick Faſts and Thankſgivings, upon this frivolous Occaſion: The Party moſt Zealous in Oppoſing Popery and the Duke's Succeſſion, to ſhow their Strength, and to improve it, had Appointed a Publick Meeting, with a Sermon, and a Dinner, as uſual in many other Companies and Societies of Men; and they Invited their Gueſts, upon a Ticket in this Form: It having pleaſed Almighty God, by His Wonderful Providence, to Deliver and Protect His Majeſty's Perſon, the Proteſtant Religion, and Engliſh Liberties (hitherto) from the Helliſh and frequent Attempts of their Enemies (the Papiſts; ) In Teſtimony of Thankfulneſs herein, and for the Preſerving and Improving Mutual Love and Charity, among ſuch as are ſenſible thereof, You are Deſired to Meet many of the Loyal Proteſtant Nobility, Gentry, Clergy, and Citizens, on Friday the 21ſt Day of this Inſtant April, 1682. at Ten of the Clock, at St. Michael's Church in Cornhil, there to hear a Sermon, and from Feaſt, and Sermon.

1682. from thence to go to Haberdashers-Hall to Dinner; And to bring this Ticket with you. This Voluntary Combination, though innocent enough in it self, was represented to the Court as Dangerous in the Consequence of it: And therefore this Order was made in Council, April the 19th:

Order of Council. "WHereas the Appointing of Publick Fasts and Thanksgivings, is Matter of State, and belongs only to His Majesty, by his Prerogative; And His Majesty being informed, That in the City of London, Invitations have been made of great and unusual Numbers, by Printed Tickets, one of which is hereunto annex'd; His Majesty looks upon the same as an Insolent Attempt, in manifest Derogation of his Right, and of Dangerous Consequence: The Matter of the said Invitation being of a Publick Nature, and the Manner of Carrying it on tending to Sedition, and raising Distinctions and Confederacies amongst his Subjects, against the known Laws and Peace of the Kingdom, His Majesty therefore, by the Advice of his Council, hath thought fit, and doth hereby strictly Charge and Command the Lord-Mayor and Aldermen of London, as they will Answer the contrary at their Peril, to take immediate and effectual Care to Prevent and Hinder the said Meeting, as an Unlawful Assembly: And all Sheriffs, Constables, and other His Majesty's Officers in the said City, are hereby Commanded to be Aiding and Assisting therein.

While the Duke of York was in Scotland, he found his greatest Interest to be among the Highest of the Episcopal Party: For which reason he confin'd his Favours to them, and encourag'd them to be very severe upon the Presbyterians. Upon his Return into England, he thought proper to have Letters Testimonials from the Scotch Bishops, Directed to his Grace the Lord Arch-Bishop of Canterbury; which were immediately sent after him, and toward the end of April were thus publish'd by Authority.

EDENBURGH, March 9th, 1682.

May it Please Your Grace;

The Duke of York brings Testimonials from the Scotch Bishops. "HIS Royal Highness having parted from hence on Monday last, being Call'd by the King to Attend His Majesty at New-Market; We should prove very defective in Duty and Gratitude, if upon this Occasion we should forget to ackowledge to your Grace, how much this poor Church, and our Order, do owe to his Princely Care and Goodness, that His Majesty, and the Worthy Bishops of England, may from you receive the just Accounts thereof.

"Since his Royal Highness's coming to this Kingdom, we find our Case much changed to the better, and our Church and Order (which through the Cunning and Power of their Adversaries were exposed to extreme Hazard and Contempt) sensibly Relieved and Rescued; which, next to the Watchful Providence of God, (that mercifully superintends his Church) we can ascribe to nothing so much, as to his Royal Highness's gracious Owning and vigilant Protection of us.

"Upon all Occasions, he gives fresh Instances of his eminent Zeal against the most unreasonable Schism, which by Renting, threatens the Subversion of our Church and Religion, and concerns himself as a Patron to us, in all our Publick and even Personal Interests; so that all Men take Notice of his signal Kindness to us, and observe, that he looks upon the Enemies of the Church, as Adversaries to the Monarchy it self: Nor did we ever propose or offer to his Royal Highness any Rational Expedient, 1682. which might conduce for the Relief or Security of the Church, which he did not readily Embrace and Effectuate.

"The Peace and Tranquillity of this Kingdom, is the Effect of his prudent and steddy Conduct of Affairs; and the Humours of our wicked Fanaticks are much restrained from dangerous Eruptions, upon their apprehensions of his Vigilance and Justice: For they dread nothing so much, as to see him upon the Head of His Majesty's Councels and Forces against them.

"We hope your Grace will make our Dutiful Acknowledgment to his Royal Highness, for all his Princely Favours to us, and give him the most firm Assurance of our most sincere Endeavours to serve him, and of our most fervent Prayers for his Temporal and Eternal Happiness, as the bounden Duty of,

May it Please Your Grace,

Your Grace's most Humble and Faithful Servants,

Arth. Glascuens,

Insolence and Hypocrisie of Papists. Under the Duke's Protection, many of the Roman Catholicks were Publickly Encourag'd and Preferr'd; and some others of them acted a more secret Part, in assuming the Name of Protestants, and under that Disguise thrusting themselves into Places and Employments: Among these, one at least crept into a Cure of Souls, one John Duffey a Scotch-man, who obtained the Rectory of Raile in Essex, and who, upon Information of his Character given to the Council-Board, was sent for into Custody; but on the 5th of December he made his Escape from one of His Majesty's Messengers. Upon which, it was the next Day Order'd by His Majesty in Council, "That His Majesty's Mes-"sengers should make strict and diligent Search "after him, and that all the Ports should be "stopt, in order to his being Apprehended; and "Publick Notice was given of him, to the Intent, "That any Person that could Discover him, "might cause him to be Secured, and carry'd "before the next Justice of the Peace, in order to "his being brought before the Board: He being describ'd to be a Tall Man, of a Fair Complexion, Full Eye, about Fifty Years of Age, &c. He had been Taken on the Sunday before, coming out of the House of a Foreign Ambassador at the time of Mass, and being carry'd before a Magistrate, the Oaths of Allegiance and Supremacy were tendred him; which he refusing, was Committed to the Custody of that Messenger from whom he made his Escape, and was flying beyond-Sea: but on Thursday Decemb. 7. he was retaken at Rochester, and brought the next Morning before the Council; where he again refusing to take the Oaths, he was, by Order of the Board, sent to the Lord-Chief-Justice of the King's-Bench, to be Proceeded against according to Law.

Zeal against Popery, made Criminal. The Zeal against Popery, was now look'd upon to be only a Faction; and those who were Eminent in it, were to be distinguish'd as Seditious Men, and Enemies to the King, and his Government. Upon this Rule of State, the Popular Rejoycings on the Fifth of November were to be prevented and suppress'd. But when it was impossible to restrain the Spirit of the People, the Court resolv'd to Punish it, for a Terror to others; and therefore at the Sessions held in the beginning of December, at the Old-Bailey, several Apprentices and Young Persons were Indicted, for having committed a Riot within the

the City, on Monday the 6th of November at Night; of which being Convicted, they were Fined Twenty Marks each, and Order'd to ſtand on the Pillory at ſeveral Places; which was executed on Saturday the 9th of December.

1683. Citizens of London are Condemn'd, for a Riot.

On Tueſday the 8th of May ſeveral Perſons were Try'd at the Old-Bailey, before the Lord Chief-Juſtice Sanders, for a pretended Riot and Aſſault made on Sir John Moore, Kt. the late Lord-Mayor, upon Midſummer-Day laſt, being the Day for Election of Sheriffs; and after a long Tryal were found Guilty, and had theſe ſevere Fines impoſed upon them: Thomas Pilkington 500 Pounds; Samuel Shute 1000 Marks; Lord Lord Gray, and Henry Corniſh, Alderman, the like Summ; Sir Thomas Player 500 Marks; Slingsby Bethel, Eſq; 1000 Marks; Mr. Jenkes 300 Marks; Mr. Deagle 400 Marks; Mr. Freeman 300 Marks; Mr. Jekyl 200 Marks; Mr. Goodenough and Mr. Swinock 500 Marks; Mr. Keys and Mr. Wickham 100 Marks each. This Reckoning was inflam'd by a late Arreſt of the preſent Lord-Mayor, the Sheriffs and ſeveral Aldermen, made at the Suits of Mr. Papilion and Mr. Dubois, who claim'd a Right of being Legally Elected Sheriffs the laſt Year. Which was thought to be ſuch an Inſult upon the Friends of the King and Court, that the City were forc'd to Diſclaim the Action, by this Order in Common-Council, on the 22d of May:

The Lord-Mayor Arreſted.

" WHereas Sir William Prichard, Kt. Lord-Mayor of this City, was in a rude manner lately Arreſted, at the Suit, or in the Name of Mr. Papilion and Mr. Dubois; And whereas it hath been alledged by the ſaid Mr. Papilion and Mr. Dubois, That the Action upon which the ſaid Arreſt was, was Proſecuted at the Inſtance of the Citizens of London: The Members of this Court, to deliver themſelves and the ſaid Citizens from this untrue Imputation, do Declare, That they were not Privy or Conſenting to the ſaid Action and Arreſt, and do Diſown and Diſapprove the ſame.

Theſe Diſtractions of the City haſten'd the Loſs of their Charter, and their Conſtitution: For on June 12. the Court of King's-Bench, in the abſence of the Lord Chief-Juſtice, gave Judgment for the King upon the Quo Warranto, That the Franchiſes and Liberties of the City of London be ſeized into the King's Hands. But Judge Jones was pleas'd to ſay, " That by the King's Special Command, Judg-" ment ſhould not be entred till His Majeſty's " Pleaſure were further known." This was generally look'd upon to make the Citizens Reſign their own Liberties, inſtead of being Condemned to a Deprivation of them. On Monday the 18th of June, a Petition of the Lord-Mayor, Aldermen and Commons, was preſented to His Majeſty in Council, confeſſing themſelves moſt heartily and unfeignedly Sorry for the Miſgovernment of the City of late Years, whereby the Citizens had faln under His Majeſty's Diſpleaſure, and Judgment had been pronounc'd againſt them, acknowledging the great Favour of His Majeſty's not requiring Judgment to be immediately entred thereupon; and conſidering this their Diſtreſſed Condition, they humbly caſt themſelves at his Royal Feet, imploring his Princely Compaſſion and Grace to be extended to this his Ancient City, moſt humbly begging His Majeſty's Pardon for all their Offences, and promiſing to Submit themſelves to His Majeſty's good Pleaſure. After the Reading this Petition, the Lord-Mayor, Aldermen and Citizens were Commanded to Withdraw: And being again call'd in, the Lord-Keeper, in a Speech, told them, That His Majeſty would ſtill ſhow the City all the Favour they could reaſonably deſire; and though he had obtained Judgment in a Quo Warranto, it was not his Intention to prejudice them in their Properties or Cuſtoms. That the City had not been well Advis'd, to Deferr their Application to His Majeſty thus long, even till the Court had pronounc'd Judgment: It might have been done with much better Grace, if it had been more early. However, His Majeſty would not reject their Suit, if they Agreed upon the Particulars the King did now require of them: For (ſays he) His Majeſty requires your Submiſſion to theſe Regulations: 1683.

1. " That no Lord-Mayor, Sheriff, Recorder, " Common-Serjeant, Town-Clerk, or Coroner of " the City of London, or Steward of the Borough " of Southwark, ſhall be capable of, or admitted " to the Exerciſe of their reſpective Offices, before " His Majeſty ſhall have Approved them under " his Sign-Manual. Terms of Submiſſion required from the City.

2. " That if His Majeſty ſhall Diſapprove the " Choice of any Perſon to be Lord-Mayor, and " ſignifie the ſame under his Sign-Manual to the " Lord-Mayor, or, in default of a Lord-Mayor, " to the Recorder, or Senior Alderman; the Citi-" zens ſhall within one Week proceed to a New " Choice: And if His Majeſty ſhall in like man-" ner Diſapprove the Second Choice, His Majeſty " may, if He Pleaſe, Nominate a Perſon to be " Lord-Mayor for the enſuing Year.

3. " If His Majeſty ſhall, in like manner, " Diſapprove the Perſons Choſen to be Sheriffs, or " either of them; His Majeſty may Appoint Per-" ſons to be Sheriffs for the enſuing Year, by his " Commiſſion, if he ſo Pleaſe.

The Lord-Keeper told them, That theſe Regulations being made, His Majeſty would not only Pardon this Proſecution, but Confirm their Charter in ſuch manner as may be conſiſtent with them: concluding thus; My Lord-Mayor, The Term draws toward an end, and Midſummer-Day is at hand, when ſome of the Officers uſe to be Choſen, whereof His Majeſty will reſerve the Approbation; Therefore, It is His Majeſty's Pleaſure, That you return to the City, and Conſult the Common-Council, that He may ſpeedily know your Reſolutions hereupon, and accordingly give His Directions. That you may ſee the King is in Earneſt, and the Matter is not capable of Delay, I am Commanded to let you know, He hath given Order to His Attorney-General to Enter up Judgment on Saturday next, unleſs you prevent it by your Compliance in all theſe Particulars. A Common-Council was held at their return, to Conſider of theſe Propoſals; And the Queſtion being put, Whether they ſhould Aſſent, and Submit to His Majeſty's Order of Regulations? It was carry'd in the Affirmative, by a Majority of Eighteen Voices: And this Submiſſion was Preſented to His Majeſty on the 21ſt of June. A Submiſſion made.

Theſe evident Violations of Liberty and Property, improved by the nearer Proſpects of Popery, had provoked many of the Nobility and Gentry to enter into ſome Meaſures of ſtopping the Torrent of the Court, and providing, if poſſible, for the Enjoyment of their Eſtabliſh'd Laws and Religion. This was the true Riſe of what they call'd the Fanatick Plot, firſt Diſcover'd by one Keeling, who gave a long and confuſed Narrative of it, only naming ſome mean Perſons, and charging three ſeveral Deſigns; one, Of Surprizing the Guards; another, Of Murdering the King and the Duke of York at the Rye-Houſe, as they were to paſs by from New-Market; and a third, Of an Inſurrection at Black-Heath, upon a Match at Foot-ball there appointed. Upon this Diſcovery, a Proclamation was publiſh'd for the Apprehending Colonel John Rumſey, Richard Rumbold, Malſter, Richard Nelthorp, Eſq; Edward Wade, Gent. Richard Goodenough, Gent. Capt. Walcott, William Thompſon, James Burton, and William Hone, Joiner. Upon this Proclamation, Colonel John Rumſey, for a Pardon and Reward, Surrendred himſelf the next Day, Charge of a Fanatick Plot.

1683. Day, and was Examin'd by Mr. Secretary Jenkins, and made a large Confeſſion; which was ſoon confirm'd, by the Information of Mr. Robert Weſt and Mr. Sheppard: ſo that on June 28th, another Proclamation was iſſued for the Apprehending of James Duke of Monmouth, Ford Lord Gray, Sir Thomas Armſtrong, Kt. and Robert Ferguſon, a Fanatick Teacher. The Duke of Monmouth had been the laſt Summer Diverting himſelf in the Country, with Sir Thomas Armſtrong in his Company: In his Return toward London, he was taken into Cuſtody of a Searjeant at Arms at Stafford. The Duke receiv'd the Meſſage with great Preſence of Mind, and went along with the Serjeant to London, and offer'd himſelf to Mr. Secretary Jenkins to be Examin'd, provided there were others of the Council preſent: But the Secretary refuſing to let any of the Lords attend, the Duke would not be Queſtion'd by him; ſo the Secretary Order'd a ſecond Warrant to be drawn, for the Meſſenger's keeping him in longer Cuſtody, which he did from Saturday till Monday, and then the Duke was Bail'd before Judge Raymond: His Bail were the Earl of Clare, the Lord Gray, the Lord Ruſſell, William-Leviſon Gower, Eſq; and John Offley, Eſq. The firſt Day of the Term he made his Appearance at the King's-Bench-Bar, according to his Recognizance, and Clear'd his Bail. He was now very unwilling to come into Cuſtody again, and therefore Withdrew, as ſoon as the Proclamation came out for Apprehending of him. As to Ferguſon, he had the Art of Eſcaping, in a manner thus related by a Modern Writer: "Here I cannot omit acquainting the Reader, that Ferguſon was always look'd upon as the more Dangerous Plotter, one that gave the bloodieſt Counſels of all that were in the Confederacy; and yet when this Warrant was deliver'd to Mr. Legat the Meſſenger, to ſeize the reſt of the Offenders, Mr. Secretary Jenkins gave Legat a ſtrict Command, not to take Ferguſon, but to ſhun him where-e'er he met him, and if he ſhould happen to find him in Company among the reſt, he ſhould ſuffer him to eſcape: Which is ſuch a Myſtery, that can never be unriddl'd, without believing him to be a State-Intelligencer, to betray the reſt of the Confederates. This Relation I had from ſeveral Gentlemen of known Credit; but being unwilling to publiſh it upon Hear-ſay, I ask'd Mr. Legat himſelf about it, who is yet living, and a Meſſenger in this Reign, and he aſſur'd me of the Truth of it, as it is above related from his own Mouth, and who will ſtill juſtifie it to any Man, whoſe Curioſity leads him to make further Enquiry about it."

The Lord Howard of Eſcrick had been formerly Committed Cloſe-Priſoner to the Tower, upon Information given by Fitz-Harris's Wife, That he was concern'd in Writing that Libel for which her Huſband was Executed. This Noble Peer had join'd with the Whig-Party in the Houſe of Lords, and had heard them talk many things with a Liberty common to Diſcontented Men: Which gave him an Opportunity of being capable to be made an Evidence; and it was ſaid, That the Dutcheſs of Portſmouth did now reconcile him to the Court, upon Condition He ſhould go through the Drudgery of Swearing. And upon this Encouragement, he ſoon became (as Sir John Hawles calls him) a Thorough-pac'd Evidence: And upon his Information, Warrants for High-Treaſon were iſſued out againſt the Earl of Eſſex, the Lord Ruſſell, and others. The Earl of Eſſex not offering to Abſcond, was preſently confin'd Priſoner in the Tower, where, ſoon after, he was found with his Throat Cut by a Razor. This rais'd a Suſpicion of his being Murder'd; and theſe Circumſtances happen'd, to confirm it: The King and the Duke of York were at that very time within the Tower, where they had not been for near fifteen Years before. Before the Jury was Impanell'd to make an Inqueſt upon this Fact, the Earl's Body was taken out of the Cloſet where the Fact was committed, and ſtript of the Cloaths, which were carry'd away, and the Cloſet waſh't; and when one of the Jury inſiſted to ſee my Lord's Cloaths in which he Died, the Coroner was ſent for into another Room, and upon his return he told the Jury, It was the Body, and not the Cloaths they were to Sit upon. After this, a Motion being made, That the Jury ſhould Adjourn, and give Notice to my Lord's Relations, That if they had any thing material to Diſcover, they ſhould do it within ſuch a time; It was Anſwer'd, That the King had ſent for the Inquiſition, and would not riſe from the Council-Board till it was brought. There was another unlucky Circumſtance that gave a greater Looſe to the Tongues of People, which was, that it happen'd on the very ſame Morning when my Lord Ruſſell was upon his Tryal; and particular Care was taken to give immediate Notice of it to the Court at the Old-Bailey: And the King's Councel made a direct Uſe of it to Confirm the Plot, and to Condemn the Lord Ruſſell, as the more apparently Guilty of it. But notwithſtanding theſe Preſumptions, and the Offer of alledging many more; it was rather taken for granted, that the Earl of Eſſex, from a Greatneſs of Spirit, had laid Violent Hands on himſelf; and it is ſaid, that his Neareſt Relations were of that Opinion. The King himſelf ſeem'd to be very much Concern'd at the Misfortune, and ſaid thus, My Lord of Eſſex needed not to have Deſpair'd of Mercy, for I Ow'd him a Life.

Death of the Earl of Eſſex.

1683.

On Thurſday July 12. Capt. Thomas Walcott was brought to his Tryal upon this Plot, and was found Guilty of High-Treaſon, In Conſpiring the Death of His Majeſty, and Preparing Money and Arms, in order to an Inſurrection for the Subverſion of the Government. The next Day, William Lord Ruſſell, William Hone, and John Rouſe, were Indicted for the ſame Crimes, and found Guilty. On July 20. Walcott, Rouſe and Hone were Drawn upon Sledges to Tybourn, and there Hang'd and Quarter'd: And on the next Day, Sentence of Death was likewiſe Executed upon William Lord Ruſſell, by Severing his Head from his Body, upon a Scaffold erected for that Purpoſe in Lincolns-Inn-Fields, where he deliver'd a Paper to one of the Sheriffs, with this ſhort Speech to him:

The Lord Ruſſell Executed.

Mr. Sheriff;

His Lordſhip's Speech & Paper.

I Expected the Noiſe would be ſuch, that I cou'd not be very well heard: I was never very fond of much Speaking, much leſs now; therefore I have ſet down in this Paper, all that I think fit to leave behind me. God knows, how far I was always from Deſigns againſt the King's Perſon, or of Altering the Government; and I ſtill Pray for the Preſervation of both, and of the Proteſtant Religion.

I am told, that Capt. Walcott has ſaid ſomething concerning my Knowledge of the Plot: I know not whether the Report be true or no, but I hope it is not; for, to my knowledge, I never ſaw him, to ſpeak with him, in my whole Life: And in the Words of a Dying Man, I know of no Plot, either againſt the King's Life, or the Government. But I have now done with this World, and am going to a Better. I Forgive all the World; and, I Thank God, I Die in Charity with all Men: And I Wiſh all ſincere Proteſtants may Love one another, and not make Room for Popery, by their Animoſities.

" For Popery, I look on it as an Idolatrous " and Bloody Religion; and therefore thought " my ſelf bound, in my Station, to do all I could " againſt it: And by that, I foreſaw I ſhould " procure ſuch Great Enemies to my ſelf, and " ſo Powerful One's, that I have been now, for " ſome time, Expecting the Worſt; and bleſſed " be God, I fall by the Axe, and not by " the Fiery Tryal: Yet, whatever Apprehen- " ſions I had of Popery, and of my own ſevere " and heavy Share I was like to have un- " der it, when it ſhould prevail, I never had a " Thought of doing any thing againſt it Baſely, " or Inhumanly, but what would conſiſt with " the Chriſtian Religion, and the Laws and Liber- " ties of this Kingdom: And I thank God, I " have Examin'd all my Actions in that Matter " with ſo great Care, that I can appeal to God " Almighty, who knows my Heart, that I went " on Sincerely, without being mov'd either by " Paſſion, Bye-Ends, or Ill Deſigns. I have al- " ways Lov'd my Country much more than my " Life; and never had any Deſign of Changing " the Government, which I value, and look upon " as one of the beſt Governments in the World, " and would always have been ready to venture " my Life for the Preſerving it; and would ſuffer " any Extremity, rather than have Conſented to " any Deſign of taking away the King's Life; " neither had any Man the Impudence to Propoſe " ſo Baſe and Barbarous a Thing to me: And " I look upon it as a very Unhappy and Uneaſie " part of my preſent Condition, that there ſhould 1683. " be ſo much as mention made of ſo Vile a Fact, " though nothing in the leaſt was ſaid to Prove " any ſuch Matter; but the contrary, by my Lord " Howard: neither does Any Body, I am confident, " believe the leaſt of it: So that I need not, I " think, ſay more.

" For the King, I do ſincerely Pray for Him, " and Wiſh Well to Him, and the Nation, That " that They may be Happy in one another; That " He may be indeed the Defender of the Faith; " That the Proteſtant Religion, and the Peace " and Safety of the Kingdom may be preſerv'd " and flouriſh under His Government, and that " Himſelf, in his Perſon, may be Happy both " here and hereafter.

" As for the Share I had in the Proſecution " of the Popiſh Plot, I take God to Witneſs, that " I proceeded in it in the Sincerity of my Heart, " being then really convinc'd (as I am ſtill) " that that there was a Conſpiracy againſt the " King, the Nation, and the Proteſtant Religion: " And I likewiſe profeſs, That I never knew any " thing, directly or indirectly, of any Practice " with the Witneſſes; which I look upon as ſo " Horrid a Thing, that I never could have en- " dured it: For, I thank God, Falſhood and " Cruelty were never in my Nature, but always " the fartheſt from it imaginable. I did believe, " and do ſtill, that Popery is breaking in upon " this Nation; and that thoſe that Advance it, " will ſtop at nothing to Carry on their Deſign. " I am heartily ſorry that ſo many Proteſtants " give their helping Hand to it: But I hope " God will preſerve the Proteſtant Religion, and " this Nation; though I am afraid it will fall " under very great Trials, and very ſharp Suf- " ferings: And indeed, the Impiety and Pro- " phaneneſs that abounds, and appears ſo ſcan- " dalouſly bare-fac'd every where, gives too juſt " Occaſion to fear the Worſt thing that can befal " a People. I pray God prevent it, and give " thoſe who have ſhewed a Concern for the Pub- " lick Good, and have appear'd Hearty for the " True Intereſt of the Nation, and the Proteſtant " Religion, Grace to Live ſo, that they may not " caſt a Reproach on that which they endeavour " to Advance; which (God knows) has often " given me ſad Thoughts: And I hope, ſuch of my " Friends as may think they are Touch'd by this, " will not take what I ſay in Ill Part, but will " endeavour to Amend their Ways, and Live " ſuitable to the Rules of the True Reformed Re- " ligion; which is the only Thing that can ad- " miniſter True Comfort at the Latter-end, and " relieve a Man when he comes to Die.

" As for my preſent Condition, I bleſs God, " I have no Repining in my Heart at it; I know, " for my Sins, I have deſerved much worſe at the " Hands of God; ſo that I chearfully ſubmit to " ſo ſmall a Puniſhment, as the being taken off " a few Years ſooner, and the being made a " Spectacle to the World. I do freely Forgive " all the World, particularly thoſe concern'd in " taking away my Life; and I deſire and conjure " all my Friends to think of no Revenge, but to " ſubmit to the Holy Will of God, into whoſe " Hands I reſign my ſelf intirely.

" But to look back a little; I cannot but give " ſome Touch about the Bill of Excluſion, and " ſhew the Reaſons of my appearing in that Buſi- " neſs; which, in ſhort, is this: That I thought " the Nation in ſuch Danger of Popery, and that " the Expectation of a Popiſh Succeſſor (as I have " ſaid in Parliament) put the King's Life like- " wiſe in much Danger, that I ſaw no Way ſo " effectual to Secure both, as ſuch a Bill. As " to the Limitations that were Propoſed, if they " were ſincerely Offer'd, and had Paſſed into a " Law,

1683. " Law, the Duke then ſhould have been Excluded " from the Power of a King, and the Government " quite altered, and little more than the Name of a " King left: So I could not ſee either Sin or Fault " in the one, when all People were willing to admit " of the other; but thought it better to have a King " with his Prerogative, and the Nation Eaſie and " Safe under him, than a King without it; which bred " perpetual Jealouſies, and a continual Struggle. " All this I ſay, only to Juſtifie my ſelf, and not to " Inflame others; though I cannot but think my " Earneſtneſs in that Matter, has had no ſmall " Influence in my preſent Sufferings. But I " have now done with this World, and am going " to a Kingdom which cannot be moved.

" And as to the Conſpiring to Seize the Guards, " which is the Crime for which I am Condemn'd, " and which is made a Conſtructive Treaſon for " taking away the King's Life, to bring it within " the Statute of Edward III. I ſhall give this true " and clear Account. I never was at Mr. Sheppard's with that Company, but once, and there " was no Undertaking then of Securing or Seizing " the Guards, nor none appointed to View, or " Examine them: Some Diſcourſe there was, of " the Feaſibleneſs of it; and ſeveral times, by " Accident in general Diſcourſe elſewhere, I have " heard it mention'd as a thing might eaſily be " done, but never Conſented to, as a thing fit to " be done: And I remember particularly, at my " Lord Shaftsbury's, there being ſome general " Diſcourſe of this kind, I immediately flew out, " and exclaim'd againſt it, and ask'd, If the thing " ſucceeded, what muſt be done next, but Maſtering " the Guards, and Killing them in Cold-blood? " Which I look'd upon as a Deteſtable thing, " and ſo like a Popiſh Practice, that I could not " but Abhorr it. And at the ſame time, the " Duke of Monmouth took me by the Hand, and " told me very kindly, My Lord, I ſee you and I are of a Temper; Did you ever hear ſo Horrid a thing? And I muſt needs do him Juſtice, to " declare, that I ever obſerv'd in him an Abhorrence of all Baſe things.

" As to my going to Mr. Sheppard's, I went with " an Intention to taſte Sherry; for he had promis'd to reſerve for me the next very good Piece " he met with, when I went out of Town; and " if he recollects himſelf, he may remember I " ask'd him about it, and he went and fetch'd a " Bottle; but when I taſted it, I ſaid, It was " Hot in the Mouth, and deſired, that whenever " he met with a Choice Piece, he would keep it " for me: Which he promiſed. I enlarge the " more upon this, becauſe Sir George Jeffreys " inſinuated to the Jury, as if I had made a " Story, about going thither: But I never ſaid " that was the only Reaſon, and I will now " truly and plainly add you the reſt.

" I was, the Day before this Meeting, come " to Town for two or three Days, as I had done " once or twice before, having a very Near and Dear " Relation lying in a Languiſhing and Deſperate " Condition: And the Duke of Monmouth came to " me, and told me, He was extremely glad I was come to Town; for my Lord Shaftsbury, and ſome Hot Men, would Undoe us all. —— How ſo, my Lord? (I ſaid.) —— Why (anſwer'd he) they will certainly do ſome Diſorderly thing or other, if great Care be not taken; and therefore, for God's ſake, uſe your Endeavour with your Friends to prevent any thing of this kind. He told me, there would be Company at " Mr. Sheppard's that Night, and deſired me to " be at Home in the Evening, and he would call " me; which he did. And when I came into the " Room, I ſaw Mr. Rumſey by the Chimney, " though he Swears he came in afterward; and " there were Things ſaid by ſome, with much " more Heat than Judgment, which I did ſufficiently Diſapprove; And yet, for theſe Things I ſtand " Condemn'd: But I thank God, my Part was Sincere, and Well-meant. It is, I know, inferred " from hence, and preſſed to me, That I was acquainted with theſe Heats, and Ill Deſigns, and " did not Diſcover them: But this could be but Miſpriſion of Treaſon at moſt; ſo I Die Innocent " of the Crime I ſtand Condemn'd for. I hope, " no-Body will imagine that ſo mean a Thought " ſhould enter into me, as to go about to Save " my ſelf, by Accuſing others: The Part that " ſome have Acted lately of that kind, has not " been ſuch as to invite me to love Life at ſuch " a Rate. 1683.

" As for the Sentence of Death paſſed upon " me, I cannot but think it a very hard one; for " nothing was Sworn againſt me (whether true or " falſe, I will not now examine) but ſome Diſcourſes " about making ſome Stirs. And this is not " Levying War againſt the King, which is Treaſon, " by the Statute of Edw. III. and not the Conſulting and Diſcourſing about it, which was all " that is Witneſſed againſt me: But by a ſtrange " Fetch, the Deſign of Seizing the Guards, was " conſtru'd, a Deſign of Killing the King; and ſo " I was in that Caſt.

" And now I have truly and ſincerely told " what my Part was, in that which cannot be more " than a bare Miſpriſion; and yet I am Condemn'd, " as Guilty of a Deſign of Killing the King. I " pray God lay not this to the Charge, neither " of the King, Councel, nor Judges, nor Sheriffs " nor Jury: And for the Witneſſes, I Pity them, " and Wiſh them Well: I ſhall not reckon up " the Particulars wherein they did me Wrong, " I had rather their own Conſciences would do " that; to which, and the Mercies of God, I leave " them: Only I ſhall averr, That what I ſaid, " of my not hearing Col. Rumſey deliver any " Meſſage from my Lord Shaftsbury, was True; " for I always deteſted Lying, though never ſo " much to my Advantage; And I hope None " will be ſo Unjuſt and Uncharitable, as to think " I would venture on it in theſe my Laſt Words, " for which I am ſo ſoon to give an Account to " the Great God, the Searcher of Hearts, and " Judge of all Things.

" From the Time of Chuſing Sheriffs, I concluded, the Heat in that Matter, would produce " ſomething of this kind; and I am not much " ſurpriz'd, to find it fall upon me: And I wiſh, " what is done to me, may put a ſtop, and " ſatiate ſome Peoples Revenge, and that no more " Innocent Blood be ſhed; for I muſt and do ſtill " look upon mine to be ſuch, ſince I know I " was Guilty of no Treaſon; and therefore I " would not betray my Innocency by Flight, " (though much preſs'd to it;) of which I do " not, I thank God, yet repent, how fatal ſoever " it may have ſeemed to have proved to me: " for I look'd upon my Death in this manner " (I thank God) with other Eyes than the " World does. I know I ſaid but little at the " Tryal, and I ſuppoſe it looks more like Innocence than Guilt: I was alſo adviſed, not to " confeſs Matter of Fact plainly, ſince that certainly muſt have brought me within the Guilt " of Miſpriſion; and being thus reſtrain'd from " dealing frankly and openly, I choſe rather to " ſay little, than to depart from that Ingenuity, " that, by the Grace of God, I had carry'd along " with me, in the former part of my Life; and " ſo could eaſier be ſilent, and leave the whole " Matter to the Conſciences of the Jury, than to " make the Beſt and Solemneſt part of my Life, " ſo different from the Courſe of it, as the uſing " little Tricks and Evaſions muſt have been. Nor " did I ever pretend to any great Readineſs in 1683. " Speaking; I wiſh thoſe Gentlemen of the Law, " who have it, would make more Conſcience in " the Uſe of it, and not run Men down, and, by " Strains and Fetches, Impoſe on Eaſie and " Willing Juries, to the Ruine of Innocent Men: " For to Kill by Forms and Subtilties of the Law, " is the worſt ſort of Murther: But I wiſh the " Rage of Hot Men, and the Partiality of Juries, " may be ſtopp'd with my Blood; which I would " offer up with ſo much the more Joy, if I thought " I ſhould be the Laſt that were to Suffer in ſuch " a Way.

" Since my Sentence, I have had but few " Thoughts, but Preparatory one's for Death; yet " the Importunity of my Friends, and particu- " larly the Beſt and Deareſt Wife in the World, " prevail'd with me to Sign Petitions, and make " an Addreſs for my Life; to which I was ever " averſe: For (I thank God) though in all " Reſpects I have liv'd the Happieſt and Con- " tented'ſt Man of the World (for now very near " Fourteen Years,) yet I am ſo willing to leave " All, that it was not without Difficulty that I " did any thing for the Saving of my Life, that " was Begging; but I was willing to let my " Friends ſee what Power they had over me, and " that I was not Obſtinate nor Sullen, but would " do any thing that an Honeſt Man could do, for " their Satisfaction; which was the only Motive " that ſway'd, or had any weight with me.

" And now to Sum up all; As I had not any " Deſign againſt the King's Life, or the Life of " any Man whatſoever, ſo I never was in any " Contrivance of Altering the Government. What " the Heats, Paſſions and Vanities of other Men " have occaſion'd, I ought not to be reſponſible " for; nor could I Help them, though I now Suffer " for them. But the Will of the Lord be done, " into whoſe Hands I commend my Spirit; —— " And truſt, that Thou, O moſt Merciful Father, haſt " forgiven all my Tranſgreſſions, the Sins of my " Youth, and all the Errors of my paſt Life; and " that Thou wilt not lay my ſecret Sins and Ig- " norances to my Charge, but wilt Graciouſly Support " me, during that ſmall Time of Life now before " me, and Aſſiſt me in my Laſt Moments, and not " leave me then to be Diſorder'd by Fear, or any " other Temptations, but make the Light of Thy " Countenance to ſhine upon me: Thou art my " Sun, and my Shield; and as Thou Supporteſt me " by Thy Grace, ſo I hope Thou wilt hereafter Crown " me with Glory, and receive me into the Fellowſhip " of Angels and Saints, in that bleſſed Inheritance " purchaſed for me by my Moſt Merciful Redeemer, " who is, I truſt, at thy Right-Hand, preparing a " Place for me, and is ready to receive me; into " whoſe Hands I commend my Spirit.

Algernoon Sidney's hard Uſage.

Under a vigorous purſuit of this Plot, the Honourable Colonel Algernoon Sidney was taken up, not directly for a Plotter, but for a Republican, and a Fanatick: He lay ſome time in the Tower, and was brought thence, by Habeus Corpus, on the 7th of November, to the King's-Bench-Bar, where he was Arraign'd, upon an Indictment of High-Treaſon, in Conſpiring the Death of the King, and Levying War againſt His Majeſty. 1683. To which he Pleaded, Not Guilty, and deſired a Fortnight's time for his Tryal; which being granted, he came to his ſaid Tryal on the 21ſt of November, and was found Guilty. He was known to be a Perſon of Excellent Parts, and Political Knowledge; and yet he was obſerv'd to ſay very little in his own Defence, as believing, whatever he ſhou'd ſay, wou'd ſignifie nothing with that Judicature, who he thought had already Prejudg'd him: And ſo it was really, in effect. For as the learned Sir J. Hawles has well remark'd, " He was meerly Talk'd to Death, under " the Notion of a Commonwealth's-man; and found " Guilty, by a Jury who were not much more " proper Judges in the Caſe, than they would " have been, if what he had wrote, had been done " by him in Syriac or Arabick. It's Obſervable, " The Indictment againſt him was never Preſented " to the Grand-Jury before they came into the " Hall, and yet they found it immediately. The " greateſt part of the Evidence (as it was in " my Lord Ruſſell's Caſe) was only Hear-ſay: " and Weſt, whoſe Evidence was once rejected, " was now admitted to tell a long Story of what " he had heard by Common Fame, and in mix'd " Converſation. My Lord Howard was Rhetorical " even to Pedantry, upon the Matter, according " to his vain Cuſtom. The two chief Articles " againſt him, were, His ſending a Meſſenger into " Scotland, to Invite them into a Rebellion; And " his Writing a Treaſonable Libel, found in his " Cloſet, upon the Original and Forms of Govern- " ment.

As to the firſt Fact, The Priſoner abſolutely Deny'd it. As to the other, he Anſwer'd, That if the Papers were his, they might be Written long ſince, in Anſwer to Sir Robert Filmer's Book, for his own Diverſion, and not for Publication. But one of the Councel warmly urged this new Axiom in Law, Scribere eſt Agere, and cited this Paſſage out of the ſaid Writing; The King is ſubject to the Law of God, as he is a Man; and to the People that made him ſuch, as a King: And further Argued, That the ſaid Author had maliciouſly produced ſeveral Examples, how ſome Evil Princes had been ſometimes Deſtroyed by a Popular Fury, and others had been Depos'd. It was never ſo much as Prov'd to be his Hand-Writing: But whatever the Writing of thoſe Papers was then thought to be, the Printing of them has been ſince found to be Safe and Legal, and they are no more than an Eſſay upon Government, with a ſtrong Byas to a Commonwealth. The Lord-Chief-Juſtice Jeffreys ſhow'd himſelf an angry Party againſt him; for without any Regard to the Noble Family of the Earls of Leiceſter, and to the Name of the Sidney's, he was pleas'd to tell the Jury, That the Priſoner was Born a Traytor. After his Condemnation, he is ſaid to have deſpiſed the way of Petitioning to His Majeſty about the Diſpoſal of his Body: But by the Application of his Friends, he had the Honour, on the 7th of December, to Die upon a Scaffold erected on Tower-Hill, where he made this SPEECH:

Men, Brethren and Fathers; Friends, Country-men and Strangers;

His Dying Speech.

" IT may be expected that I ſhould now ſay " ſome great Matters unto you: But the " Rigour of the Seaſon, and the Infirmities of my " Age, encreaſed by a cloſe Impriſonment of above " five Months, doth not permit me.

" Moreover, we live in an Age that maketh " Truth paſs for Treaſon: I dare not ſay any " thing contrary unto it; and the Ears of thoſe " that are about me, will probably be found too 1683. " tender to hear it. My Tryal and Condemnation doth ſufficiently evidence this.

" tender

" Weſt, Rumſey, and Keyling, who were brought " to Prove the Plot, ſaid no more of me, than " that they knew me not; And ſome others, equally " known unto me, had uſed my Name, and that " of ſome others, to give a little Reputation unto " their Deſigns. The Lord Howard is too Infamous " by his Life, and the many Perjuries not to be " denied, or rather Sworn by himſelf, to deſerve " mention; and being a Single Witneſs, would be " of no Value, though he had been of an unblemiſh'd Credit, or had not ſeen and confeſs'd " that the Crimes committed by him, would be " pardon'd, only for committing more; and even " the Pardon promis'd, could not be obtain'd till " the Drudgery of Swearing was over.

" This being laid aſide, the whole Matter is " reduc'd to the Papers ſaid to be found in my " Cloſet by the King's Officers, without any other " Proof of their being Written by me, than what " is taken from the Suppoſition upon the Similitude of an Hand, that is eaſily Counterfeited, " and which have been lately Declar'd, in the " Lady Car's Caſe, to be no Lawful Evidence in " Criminal Cauſes.

" But, if I had been ſeen to Write them, the " Matter would not be much altered; They " plainly appear to relate unto a large Treatiſe " written long ſince, in Anſwer to Filmer's Book, " which, by all Intelligent Men, is thought to be " grounded upon wicked Principles, equally pernicious unto Magiſtrates and People.

" If he might publiſh unto the World his " Opinion, That all Men are born, under a Neceſſity, derived from the Laws of God and Nature, " to ſubmit unto an Abſolute Kingly Government, " which could be reſtrain'd by no Law or Oath; " and that he that hath the Power, whether he " came unto it by Creation, Election, Inheritance, " Uſurpation, or any other Way, had the Right; " none muſt oppoſe his Will, but the Perſons and " Eſtates of his Subjects muſt be indiſpenſably " ſubject unto it: —— I know not why I might " not have publiſh'd my Opinion to the contrary, " without the Breach of any Law I have yet " known.

" I might, as freely as he, publickly have declared my Thoughts, and the Reaſons upon " which they were grounded: And I am perſuaded " to believe, That God had left Nations unto the " Liberty of Setting up Governments as beſt " pleaſed themſelves.

" That Magiſtrates were Set up for the Good " of Nations, not Nations for the Honour or " Glory of the Magiſtrates.

" That the Right and Power of Magiſtrates in " every Country, was that which the Laws of " that Country made it be.

" That thoſe Laws were to be obſerv'd; And " the Oaths taken by them, having the Force of " a Contract between Magiſtrate and People, could " not be violated without danger of diſſolving the " whole Fabrick.

" That Uſurpation could give no Right; And " the moſt Dangerous of all Enemies to Kings, " were they, who raiſing their Power to an Exorbitant Height, allow'd unto Uſurpers all the " Rights belonging unto it.

" That ſuch Uſurpations being ſeldom compaſs'd without the Slaughter of the Reigning " Perſon or Family, the worſt of all Villainies " was thereby rewarded with the moſt glorious " Privileges.

" That if ſuch Doctrines were received, they " would ſtir up Men to the Deſtruction of Princes, " with more Violence than all the Paſſions that " have hitherto raged in the Hearts of the moſt " Unruly.

" That None could be ſafe, if ſuch a Reward 1683. " were propoſed unto any that could Deſtroy " them.

" That few would be ſo Gentle, as to ſpare " even the Beſt; if, by their Deſtruction, one, of " of a Wild Uſurper, could become God's Anointed; " and by the moſt execrable Wickedneſs, inveſt " himſelf with that divine Character. ——

" This is the Scope of the whole Treatiſe; " the Writer gives ſuch Reaſons, as at preſent did " occurr unto him, to Prove it. This ſeems to agree " with the Doctrines of the moſt Reverenc'd Authors " of all Times, Nations and Religions: The Beſt " and Wiſeſt Kings have ever acknowledg'd it. " The preſent King of France hath declared, That " Kings have that happy Want of Power, that " they can do nothing contrary unto the Laws " of their Country: and grounds his Quarrel " with the King of Spain, Anno 1667. upon that " Principle. King James, in his Speech to the " Parliament, Anno 1603. doth in the higheſt " degree aſſert it: The Scriptures ſeem to declare " it. If nevertheleſs the Writer was miſtaken, he " might have been refuted by Law, Reaſon and " Scripture; and no Man, for ſuch Matters, was " ever otherwiſe Puniſh'd, than by being made " to ſee his Error: And it hath not (as I think) " been known, that they had been referred to the " Judgment of a Jury, compoſed of Men utterly " unable to comprehend them.

" But there was little of this in my Caſe; " the Extravagance of my Perſecutors goes higher: " The above-mention'd Treatiſe was never finiſh'd, " nor could be in many Years, and moſt probably " would never have been. So much as is of it, was " written long ſince, never review'd, nor ſhew'd " unto any Man; and not the Fiftieth part of it " was produced, and not the Tenth of that afforded " to be read. That which was never known unto " thoſe who are ſaid to have Conſpired with me, " was ſaid to be intended to ſtir up the People, " in Proſecution of the Deſigns of thoſe Conſpirators.

" When nothing of particular Application " unto Time, Place, or Perſon, could be found in " it, (as hath ever been done by thoſe who endeavoured to raiſe Inſurrections,) all was ſupply'd by Innuendo's.

" Whatſoever is ſaid of the Expulſion of " Tarquin, the Inſurrection againſt Nero, the " Slaughter of Caligula or Domitian, the Tranſlation of the Crown of France from Merovius's " Race unto Pepin, and from his Deſcendants, " unto Hugh Capet, and the like, are applied, by " Innuendo, unto the King.

" They have not conſider'd, that if ſuch Acts " of State be not good, there is not a King in " the World that has any Title to that Crown " he wears; nor can have any, unleſs he could " deduce his Pedigree from the Eldeſt Son of " Noah, and ſhew that the Succeſſion had ſtill " continu'd in the Eldeſt of the Eldeſt Line, and " been ſo deduced to him.

" Every One may ſee what Advantage this " would be to all the Kings of the World; and " whether, that failing, it were not better for " them to acknowledge they had receiv'd their " Crown by the Conſent of Willing Nations; or " to have no better Title unto them than Uſurpation and Violence, which by the ſame Ways " may be taken from them.

" But I was long ſince told, That I muſt " Die, or the Plot muſt Die.

" Leſt the Means of Deſtroying the beſt Proteſtants in England ſhould fail, the Bench " muſt be fill'd with ſuch as had been Blemiſhes " to the Bar.

" None but ſuch as Theſe would have adviſ'd " with the King's Councel, of the Means of " bringing

1683. " bringing a Man to Death; ſuffer a Jury to be " be Pack't by the King's Solicitors and the Under-" Sheriff; admit of Jury-men, who are not Free-" holders; receive ſuch Evidence as is above-" mentioned; refuſe a Copy of an Indictment, or " to ſuffer the Stat. of 46 Edw. III. to be read, " that doth expreſsly Enact, It ſhould in no Caſe " be denied unto any Man, upon any Occaſion " whatſoever; Over-rule the moſt important Points " of Law, without Hearing. And whereas the " Stat. of 25 Edw. III. upon which they ſaid I " ſhould be Try'd, doth reſerve unto the Parlia-" ment all Conſtructions to be made in Points of " Treaſon; They could aſſume themſelves not only " a Power to make Conſtructions, but ſuch Con-" ſtructions as neither agree with Law, Reaſon, or " common Senſe.

" By theſe Means, I am brought to this Place: " —— The Lord, forgive theſe Practices, and avert " *the Evils that threaten the Nation for them. On the laſt Day of Michaelmas-Term, the Lord Brandon Gerard, Mr. Hambden, Jun. Mr. Booth, Mr. Trenchard, Mr. Charlton, and Major Wildman, who had been all Accuſed, as Conſpirators in the late Plot, were brought by Habeas Corpus from the Tower to the King's-Bench-Bar; and there being but One Witneſs againſt them, they were admitted to give Bail for their Appearance the firſt Day of the next Term: Which Appearance they made on the 23d of January, and their Recognizances were continu'd. Mr. Hambden had Notice, that his Tryal would be on the firſt Wedneſday in February; where dropping the Treaſon, he was found Guilty of a High Miſdemeanour, and was Fined Forty thouſand Pounds to the King, to find Sureties for his Good-behaviour during Life, and to be Committed till it was perform'd: But the Lord Brandon, Mr. Booth, Major Wildman, Mr. Charlton, Mr. Trenchard, and ſome Others that were Bailed the laſt Term, had now the Favour to be Diſcharg'd.

Mr. Hambden fined, and others diſcharg'd.

Tryal of Braddon and Speak.

An Information had been Exhibited the laſt Term againſt Mr. Lawrence Braddon, and Mr. Hugh Speak, ſetting forth, " That whereas the late " Earl of Eſſex, Committed to the Tower for " High-Treaſon, had, on the 13th of July laſt, " Cut his own Throat, and was, by Inquiſition " taken before the Coroner of the Liberty of the " Tower, found Felo de ſe; the ſaid Braddon and " Speak, to Defame the Government, had Con-" ſpired together, by Writing and otherwiſe, to " ſpread a Falſe and Scandalous Report, That " the ſaid Earl was Murder'd by ſome Perſons " about him; and had endeavour'd to Subborn " Witneſſes to Teſtifie the ſame." The Tryal was brought on, on the 7th of February, and having laſted till Three in the Afternoon, the Court roſe, leaving the Jury to give in a private Verdict to one of the Judges, which they deliver'd next Morning, and it was, That the ſaid Braddon was Guilty of the whole Matter charg'd in the Information; And that Speak was Guilty of all the Matter, except the Subornation.

John Darby, a Printer, had been Convicted, upon an Information the laſt Term, for a Miſdemeanour, in Printing a Seditious Libel call'd, My Lord Ruſſell's Speech; and he was now, on Febr. 1ſt. brought to the Court of King's-Bench, to receive his Judgment. He humbly Submitted himſelf to the Court, and begg'd Pardon, with a Promiſe never to commit the like Offence: And therefore the Court gave a milder Sentence, That he ſhould pay Twenty Marks for a Fine to the King, and find Sureties for his Good-behaviour for a Twelve-month; and till this was paid and done, he ſhould be Committed to the Priſon of the King's-Bench. 1683. Conviction of John Darby, a Printer.

Another Information had been Exhibited againſt Sir Samuel Barnardiſton, for Writing and Publiſhing, in Four Letters to ſeveral Perſons in the Country, moſt Scandalous and Seditious Reflections againſt the Government, and concerning the late Horrid Conſpiracy: Of which, in a Tryal had at the Guildhall, before my Lord-Chief-Juſtice Jeffreys, on Febr. 14th. he was found Guilty. Information againſt Sir Sam. Barnardiſton.

Another Information had been Preferr'd the laſt Term, againſt Mr. Johnſon, a Clergy-man of good Parts and Character, for Writing and Publiſhing what they term'd a very Scandalous and Seditious Book, call'd Julian the Apoſtate; wherein the Author had only confuted thoſe Notions of Paſſive Obedience and Non-reſiſtance which ſome Writers, and thoſe eſpecially of his own Order, had carry'd up to a Conſequence of Tyranny and Slavery. He was call'd to his Sentence on Febr. 11th. when the Court of King's-Bench had Judged, " That he ſhould pay Five-" hundred Marks for a Fine to the King; That " he find Sureties for his Good-behaviour for a " Year; That he ſhould be Committed to the " Priſon of the King's-Bench till this be paid and " done, and that the Book be Burnt by the Hands " of the Common Hangman. Againſt Mr. Sam. Johnſon.

The Lords in the Tower, upon a Parliamentary Impeachment, had often moved for Bail, which could never be obtained: But the Earl of Danby made now another Motion in Hilary-Term, and had the Caſe Argued by learned Councel; and on February 12th the Judges deliver'd their Opinions ſeverally, giving their Reaſons, and concluding all in one Judgment, That his Lordſhip ought to be Bail'd: And accordingly Bail was taken, his Lordſhip being bound in a Recognizance of Twenty thouſand Pounds; and the Dukes of Somerſet and Albemarle, and the Earls of Oxford and Cheſterfield, his Sureties, in Five thouſand Pounds a-piece, upon Condition, That the Earl of Danby do Appear in the Houſe of Lords the next Seſſion of Parliament, and not Depart without Leave of that Court. This was to be a Precedent for the Liberty of the Popiſh Lords; and therefore, on the ſame Day, the Earl of Powys, the Lord Arrundel of Wardour, and the Lord Bellaſis, (the Ld. Petre Dying in the Tower, under Confinement,) were brought from the Tower, and the Earl of Tyrone from the Gatehouſe, to the Court of King's-Bench, upon Writs of Habeas Corpus, praying, by their Councel, to be admitted to Bail. Mr. Attorney-General declared, he had Order from His Majeſty to Conſent to any thing the Court ſhould think fit to be done: Upon which my Lord-Chief-Juſtice, and the other Judges, did Agree, That for the ſame Reaſons they had given in the Earl of Danby's Caſe, theſe Lords ought likewiſe to be Bail'd; And accordingly Recognizances and Sureties were accepted. The Earl of Danby Bail'd. The Popiſh Lords Bail'd.

The Duke of Monmouth had Abſconded (or ſeem'd to do ſo) ever ſince the Proclamation for Apprehending the Conſpirators; but now, in confidence of the King's Affection, and a Satisfaction in his own Dutiful Intentions to the King, he reſolved to Diſcover himſelf: So he wrote a Letter to His Majeſty, with ſome Acknowledgments of his Folly, and promiſing Duke of Monmouth ſurrenders himſelf.

1683. promiſing better Obedience for the future. The King, in Anſwer, required him to Surender himſelf to the Secretary of State: Which he did not immediately care to venture. He wrote again to the King, and in this Letter he agravates his Sorrow, and Tortures of Mind, for his Failings againſt His Majeſty; confeſſing, that being fatally Circumvented by the Inchantments of others, he was precipitated into thoſe Evils, the Conſequences whereof he had not expected. The King, at laſt, granted him an Interview; as appears by the Duke's own Journal taken in his Pocket, after Sedgmore Fight: " His Majeſty, at their firſt Meeting, aſſured the " Duke, of his not believing he ever knew " any thing of the Rye-Houſe Plot; But (ſays " the King) as Things go, I muſt behave my ſelf as " if I did believe it. The King ſaw him on the " 13th of October: And there was another Meeting " to have been on the 2d of November; but there " being an extraordinary Council, the King did " not come." Theſe Interviews were held at one Major Long's Houſe in the City, who has often Atteſted the Truth of it. " The 4th of " November the King came again, was very Kind, " and gave the Duke Directions how to manage " his Buſineſs, and what to ſay, ordering a Perſon " to come to him every Night, till Matters " were ripe. On the 9th, the Duke was told the " Buſineſs ſhould be done to his Mind, the next " Week; That Intereſt was made to the Duke of " York for him, by another Perſon; which His " Majeſty took kindly of that Perſon. The Meſ- " ſenger ſaid, at parting, There ſhould be nothing " requir'd of him, but what was ſafe and ho- " nourable, adding, Something muſt be done, to " blind the Duke of York. Novemb. 15th, the " Lord who came between the King and him, " brought the Duke the Copy of the Letter he " was to write to pleaſe his Royal Highneſs. " The Duke was perſuaded to do this; yet before " he parted with the Letter, he deſired to know " in whoſe Hands it was to be depoſited, for he " would truſt it with none but the King. The " Lord told him, It ſhould be as he would have " it; though, if his Royal Highneſs ask'd a Copy, " it could not be refuſed. The Duke ſaid, He " muſt referr himſelf intirely to His Majeſty's " Pleaſure. In this Letter, he was made to " write, That his Crimes appear'd to him with ſo " terrible an Aſpect, that he would rather Die, than " be tormented with the Stings of them: He therefore " implor'd the King's Grace and Pardon, which he " did not deſire, but by the Mediation of his Royal " Highneſs." The 24th of November, the ſame Lord came to him, and acquainted him, " That " His Majeſty's Command was, To render him- " ſelf the next Day; caution'd him, to play his " part, to avoid Queſtions as much as poſſible, " and to ſeem abſolutely converted to his Unkle's " Intereſt, bidding him bear with ſome Words " that might ſeem harſh." The Way being thus made for the Duke of Monmouth's Appearance at Court, and for his formal Reconciliation to the King, a Relation of it was thus given to the Publick, to pleaſe the Duke of York, and to deceive the People.

The Affection and Arts of the King.

Whitehall, Nov. 25. His Majeſty having this Afternoon Called an Extraordinary Council, was pleas'd to Acquaint them, That the Duke of Monmouth did laſt Night Surrender himſelf to Mr. Secretary Jenkins, having before writ a very ſubmiſſive Letter to His Majeſty, intirely Reſigning himſelf to His Majeſty's Diſpoſal. That His Majeſty, and His Royal Highneſs went down to Mr. Secretary's Office, where the Duke of Monmouth was, who ſhewed himſelf very ſenſible of his Crime in the late Conſpiracy, making a full Declaration of it: And that having ſhew'd an extraordinary Penitence for the ſame, and made a particular Submiſſion to His Royal Highneſs, for his Misbehaviour towards him; His Majeſty, and His Royal Highneſs receiv'd ſo much Satisfaction, that, upon His Royal Highneſs's Deſire and Intreaty, His Majeſty was pleas'd to Pardon the ſaid Duke, and thereupon did Order Mr. Attorney-General to ſtop farther Proceedings againſt him: But Ordered, he ſhould Proceed, notwithſtanding, againſt all the reſt of the Conſpirators. 1683.

The Duke of Monmouth, in his own Journal, farther Obſerves, " That His Majeſty ſeeing him " at Night, could not diſſemble his Satisfaction, " but preſs'd his Hand; which he had not done " ſince his Return from the French Service. The " King acted his Part very well, ſo did the Duke, " and His Royal Highneſs was not ill pleaſed. " The next Day, His Majeſty took the Duke aſide, " and falling on the Buſineſs of the Lord Ruſſell, " ſaid, He enclin'd to have Sav'd him, but was forc'd " to Conſent to his Death, otherwiſe he muſt have " broke with his Brother: And when the Duke " was going to Remonſtrate, how Cruelly that " Noble Lord had been dealt with; the King " bid him think no more of it. At Night, the " Lord who was the King and the Duke's Con- " fident, told His Grace, He fear'd the Duke of " York began to ſmell out His Majeſty's Car- " riage; for a Courtier had that Morning told " His Royal Highneſs, All that was done, was " but a Sham; and His Royal Highneſs appearing " to be the Inſtrument of the Reconciliation, was a " meer Trick." 'Tis certain, the Duke of York did ſuſpect the Double-dealing; and was ſo far Incens'd at it, that he would not be Content, till the King demanded of the Duke of Monmouth the Publication of his Two Letters; one of which he had written before his Surrendring, and the other after. In this latter, he was brought to ſay, He was inform'd, 'twas reported of him, as if he had deſign'd to Extenuate the late Conſpiracy, and Traduce the Teſtimonies againſt them that Suffer'd. His Majeſty, and the Duke, knew how ingenuouſly he Confeſs'd all things, and that he was not conſcious of the leaſt Evil againſt His Majeſty: It grieved him, however, that he had ſo greatly Countenanc'd the ſaid Conſpiracy. He would Publiſh this, for his Vindication; beſeeching His Majeſty not to Look back, but that He wou'd pleaſe to Forget thoſe Injuries which He had Forgiven: It ſhou'd be his Care, for the future, to Sin no more, or ſuffer himſelf to be Miſled from his Duty. He wou'd ſpend his whole Life, to deſerve that Pardon which He had Granted to,

Duke of York Diſſatisfy'd.

His Moſt Dutiful MONMOUTH.

To this Motion of the King, the Duke humbly Anſwer'd, " That the firſt Paper was Sign'd, on Aſ- " ſurance it ſhou'd never be made Publick, and there- " fore he muſt poſitively refuſe to Conſent to it; " And that the laſt was got out of him by Threats " and Promiſes: So he earneſtly Addreſs'd him- " ſelf to His Majeſty, to have the firſt Letter " deliver'd back to him; and ſaid, He thought " the laſt, was a Diminution of his Honour." The King uſed Arguments to perſuade him to Conſent, that all his Letters might be Printed; as the only Means to continue him in his Favour, without Offending His Royal Highneſs: But the Duke would by no means Conſent, and therefore was to fall again under His Majeſty's Diſpleaſure, and muſt be Baniſh'd from the Court. The Duke makes this Entry in his Journal, Novemb. 27. Several told me of the Storm that was brewing: Rumſey was with 39 (i. e. the Duke of York,) and was ſeen to come out, crying, That he muſt Accuſe a Man he Lov'd. The King gave his ſecret Inſtructions to the Duke of Monmouth, That he ſhould, for his own Safety, go out of England:

Duke of Monmouth again under the King's Diſpleaſure.

And

1683. And yet His Majesty wrote a Letter to him on Decemb. 19. bidding him Stay till he heard farther from him. But, it seems, the King could not prevail with his Brother to Forgive the Duke; and therefore he retir'd to Holland, and met with a Noble Reception at the Hague. His Majesty was Well-pleas'd with the Entertainment he found in another Court; though, for Reasons of State, he was oblig'd to forbid him his Own: He secretly supply'd him with Money, and sometimes writ to him with his own Hand; and could never endure those Courtiers, that (by mistake) thought it a Compliment to speak Ill of him, and to aggravate his Disobedience to His Majesty.

Marriage of the Lady Anne, & George Prince of Denmark.

The most happy Action in this Year, was the Marriage of the Princess Anne to a Protestant Prince, George, Brother to the King of Denmark. 'Tis certain, that the King, by his own Judgment, or by an Over-ruling Providence, had taken Care that his two Neices should be strictly Bred up in the Religion of the Church of England, and both Marry'd into Protestant Families, even against the Inclination, and the Design and Interest of their Father. The present Match, had this Notice given of it, by Authority:

Whitehall, July 28. "His Majesty having been "Pleased, upon Instance made unto Him, in the "Name of the King of Denmark, to Consent, "That his Brother, Prince George, should come "hither, to make his Addresses to the Lady Anne, "His Majesty's Neice, in order to Marriage; "The same was accordingly Celebrated this "Evening, at St. James's, by the Bishop of London, "in the Presence of Their Majesty's, Their Royal "Highnesses, and the Chiefest of the Nobility. "And since, Their Majesties, and Their Royal "Highnesses, as likewise the Prince and Princess, "have, upon this Occasion, receiv'd the Compli-"ments and Congratulations of the Foreign Mi-"nisters residing at this Court.

The King seem'd Resolv'd not to be troubled with another House of Commons, and labour'd to suppress all Accounts of the late Proceedings in Parliament; as appears by this Order of Council,

An Order against Printing the Journals of the House of Commons.

Dated Novemb. 16. Whereas Mr. Jodrell, Clerk of the House of Commons, hath this Day made Oath before His Majesty in Council, That he is credibly inform'd, and well assured, That diverse Booksellers in London, and elsewhere, have surreptitiously obtained several Books pretended to be Copies of all the Journals of the said House of Commons, ever since his Majesty's most Happy Restauration, and do design to Print the same, by which many Errors and Mistakes will unavoidably happen therein: His Majesty was this Day Pleas'd to Order in Council, That no Person whatever do Presume to Print, or cause to be Printed the said Journals, or any part thereof, without His Majesty's License in that behalf first had and obtained. And it was further Ordered, That Notice of this His Majesty's Pleasure be Publish'd in the next Gazette, to the end None may pretend Ignorance thereof.

Honours and Preferments.

As to Honours and Preferments: On Aug. 14. His Majesty, as a Mark of his Royal Favour, Knighted William Halford of Welham, and Edward Wigley of Scraptoft in the County of Leicester, Esq; On Sept. 26. His Majesty was pleas'd, as a Mark of the gracious Esteem he had for the great and faithful Services which the Right-Honourable Sir Francis North, Lord-Keeper of the Great Seal of England, had rendred the Crown, to create him a Baron of this Kingdom, by the Name and Stile of Baron of Guilford in the County of Surrey. About the same time, the Place of Lord-Chief-Justice of the King's-Bench, being vacant by the Death of Sir Edmund Sanders, His Majesty was pleas'd to conferr the same upon Sir George Jeffreys, Kt. and Bar. Chief-Justice of Chester; who, on Michaelmas-Day, was accordingly Sworn into that Office, by the Lord-Keeper. His Majesty was likewise pleas'd to constitute Sir Thomas Jones, one of the Judges of the King's-Bench, Lord-Chief-Justice of the Common-Pleas, in the Room of Sir Francis Pemberton, who not being able to go into all the New Measures of the Court, had now obtain'd his Quietus. And Sir Richard Holloway, one of His Majesty's Serjeants at Law, was Sworn one of the Judges of the King's-Bench, in the Place of Mr. Justice Raymond, deceas'd. On Octob. 4. Mr. Attorney-General acquainted His Majesty, That Judgment was Entred upon the Quo-Warranto against the City of London, according to His Majesty's Command: Whereupon the King Commanded the late Lord-Mayor and Sheriffs of the City to Attend him in Council: Who Attended accordingly; and being Call'd in, Sir William Pritchard was Sworn Lord-Mayor; and Peter Daniel, and Samuel Dashwood, Esq; took the usual Oaths of Sheriffs; and His Majesty then deliver'd to them their Commissions, under the Great Seal, to hold their respective Offices during his Pleasure. His Majesty was likewise pleas'd to conferr the Honour of Knighthood upon Thomas Jenner of the Inner-Temple, Esq; and to constitute him Recorder of the City of London: And on the same Day, the Lord-Chief-Justice Jeffreys was Sworn of the Privy-Council. On New-Year's-Day, Prince George of Denmark was Elected a Knight-Companion of the Most Noble Order of the Garter, in a Chapter held at Whitehall, being first Knighted by the Sovereign, and then Invested with the George and Garter: And on Jan. 10. the Dukes of Somerset and Northumberland were Elected Knights-Companions of the same Order. About the middle of January, His Majesty was pleas'd to conferr the Stile and Dignity of a Duke of this Kingdom, upon Charles Earl of Burford, his Natural Son, by Creating him Duke of St. Albans. On the First Day of Hilary-Term, Sir Thomas Jenner, Kt. John Wyndham, Esq; Edwin Wyatt, Esq; Edward Birch, Esq; Henry Bedingfield, Esq; Sir Edward Nevile, Kt. Sir Paul Barret, Kt. Anthony Farrington, Esq; John Jeffreson, Esq; Edward Lutwiche, Esq; Richard Heath, Esq; Henry Selby, Esq; John Millington, Esq; Thomas Powell, Esq; Owen Wynne, Esq; and Sir George Pudsey, Kt. being Call'd, by the King's Writ, to take upon them the State and Degree of Sergeants at Law, Appear'd in the Court of Chancery, and took their Oaths, and perform'd the usual Ceremonies of a Procession to Westminster-Hall, on Jan. 31. when they presented their Rings with this Servile Motto, A Deo Rex, à Rege Lex: Which some interpreted to be, a Resolving the Laws of England into the King's Will and Pleasure.

The Lord-Mayor & Sheriffs made by the King's Commission.

Call of Serjeants

This Year, Abroad, was remarkable, for the formidable Siege of Vienna by the Turks, and the Raising of it by the King of Poland, and the Electors of Saxony and Bavaria: And likewise, for the Demolishing of Tangier, which the King of England could hold no longer, without an Expence of Men and Money, greater than he was willing to bear.

Siege of Vienna.

Demolishing of Tangier.

State of Religion.

In Matters of Religion, the Dissenters bore all the Odium of the late Conspiracy; and were not only branded for expres Rebels and Villains, in a multitude of Addresses presented to the King, but were likewise severely Arraign'd by the King himself, in a solemn Form of Declaration to all his Loving Subjects, concerning the Treasonable Conspiracy against his Sacred Person and Government, lately Discover'd: Appointed to be Read in all Churches and Chapels within this Kingdom, as well on Sunday the 2d of September, as upon a Day of Publick Thanksgiving, (as followeth:)

CHARLES

1683.

CHARLES R.

The King's Declaration.

"IT hath been Our Obſervation, That for ſeveral Years laſt paſt, a Malevolent Party hath made it their Buſineſs to promote Sedition, by Falſe News, Libellous Pamphlets, and other Wicked Arts; whereby they endeavour'd not only to render Our Government Odious, and Our moſt Faithful Subjects Suſpected to the People, but even to Incite them to a Diſlike and Hatred of Our Royal Perſon: Whereupon it was evident to Us, That the Heads of this Party could have no other Aim, but the Ruine of Us, and Our Government.

"And whilſt, by Our utmoſt Care, We manifeſted to all Our Subjects, Our Zeal for the Maintenance of the Proteſtant Religion, and Our Reſolutions to Govern according to Law; It was a great Trouble to Us, to find, That Evil Perſons, by Miſ-repreſenting Our Actions to the People, ſhould ſo far Inſinuate themſelves into the Affections of the Weaker Sort, as that they look'd upon them as the only Patriots and Aſſertors of their Religion and Liberties, and gave themſelves up intirely to their Conduct.

"As their Numbers encreaſed, ſo did their Boldneſs, to that height, that by often ſhewing themſelves in Tumults and Riots, and Unlawful and Seditious Conventicles, they not only Engaged, but Proclaimed an Impunity to their own Party, who thought themſelves already too Strong for the Laws; and they ſeemed to believe, that in a ſhort Time they ſhould Gain upon the People, ſo as to perſuade them to a Total Defection from the Government.

"But it pleaſed God, by theſe their Violent Ways, to Open the Eyes of Our good Subjects, who eaſily fore-ſaw what Troubles theſe Methods would produce; and thereupon, with great Courage, aſwell as Duty and Affection towards Us, upon all Occaſions, did manifeſt their Reſolution and Readineſs in Defence of Our Perſon, and Support of Our Government, and the Religion Eſtabliſhed; And did likewiſe Convince the Common People, of the Villainous Deſigns of their Factious Leaders, and the Miſeries that would befall them, in purſuing ſuch Courſes.

"By theſe Means, the Factious Party loſt Ground daily; and finding that it was impoſſible to keep up the Spirits of their Followers, againſt the Religion Eſtabliſh'd, and the Laws, whilſt We were Steady in the Maintenance and Execution of them, became Deſperate, and reſolved not to truſt any longer to the ſlow Methods of Sedition, but to betake themſelves to Arms; not doubting, but that they remain'd ſtill Strong enough, by Force, to Over-turn the Government, which they could not Undermine.

"It is hard to imagine, how Men of ſo many different Intereſts and Opinions, could Join in any Enterprize; but it is certain, they readily Concurr'd in the Reſolution of taking Arms to Deſtroy the Government, even before they had Agreed what to ſet up in the Place of it.

"To which Purpoſe, they took ſeveral Ways: For, whilſt Some were Contriving a General Inſurrection in this Kingdom, and likewiſe in Scotland; Others were Conſpiring to Aſſaſſinate Our Royal Perſon, and Our Deareſt Brother, and to Maſſacre the Magiſtrates of Our City of London, and Our Officers of State, that there might be no Appearance of Government, nor any Means for Our Subjects to Unite for their Defence.

"In caſe it had pleas'd God to permit theſe Wicked Deſigns to have taken Effect, there could have been nothing in Proſpect but Confuſion: For inſtead of the Reformation they pretended, their Succeſs would have produced Diviſions and Wars amongſt themſelves; until the Predomininant Party wou'd have Enſlaved the reſt, and the whole Kingdom. 1683.

"But the Divine Providence, which hath preſerved Us through the whole Courſe of Our Life, hath at this time, in an Extraordinary manner, ſhewed it ſelf, in the Wonderful and Gracious Deliverance of Us, and Our Deareſt Brother, and all Our Loyal Subjects, from this Horrid and Damnable Conſpiracy.

"As it is therefore Our Deſire, that all Our Loving Subjects ſhould Join with Us, in giving Thanks to Almighty God for this Mercy; ſo we thought it neceſſary they ſhould be now, in ſome meaſure, Inform'd of the Fact, as it hath been Diſcover'd to Us by undoubted Proof, and the Confeſſion of divers of the Accomplices in this Conſpiracy; whereof, though we have not as yet perfectly Traced all the Particulars, the Principal and Main Deſigns of it, nevertheleſs, have appear'd to be as followeth.

"About the Beginning of October laſt, when the Heads of the Faction ſaw the Magiſtracy of Our City of London ſettled in Perſons of Loyal Principles, they became Impatient, and fell immediately to Conſult of Riſing in Arms; for which ſome thought their Party ſo well prepared, that they could not fail of attaining their Ends, whenever they ſhould break-out into open Force.

"Whereupon there was a Meeting of ſome of the Principal Conſpirators, to Agree about the beſt Means to Maſter Our Guards, and to Seize Our Perſon: But, upon Conſideration, they found it neceſſary to prepare their Friends in the ſeveral Counties, as alſo the Diſaffected Party in Scotland, to Join with them; without which, any Attempt in Our ſaid City, or upon Our Guards, appeared too Raſh to be undertaken: ſo that they laid aſide the thoughts of a preſent Riſing, and diſpoſed themſelves to find, by a Correſpondence with Scotland, and with ſeveral Parts of this Our Kingdom, how far they might be Aſſiſted by a General Inſurrection, ſo that they might not, in humane probability, fail of Succeſs.

"Whilſt this firſt Deſign was forming, ſome Villains were likewiſe carrying on that Horrid and Execrable Plot, of Aſſaſſinating Our Royal Perſon, and Our Deareſt Brother, in Our coming from New-Market, and Money was depoſited for that Purpoſe: But by the Shortneſs of the Time, (We being then immediately upon Our Return) and for want of neceſſary Preparations, they were forced to deferr the Execution of it till further Opportunity.

"It was then Propoſed among them, Whether they ſhould attempt the ſame, at our next going to New-Market in March laſt? But ſome Objected, That Our Guards which uſually remain here for ſome time after Our Departure, wou'd be capable of making a great Oppoſition, upon the arrival of the News: For which Reaſon, and becauſe they were not then in a ſufficient Readineſs, it was Agreed to be done at Our Return from New-Market.

"The Place appointed, was the Houſe of one Richard Rumbold, a Malſter, call'd the Rye, near Hoddeſdon in the County of Hertford: And it was Reſolved, That Forty Perſons in Number, who were to be Actors in this Aſſaſſination, under the Command of the ſaid Richard Rumbold, ſhould hide themſelves in or near the ſaid Houſe, and when our Coach ſhould come over againſt them, then Three or Four were to Shoot with Blunderbuſſes at the Poſtilion and Horſes; and if they ſhould fail in Killing the 1683. " Horſes, ſome were to be ready in the Way, " who, in the Habit of Labourers, ſhould turn " a Cart croſs the Paſſage, and ſo ſtop Our Coach: " Others were appointed to Shoot into the Coach, " where Our Royal Perſon and Our Deareſt Bro- " ther were to be: Others to Fire upon the " Guards that ſhould be then Attending Us. And " it was further Reſolved, That upon the ſame " Day, many Lords, and other Perſons of Qua- " lity, whom they ſuppoſed favourable to their " Deſign, ſhould be Invited to Dine in Our City " of London, that they might be the more ready " to Appear among the Citizens, upon arrival of " the News. The Actors in the ſaid Aſſaſſina- " tion having Contriv'd the Manner of their " Eſcape, by a nearer Paſſage than the uſual " Road; by which means they hoped to get to " London as ſoon as the News could be brought " thither.

" They thought it would be eaſie, upon their " Perpetrating this Horrid Fact, to Poſſeſs them- " ſelves of the Government; Preſuming upon the " Numbers of the Diſaffected.

" But leſt the Blackneſs of ſuch an Action might " Deterr others from Joining with them, they " prepared to Palliate it, as far as they could, by " ſome Remonſtrance, or Declaration, which was " ready to be Printed, and Diſperſed in that Con- " fuſion, to Amuſe the People. And leſt Our " Officers of State, and the Magiſtrates of Our " ſaid City, with the Militia thereof, and other " Our Loyal Subjects, ſhould be able to put ſome " Stop to their Career, they Reſolved to follow " this Blow with a Maſſacre; wherein they par- " ticularly deſign'd for immediate Slaughter, " Our Officers of State, the preſent Lord-Mayor " and Sheriffs, and the Magiſtracy of Our City, " and other Our Subjects that had been moſt Emi- " nent for their Loyalty.

" But it pleaſed Almighty God, by his Won- " derful Providence, to Defeat their Councels, by " the ſudden Fire at New-Market, which neceſſi- " tated Our Return from thence before the Time " We had appointed.

" Yet theſe Villains were not thereby Diſcou- " raged from Purſuing the ſame Bloody Deſign, " but Reſolved to take the firſt Opportunity for " Effecting the ſame; and propoſed to themſelves, " That it might be done, either in Our Paſſage " from Windſor to Hampton-Court, or in Our " Journey to Winchester, or when We ſhould go " by Water in Our Barge, or under Bedford- " Garden-Wall, as We ſhould paſs that Way, or " at the Bull-Feaſt which was to be in Red-Lion- " Fields; they being inform'd, that We and Our " Deareſt Brother had Intentions of coming " thither.

" And that they might be the better Prepared, " when there ſhould be Occaſion, by having a " certain Number of Arms lying always ready " for that Purpoſe; Arms for Forty Men were " beſpoke in all haſte, (viz.) Thirty Carbines " with Bells and Swivels, Thirty Caſes of Piſtols, " and Ten Blunderbuſſes; which were accordingly " made, and paid for.

" And for the more eaſie Drawing their Party " together againſt the Time of Execution, they " Contrived to Divide Our Cities of London and " Weſtminſter, and the Suburbs, into Twenty " Parts; from each of which they expected Five- " hundred Men to be ready at the firſt Onſet: " And ſome Agitators were to give an Account " of the Men to be furniſh'd in each Diviſion, " and to give out Orders to them, as there ſhould " be Occaſion.

" And to the End, the Forces they ſhould Raiſe, " might be the ſooner Modell'd into the Form of " an Army, there were One Hundred Old Officers, " who had been Engaged in the late Rebellion, " ready in Town to take the Command of them: 1683. " In the Purſuit of which Project they continued, " till they knew that a Diſcovery had been made " unto Us.

" During all this Time, the Principal Conſpi- " rators were Managing their other Deſign for a " General Inſurrection in both Kingdoms.

" The late Earl of Shaftsbury, who had at firſt " preſſed them to a ſudden Riſing, which he " would have had before the 17th of November " laſt, or upon that Day at the fartheſt, ſent to " the Conſpirators, at a Meeting appointed by " them, to know their Reſolution; and finding " they would not adventure, without farther Pre- " paration, convey'd himſelf ſecretly into Holland, " to avoid the Danger he might be in by a " Diſcovery.

" His Withdrawing himſelf from their Councels, " did not Diſcourage them from Purſuing their " Deſign, only made them more Cautious: Where- " upon a New Councel was appointed of Six Per- " ſons that were to have the Chief Management " of Affairs, in order to a General Inſurrection, " by a Correſpondency with their Party in Scot- " land, and ſeveral Counties of this Our Kingdom. " And becauſe a Correſpondency by Letters was " thought Dangerous, it was held neceſſary that " ſome Perſon ſhould be ſent into Scotland, to " Invite the Heads of the Diſaffected Party in " that Our Kingdom, to come hither, under pre- " tence of Purchaſing Lands in Carolina; But, " in truth, to Concert with them the beſt Means " for Carrying on the Deſign Jointly in both " Kingdoms: And a Treaty was thereupon had " with Archibald Campbell, late Earl of Argyle, " already Attainted of Treaſon, who demanded " Thirty thouſand Pounds at firſt, but afterwards " agreed to accept of Ten thouſand Pounds, for " Buying of Arms in Holland, and making other " Proviſions neceſſary for a Rebellion within Our " Kingdom of Scotland.

" In the ſaid Councel of Six, it was Debated, " Whether the Riſing in this Kingdom ſhould be " firſt in Our City of London, where, by reaſon " of the vaſt Numbers that might readily Unite, " they thought they might eaſily Maſter the " Guards; or rather in ſome remote Parts, whereby " We ſhould be under a neceſſity of ſending Our " Guards to Suppreſs them, and thereby the Riſing " in Our ſaid City would become more Secure and " Effectual? But at laſt it was Reſolved, as moſt " convenient, That it ſhould be in all Parts at " the ſame Time, leſt Our City might be Defended " by the Militia thereof, without the Help of Our " Guards, which we might ſend for the Supreſſing " any Inſurrection in the Country; And they did " All diſpoſe themſelves accordingly, for the Com- " paſſing their Deſign, which was very near taking " Effect.

" But ſuch was the abundant Mercy of Al- " mighty God, while they were yet meditating " their Execrable Miſchiefs againſt Our Royal " Perſon, Our Deareſt Brother, and the Govern- " ment, a Diſcovery was made unto Us by one of " the Accomplices, on the 12th of June laſt; " ſince which time, We have uſed the beſt Means " We could, for the Detecting and Prevention " of ſo Helliſh a Conſpiracy.

" But ſo it has happen'd, that diverſe of the " Conſpirators having Notice of Warrants iſſued " out for their Apprehenſion, are fled from " Juſtice, (viz.) James Duke of Monmouth, the " Lord Melvin, Sir John Cochrane, Sir Thomas " Armſtrong, Robert Ferguſon, who was the Com- " mon Agitator intruſted by all Parties in the " ſeveral Conſpiracies, Richard Goodenough, Francis " Goodenough, Richard Rumbold the Malſter, Wil- " liam Rumbold his Brother, Richard Nelthorp, " Nathanael Wade, William Thompſon, James Burton,

" Joſeph

1683. " Joſeph Elby, Samuel Gibbs, Francis Charleton, " Joſeph Tyly, Caſteers, Lobb, both " Nonconformiſt Preachers, Edward Norton, John " Row, John Ayloffe, and John Atherton.

" Ford Lord Gray being Apprehended, made his " Eſcape out of the Hands of a Serjeant at Arms; " and Arthur late Earl of Eſſex, being Committed " to the Tower, for High-Treaſon, Kill'd him- " ſelf.

" Others have been Taken, and Committed to " Cuſtody; ſome of Whom, (viz.) the Lord Wil- " liam Ruſſell, Thomas Walcott, William Hone, and " John Rouſe, have, upon their Tryals, been Con- " victed, Attainted, and Executed, according to " Law.

" This We thought fit to make known to " Our Loving Subjects; that they being ſenſible " (as We are) of the Mercy of God, in this great " Deliverance, may Chearfully and Devoutly " Join with Us, in Returning Solemn Thanks to " Almighty God for the ſame.

" For which End, We do hereby Appoint the " Ninth Day of September next, to be Obſerved " as a Day of Thankſgiving, in all Churches and " Chapels within this Our Kingdom of England, " Dominion of Wales, and Town of Berwick upon " Tweed, in ſuch Manner as ſhall be by Us Di- " rected in a Form of Prayer, with Thankſgiving, " which we have Commanded to be Prepared by " Our Biſhops, and Publiſh'd for that Purpoſe.

" And it is Our Pleaſure, That this Declaration " be Publickly Read in all the ſaid Churches and " Chapels, aſwell on Sunday the Second of Sep- " tember next, as upon the Day of Thankſgiving " aforeſaid.

Given at Our Court at Whitehall, the Twenty-eighth Day of July, 1683. In the Five and thirtieth Year of Our Reign.

As the Diſſenters were now mark'd out for Hatred and Proſecution, becauſe of their high Offences given to the Court; ſo the Church-men were in much the greater Reputation with the King, and his Brother; not for the ſake of the Purity of their Faith and Worſhip, nor indeed for their Legal Eſtabliſhment, but purely for the Diſtinction of Loyalty, i. e. of Adherence to the Intereſt of the Court, and the Cauſe of the Duke's Succeſſion. Under the Impulſe of this Zeal, they carry'd the Principles of Prerogative and Subjection, to a much higher degree than their Fore-fathers had ever thought of, or than they themſelves could ever practiſe. Sermons and Diſcourſes were full of thoſe flaming Notions; and eſpecially the Univerſity of Oxford made a warm Decree, Drawn up in Latin by the Profeſſor of Divinity, and Paſs'd in the Convocation on Saturday July 21. and Preſented to His Majeſty in Engliſh on the 24th of July.

Principles of Loyalty, carry'd higher than Law or Reaſon.

The Judgment and Decree of the Univerſity of Oxford, Paſs'd in their Convocation, on July 21. 1683. againſt certain Pernicious Books, and Damnable Doctrines, Deſtructive to the Sacred Perſons of Princes, their State and Government, and of all Humane Society.

Oxford Decree.

" ALthough the Barbarous Aſſaſſination lately " Enterpriz'd againſt the Perſon of His " Sacred Majeſty, and his Royal Brother, engage " all our Thoughts to reflect, with utmoſt Deteſta- " tion and Abhorrence, on that Execrable Villainy, " hateful to God and Man; and pay our due " Acknowledgments to the Divine Providence, " which, by Extraordinary Methods, brought it " to paſs, that the Breath of our Noſtrils, the " Anointed of the Lord, is not taken in the Pit 1683. " which was prepared for him, and that under " his Shadow we continue to live and enjoy the " Bleſſings of his Government; yet notwithſtand- " ing, we find it to be a neceſſary Duty at this " time, to Search into, and Lay open thoſe Im- " pious Doctrines, which having of late been " ſtudiouſly Diſſeminated, gave Riſe and Growth " to theſe Nefarious Attempts, and paſs upon " them our Solemn Publick Cenſure and Decree " of Condemnation.

" Therefore, To the Honour of the Holy and " Undivided Trinity, the Preſervation of Catho- " lick Truth in the Church; And that the King's " Majeſty may be Secured both from the Attempts " of Open Bloody Enemies, and Machinations of " Treacherous Hereticks and Schiſmaticks: We " the Vice-Chancellor, Doctors, Proctors, and " Maſters Regent and Not Regent, Met in Con- " vocation, in the accuſtomed Manner, Time, and " Place, on Saturday the One and twentieth Day " of July, in the Year 1683. concerning certain " Propoſitions contained in diverſe Books and " Writings publiſh'd in the Engliſh, and alſo the " Latin Tongues, Repugnant to the Holy Scrip- " tures, Decrees of Councils, Writings of the " Fathers, the Faith and Profeſſion of the Primi- " tive Church, and alſo Deſtructive of the Kingly " Government, the Safety of His Majeſty's Perſon, " the Publick Peace, the Laws of Nature, and " Bonds of Humane Society; by our Unanimous " Aſſent and Conſent, have Decreed and Deter- " mined in Manner and Form following.

The Firſt Propoſition.

" All Civil Authority is derived Originally " from the People.

The Second.

" There is a mutual Compact, Tacit or Expreſs, " between a Prince and his Subjects; and that if " He perform not His Duty, they are diſcharg'd " from Theirs.

The Third.

" That if Lawful Governors become Tyrants, " or Govern otherwiſe than by the Laws of God " and Man they ought to do, they Forfeit the " Right they had unto their Government." Lex Rex. Buchanan, de Jure Regni. Vindiciæ contra Tyrannos. Bellarm. de Conciliis, de Pontifice. Milton. Goodwin. Baxt. H. C.

The Fourth.

" The Sovereignty of England, is in the Three " Eſtates, viz. King, Lords, and Commons. The " King has but a Co-ordinate Power, and may " be Over-ruled by the other Two." Lex Rex. Hunton, Of a Limited and Mix'd Monarchy. Baxter's H. C. Polit. Catechiſ.

The Fifth.

" Birth-right, and Proximity of Blood, give no " Title to Rule or Government; and it is Lawful " to Preclude the next Heir from his Right and " Succeſſion to the Crown." Lex Rex. Hunt's Poſtſcript. Dolman's Hiſtory of Succeſſion. Julian the Apoſtate. Mene Tekel.

The Sixth.

" It is Lawful for Subjects, without the Conſent, " and againſt the Command of the Supreme Ma- " giſtrate, to enter into Leagues, Covenants, and " Aſſociations, for Defence of Themſelves and " their Religion." Solemn League and Covenant. Late Aſſociation.

The Seventh.

" Self-Preſervation, is the fundamental Law of " Nature, and ſuperſedes the Obligation of all 1683. " others, whenſoever they ſtand in Competition " with it." Hobbs, de Civ. Leviathan.

The Eighth.

" The Doctrine of the Goſpel, concerning Pa- " tient Suffering of Injuries, is not inconſiſtent " with violent Reſiſting of the Higher Powers, in " caſe of Perſecution for Religion." Lex Rex. Julian the Apoſtate. Apolog. Relat.

The Ninth.

" There lies no Obligation upon Chriſtians to " Paſſive Obedience, when the Prince Commands " any thing againſt the Laws of our Country; " and the Primitive Chriſtians choſe rather to " Die, than Reſiſt, becauſe Chriſtianity was not " ſettled by the Laws of the Empire." Julian the Apoſtate.

The Tenth.

" Poſſeſſion and Strength, give a Right to " Govern; and Succeſs in a Cauſe or Enterprize, " proclaims it to be Lawful and Juſt: To Purſue " it, is to Comply with the Will of God, becauſe " it is to follow the Conduct of his Providence." Hobbs. Owen's Sermon before the Regicides, Jan. 31. 1648. Baxter. Jenkin's Petition, Octob. 1651.

The Eleventh.

" In the State of Nature, there is no difference " between Good and Evil, Right and Wrong: " The State of Nature, is a State of War, " in which every Man hath a Right to all " things.

The Twelfth.

" The Foundation of Civil Authority, is this " Natural Right; which is not Given, but Left " to the Supreme Magiſtrate, upon Mens entring " into Societies: And not only a Foreign Invader, " but a Domeſtick Rebel, puts himſelf again into " a State of Nature, to be Proceeded againſt, not " as a Subject, but an Enemy; and conſequently " acquires, by his Rebellion, the ſame Right over " the Life of his Prince, as the Prince, for the " moſt heinous Crimes, has over the Life of his " own Subjects.

The Thirteenth.

" Every Man, after his Entring into a Society, " retains a Right of Defending himſelf againſt " Force; and cannot transferr that Right to the " Commonwealth, when he conſents to that Union " whereby a Commonwealth is made: And in " caſe a great many Men together have already " Reſiſted the Commonwealth, for which every " one of them expecteth Death, they have liberty " then to join together to Aſſiſt and Defend one " another: Their bearing of Arms, ſubſequent to " the firſt breach of their Duty, though it be to " maintain what they have done, is no new Unjuſt " Act; and if it be only to Defend their Perſons, " it is not Unjuſt at all.

The Fourteenth.

" An Oath ſuperadds no Obligation to Part, " and a Part obliges no farther than it is credited: " And conſequently, if a Prince gives any Indica- " tion, that he does not believe the Promiſes of " Fealty and Allegiance made by any of his Sub- " jects, they are thereby freed from their Sub- " jection; and notwithſtanding their Parts and " Oaths, may Lawfully Rebell againſt, and Deſtroy " their Sovereign. Hobbs, de Civ. Leviathan.

The Fifteenth.

" If a People, that by Oath and Duty are " Obliged to a Sovereign, ſhall ſinfully Diſpoſſeſs " him, and, contrary to their Covenants, Chuſe " and Covenant with another; they may be " Obliged by their latter Covenants, notwith- " ſtanding their former." Baxter's H. C. 1683.

The Sixteenth.

" All Oaths are Unlawful, and contrary to the " Word of God. Quakers.

The Seventeenth.

" An Oath Obligeth not in the Senſe of the " Impoſers, but the Takers." Sheriff's Caſe.

The Eighteenth.

" Dominion is founded in Grace.

The Nineteenth.

" The Powers of this World, are Uſurpations " upon the Prerogative of Jeſus Chriſt; and it is " the Duty of God's People to Deſtroy them, in " order to the ſetting Chriſt upon his Throne." Fifth Monarchy-men.

The Twentieth.

" The Presbyterian Government is the Sceptre " of Chriſt's Kingdom, to which King's, aſwell as " others, are bound to Submit: And the King's " Supremacy in Eccleſiaſtical Affairs, aſſerted by " the Church of England, is Injurious to Chriſt, " the Sole King and Head of his Church." Altare Damaſcenum. Apolog. Relat. Hiſt. Indulg. Cartwright Traverſ.

The Twenty-firſt.

" It is not lawful for Superiors to Impoſe any " thing in the Worſhip of God that is not ante- " cedently neceſſary.

The Twenty-ſecond.

" The Duty of not Offending a weak Brother, " is inconſiſtent with all Humane Authority of " making Laws concerning Indifferent Things." Proteſtant Reconciler.

The Twenty-third.

" Wicked Kings and Tyrants ought to be put " to Death; and if the Judges and Inferior Ma- " giſtrates will not do their Office, the Power of " the Sword devolves to the People: If the Major- " part of the People refuſe to Exerciſe this Power, " then the Miniſters may Excommunicate ſuch a " King: After which, it is Lawful for any of " the Subjects to Kill him, as the People did " Athaliah, and Jehu Jezabel." Buchanan. Knox. Goodman. Gilby. Jeſuits.

The Twenty-fourth.

" After the Sealing of the Scripture Canon, " the People of God, in all Ages, are to expect " New Revelations for a Rule of their Actions (a); " And it is Lawful for a Private Man, having " an Inward Motion from God, to Kill a Ty- " rant (b)." (a) Quakers, and other Enthuſiaſts. (b) Goodman.

The Twenty-fifth.

" The Example of Phinehas, is, to us, inſtead " of a Command: For what God hath Com- " manded or Approved in one Age, muſt needs " Oblige in all." Goodman. Knox. Naphtali.

The Twenty-ſixth.

" King Charles I. was Lawfully put to Death; " and his Murtherers were the Bleſſed Inſtruments " of God's Glory in their Generation." Milton. Goodwin. Owen.

The Twenty-ſeventh.

" King Charles I. made War upon his Parlia- " ment: And in ſuch a Caſe, the King may " not only be Reſiſted, but he ceaſeth to be " King." Baxter.

" We

1683. " We Decree, Judge and Declare all and every " of theſe Propoſitions to be Falſe, Seditious, and " Impious, and moſt of them to be alſo Heretital " and Blaſphemous, Infamous to Chriſtian Reli- " gion, and Deſtructive of all Government in " Church and State.

" We further Decree, That the Books which " contain the aforeſaid Propoſitions, and Impious " Doctrines, are fitted to deprave Good-manners, " corrupt the Minds of Uneaſie Men, ſtir up " Seditions and Tumults, overthrow States and " Kingdoms, and lead to Rebellion, Murther of " Princes, and Atheiſm it ſelf. And therefore we " Interdict all Members of the Univerſity from " the Reading of the ſaid Books, under the Penal- " ties in the Statutes expreſs'd. We alſo Order " the before-recited Books to be publickly Burnt " by the Hand of our Marſhal, in the Court of " our Schools.

Likewiſe we Order, That, in perpetual Memory " hereof, theſe our Decrees ſhall be Entred into the " Regiſtry of our Convocation; And that Copies " of them being communicated to the ſeveral Col- " leges and Halls within this Univerſity, they be " there publickly affix'd in the Libraries, Re- " fectories, or other fit Places where they may be " ſeen and read of all.

Laſtly, " We Command and ſtrictly Enjoin all " and ſingular the Readers, Tutors, Catechiſts, " and others to whom the Care and Truſt of " Initiating of Youth is committed, That they " diligently Inſtruct and Ground their Scholars " in that moſt neceſſary Doctrine, which, in a " manner, is the Badge and Character of the " Church of England, of Submitting to every Or- " dinance of Man, for the Lord's ſake; whether it " be to the King, as Supreme; or unto Governors, " as unto them that are ſent by him, for the " Puniſhment of Evil-doers, and for the Praiſe of " them that do Well: Teaching, That this Sub- " miſſion and Obedience, is to be Clear, Abſolute, " and without any Exception of any State or " Order of Men: Alſo, That they, according to " the Apoſtle's Precept, Exhort, That firſt of all, " Supplications, Prayers, Interceſſions, and giving " of Thanks, be made for all Men, for the KING, " and all that are in Authority; that we may lead " a quiet and peaceable Life, in all Godlineſs and " Honeſty, for this is good and acceptable in the " ſight of God our Saviour: And in eſpecial man- " ner, That they preſs and oblige them humbly " to offer their moſt Ardent and Daily Prayers at " the Throne of Grace, for the Preſervation of " our Sovereign Lord, King CHARLES, from " the Attempts of Open Violence and Secret " Machinations of Perfidious Traitors; That the " Defender of the Faith, being Safe under the " Defence of the Moſt-High, may Continue his " Reign on Earth, till He exchange it for that of " a late and Happy Immortality.

Upon whatever Order from a Higher Place this Decree was Drawn up by a ſingle Perſon, and Impos'd upon a Convocation in Surprize; whatever Excuſe might be given for the Making and the Paſſing of it: Yet there was this Juſtice due to it at the Revolution, that it ſhould then have been openly Adher'd to, or as openly Retracted and Condemn'd. Whereas, the Maker and Chief Promoters of it did evidently Contradict it, in their avow'd Principles, and apparent Practice, without any Reverſal of it, or any other ſign of Confeſſion, but only a tacit Condemnation of it, by privately Ordering the Printed Copies of it to be taken away from the Halls and other Publick Places, where they had before hung in Triumph. A Way of Proceeding ſo offenſive to ſome of the Younger Students, that it occaſion'd ſome Reflections and Pieces of Wit; among others, this Diſtich:

Cum Fronti ſit nulla Fides, ut Carmina dicunt;
Cur Tibi Bifronti JANE ſit ulla Fides?

1684. Hard and Arbitrary Judgments.

The Severe Puniſhment of State-Offenders went on; for on April 19. Sir Samuel Barnardiſton (who was Convicted the laſt Term of a High Miſdemeanour, for Writing and Publiſhing, in Letters to ſeveral Perſons in the Country, moſt Scandalous and Seditious Reflections againſt the Government) was brought to the King's-Bench-Bar, to receive the Judgment of the Court; which was, That he ſhould pay a Fine of 10000 l. to the King, ſhould find Sureties for his Good-behaviour during his Life, and ſhould be Committed to the King's-Bench Priſon till the ſame was paid and done. Mr. William Wright, Alderman of Oxford, having Defended the Privileges of the City, when the Majority of that Corporation, in an Addreſs, Offer'd them up to the King's Pleaſure, was, on April 16. Committed to the King's-Bench Priſon, for Publiſhing Scandalous Libels; and being brought, by Rule, to the Court of King's-Bench, on Apr. 19. Bail was accepted for him, himſelf being bound in a Recognizance of 10000 l. and Four Sureties in 5000 l. a-piece, for his Appearance and Abiding his Tryal, upon the Information Exhibited againſt him.

On April the 21. James Holloway, (who, upon Diſcovery of the late Plot, had fled to Nevis in the Weſt-Indies, and being there ſeized, had been ſent a Priſoner hither,) was brought from Newgate to the King's-Bench-Bar; and being ask'd, What he could ſay, why Execution ſhould not be Awarded againſt him, he ſtanding Attainted, by Outlawry, upon an Indictment of High-Treaſon? &c. He deſired to hear the Indictment read: Which being done, Mr. Attorney-General acquainted the Court, That His Majeſty was graciouſly pleas'd, in Mercy to the Priſoner, to wave the Outlawry, and to allow him liberty to make his Defence, upon a Tryal, if he were able to make any: But he ſaying nothing for himſelf, and ſeeming to Confeſs the Indictment, the Court made a Rule, That he ſhould be Executed at Tyburn, on Wedneſday Seven-night; which was accordingly done. On the ſame Day, Mr. Lawrence Braddon, and Mr. Hugh Speak, who had been laſt Term found Guilty of ſpreading a falſe Report, That the Earl of Eſſex was Murthered in the Tower; were now Fined, the firſt 2000 l. the other 1000 l. to the King, and to find Sureties for their Good-Behaviour during their Lives. And poor Langley Curtis, who was Convicted the laſt Term, for Printing a Scandalous and Seditious Pamphlet, call'd, The Lord Ruſſell's Ghoſt, or, The Night-Walker of Bloomsbury; was Fined 500 l. and Ordered to ſtand in the Pillory on Saturday next, in Bloomsbury-Market, and the ſaid Libel to be then Burnt by the Hands of the Common Hang-man.

Tryal of George Cawdron.

On April 30. at the Niſi prius held for the County of Middleſex, before the Lord-Chief-Juſtice Jeffreys, George Cawdron, Steward to the Earl of Clare, was Tryed upon an Information, for Speaking moſt Scandalous and Seditious Words againſt His Majeſty and the Government; and was found Guilty; and was the next Term Fined 100 l. and to ſtand in the Pillory in two ſeveral Places, and to find Sureties for his Good-behaviour during his Life.

Of the Nottingham Gentlemen.

In the Town of Nottingham, upon Michaelmas-Day, 1682. there had been a great Scuffle, upon the Election of a Mayor, and other Officers for that Corporation, ſome Claiming the Ancient Cuſtom, and others inſiſting on the New Charter; for which reaſon, thoſe who oppoſed the ſaid Charter, (viz.) William Sacheverell, George Gregory, and 1684. and Charles Hutchinſon, Eſqrs; William Greeves, and Seventeen others, had an Information Exhibited againſt them, for a great Riot by them committed, to the great Terror of many of His Majeſty's Loyal Subjects; and at a Tryal at the King's-Bench-Bar, on May 2. they were all, except one Barker, found Guilty of the ſaid Riot.

The Duke of York brings an Action of Scandalum Magnatum againſt John Dutton Colt, Eſq;

His Royal Highneſs the Duke of York, in Michaelmas-Term laſt, had brought his Action, upon the Statute of Scandalum Magnatum, againſt John Dutton Colt, Eſq; ſometime Bailiff of Leominſter in the County of Hereford, and Burgeſs for that Borough in the three laſt Parliaments, for theſe Words following, which were, no doubt, aggravated beyond the real Expreſſion of them; The Duke of York is a Papiſt; and before any ſuch Papiſt Dog ſhall be Succeſſor to the Crown of England, I will be Hang'd at my own Door; and I will venture my Life and Fortune to prevent the ſame.— If the King had no worſe Bailiffs nor Mayors in all his Corporations in England, and no worſe Parliament-Men than my ſelf, we would ſoon rout the Duke of York, Lord Marqueſs of Worceſter, and Lord Peterborough, and all ſuch Popiſh Dogs, out of the Kingdom; for I am ſure they are Damn'd ones.— If any of the Members of Parliament come to any Accident, or Untimely End, it ſhall preſently be laid on the Papiſts; and from that time, I will begin to Cut the Throat of the firſt Papiſt I meet, if it be the Duke of York himſelf.— If the King follows the Advice of that Damn'd Popiſh Dog his Brother, Lord-Marqueſs of Worceſter, and ſuch-like Evil-Counſellors, as I believe he does, in ſo often Diſſolving the Parliament, it will in the End be Worſe for him.— I will be Hang'd at my own Door, before ſuch a Damn'd Popiſh Raſcal as the Duke of York ſhall ever Inherit the Crown of England; and to prevent that, we will firſt take off that Damn'd Rogue our Popiſh Lord-Lieutenant, Lord Peterborough, Lord Hallifax, Sir Lionel Jenkins, and ſeveral others, who, I am ſure, are the Imps and Promoters of the Intereſt of that Damn'd Popiſh Dog, York.— In a Tryal at the King's-Bench-Bar, on May 3. the Jury brought in their Verdict for his Royal Highneſs, and Aſſeſſed for Damages 100000 Pounds.

Tryal of Samuel Packer.

On May 12. Samuel Packer, Deputy to Richard Goodenough, when he was Under-Sheriff of Middleſex, having been Convicted laſt Term, for Publiſhing a Scandalous and Seditious Libel, was now Fined 50 Marks, and Ordered to ſtand in the Pillory at three ſeveral Places in Weſtminſter.

Of Francis Smith.

On June 11. another Tryal was had at the Guildhall, before my Lord-Chief-Juſtice Jeffreys, upon an Information againſt Francis Smith, living at the Elephant and Caſtle in Cornhil, for Printing and Publiſhing a Scandalous and Seditious Libel, call'd, The Rarree Show; of which he was found Guilty, and Condemned to pay a Fine of 500 l. and to ſtand Thrice in the Pillory, with the ſaid Libel burnt by the Hands of the Common Hangman, and to find Sureties for his Good-behaviour during Life, and to be Committed till all was perform'd.

Sir Thomas Armſtrong Executed.

Sir Thomas Armſtrong, who had been Named in His Majeſty's Proclamation of 28 June, 1683. was Apprehended at Leyden in Holland, by Order of the States; and being put on-board one of His Majeſty's Yachts at Rotterdam, he was brought to Greenwich on the 10th of June at Night, and the next Morning Committed to Newgate, and was brought to the King's-Bench-Bar on the 14th of June; where being ask'd, What he could ſay for himſelf, why Execution ſhould not be Awarded againſt him, he ſtanding Attainted, by Outlawry, upon an Indictment of High-Treaſon? &c. He offer'd nothing in his own Defence which the Court thought material; and therefore a Rule was made, That he ſhould be Executed on Friday next at Tyburn; which was accordingly done.

Dr. Titus Oates, who had been long in Diſgrace at Court, and had his Lodgings, his Guard, and a great part of his Penſion taken from him, was now, on May 10. publickly Arreſted at the Amſterdam Coffee-Houſe, in an Action of Scandalum Magnatum, at the Suit of the Duke of York, for ſaying, His Royal Highneſs was a Traytor; with ſeveral ſuch other Reflections charged to be Malicious and Scandalous: He was carry'd from thence to Woodſtreet-Compter, for the greater Ignominy, where he lay in Durance Two Days, and then was Removed, by Habeas Corpus, to the King's-Bench Priſon: The next Term, he ſuffered Judgment to paſs, by Default, and on June 18. the laſt Day of the Term, a Writ of Enquiry of Damages was Exhibited at the King's-Bench-Bar; where the Jury, upon Hearing the Evidence, gave 100000 Pounds Damages to the Duke. In the Michaelmas-Term following, he was Indicted in the King's-Bench, for Perjury: To which he Pleaded, Not Guilty; and had his Tryal deferr'd till the next Term. Soon after, he was again Indicted at the Old-Bailey, for Perjury, upon another Matter of Fact, and had his Tryal Appointed to be likewiſe the next Term, in the Court of King's-Bench.

He is Indicted of Perjury.

On Novemb. 6. a Tryal was had at the Guildhall, before my Lord-Chief-Juſtice Jeffreys, upon an Action brought by Sir William Pritchard, formerly Lord-Mayor of London, againſt Mr. Papillon, and Mr. Dubois, (the latter of which was lately Dead) for Maliciouſly cauſing him to be Arreſted, and falſely Impriſon'd, during his Mayoralty: This Fact was repreſented by the Councel, as a very Evil Deſign, and Malicious Practice, Contrived with ſeveral of the Traytors lately fled from Juſtice, againſt His Majeſty's Government, and the Magiſtracy of the City, as againſt the Perſon of the ſaid Sir William Pritchard. Upon which, the Jury brought in their Verdict for Sir William, and gave him 10000 Pounds Damages.

Diſſenting Teacher Convicted of Treaſon.

One Mr. Roſwell, a Diſſenting Teacher, had been Arraign'd on the 25th of October, at the King's-Bench-Bar, upon an Indictment of High-Treaſon, for Endeavouring to ſtir up His Majeſty's Subjects to Rebellion, by inciting them thereunto, in a Sermon at a Conventicle in Rotherhith, with Seditious and Traiterous Words againſt His Majeſty's Royal Perſon and Government; and being brought to his Tryal on Nov. 18. was found Guilty of High-Treaſon.

Elias Beſt, who had ſometime ſince been Convicted upon an Information, for Speaking Scandalous and Seditious Words againſt the Government, and fled thereupon; being lately Apprehended, was on Nov. 20. brought to the King's-Bench-Bar, to receive the Judgment of the Court; which was, That he ſhould pay a Fine of 1000 Pounds, ſhould ſtand Thrice in the Pillory, and be bound, with Sureties, for his Good-behaviour.

Oates's Servants Convicted

In the ſame Term, Dalby and Nicholſon, two of Oates's Men, for a farther Diſgrace to their Maſter, were Convicted; the firſt, at the Niſi prius for the County of Middleſex; the other at the Niſi prius held for the City of London, at Guildhall, for Speaking moſt Scandalous and Seditious Words againſt His Majeſty, and the Government.

Mr. Butler of Northamptonſhire, having been Convicted, upon an Information, for Preſenting and Reading to the Knights of that Shire (at the laſt Election of Parliament-Men) a Seditious Paper, being an Addreſs to them, from ſome of the Freeholders, call'd Factious Perſons, was on Nov. 28. brought to the King's-Bench-Bar, to receive the Judgment of the Court; which was, That he ſhould pay a Fine of 500 Marks, ſhould find Sureties for his Good-behaviour during Life, and be Committed till all be perform'd.

1684.

And indeed, the whole Hiſtory of this Year ſeems to have little leſs but Proſecutions and Penalties; and what was the Effect of them, the Surrendry of Charters: For moſt of the Cities, Towns, and other Corporations, thinking their Liberties could not ſurvive thoſe of the Great Metropolis, and finding the Court Reſolute in the Expectance and Demand of them, did generally agree to offer them up a Sacrifice to His Majeſty's Will and Pleaſure: And even many of the Courtiers were employ'd to make an Intereſt in thoſe Places where they were moſt concern'd, to obtain and extort the ſaid Surrendry; and the Lord-Chief-Juſtice Jeffreys, in the Mid-land Circuit, made it his great Buſineſs to terrifie the People into this Compliance, and at his Return he waited on his Majeſty at Windſor, and deliver'd up to him the Charters of the City of Lincoln, and of ſeveral other Corporations within his Circuit, as an Oblation of his own Loyalty, and a Triumph over the Peoples Liberties.

Delivery of Charters.

By theſe Meaſures, the Duke of York was known to Govern all, and was now Reſtored to his Offices of Profit and Honour, without any farther Scruple, that it was againſt the Law to hold them. So, on May 12. the King declared, That He had thought fit to Revoke and Determine the Commiſſion for Executing the Office of Lord-High-Admiral of England, and to commit thoſe Affairs to the Care of His Royal Highneſs: And on May 28. His Majeſty was pleas'd to Declare in Council, That He thought it fit, and for his Service, that His Royal Highneſs ſhould be preſent at the Meetings of the Council.

Duke of York Governs.

Sir Leoline Jenkins, one of His Majeſty's Principal Secretaries of State, is ſaid to have long pray'd His Majeſty to permit him, by reaſon of his Indiſpoſition, to Reſign that Place; and that His Majeſty was at laſt pleas'd to grant it, though with much unwillingneſs, becauſe of the great Satisfaction His Majeſty always had in his Services: So on Apr. 14. at Windſor, he deliver'd up the Seals to His Majeſty; who was pleas'd to give them to the Honourable Sidney Godolphin, Eſq; one of the Commiſſioners of His Majeſty's Treaſury, who was accordingly Sworn into the Secretary's Office on the 17th of April, in the Council held at Hampton-Court.

Sidney Godolphin, Eſq; made Secretary of State.

On July 11. the Earl of Murray, and the Earl of Middleton, His Majeſty's Secretaries of State for the Kingdom of Scotland, were, by His Majeſty's Command, Sworn of his Moſt Honourable Privy-Council here in England, and took their Places at the Board in Hampton-Court. On July 15. His Majeſty was pleas'd to conferr the Honour of Knighthood upon Simon Taylor, and John Turner, Eſqrs; Aldermen of the Town of Lynn-Regis. On Aug. 24. His Majeſty was pleas'd to Declare in Council, That having given the Earl of Radnor, Lord-Preſident of the Council, (with whoſe Services he was very well ſatisfy'd) Leave to Retire, in conſideration of his great Age; He had Reſolved to make the Earl of Rocheſter Lord-Preſident, Mr. Secretary Godolphin Firſt Commiſſioner of the Treaſury, and the Earl of Middleton Secretary of State; and accordingly the Earl of Rocheſter took his Place at the Board, and the Earl of Middleton was Sworn one of His Majeſty's Principal-Secretaries of State: And ſoon after, His Majeſty was pleas'd to grant the Title and Dignity of a Baron of this Kingdom, unto the Right-Honourable Sidney Godolphin, Eſq; by the Name and Stile of Baron Godolphin of Rialton in the County of Cornwall. Toward the End of September, His Majeſty, by Commiſſion under the Great-Seal, Appointed Sir William Goſling, and Sir Peter Vandeputt, to be Sheriffs of London and Middleſex for the Year enſuing: And in October, Sir James Smyth was Commiſſionated by His Majeſty to be Lord-Mayor.

Other Honours and Preferments.

About the ſame time, His Majeſty was pleas'd to conferr the Honour of Knighthood upon Doctor Thomas Weatherley, one of His Majeſty's Phyſicians in Ordinary, and Preſident of the College of Phyſicians. In this Michaelmas-Term, His Majeſty was pleas'd, upon the Death of Mr. Juſtice Wyndham, to Remove Mr. Baron Street to the Common-Pleas, and to Conſtitute in his Place Sir Robert Wright, His Majeſty's Sergeant at Law, one of the Barons of the Exchequer.

On Decemb. 1. His Majeſty taking Notice of the Loyalty and good Services of Capt. John Clark, Citizen of London, was pleas'd to conferr upon him the Honour of Knighthood: And on Dec. 15. His Majeſty did the like Honour to Edmund Warcup, of Northmoor in the County of Oxford, Eſq; And on Jan. 1. the ſame Honour of Knighthood was conferr'd upon William Creagh, of New-Caſtle upon Tyne, being Preſented by His Royal Highneſs to His Majeſty; who did him this Honour, as a Mark of his gracious Acceptance of the Loyal Zeal he had on ſeveral Occaſions expreſs'd for His Majeſty's Service. On Jan. 7. John Drumond, Eſq; one of His Majeſty's Secretaries of State for the Kingdom of Scotland, was Sworn of His Majeſty's Moſt Honourable Privy-Council, and took his Place at the Board in Whitehall. On Jan. 16. William Bridgeman, and Philip Muſgrave, Eſqrs; were Sworn Clerks of the Privy-Council, in the Room of Sir Thomas Dolman, and Francis Gwynn, Eſq; to whom His Majeſty had given Leave to Reſign. The laſt Honour His Majeſty beſtow'd, was that of Knighthood, on Jan. 28. upon Henry Brabant, of New-Caſtle, Eſq; for his many Loyal Services.

Though the Duke of York had hitherto bore an Abſolute Sway at Court; yet it is very certain, the King had now a mind once more to Part with Him, and to Recall his More-beloved Duke of Monmouth from his Baniſhment in Holland. The Duke, in his Journal, has upon this Subject made two Remarkable Entries: Jan. 5. I receiv'd a Letter from L. mark'd by 29. (i. e. the King) in the Margin, to truſt intirely in 10. and that in Febr. I ſhould certainly have Leave to Return: That Matters were concerting towards it; and that 39. (i. e. the Duke of York) had no Suſpicion, notwithſtanding of my Reception here. —— Febr. 3. A Letter from L. That my Buſineſs was almoſt aſwell as done; but muſt be ſo ſudden, as not to leave room for 39*'s Party to Counterplot: That it is probable, he would chuſe* Scotland rather than Flanders or this Country; which is all one to 29. But the King was fatally prevented in theſe kind Intentions to his Son, and Reſolution of Sending away his Brother; for on Monday Febr. 2. His Majeſty was taken very Ill; and the Report of it was ſo great an Alarm to the Nation, that the Privy-Council thought fit to Quiet the People by this Account:

The King enclined to Recall the Duke of Monmouth,

But fatally prevented.

At the Council-Chamber, WHITEHALL, 4 Febr. 1684. at Five in the Afternoon.

Account of the King's Illneſs.

"THE Lords of His Majeſty's Moſt-Honourable Privy-Council, have thought fit, for "preventing falſe Reports, to make known, That "His Majeſty, upon Monday Morning laſt, was "ſeized with a violent Fit, that gave great cauſe "to fear the Iſſue of it; but after ſome Hours, an "Amendment appeared; which, with the Bleſſing "of God, being Improved by the Application of "proper and ſeaſonable Remedies, is ſo now advanced, that the Phyſicians have this Day, "aſwell as Yeſterday, given this Account to the "Council, viz. That they conceive His Majeſty "to be in a Condition of Safety, and that He "will in a few Days be freed from his Diſtemper."

But

1684. But notwithſtanding theſe Hopes, and flattering the World with them, there was this ſad Account given from Whitehall, Febr. 6. " On Monday laſt " in the Morning, our late Gracious Sovereign, " King Charles II. was ſeized with a Violent Fit, " by which his Speech and Senſes were for ſome " time taken from him; but upon the immediate " Application of fitting Remedies, he returned to " ſuch a Condition as gave ſome Hopes of his " Recovery, till Wedneſday Night; at which time " the Diſeaſe returning upon him with greater " Violence, he Expired this Day about Noon.

Account of the King's Sickneſs & Death.

As to the Manner and Circumſtances of his Diſtemper, and his Death, it is beſt to deliver them in the very Words of a good Phyſician, and faithful Hiſtorian, who, in his Memoirs, writes thus: " It's confeſs'd, few Princes come to Die a Sudden " Death, but the World is apt to attribute it to " Foul-Play; eſpecially if attended with Unuſual " Circumſtances in the Time and Manner of it. " King Charles had a Healthful Conſtitution be- " yond moſt Men, and took great Care to pre- " ſerve it, by Diet and Exerciſe, which Naturally " promiſe a Long Life: And it was more Ex- " traordinary to ſee ſuch a Man Die before Three- " ſcore, than another in the Bloom of Youth. " Now, if he Died a Natural Death, it's agreed " by all, that it muſt have been an Apoplexy. " This Diſeaſe ſeizes all the Vital Faculties at " once; and yet, for the moſt part, does not only " give ſome ſhort Warnings of its Approach, by " unuſual Affections of the Head, but many " times is occaſion'd by ſome evident preceding " Cauſe. In King Charles's Caſe, there appeared " no viſible Cauſe, either near or remote, to which, " with any certainty of Reaſon, his Diſeaſe could " be aſcribed; and the Fore-runners of it were " rather to be found in the Stomach and Bowels, " than in the Head. For after he was a-Bed, he " was over-heard to Groan moſt part of the Night: " And both then, and next Morning, before he fell " into the Fit, he complain'd firſt of a heavy Op- " preſſion in his Stomach, and about his Heart, " and afterwards of a ſharp Pain in thoſe Parts; " all which Symptoms had but little relation to " an Apoplexy. That Morning there appear'd to " every-body about him a Ghaſtlineſs and Paleneſs " in his Looks: And when he ſat down to be " Shav'd, juſt before the Fit took him, he could " not ſit Sraight, as he us'd to do, but continu'd " in a Stooping Poſture, with his Hand upon his " Stomach, till the Fit came. After he had been " brought out of it, by Opening a Vein, he com- " plain'd of a Racking Pain in his Stomach, and " of no Indiſpoſition any-where elſe: And during " the whole time of his Sickneſs, and even when " he ſeem'd moſt Inſenſible, he was obſerv'd to " lay his Hand, for the moſt part, upon his " Stomach, in a Moaning Poſture, and continu'd " ſo till his Death: And ſo Violent was the Pain, " that when all Hopes were gone, the Phyſicians " were deſired to uſe all their Art to procure " him an Eaſie Death.

" So much for the Diſtemper it ſelf. There " remains ſome Things to be taken Notice of, that " fell out before and after his Death.

" A few Days before he was taken Ill, King " Charles being in Company where the preſent " Poſture of Affairs were diſcours'd of, there " eſcap'd him ſome warm Expreſſions, about the " Uneaſie Circumſtances he was plung'd into, and " the Ill Meaſures had been given him: And how, " in a certain particular Affair, he was pleas'd to " mention, He had been Abus'd; adding, in ſome " Paſſion, That if He Liv'd but a Month longer, " he wou'd find a Way to make himſelf Eaſie, for " the reſt of his Life. This Paſſage was whiſper'd " abroad next Day; and the Rumour of Recalling " the Duke of Monmouth, and Sending away the 1684. " Duke of York, came to take Air about the ſame " time. Indeed, all things were making ready, " to put the latter in execution; and there is " reaſon to believe the King had intimated as " much to the Duke himſelf; for ſome of his " Richeſt Furniture was put up, and his Chief " Servants Order'd to be in a readineſs to Attend " their Maſter upon an Hour's Warning; and " Yatchs were waiting, to Tranſport ſome " Perſon of Quality, without mentioning who it " was, and whither bound. The Romiſh Party " that Manag'd about Court, were obſerv'd to " be more than ordinary Diligent and Buſie up " and down Whitehall and St. James's, as if ſome " very Important Affair was in Agitation; and " a new and unuſual Concern was to be ſeen on " their Countenances. Nor was it any wonder; " for in this ſuſpected Change, they were like to " be the only Loſers, and all their teeming Hopes " were in a fair way to be Diſappointed. How " far the Principles of ſome of that Party might " leave them at liberty to puſh on their Revenge " for this deſign'd Affront, aſwell as to prevent " the Blow that threatn'd them, though without " the Privacy, much leſs the Conſent of the Duke " of York, is left to the Reader to judge.

" There was a Foreign Miniſter, that ſome Days " before the King fell Ill, order'd his Steward to " buy a conſiderable Parcel of Black Cloth, which " ſerv'd him and his Retinue afterwards for " Mourning: And the late Ambaſſador, Don Pedro " Ronquillo, made it no Secret, That he had a " Letter from Flanders the Week before King " Charles Died, that took Notice of his Death, " as the News there. But both theſe might fall " out by meer Accident.

" There remains Two things more, that deſerve " ſome Conſideration in this Matter. When his " Body was Open'd, there was not ſufficient " Time given for taking an exact Obſervation of " his Stomach and Bowels; which, one would " think, ought chiefly to have been done, conſider- " ing the Violent Pains he had there: And when " a certain Phyſician ſeem'd to be more Inquiſitive " than ordinary about the Condition of thoſe " Parts, he was taken aſide and Reprov'd for " his needleſs Curioſity. In the next place, His " Body Stunk ſo extremely within a few Hours " after his Death, notwithſtanding the Coldneſs " of the Seaſon, that the People about him were " very much offended with the Smell: Which is " a thing very Extraordinary, in one of his Strong " and Healthful Conſtitution; and is not a proper " Conſequent of a meer Apoplectical Diſtemper.

" There was ſome Weight laid upon an Accident " that fell out at Windſor ſome Years before his " Death: For the King Drinking more liberally " than uſual, after the Fatigue of Riding, he " retir'd to the next Room, and wrapping himſelf " up in his Cloak, fell a-ſleep upon a Couch. " He was but a little time come back to the " Company, when a Servant belonging to one of " them lay down upon the ſame Couch, in the " King's Cloak, and was found Stabb'd Dead with " a Poniard. Nor was it ever known how it " happen'd, but the Matter huſh'd up, and no " Enquiry made about it.

" To Conclude: Dr. Short, who was a Man " of great Probity and Learning, and a Roman- " Catholick, made no ſcruple to declare his Opinion " to ſome of his Intimate Friends, That he believ'd " King Charles had Foul-Play done him: And " when he came to Die himſelf, expreſs'd ſome " Suſpicion, that he had met with the ſame " Treatment, for opening his Mind too freely " in that Point.

" So much for the Circumſtances of King Charles's " Death, that ſeem to have an ill Aſpect. There " are

1684. " are others, that ſeem to deſtroy all Suſpicions " of Treachery in the Matter.

" As, Firſt, He had Liv'd ſo faſt, as might " Enervate, in a great meaſure, the Natural Force " of his Conſtitution, and Exhauſt his Animal " Spirits; and therefore he might be more ſubject " to an Apoplexy, which is a Diſeaſe that weakens " and locks up theſe Spirits from performing their " uſual Functions: And though, in his later " Years, he had given up himſelf more to the " Pleaſures of Wine than of Women; that might " be rather the Effect of Age than of Choice.

" Next, It's known, He had been once or twice " attack'd before, with Fits that much reſembled " thoſe of which he afterwards Died: And yet, " as the manner of them is told, they look rather to " have been a Convulſive Motion, than an Apoplexy; " ſeeing they were attended with violent Contor- " ſions of his Face, and Convulſions of his whole " Body and Limbs. This is the more confirm'd, " by a Paſſage that happned during the Heat of " the Popiſh Plot. King Charles had ſome Secret " Matters to manage at that time, by the means " of a Popiſh Prieſt then beyond-Sea, whom he " order'd to be privately ſent for: And the Gen- " tleman employ'd between the King and him " (from Whom I had the Story) was directed to " bring him in a Diſguiſe to Whitehall. The King " and the Prieſt were a conſiderable Time together " alone in the Cloſet, and the Gentleman attended " in the next Room: At laſt the Prieſt came out, " with all the Marks of Fright and Aſtoniſhment " in his Face; and having recover'd himſelf a " little, he told the Gentleman, That he had run " the greateſt Riſque ever Man did; for while he " was with the King, His Majeſty was ſuddenly " ſurprized with a Fit, accompany'd with violent " Convulſions of his Body, and Contorſions of his " Face, which laſted for ſome Moments; and " when he was going to call out for Help, the " King held him by force till it was over, and " then bid him not be afraid, for he had been " troubled with the like before; the Prieſt adding, " what a Condition he ſhould have been in, con- " ſidering his Religion, in the preſent Juncture of " Affairs, if the King had Died of that Fit, and " no-Body in the Room with him beſides himſelf.

" But leaving this Story to the Credit of the " Prieſt; there might be another Natural Cauſe " aſſign'd for King Charles's falling into ſuch a " Fit as that of which he Died, which is this: " He had for ſome time an Iſſue in his Leg, which " run much, and conſequently muſt have made " a great Revulſion from his Head; upon which " Account, it's probable, it was made. A few " Weeks before his Death, he had let it be dry'd up; " contrary to the Advice of his Phyſicians, who " told him it wou'd prejudice his Health. Their " Prognoſtick was partly true in this, that there " came a painful Tumour upon the Place where " the Iſſue had been, which prov'd very obſti- " nate, and was not thoroughly heal'd up when " he Died.

" In fine, It is agreed on all hands, that King " Charles expreſs'd no Suſpicion of his being " Poiſon'd, during all the time of his Sickneſs: " Though it muſt be alſo obſerv'd, That his Fits " were ſo Violent, that he could not Speak when " they were upon him, and ſhew'd an Averſion " to Speaking during the Intervals. And there " was not any thing to be ſeen, upon Opening " his Body, that could reaſonably be attributed to " the Force of Poiſon. Yet, to allow theſe Conſidera- " tions no more Weight than they can well bear, this " muſt be acknowledg'd, That there are Poiſons " which affect originally the Animal Spirits, and " are of ſo ſubtile a Nature, that they leave no " Concluding Marks upon the Bodies of thoſe " they Kill.

" Thus Reign'd, and thus Dy'd King Charles II. 1684. " a Prince Endowed with all the Qualities that " might juſtly have rendred him the Delight of " Mankind, and entitled him to the Character of " one of the greateſt Genius's that ever ſate upon " a Throne, if he had not ſully'd thoſe Excellent " Parts with the ſoft Pleaſures of Eaſe; and had " not entertain'd a Fatal Friendſhip, that was incom- " patible with the Intereſt of England. His Religion " was that of Deiſm, or rather that which is call'd " ſo: And if, in his Exile, or at his Death, he went " into that of Rome; the firſt was imputed to a Com- " plaiſance with the Company he was then oblig'd to " keep; and the laſt, to a lazie Diffidence in all other " Religions, upon a Review of his paſt Life, and " the near approach of an Uncertain State. His " Perſon was Tall and Well-made, his Conſtitu- " tion Vigorous and Healthy; and it's hard to " determine, whether he took more pains to pre- " ſerve it by Diet and Exerciſe, or to impair it " by Exceſs in his Pleaſures. In Health, he was " a great Pretender to Phyſick, and Encourager " of Quacks, by whom he was often Cheated of " conſiderable Sums of Money for their pretended " Secrets: But whenever he was Indiſpos'd, he " conſulted his Phyſicians, and depended on their " Skill only.

" His Face was compos'd of harſh Features, " difficult to be trac'd with the Pencil; yet, in " the main, it was agreeable; and he had a Noble " Majeſtick Mein. In Contradiction to all the " common receiv'd Rules of Phyſiognomy, he was " Merciful, Good-Natur'd; and, in the laſt Twenty- " four Years of his Life, Fortunate, if to ſucceed " in moſt of his Deſigns, may be call'd ſo. Never " Prince lov'd Ceremony leſs, or deſpis'd the " Pageantry of a Crown more; yet he was Maſter " of ſomething in his Perſon and Aſpect, that " commanded both Love and Veneration at " once.

" He was a great Votary to Love; and yet " the Eaſieſt and moſt Unconcern'd Rival. He " was, for the moſt part, not very Nice in the " Choice of his Miſtreſſes, and ſeldom poſſeſs'd of " their Firſt Favours; yet would ſacrifice All to " pleaſe them; and upon every Caprice of theirs, " deny'd himſelf the Uſe of his Reaſon, and acted " contrary to his Intereſt. He was a Reſpectful " Civil Husband; a Fond Father, a Kind Brother, " an Eaſie Enemy; but none of the Firmeſt or " moſt Grateful Friends: Bountiful by Starts; " one day Laviſh to his Servants; the next leaving " them to Starve: Glad to Win a little Money at " Play; and Impatient to Loſe but the Thouſandth " Part of what within an Hour after he would " Throw away in Groſs. He ſeem'd to have had " nothing of Jealouſie in his Nature, neither in " Matters of Love nor Power: He bore patiently " Rivals in the one, and Competitors in the other; " otherwiſe he would not have contributed to a " Foreign Greatneſs at Sea, nor given his Brother " ſo uncontroll'd a Share in the Government.

" Though his Underſtanding was quick and " lively, with a vaſt compaſs of Thought; yet " he would ſubmit his Judgment, in greateſt Mat- " ters, to others of much inferior Parts: And as " he had an extraordinary ſhare of Wit himſelf, " ſo he lov'd it in others, even when pointed " againſt his own Faults and Miſmanagements. " He had Read but little, yet he had a good " taſte of Learning, and would reaſon nicely upon " moſt Sciences. The Mechanicks were one of his " peculiar Talents, eſpecially the Art of Building " and Working of Ships; which no-Body under- " ſtood better, nor, if he had liv'd, would have " carry'd it farther. He had a ſtrong Laconick " way of Expreſſion, and a Genteel, Eaſie and " Polite way of Writing: And when he had a " mind to lay aſide the King, which he often did 1684. " in ſelect Companies of his own, there were a " thouſand irreſiſtible Charms in his Converſation. " He lov'd Money, only to ſpend it; and would " privately accept of a ſmall Sum paid to Him- " ſelf, in Lieu of a far greater to be paid into the " Exchequer.

" He lov'd not Buſineſs, and ſought every Oc- " caſion to avoid it; which was one reaſon that " he paſs'd ſo much of his Time with his " Miſtreſſes: Yet when Neceſſity call'd him, " none of his Council could Reaſon more cloſely " upon Matters of State; and he would often, " by fits, out-doe his Miniſters in Application " and Diligence. No Age produced a greater " Maſter in the Art of Diſſimulation; and yet no " Man was leſs upon his Guard, or ſooner De- " ceiv'd in the Sincerity of Others. If he had any " one fix'd Maxim of Government, it was to Play " one Party againſt another, to be thereby the " more Maſter of both: And no Prince underſtood " better how to ſhift Hands upon every Change " of the Scene.

" To ſum up his Character: He was Dex- " terous in all the Arts of Inſinuation; and had " acquir'd ſo great an Aſcendant over the Af- " fections of his People, in ſpite of all the un- " happy Meaſures he had taken, that it may " in ſome ſence be ſaid, He Died opportunely " for England; ſince if he had Liv'd, it's pro- " bable we might, in Compliance with him, have " Complimented our ſelves out of all the Remains " of Liberty, if he had had but a mind to be 1684. " Maſter of them: Which it's but Charity to " believe he had not, at leaſt immediately before " his Death.

" There is one thing more, that may help to " make up the Character of this Prince; That in " Lines and Shape of his Face (all but the Teeth) " he had a great Reſemblance of the Ancient " Buſto's and Statues we have of the Emperor " Tiberius: Inſomuch that one of the moſt Learn'd " Men of this Age told me, That walking in the " Farneſian Gardens at Rome, with a Noble Italian " that had been at the Court of England, he took " Notice of this Reſemblance in an Antique Statue " of Tiberius; and asking the Italian if he re- " membred any Prince he had ſeen that reſembled " it? the other immediately nam'd King Charles. THE

THE LIFE and REIGN OF King JAMES the Second.

1684. AFTER the Death of King CHARLES, the Privy-Council immediately Aſſembled; And the New King, JAMES the Second, appearing in Perſon among them, was Graciouſly pleas'd to expreſs himſelf in this manner:

King James his Speech in Council.

My Lords;

Before I enter upon any other Buſineſs, I think fit to ſay ſomething to You. Since it hath pleas'd Almighty God to place Me in this Station, and I am now to Succeed ſo Good and Gracious a King, aſwell as ſo very Kind a Brother; I think it fit to Declare to You, That I will endeavour to follow his Example, and moſt eſpecially in that of his great Clemency and Tenderneſs to his People. I have been reported to be a Man for Arbitrary Power; but that is not the only Story that has been made of Me: And I ſhall make it my Endeavour to Preſerve this Government, both in Church and State, as it is now by Law Eſtabliſh'd. I know, the Principles of the Church of England are for Monarchy, and the Members of it have ſhewn themſelves Good and Loyal Subjects; therefore, I ſhall always take Care to Defend and Support it. I know too, that the Laws of England are ſufficient to make the King as Great a Monarch as I can Wiſh: And as I ſhall never Depart from the Juſt Rights and Prerogative of the Crown, ſo I ſhall never Invade any Man's Property. I have often heretofore Ventur'd My Life in Defence of this Nation; And I ſhall ſtill go as far as any Man in Preſerving it in all its Juſt Rights and Liberties.

Whereupon the Lords of the Council were Humble Suitors to His Majeſty, That theſe His Gracious Expreſſions might be made Publick: Which His Majeſty did Order accordingly. Then a Proclamation was Drawn up, ſignifying His Majeſty's Pleaſure, "That all Men being in Office "of Government at the Deceaſe of the Late King, "ſhould ſo Continue till His Majeſty's farther "Direction." And in the Afternoon, the King was Proclaimed before Whitehall-Gate, at Temple-Bar, and the Royal Exchange, with the uſual Solemnity: But the Signs of Popular Grief exceeded of thoſe of Joy. On Febr. 9. the King Publiſh'd a Proclamation, For Continuing the Collection of the Cuſtoms and Subſidies of Tonnage and Poundage; Declaring, "That He had thought "fit to Call a Parliament ſpeedily to be Aſſembled, "in which He made no doubt but Care would be "taken for ſettling a ſufficient Revenue on the "Crown, for the Support of the Government; "the Neceſſities of which, in the mean time, re-"quir'd that the Cuſtoms and Subſidies, and "other Duties upon Merchandizes, ſhould be "Continu'd to be Collected, as in the Time of "his Deareſt Brother lately Deceas'd." Though this was no Extraordinary Stretch of Power; yet it was ſuſpected by ſome wiſe Perſons, to be an Eagerneſs of breaking through the Laws of the Land, and the Liberties of the Subject: And it fell under the greater Suſpicion, when the Addreſs of the Barriſters and Students of the Middle-Temple came to be Preſented by Sir Humphry Mackworth, with this Expreſſion in it: We cannot but with the deepeſt Senſe of Gratitude acknowledge Your Majeſty's great Goodneſs and Condeſcention in Your late Declaration; and in particular, That Your Majeſty hath been Graciouſly pleas'd, in purſuance of the ſame, to extend Your Royal Care of the Government, to the Preſervation of the Cuſtoms; the Intermiſſion whereof, would not only have diſabled Your Majeſty to Maintain the Navy in Defence of the Realm, but, by taking away the Balance of Trade, have ruin'd Thouſands of Your Majeſty's Subjects that paid Cuſtom in the Life of our Late Sovereign; and by an Exceſſive Exportation and Importation Cuſtom-free, have rendred that Branch of the Revenue unprofitable for ſome Years to come, notwithſtanding all the Care and Loyalty of the ſucceeding Parliament, &c.

Proceedings in the New Reign.

There was another Offence taken, at the Obſcure and Parſimonious Funeral of the late King; which was look'd upon to be either a want of Spirit or a want of Affection in his Royal Succeſſor. This Account was given of it by Authority:

Funeral of King Charles II.

Whitehall, Febr. 14. "This Evening was pri-"vately ſolemnized the Funeral of his Late Ma-"jeſty, King Charles II. from the Painted-Chamber "in the Palace at Weſtminſter, to the Abbey-Church "there. The Body was carry'd under a Velvet-"Canopy, borne by Gentlemen of the Privy-"Chamber, Six Earls ſupporting the Pall. The "Proceeding began with Servants to the Nobility, "their Royal Highneſs's, their preſent Majeſty's, "the Queen Dowager's, and the Late King's "Servants, &c. After Whom follow'd Barons, "Biſhops, and others of the Nobility, according "to their reſpective Degrees, together with the "great Officers, and the Lord Arch-Biſhop of "Canterbury. His Royal Highneſs the Prince of "Denmark was Chief-Mourner, (his Train borne "by the Lord Cornbury:) The Supporters to "the Chief-Mourner were the Dukes of Somerſet "and Beaufort, wearing their Collars of the "Order, (as the other Knights of the Garter, "then preſent, did.) The Aſſiſtants to the Chief-"Mourner were Sixteen Earls. One of the Kings "of Arms carry'd the Crown and Cuſhion; the "reſt of the Officers of Arms Attending and Di-"recting the Ceremony; which was Cloſed with "His Majeſty's Band of Gentlemen-Penſioners, "and the Yeomen of the Guard. At the Entrance "into the Church, the Dean and Prebendaries of "Weſtminſter, attended with the Choir, met the "Body, and proceeded to King Henry VIIth's "Chapel, where it was Interred in a Vault under "the Eaſt-end of the South-Iſle. Service being 1684. " ended, and the Officers of His Majeſty's Houſhold " having broken their Staffs, the Royal Stile was " Proclaim'd by another of the Kings of Arms, " according to Cuſtom.

Honours and Preferments.

On Febr. 9. His Royal Highneſs Prince George, Hereditary Prince of Denmark, was, by his Majeſty's Command, call'd into the Council-Chamber, and took his Place at the Board. Within few Days after, His Majeſty was graciouſly pleas'd to make His Grace the Duke of Ormond Lord-Steward; the Earl of Arlington Lord-Chamberlain; the Lord Newport Lord Treaſurer; the Lord Maynard Comptroller; and Henry Savil, Eſq; Vice-Chamberlain of his Houſhold: in which Offices they had ſerved the Late King. And ſoon after, His Majeſty appointed Henry Bulkley, Eſq; to be Maſter of his Houſhold; Sir Stephen Fox Eldeſt Clerk of the Green-Cloth; Sir William Boreman Second Clerk of the ſame; Sir William Churchill Eldeſt Clerk-Comptroller; and Sir Richard Maſon Youngeſt Clerk-Comptroller: in which Places they had likewiſe ſerved His Late Majeſty. Lawrence Earl of Rocheſter, Lord Preſident of the Council, was now conſtituted Lord High-Treaſurer of England; and on Monday Morning, Febr. 16. His Majeſty gave the White-Staff to His Lordſhip. On Wedneſday following, in the Afternoon, His Majeſty was pleas'd, in Council, to Declare the Right-Honourable the Marqueſs of Halliſax Lord Preſident of his Privy-Council; the Earl of Clarendon Lord Privy-Seal; the Duke of Beaufort Lord Preſident of Wales; and the Lord Godolphin Lord Chamberlain to the Queen. On March 8. His Majeſty was pleas'd to conferr the Honour of Knighthood upon Thomas Vernon, of London, Eſq; as a Mark of his Royal Favour, for his ſtedfaſt Loyalty: And near the ſame time, he did the ſame Honour to William Haman, Eſq; Mayor of the City of Briſtol. And on March 22. His Majeſty conferr'd the like Honour on Marmaduke Dayrel, Eſq; Son of Sir Thomas Dayrel, late of Comps-Caſtle in the County of Cambridge, Kt.

Account of Religion.

In Matters of Religion, the Diſſenters Complain of great Perſecutions, and give this Tragical Account of their Sufferings: " About this time, Diſſenters Complain of their Sufferings.

" one Mr. Robert Mayot, of Oxon, a Pious Conformiſt, " who had devoted his Eſtate to Charitable Uſes, " gave, by his Laſt Will, 600 Pounds, to be " diſtributed by Mr. Baxter to Sixty Poor Ejected " Miniſters; adding, That he did it not becauſe " they were Nonconformiſts, but becauſe many " ſuch were Poor and Pious. But the King's " Attorney, Sir Robert Sawyer, Sued for it in " the Chancery; and the Lord-Keeper North gave " it all to the King. It was Paid into the Chancery, " by Order; (and, as Providence Order'd it, there " kept ſafe till King William ſo happily aſcended " the Throne, when the Commiſſioners of the " Great-Seal reſtor'd it to the Uſe for which it " was intended by the Deceaſed; and Mr. Baxter " Diſpos'd of it accordingly.) This Year, while " Mr. Baxter lay in Pain and Languiſhing, the " Juſtices of the Seſſions ſent Warrants to Ap- " prehend him, he being One in a Catalogue which " was ſaid to contain the Names of a Thouſand " Perſons, who were all to be Bound to their " Good-Behaviour. Knowing that their Warrant " was not to Break-open Doors, he refuſed to Open " to them, though they were got into his Houſe. " Whereupon they ſet ſix Officers at his Study-" Door, who kept him from his Bed and Food, " by Watching all Night: And the next Day he " Yielded. They carry'd him to the Seſſions, when " he was ſcarce able to ſtand, and Bound him in " a Bond of 400 Pounds to his Good-Behaviour. " He deſired to know his Crimes, and Accuſers: " but was told, 'Twas only to Secure the Govern- " ment againſt Suſpected Perſons. He was ſome- 1684. " time after carry'd again to the Seſſions-Houſe in " great Pain, and forc'd to continue Bound. He " refus'd to ſtand Bound, not knowing what they " might interpret a Breach of the Peace: But his " Sureties would be Bound, leſt he ſhould Die in " Jail. He was carry'd thither a third time, " and ſtill Bound, though, for the moſt part, he " kept his Bed.

" Sept. 23. Mr. Thomas Roſwell, who was Miniſter " of a Diſſenting Congregation in Rotherhith, was " Impriſon'd in the Gate-Houſe in Weſtminſter, by " a Warrant from Sir George Jeffreys, for High-" Treaſon. A Bill was found againſt him at the " Quarter-Seſſions at Kingſton in Surrey: Upon " which he was Arraign'd on Octob. 25. and Try'd " on Novemb. 18. following, at the King's-Bench-Bar, by a Surrey Jury, before the Lord Chief-" Juſtice Jeffreys, and Three other Judges of that " Court, Wythins, Halloway and Walcot. The High-" Treaſon, as laid in the Indictment, and Sworn " by the Witneſſes, was, That in a Sermon which " he Preach'd on Sept. 14. he ſaid theſe Words; " That the People (meaning the Subjects of our " Sovereign Lord the King) make a flocking to the " (ſaid Sovereign Lord the) King, upon pretence of " Healing the King's-Evil; which He (meaning our " ſaid Sovereign Lord the King) could not doe: " But that We (meaning himſelf, and other Trai-" terous Perſons, Subjects of our ſaid Lord the " King) are they to whom They (meaning the " Subjects of our ſaid Lord the King) ought to " flock; becauſe We (meaning himſelf, and the " ſaid other Traiterous Perſons) are Prieſts and " Prophets, that, by our Prayers, can Heal the Dolours " and Griefs of the People. We (meaning the Sub-" jects of our ſaid Sovereign Lord the King) have " had Two Wicked Kings, (meaning the moſt-" Serene Charles I. late King of England, and our " ſaid Sovereign Lord the King that now is) " whom we can reſemble to no other Perſon, but to " the moſt wicked Jeroboam: And that if They " (meaning the ſaid Evil-diſpos'd Perſons then and " there ſo, as aforeſaid, with him Unlawfully " Aſſembled and gather'd together) would ſtand " to their Principles, He (meaning himſelf) did " not fear but They (meaning Himſelf and the " ſaid Evil-diſpos'd Perſons) would Overcome their " Enemies, (meaning our ſaid Sovereign Lord the " King, and his Subjects) as in former Times, with " Rams-horns, broken Platters, and a Stone in a " Sling. The Witneſſes were Three Women: " They Swore to the Words as they ſtand, without " the Innuendo's. The Tryal laſted about ſeven " Hours. Mr. Roſwell made a moſt Full and Clear " Defence of himſelf; very modeſtly, and yet " ſtrenuouſly Vindicating his Innocence, to the " Satisfaction of thoſe that were preſent, and ſo " as to gain the Applauſe of many Gentlemen of " the Long-Robe. The Jury, however, after they " had been out about Half an Hour, brought him " in Guilty. The Women who were the Witneſſes " were Infamous Perſons, laden with the Guilt of " many Perjuries; which had eaſily been Prov'd " upon them all, before the Tryals, could Juſtice " have been had: But they were skreen'd by the " Recorder, who was the Perſon that laid the " whole Scheme of the Buſineſs, and patcht up the " Indictment, in Terms ſuited to his known Abi-" lities. But ſuch of them as could be met with, " were afterwards Convicted of Perjury, and " Smith, the Chief Witneſs, was Pillory'd before " the Exchange. Sir John Talbot, who was preſent, " repreſented to King Charles the State of the " Caſe, as it appear'd at the Tryal; and He " Order'd Jeffreys to find an Evaſion. Where-" upon he aſſign'd him Council afterwards to Plead " to the Inſufficiency of the Indictment in Arreſt " of Judgment; and the King gave him his

" Pardon;

1684. " Pardon : Upon which he was Diſcharg'd. " Jan. 19. Mr. Jenkyns Died in Newgate, as did " alſo Mr. Bampfield and Mr. Ralphſon, and ſeveral " others in other Priſons. And quickly after " Died King Charles Himſelf, viz. on Febr. 6. 168⅘. " Though he continu'd the Proſecution of the " Poor Diſſenters, yet they held on their Meetings; " heartily Praying for his Peace and Proſperity : " And at laſt they were as much Concern'd at his " Death, as any People in the Kingdom.

Death of many Biſhops.

King Charles's Death was preceded, if not Prognoſticated by the Death of ſeveral Biſhops : Dr. Edward Rainbow, who had been Conſecrated Biſhop of Carliſle on Jan. 10. 1664. and had now Liv'd to the Age of 76 Years, Died in his Palace of Roſe-Caſtle on March 26. And on the 1ſt of April following his Body was Interred in the Church-Yard of Dalſton, under the Chancel-Wall; with a Funeral Sermon Preach'd by Mr. Thomas Tulley, one of his Lordſhip's Chaplain's, and Chancellor of the Dioceſe of Carliſle, which was afterwards publiſh'd; with the Life of the Biſhop, Written by Jonathan Bankes School-Maſter of Appleby. He was Succeeded by Dr. Thomas Smith, ſometime Fellow of Queen's-College in Oxford. Doctor Peter Gunning, Tranſlated from the See of Chicheſter to that of Ely, on March 4. 1674. Died now on Sunday July 6. and his Body was ſoon after Buried with due Solemnity in the Cathedral-Church of Ely, and had his Great Character and Good Works remembred in a Diſcourſe Deliver'd in Two Sermons Preach'd in the Cathedral of Ely, in Sept. 1684. by Humphry Gower, D. D. Maſter of St. John's College in Cambridge, and one of the Prebendaries of Ely. Upon his Death, Dr. Francis Turner, Biſhop of Rocheſter, in great Favour with the New King, was Tranſlated to the good Biſhoprick of Ely : And on Sunday Nov. 2. Dr. Thomas Spratt, Dean of Weſtminſter, another great Favourite, was Conſecrated Biſhop of Rocheſter, by the Arch-Biſhop of Canterbury, Aſſiſted by ſeveral other Biſhops, in the Chapel at Lambeth. Dr. George Morley, Biſhop of Wincheſter, a very Learned and Exemplary Prelate, after a good old Age of 87 Years, Died in Farnham-Caſtle, on Octob. 29. Whereupon his Body was conveyed to Wincheſter, and Buried in a little Vault at the foot of the Steps aſcending to the Choir on the North-ſide. Soon after, an Alter-Tomb was erected over his Grave, and a Latin Inſcription put upon it, which the Biſhop himſelf had compos'd in the 80th Year of his Age. Dr. Peter Mew, Biſhop of Bath and Wells, was Tranſlated to this Rich See of Winchester, and did Homage to His Majeſty on Nov. 24. And Dr. Thomas Kenn, Fellow of Winchester-College, a Man Eminent for a Devotional and Auſtere Life, was on Sunday Jan. 25. Conſecrated Biſhop of Bath and Wells, by the Lord Arch-Biſhop of Canterbury, Aſſiſted by ſeveral other Biſhops, at his Chapel at Lambeth.

K. Charles ſuppoſed to Die a Papiſt.

King Charles had Liv'd in a Profeſt Communion with the Church of England, but had Indulg'd Himſelf and his Court in ſo many Liberties of Life, and ſuch a Prophaneneſs of Humour, that he was generally thought to be a Prince of little or no Religion : And indeed, for that Reaſon, he was the fitter to Die in the Communion of the Church of Rome, if he could make himſelf believe that he might in the Boſom of that Church (and of that alone) obtain Salvation, without Repentance. The Pious Biſhop Kenn, of whom His Majeſty was thought to have the higheſt Opinion, was appointed to Attend him, in his laſt Sickneſs; but he was allow'd no Opportunity to Talk ſeriouſly with him, being frequently Diſmiſs'd, and again induſtriouſly Interrupted in the Duties which he offer'd to Perform : While Father Huddleſton was carefully brought into the Bed-Chamber, and was allow'd to Perform all the Laſt Duties to His Dying Majeſty; but whether ſo much at the King's own Deſire, or at the Officious Importunity of Others, is not ſo eaſie to determine. But this is certain, That King James, who had better have Conceal'd this Matter, was very zealous to Divulge it : For he Publiſh'd Two Papers, written by the Late King, and left in his Strong Box; where his Royal Brother, King James, affirm'd that He found them, and they are as follow : 1684.

The Firſt PAPER.

Papers in the Strong Box.

THE Diſcourſe We had the other day, I hope, ſatisfy'd you in the Main, That Chriſt can have but One Church here on Earth; and I Believe, that it is as viſible, as that the Scripture is in Print, That None can be that Church, but That which is call'd the Rom. Cath. Ch. I think you need not trouble your ſelf with entring into that Ocean of particular Diſputes, when the Main (and in truth, the only) Queſtion is, Where that Church is, which We do profeſs to Believe, in the Two Creeds? We Declare there, to Believe One Catholick and Apoſtolick Church : And it is not left to every Fantaſtical Man's Head to Believe as he pleaſes, but to the Church, to whom Chriſt left the Power upon Earth, to Govern us in Matters of Faith, who made the Creeds for our Directions. It were a very irrational thing to make Laws for a Country, and leave it to the Inhabitants to be the Interpreters and Judges of theſe Laws. For when every Man will be his own Judge, and by Conſequence no ſuch Thing as either Right or Wrong; Can we therefore ſuppoſe, that Almighty God would leave us at thoſe Uncertainties, as to give us a Rule to go by, and leave every Man to be his own Judge? I do ask any Ingenuous Man, Whether it be not the ſame thing, to follow our own Fancy, or to Interpret the Scripture by it? I would have any Man ſhew me, where the Power of Deciding of Matters of Faith is given to every particular Man. Chriſt left his Power to the Church, even to Forgive Sins in Heaven; and left his Spirit with them, which they exercis'd after his Reſurrection : Firſt, by his Apoſtles, in theſe Creeds; and many Years after, by the Council at Nice, where that Creed was made that is call'd by that Name : And by the Power which they had received from Chriſt, They were the Judges, even of the Scripture it ſelf, many Years after the Apoſtles, which Books were Canonical, and which were not. And if they had this Power then, I deſire to know how they came to loſe it; and by what Authority Men Separate themſelves from that Church? The only Pretence I ever heard of, was, Becauſe the Church hath fail'd, in Wreſting and Interpreting the Scripture, contrary to the true Sence and Meaning of it; and that they have impos'd Articles of Faith upon Us, which are not to be Warranted by God's Word. I do deſire to know, Who is to be Judge of That; whether the Whole Church, (the Succeſſion whereof has continu'd to this day, without Interuption,) or Particular Men, who have raiſed Schiſms of their own advantage?

This is a True COPY of a PAPER I found in the late King my Brother's Strong Box, Written by his own Hand.

J. R.

The Second PAPER.

IT is a ſad thing to conſider what a world of Hereſies are crept into this Nation; Every Man thinks himſelf as Competent a Judge of the Scriptures, as the very Apoſtles themſelves : And 'tis no Wonder that it ſhould be ſo; ſince That Part of the Nation which looks moſt like a Church, dares not 1684. not bring the true Arguments againſt the other Sects, for fear they ſhould be turn'd againſt themſelves, and Confuted by their own Arguments. The Church of England (as 'tis call'd) wou'd fain have it thought They are the Judges in Matters Spiritual, and yet dare not ſay poſitively there is no Appeal from them; for either they muſt ſay, that They are Infallible, (which they cannot pretend to;) or confeſs, that what they Decide in Matters of Conſcience, is no farther to be follow'd, than it agrees with every Man's private Judgment. If Chriſt did leave a Church here upon Earth, and We were all once of that Church; How, and by what Authority, did We Separate from that Church? If the Power of Interpreting Scripture, be in every Man's Brain, What need have we of a Church, or Church-men? To what purpoſe then did Our Saviour, after he had given his Apoſtles Power to Bind and Looſe in Heaven and Earth, add to it, That he would be with them to the End of the World? Theſe Words were not ſpoken Parabolically, or by way of Figure: Chriſt was then Aſcending into his Glory, and left his Power with his Church, even to the End of the World? We have had, theſe Hundred Years paſt, the ſad Effects, of Denying to the Church that Power in Matters Spiritual, without an Appeal. What Country can ſubſiſt in Peace or Quiet, where there is not a Supreme Judge, from whence there can be no Appeal? Can there be any Juſtice done, where the Offenders are their own Judges, and Equal Interpreters of the Law, with Thoſe, who are Appointed to adminiſter Juſtice? This is Our Caſe here in England, in Matters Spiritual: For the Proteſtants are not of the Church of England, as 'tis the true Church from whence there can be no Appeal, but becauſe the Diſcipline of that Church is conformable, at that preſent, to their Fancies; which as ſoon as it ſhall contradict or vary from, they are ready to embrace or join with the next Congregation of People, whoſe Diſcipline or Worſhip agrees with their own Opinion at that time: So that, according to this Doctrine, there is no other Church, nor Interpreter of Scripture, but that which lies in every Man's giddy Brain. I deſire to know therefore of every Serious Conſiderer of theſe things, Whether the great Work of our Salvation ought to depend upon ſuch a ſandy Foundation as this? Did Chriſt ever ſay to the Civil Magiſtrates, (much leſs to the People) That He would be with them unto the End of the World? Or did He give them the Power to Forgive Sins? St. Paul tells the Corinthians, Ye are God's Husbandry; Ye are God's Buildings; We are Labourers with God. This ſhews Who are the Labourers, and Who are the Husbandry and Building. And in this whole Chapter, and in the preceding one, St. Paul takes great Pains to ſet forth, That They (the Clergy*)* have the Spirit of God; without which, no Man ſearches the Deep Things of God: And he concludes the Chapter, with this Verſe; For Who hath known the Mind of the Lord, that he may Inſtruct him? But We have the Mind of Chriſt. Now, if We but Conſider, in humane Probability and Reaſon, the Powers Chriſt leaves to his Church in this Goſpel, and St. Paul explains ſo diſtinctly afterwards, We cannot think that Our Saviour ſaid all theſe things to no purpoſe. And pray Conſider, on the other ſide, That Thoſe who reſiſt the Truth, and will not ſubmit to his Church, draw their Arguments from Implications, and far-fetch'd Interpretations, at the ſame time that they deny plain and poſitive Words: Which is ſo great a Diſingenuity, as 'tis not almoſt to be thought that they can believe themſelves. Is there any other Foundation of the Proteſtant Church, but that if the Civil Magiſtrate pleaſe, he may call ſuch of the Clergy as he thinks fit for his Turn at that time, and turn the Church either to Presbytery, Independency, or indeed what he pleaſes? This was the Way of our pretended Reformation here in England; And, by the ſame Rule and Authority, it may be Altered into as many more Shapes and Forms, as there are Fancies in Mens Heads.

1685. The Feſtival of St. George, Apr. 23. had been Appointed for the Coronation of the King and Queen, which was Perform'd in this manner: Their Majeſties being come from Whitehall to the Palace at Weſtminſter, (where the Nobility and Others who were to go in Proceſſion were Aſſembl'd) came down in State from the Houſe of Lords into Weſtminſter-Hall about Eleven in the Morning, and being ſeated on the Throne there, the Sword of State, the Sword Curtana, and the Two Pointed Swords, together with the Golden Spurs, were Preſented to His Majeſty, and laid on a Table before him. Then the Dean and Prebends of Weſtminſter, having before brought the Crowns and other Regalia in ſolemn Proceſſion from the Collegiate-Church there, came up the Hall, and Preſented them ſeverally to His Majeſty; which being likewiſe laid on the Table, were (together with the Four Swords and Spurs) delivered to the Lords appointed to carry them in the Proceſſion, (which then began.) Theſe Noblemen bore the King's Regalia: The Earl of Ailesbury St. Edward's Staff; the Lord De Gray the Spurs; the Earl of Peterborough the Sceptre with the Croſs; the Earl of Pembroke the Third Sword; the Earl of Derby the Second Sword; and between them the Earl of Shrewsbury bearing the Curtana, or Pointleſs Sword; the Earl of Oxford the Sword of State; the Duke of Ormond St. Edward's Crown; the Duke of Somerſet the Orb; and the Duke of Albemarle the Sceptre with the Dove.

Coronation of the King & Queen.

Three other Noblemen carry'd the Queen's Regalia: The Earl of Dorſet the Ivory Rod; the Earl of Rutland the Sceptre; and the Duke of Beaufort the Crown. The Queen's Majeſty was Aſſiſted by the Biſhops of London and Wincheſter, under a Rich Canopy ſupported by Sixteen Barons of the Cinque-Ports, with her Train borne up by the Young Dutcheſs of Norfolk. The King's Majeſty was Aſſiſted by the Biſhops of Durham and Bath, under a Rich Canopy borne likewiſe by Sixteen Barons of the Cinque-Ports, and his Train borne up by Four Earls Eldeſt Sons

Their Majeſties being entred the Collegiate-Church, and the Nobility and Others being all duely Placed, they aſcended the Theatre raiſed in the Choir, and repaired to their Private Devotions on the Eaſt-part thereof, and then ſeated themſelves in their Chairs of State. Then follow'd the Recognition; and after an Anthem, the King and Queen came to the Altar, and made their firſt Oblation; and the Lords who carry'd the Regalia Preſented them at the Altar, to be there depoſited. Then the Litany was ſung by Two Biſhops: Which ended, the Biſhop of Ely began the Sermon.

After Sermon, the King took the accuſtomed Oath: And Veni Creator being ſung, and the King Diſrobed of his Mantle and Surcoat, He was Anointed, and Veſted with all the Sacred Habits, in King Edward's Chair; and the Crown being put on by the Arch-Biſhop of Canterbury, juſt at Three in the Afternoon, all the People Shouted, &c. Then follow'd the Coronation of the Queen; at which likewiſe the Ladies put on their Coronets, (as the Lords had done before at the King's:) And Her Majeſty having receiv'd into Her Hands the Sceptre and Ivory Rod, was conducted to Her Royal Seat upon the Throne. Then Their Majeſties being Enthronized, after an Anthem was ſung, the Arch-Biſhop ended with the Benediction. Their Majeſty's and the Great Retinue returning to Weſtminſter-Hall in the ſame Order they came, to a Noble Dinner.

The

1685. Opening of the New Parliament.

The 19th Day of May had been Appointed for Opening of the New Parliament: At which time His Majesty went from Whitehall, by Water, to the House of Peers, and being there Seated on His Throne, sent for the House of Commons; And then my Lord-Keeper spoke thus:

My Lords, and You the Knights, Citizens and Burgesses of the House of Commons;

Lord-Keeper's Speech.

" I Am Commanded by His Majesty to Acquaint " You, That there are diverse Preliminaries " for You to doe, and several Oaths required by " Act of Parliament for us All to take, before " You can proceed to Business. It is therefore " His Majesty's Pleasure, That You, Gentlemen " of the House of Commons, do go back to Your " House, and make Choice of a Speaker, and come " and Present him to His Majesty at Four of the " Clock: And when You have done that, and taken " the usual Oaths, His Majesty will then Acquaint " You with the Reasons why He Call'd You together.

The Commons being return'd to their own House, my Lord Middleton named Sir John Trevor as a fit Person for their Speaker, and One that would be Acceptable to His Majesty. Whereupon the Commons Unanimously made Choice of him, and at Four in the Afternoon Presented him to His Majesty: When the Lord-Keeper, by His Majesty's Command, Ratify'd and Confirm'd him Speaker; adding, " That His Majesty was well " Satisfied of his Experience and Ability, and that " he was every way fitted and qualify'd for that " Employment.

Rebellion of the Duke of Monmouth, and the Earl of Argyle.

The great Business of this Parliament, was to Suppress the Rebellions of the Duke of Monmouth, and the Earl of Argyle, who were both in Holland, with many other Discontented Persons, and had Agreed the One to Invade England, and the other Scotland, at the same time. The Earl of Argyle was first ready, and Sail'd from the Ulye, on the 2d of May, with Three Ships: On the 13th he Landed in Lorn, and Garrison'd the Castle of Dunstafvar, and began to March through the Counties of Argyle and Lorn, to encrease his Numbers among his own Clan. The News of this Invasion was brought to the King on Friday Morning, May 22d. The King went that Day to the House of Peers, and sending for the Commons, He made this SPEECH:

My Lords and Gentlemen;

The King's Speech.

" After it pleas'd Almighty God, to take to his Mercy the Late King my Dearest " Brother, and to bring Me to the Peaceable Pos- " session of the Throne of my Ancestors; I im- " mediately resolved to Call a Parliament, as the " best Means to Settle every thing upon those " Foundations, as may make My Reign both " Easie and Happy to you: Towards which, I " am disposed to contribute all that is fit for " Me to doe.

" What I said to My Privy-Council, at My " first coming there, I am Desirous to renew to " You; wherein I fully declare my Opinion con- " cerning the Principles of the Church of England, " whose Members have shew'd themselves so emi- " nently Loyal in the worst of Times, in Defence " of My Father, and Support of My Brother, " (of Blessed Memory) that I will always take " Care to Defend and Support it. I will make it " My Endeavour to Preserve this Government, " both in Church and State, as it is by Law " Establish'd: And as I will never Depart from " the Just Rights and Prerogatives of the Crown, " so I will never Invade any Man's Property; " And you may be sure, that having heretofore " Ventur'd My Life in the Defence of this Nation, " I will still go as far as any Man in Preserving it " in all its Just Rights and Liberties. And having " given this Assurance concerning the Care I will " have of your Religion and Property, which I " have chose to do, in the same Words which I " us'd at my first coming to the Crown, " the better to evidence to you, That I spoke " them not by Chance, and consequently, that " you may firmly Rely upon a Promise so " Solemnly made; 1685.

" I cannot doubt that I shall fail of suitable " Returns from you, with all imaginable Duty " and Kindness on your Part, and particularly " to what relates to the Settling of My Revenue, " and Continuing it, during My Life, as it was " in the Life-time of My Brother. I might use " many Arguments to enforce this Demand, for " the Benefit of Trade, the Support of the Navy, " the Necessity of the Crown, and the Well-being " of the Government it self; which I must not " suffer to be Precarious: But I am confident, " your own Consideration of what is Just and " Reasonable, will suggest to you whatsoever might " be enlarged upon this Occasion.

" There is One Popular Argument, which, I " foresee, may be used against what I ask of you, " from the Inclination Men have for frequent Par- " liaments; which some may think would be the " best Security, by feeding Me, from time to time, " by such Proportions as they shall think conve- " nient: And this Argument, it being the first " time I speak to you from the Throne, I will " Answer once for all, That this would be a very " improper Method to Take with Me; And that " the best way to Engage Me to Meet you often, " is always to Use Me Well.

" I expect therefore, that you will Comply with " Me in what I have Desired, and that you will " do it speedily; that this may be a short Session, " and that We may Meet again to all Our Sa- " tisfactions.

My Lords, and Gentlemen;

" I must Acquaint you, That I have had " News this Morning from Scotland, that Argyle " is Landed in the West Highlands, with the Men " he brought with him from Holland. That there " are Two Declarations Publish'd; one in the Name " of all those in Arms, the other in his Own: It " would be too long for Me to repeat the Substance " of them; it is sufficient to tell you, I am " charged with Usurpation and Tyranny. The " shorter of them I have Directed to be forthwith " communicated to you.

" I will take the best Care I can, that this " Declaration of their own Faction and Rebellion " may meet with the Reward it deserves: And " I will not doubt but you will be the more zealous " to Support the Government, and give Me My " Revenue as I have Desired it, without Delay.

Proceedings of the Lords and Commons.

Both Houses immediately Resolved to return their most Humble and Hearty Thanks to His Majesty, for his most Gracious Speech and Declaration: The Lords coming to this Resolution; " His Majesty having Graciously imparted to this " House, That He is inform'd that the late Earl " of Argyle, Attainted of Treason, with diverse " other Rebels, are Landed in Scotland, and are " in actual Rebellion; It is Ordered, by the Lords " Spiritual and Temporal in Parliament Assembled, " That this House do Wait upon His Majesty at " Five a Clock this Afternoon, in the Banqueting-House at Whitehall, to give His Majesty their " humble Thanks, for having imparted the same " to this House; and do humbly offer to Assist " His Majesty with their Lives and Fortunes, " against the said Rebels, and all other his Enemies " whatsoever.

The

1685. The Commons came to a like Reſolution; "That this Houſe will Stand by and Aſſiſt "His Majeſty, with their Lives and Fortunes, "againſt Archibald Campbell the pretended Earl of "Argyle, and his Adherents, and all Rebels and "Traytors, and all others whatſoever that ſhall "Aſſiſt him, or any of them: And that this "Houſe will in a Body Attend His Majeſty with "this Vote.

Declaration of the Earl of Argyle.

The Firſt Declaration, to which the King, in his Speech, refers, was thus Entituled, The Declaration and Apology of the Proteſtant People, that is, of the Noblemen, Barons, Gentlemen, Burgeſſes, and Commons of all ſorts, now in Arms within the Kingdom of Scotland; with the Concurrence of the True and Faithful Paſtors, and of ſeveral Gentlemen of the Engliſh Nation, Joined with them in the ſame Cauſe, &c. Herein they Complain'd, That having admitted King Charles II. to Reign over them, upon certain Terms and Conditions; He had Broken thoſe Terms, and made his Government to be Ungrate, Illegal, Arbitrary and Tyrannical. That by Reſcinding of the Solemn League and Covenant, all the Oaths ſince Impos'd, were horrid Perjury; and the Publick Exerciſe of Religion, as Eſtabliſhed by the late Laws, was a continued Apoſtacy. They Accuſed the Parliament, for Reſcinding many wholſom Laws, and for Making others on purpoſe to Perſecute and ſhed the Blood of Proteſtants. They charged the Government with the Deſolating the Kirk, Conniving at Papiſts, and Keeping up of Standing Forces, which they call the Bane of Civil Government; and ſay, all the late Adminiſtration has been Tyranny and Popery twiſted together. They therefore Declare againſt James Duke of York his Aſſenſion to the Throne, as being Excluded from it by the Commons of England; And likewiſe Declare againſt the preſent Parliaments in Both Kingdoms, as Pack'd and Cabal'd, and Return'd by Fraud and Injuſtice. For which Reaſon, they throw off all Bonds of Subjection, and take up Arms againſt James Duke of York, and all his Accomplices, for Obtaining theſe Ends. 1. The Reſtoring and Settling the Proteſtant Religion. 2. The Suppreſſion and perpetual Excluſion of Popery and Prelacy. 3. The Reſtoring of All who have been Sufferers for their Adherence to their Religion and Liberties: Concluding, with an Earneſt Invitation to their Brethren to Join with them, and Vigorouſly Aſſiſt them againſt a Perſecuting Tyrant, and an Apoſtate Party.

The other Declaration, which the King communicated to the Two Houſes, run thus:

The DECLARATION of Archibald Earl of Argyle, Lord Kintyre, Cowall, Campbell, and Lorn, Heritable Sheriff and Lieutenant of the Shires of Argyle and Turbett, and Heritable Juſtice-General of the ſaid Shires, and of the Weſt-Iſles and others; with his Orders to his Vaſſals and others in the ſaid Shires, and under his Juriſdiction, to Concurr for Defence of their Religion, Lives, and Liberties.

Second Declaration of the Earl of Argyle.

"I Shall not mention my CASE, Publiſh'd in Print in Latin and Dutch, and more largely "in Engliſh; nor mean I to repeat the Printed "DECLARATION Emitted by ſeveral "Noblemen, Gentlemen and Others of Both Nations now in Arms: But becauſe the Sufferings "of me and my Family are therein mention'd, "I have thought it fit for me to Declare for my "ſelf; That as I go to Arms, with thoſe who "have Appointed me to Conduct them, for no "Private nor Perſonal End, and only for thoſe "contained in the ſaid Declaration, which I have "Concerted with them, and Approve of; ſo I do "claim no Intereſt, but what I had before the "pretended Forfeiture of my Family, and have "ſufficient Right to. 1685.

"And that I do freely (and as a Chriſtian) "forgive all Perſonal Injuries againſt my Perſon "or Family, to all that ſhall not Oppoſe, but "Join and Concurr with us in our preſent Undertaking, for the Ends mention'd in the ſaid "Declaration; And hereby I oblige me, never to "Purſue them in Judgment, nor out of Judgment. And I do further Declare; That, obtaining the peaceable and quiet Poſſeſſion of what "belong'd to my Father, and my Self, before our "pretended Forfeitures, I ſhall Satisfie all Debts "Due by my Father, and my Self, as any Heir "or Debitor can be Obliged.

"And as my Faithfulneſs to his Late Majeſty, "and his Government, hath ſufficiently appeared "to all Unbyas'd Perſons, void of Malice; ſo I "do with Grief acknowledge my former too much "Complying with, and Conniving at the Methods "that have been taken to bring us to the ſad "Condition we are now in, though, God knows, "never Concurring in the Deſign.

"I have now, with God's Strength, ſuffered "patiently my Unjuſt Sentence and Baniſhment, "Three Years and an Half, and have never offer'd "to make any Uproar, or Defence by Arms, to "Diſturb the Peace, upon my private Concern: "But the King being now Dead, and the Duke of "York having taken off his Maſk, and having "Abandon'd and Invaded our Religion and Liberties, Reſolving to Enter into the Government, "and Exerciſe it, contrary to Law; I think it "not only Juſt, but my Duty to God and my "Country, to uſe my outmoſt Endeavours to "Oppoſe and Repreſs his Uſurpations and Tyranny.

"And therefore being Aſſiſted and Furniſh'd "very nobly by ſeveral good Proteſtants, and "Invited and Accompany'd by ſeveral of both "Nations to Lead them; I reſolve, as God ſhall "enable me, to uſe their Aſſiſtance of all kinds, "towards the Ends expreſs'd in the ſaid Declaration.

"And I do hereby earneſtly Invite and Obteſt "all honeſt Proteſtants, and particularly all my "Friends and Blood-Relations, to Concurr with us "in the ſaid Declaration. And as I have written "ſeveral Letters, ſo having no other way fully "to intimate my Mind otherwiſe, I do hereby "Require all my Vaſſals any where, and all "within my ſeveral Juriſdictions, with their "Fencible Men within their Command, to go to "Arms, and to Join and Concurr with us, according to the ſaid Declaration, as they will be "Anſwerable at their Peril; And, that they Obey "the particular Orders they ſhall receive from me, "from time to time.

Diſcontents and Provocations in Scotland.

The Scotch Presbyterians were very Numerous, and had Provocation enough to Join with the Earl of Argyle: For beſides the late Extreme Severities againſt them, there had been two Rigorous Acts Paſſed in the Parliament now Sitting at Edinburgh; the one Declaring, That whereas the Obſtinacy of the Fanatical Party, notwithſtanding all the Laws formerly made againſt them, do perſevere to keep their Houſe and Field-Conventicles, which are the Nurſeries and Rendeſvouzes of Rebellion; Therefore, His Majeſty, with Conſent of His Eſtates in Parliament, doth Statute and Ordain, That all ſuch as ſhall hereafter Preach at ſuch Fanatical Houſe, or Field-Conventicles, as alſo ſuch as ſhall be preſent as Hearers at Field-Conventicles, ſhall be Puniſh'd by Death, and Confiſcation of their Goods.— The other Declaring, That the Giving or Taking of the National Covenant, as Explained in the Year 1638. or of the League and Covenant, ſo commonly called, or Writing in Defence thereof, or Owning of them as Lawful 1685. Lawful or Obligatory on themſelves or others, ſhall infer the Crime and Pains of Treaſon.

And indeed, the Epiſcopal Party had no great reaſon to be fond of the preſent Adminiſtration; for they were under the Burden of great Taxes, and the Terrors of a Standing Army: Nay, and Epiſcopacy it ſelf was made but a ſort of Civil Office, and held, as it were, by Commiſſion, during the Pleaſure of the King, or his Council. But the Scots ſeem'd to be of this Diſpoſition, to be moſt Quiet under Hard Uſage: And therefore very few went in to the Aſſiſtance of Argyle, who being Purſued by the King's Army, under the Command of the Earl of Dunbarton, he was Deſerted by many of his Followers, and (as it was then generally believ'd) was Betray'd by Sir John Cockran, who came over with him: So, on June 17. he was forc'd to paſs the River Clyde, and to provide Guides to carry him and his remaining Forces ſafe into Galloway: but they miſtaking the Way, led them into a Bogg, where they loſt their Horſes and Baggage, and the Foot were diſpers'd into very ſmall Parties. The Earl of Argyle return'd towards Clyde, and was fallen upon by two of Greinock's Servants, but would not Yield, firing at them when they call'd to him. He receiv'd a Wound in his Head; upon which, not truſting to his Horſe, he alighted, and ran into the Water. The Noiſe brought out a Country-man, who ran into the Water after him: The Earl being almoſt up to the Neck, preſented his Piſtol to the Country Fellow, but it miſ-ſerved: Upon which the Fellow gave him a Wound in the Head, which ſtunn'd him ſo, that he ſank down, and, in the ſinking, cry'd out, Unfortunate Argyle! Before he recover'd himſelf, they took him, and carry'd him to their Commander, who ſent him to Glaſcow, and thence to Edinburgh, where he was Beheaded, on the 30th of June. There were taken with him, among the Priſoners, Colonel Ayloffe, who ſoon after ript up his own Belly with a Pen-knife; and Mr. Rumbold the Malſter, who was Executed, with many others.

Defeat of the Earl of Argyle.

He is Beheaded.

When the Commons had Waited on His Majeſty, with an Offer of their Lives and Fortunes, in Defence of His Royal Perſon, againſt the Earl of Argyle, &c. His Majeſty made them this Anſwer: Gentlemen, I could expect no leſs from a Houſe of Commons ſo Compos'd as (God be thanked) you are: I Rely on the Aſſurances you have given Me, which are the Natural Effects of Monarchical Church of England-men. I ſhall Stand by all ſuch; and, ſo Supported, have no reaſon to Fear any Rebels or Enemies I now have, or may have.

King's Answer to the Commons.

The Commons, in great Loyalty, Paſſed A Bill for Settling the Revenue of Tonnage and Poundage on His Majeſty for His Life, as had been Settled on His Late Majeſty for his Life. Which being eaſily Agreed to by the Lords, the King gave His Royal Aſſent, on Saturday May 30. when Mr. Speaker Preſented His Majeſty with the ſaid Money-Bill, in theſe Words:

May it Pleaſe Your Sacred Majeſty;

Speaker's Speech, upon the Money-Bill.

" THE Commons of England have here Preſented Your Majeſty with the Bill of " Tonnage and Poundage, with all Readineſs and " Cheerfulneſs, and that without any Security " for their Religion, though it be Dearer to them " than their Lives, Relying wholly on Your Royal " Word for the Security of it; And humbly " Beſeech Your Majeſty to Accept this their Offer; " And Pray, that God would Bleſs You with a " Long Life, and Proſperous Reign over them.

Then His Majeſty Paſſed the Act, and made the following SPEECH to Both Houſes:

1685.

My Lords and Gentlemen;

" I Thank you very heartily for the Bill you have " Preſented Me this Day; And I Aſſure you, " The Readineſs and Cheerfulneſs that has attended " the Diſpatch of it, is as Acceptable to Me as " the Bill it ſelf. After ſo Happy a Beginning, " you may believe I would not Call upon you " Unneceſſarily for an Extraordinary Supply: " But when I tell you, That the Stores of the " Navy and Ordnance are extremely Exhauſted; " That the Anticipations upon ſeveral Branches " of the Revenue are Great and Burthenſom; " That the Debts of the King My Brother, to " his Servants and Family, are ſuch as deſerve " Compaſſion; That the Rebellion in Scotland, " without putting more Weight upon it than it " really deſerves, muſt Oblige Me to a Conſiderable Expence Extraordinary: I am ſure, " ſuch Conſiderations will Move you to Give Me " an Aid to Provide for thoſe Things, wherein the " Security, the Eaſe and the Happineſs of My " Government are ſo much concern'd. But above " all, I muſt Recommend to you the Care of the " Navy, the Strength and Glory of this Nation; " that you will put it into ſuch a Condition, as " may make us Conſider'd and Reſpected Abroad. " I cannot expreſs My Concern, upon this Occaſion, " more ſuitable to My own Thoughts of it, than " by Aſſuring you, I have a True Engliſh Heart, " as Jealous of the Honour of the Nation as you " can be; And I pleaſe My Self with the Hopes, " That, by God's Bleſſing, and your Aſſiſtance, " I may carry the Reputation of it yet Higher in " the World, than ever it has been in the Time " of any of My Anceſtors: And as I will not " Call upon you for Supplies, but when they are of " Publick Uſe and Advantage; ſo I Promiſe you, " That what you Give Me upon ſuch Occaſions, " ſhall be Managed with Good-huſbandry; And " I will take Care, it ſhall be Employ'd to the " Uſes for which I Ask them.

The King's Speech.

The Forwardneſs of the Commons, in Preparing and Preſenting this Bill, made ſome People recollect, that it was needleſs at leaſt for the King to Levy that Revenue which had Legally Expired at his Brother's Death; ſince a Parliament was to Meet within a few Days, and then the ſame Cuſtoms Granted in a Parliamentary-way would have been much more to the King's Service and Honour, than while they were Foreſtall'd by a Seizure of them at the King's Command only. The Commons were now Liberally diſpos'd; for immediately after taking this laſt Speech of His Majeſty into Conſideration, they Reſolved, " That " a Supply be Given to His Majeſty, for Repair " of the Navy, Ordnance and Stores, and in " Defence of the ſame, and for all other Occaſions " mention'd in His Majeſty's Speech." And when they came to the Ways and Means, they " Agreed upon an Additional Duty of Exciſe " upon Wines and Vinegar, and a farther Impoſition upon Sugars and Tobacco." And on June 10. received this Meſſage from His Majeſty, by Sir John Ernſley, " That His Majeſty did heartily " Thank the Houſe, for their Readineſs in his " Supplies; That He Deſired no more this Seſſion, " than what they are about: That He would " make Tryal of the Impoſitions on Sugars and " Tobacco; but if He ſhould find them Injurious " to His Plantations, He would not make Uſe of " them, but hop'd they would Supply Him ſome " other Way.

Commons Ready to give Supplies.

The King's Meſſage.

We muſt look back on the Duke of Monmouth in Holland, who was very averſe to that Deſperate Enterprize which his Friends had put him upon;

1685. as appears by an Original Letter of his Own, in Answer to the Solicitations of some one Importunate Confident who had been driving him upon that Attempt; says he, Judge what we are to Expect, in case we should Venture upon any such Attempt at this time. It's to me a vain Argument, That our Enemies are scarce yet well settled: When you consider, That Fear in some, and Ambition in others, have brought them to Comply; and that the Parliament, being made up, for the most part, of Members that formerly run our Enemy down, they will be ready to make their Peace as soon as they can, rather than hazard themselves upon an uncertain Bottom. I give you but Hints of what, if I had Time, I would Write you at more Length: But that I might not seem Obstinate in my own Judgment, or neglect the Advice of my Friends, I will Meet you at the Time and Place appointed. But, for God's sake, think in the mean time, of the Improbabilities that lie naturally in our Way; and let us not, by struggling with our Chains, make them streighter and heavier. For my part, I'll run the hazard of being thought any thing, rather than a Rash, Inconsiderate Man. And to tell you my Thoughts without Disguise, I am now so much in love with a Retir'd Life, that I am never like to be fond of making a Bustle in the World again.

Duke of Monmouth not enclito an Invasion.

Push'd on by Others. But after all this Reluctancy, his Friends about him, who were weary of their Exile, prevail'd with him to Attempt a Return into England. King James was very Apprehensive of this Design of the Duke of Monmouth; and in order to prevent it, he used his utmost Endeavours, by his Envoy Mr. Skelton, to get him Secured by the States, and sent a Prisoner into England.

Duty and Respect of the Prince of Orange to the King. The Prince of Orange, as became a Nephew and Son-in-Law, shew'd a sincere Friendship and Respect to the King; and offer'd to concert such Measures with him, as might have preserv'd the Peace of England, and the Common Safety of all Europe: But he found the King to be rather jealous of his Counsels, and fond of his Own Ways. And therefore when the Prince saw the Vigilance of Skelton in hunting after the Duke of Monmouth, he not only gave the Duke Notice of the Plot against him, by Monsieur Bentinck his Favourite, but supply'd him with Money to go privately to Brussels; with a further Assurance, That if he would go to the Campaign in Hungary, he should be Maintain'd Honourably, with an Equipage suitable to his Quality.

The Duke had not been long at Brussels, before the Marquis de Grana, Governor of the Netherlands, receiv'd a Letter from King James, charging the Duke with High-Treason. Upon which, to Comply with the King's Request, he gave him Notice forthwith to Depart the Spanish Dominions.

Duke of Monmouth prepares for an Invasion. Under this Necessity of Flying, the Duke listen'd to his Friends, who had solicited his Return to Amsterdam, and there he Comply'd with their urgent Entreaties to Head them in an Expedition to England. He Hired a Man of War of 32 Guns, at Amsterdam and Three other small Vessels, on which he loaded Arms for 5000 Men. Skelton had some Notice of these Preparations, and used his utmost Endeavours to stop the Vessels in the River: But all he could effect, was to detain one small Frigot, and to extort an Order from the States to Arrest the Duke of Monmouth; who therefore went the sooner a-Board, Accompany'd by Ford Lord Grey, a Germain Count, Sir Joseph Tyley, Colonel Holmes, Colonel Matthews, Major Perrot, Captain Annesley, Captain Hewling, Mr. Wade, Dr. Temple, Mr. Ferguson, and about 670 Officers and Gentlemen who had been forced to flie to Holland for Refuge from Punishment or Persecution, and were desperately dispos'd to take any Opportunity of Returning to their Native Country.

His Attendants in this Expedition.

On May 24. the Duke Sail'd out of the Texell with his Man of War, and Two Tenders; and met with such Bad Weather in his Voyage, that he was 19 Days at Sea, and yet was never discover'd by the English Ships who lay in the Channel to intercept him. On Thursday the 11th of June he appeared off of Lyme in Dorsetshire, and went a-Shore about Eight in the Evening. As soon as his Men were Landed, he Commanded Silence, and falling on his Knees, he Implored the Protection of Heaven, in a short Prayer: Then Drawing his Sword, he Led his Men a Back-Way into the Town, and set up his Standard in the Market-place, without any Opposition. Then he Muster'd his little Company, who were all well Arm'd, and in good Equipage. Being ask'd, Whom they were for? They Declar'd, For the Protestant Religion; Inviting all Persons to come and Join with them. Captain Lark and several of the Town's-men immediately Join'd them. After this, a Printed DECLARATION was Read at the Market-Cross, Intituled, The Declaration of James Duke of Monmouth, and the Noblemen, Gentlemen and Others now in Arms for the Defence and Vindication of the Protestant Religion, and the Laws, Rights and Privileges of England. Of which the Preface was to this effect; That "Government was originally Instituted by God, and "This or That Form of it Chosen and Submitted "to by Men, for the Peace, Happiness and Security "of the Governed, and not for the Private Interest "and Personal Greatness of those that Rule. "That the Government of England, was, above all "others, Happy in its Primitive Form; whereby "the Prerogatives of the Crown, and the Privileges of the Subject, were so far from justling "one another, that the Rights reserved unto the "People, tended to render the King Honourable "and Great; and the Prerogatives settled on the "Prince, were in order to the Subjects Protection "and Safety: But the Boundaries of the English "Government had of late been broken, and no"thing left unattempted for turning the Limited "Monarchy into an Absolute Tyranny." ——— Then it proceeds to charge upon the Duke of York, in his Brother's Reign, "His Contriving "the Burning of London, his Instigating a Con"federacy with France, and a War with Holland; "his Fomenting the Popish Plot, and Encouraging "the Murder of Sir Edmund-Bury Godfrey; his "charging Treason against Protestants, and "Suborning Witnesses to Swear the Patriots of "our Religion and Liberties out of their Lives; "his Hiring Execrable Villains to Assassinate the "late Earl of Essex, and causing others to be "clandestinely Cut off, in hopes to Conceal it; "his Advising and Procuring the Prorogation and "Dissolution of the Parliaments, in order to pre"vent their Looking into his Crimes, and that he "might escape the Justice of the Nation." ——— It goes on, to the "Tyrannies which he had "exercis'd since he snatch'd the Crown from his "Brother's Head: For, in Defiance of all the "Laws and Statutes of the Realm, made for the "Security of the Reformed Protestant Religion, "he not only began his Reign with a bare-faced "avowing Himself of the Romish Religion, but "call'd in Multitudes of Priests and Jesuits, for "whom the Law makes it Treason to come into "this Kingdom, and hath Impower'd them to "exercise Idolatries: And besides his being daily "present at the Worship of the Mass, he hath "publickly Assisted at the greatest Fopperies of "their Superstition. Neither hath he been more "tender in trampling upon the Laws which con"cern our Properties; seeing in two Proclamations, "whereof the one requires the Collecting of the "Customs, and the other, the Continuing that "part of the Excise which was to Expire at the

His Form. Declaration.

"Late

1685. "Late King's Death. He hath Violently, and "againſt all the Laws of the Land, broken in "upon our Eſtates. Neither is it any Extenua- "tion of his Tyranny, that He is Countenanc'd "in it, by an Extra-Judicial Opinion of Seven "or Eight Suborn'd and Forſworn Judges, but "rather Declaring the Greatneſs and Extent of "the Conſpiracy againſt our Rights; and that "there is no Means left for our Relief, but by "Force of Arms: For Advancing thoſe to the "Bench, that were the Scandal of the Bar; and "Conſtituting thoſe very Men to Declare the "Laws, who were Accuſed and and Branded in "Parliament for Perverting of them; we are "Precluded all Hopes of Juſtice in Weſtminſter-Hall: And by Packing Juries together, by Falſe "Returns, New Illegal Charters, and other Cor- "rupt Means, he doth at once Deprive us of all "Expectations of Succour, where our Anceſtors "were wont to find it: And hopes to render That "which ought to be the Peoples Fence againſt "Tyranny, and the Conſervator of their Liber- "ties, the Means of Subverting all our Laws, "and of Eſtabliſhing his Arbitrarineſs, and Con- "firming our Thraldom." ——— Then it lays down the Ways and Means of Redreſſing all Grievances, and promiſes to purſue thoſe Ends in a fair and effectual manner: Concluding thus; We make our Appeal unto God, and all Proteſtant Kings, Princes, States and People, concerning the Juſtice of our Cauſe, and the Neceſſity we are Reduced unto, of having our Recourſe to Arms. And as We do Beſeech, Require and Adjure all Sincere Proteſtants and True Engliſh-Men to be Aſſiſting to Us, againſt the Enemies of the Goſpel, Rights of the Nation, and Liberties of Mankind; ſo We are confident of obtaining the utmoſt Aid and Succour which they can yield us with their Prayers, Perſons and Eſtates, for Dethroning the ſaid Tyrant, &c. Nor do We doubt being Juſtify'd, Countenanc'd and Aſſiſted by all Proteſtant Kings, Princes and Commonwealths who either regard the Goſpel of Jeſus Chriſt, or their own Intereſt. And, above all, our Truſt and Dependence is upon the Lord of Hoſts, in Whoſe Name we go forth, and to Whom we commit our Cauſe, and referr the Deciſion betwixt Us and our Enemies in the Day of Battle. Now let us play the Men, for our People, and for the Cities of our God; and the Lord do that which ſeemeth good unto Him.

Conduct of the King, upon this News.

On Saturday June 13. His Majeſty received an Account of the Duke's Landing, by a Expreſs from the Mayor of Lyme; And immediately ſent a Meſſage to the Commons, by the Earl of Middleton, That the Duke of Monmouth, and ſeveral of his Adherents, were Landed at Lyme in Dorſetſhire, and there ſet up his Standard. When this Meſſage was Deliver'd, Mr. Thorold and Mr. Daſſel, the one Mayor of Lyme, the other an Officer belonging to the Cuſtoms, being in the Lobby of the Houſe, were Call'd in, and gave this following Account; "That on Thurſday Night "about Six or Seven of the Clock, they diſcern'd "Two Veſſels and a Doggar at Sea, hovering near "their Shore. That they ſent a Meſſenger in a "Boat to know their Meaning, and ſee who they "were; but they took the Meſſenger on-Board, "and Bound him. That about Half an Hour "after, they ſent another Meſſenger in a Boat, "and they kept him likewiſe. That about Nine "a Clock at Night they ſail'd into the Cobb, and "the Duke of Monmouth came on-Shore, with "diverſe Men all well Arm'd and Genteel in their "Habit. That the Duke Led them on to the "Market-Place or Croſs of the ſaid Town, and "there ſet up his Standard, being a Blue Flag, "and Exercis'd the Men himſelf, who were, as "theſe Informants gueſs, near an Hundred and "fifty, or thereabouts. That the ſaid Duke of Monmouth and his Men, being asked what they "came for? ſaid, To Settle the Proteſtant Religion, and to Deſtroy Popery; Inviting all Perſons that "would, to come and Join with them. Being "told, There were no Roman Catholicks there, but Proteſtants, and there was no need for them to come there. That theſe Informants came "away from Lyme about Ten a Clock that Night, "and that they met many People on the Road, who "ſaid they were going to Join them. 1685.

After this Relation, the Houſe Reſolved, "to "Wait on His Majeſty, and give their Thanks, "in an Humble Addreſs, for his Favour in Im- "parting the ſaid Intelligence to this Houſe; "And do humbly Offer to Aſſiſt and Stand by "His Majeſty, with their Lives and Fortunes, "againſt James Duke of Monmouth, and all "Rebels and Traitors, and all other His Majeſty's "Enemies whatſoever." This Addreſs was Preſented in the Banqueting-Houſe that Evening; with another, of like Import, from the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, to Whom His Majeſty had communicated the ſame Intelligence. Addreſſes of the Two Houſes.

It is Obſervable, That the Houſe of Commons were moſt eminently Loyal; and not only call'd the Duke of Monmouth, in their Addreſs, That Ingrateful Rebel, but, on the ſame Day, Reſolved, "That a Bill be brought in, for the Attainder of "James Duke of Monmouth of High-Treaſon; "Praying His Majeſty to Iſſue out his Royal "Proclamation, Promiſing a Reward of Five thou- "ſand Pounds to Any that ſhall bring in the "Body of the Duke of Monmouth Dead or Alive." This Bill of Attainder was in Two Days Diſpatcht by the Commons; and as ſoon by the Lords, who ſent it back without any Alteration, on Tueſday June 16. And the ſame Day His Majeſty came to the Throne, and gave His Royal Aſſent to, (1.) An Act for Granting to His Majeſty an Impoſition upon all Wines and Vinegar Imported between the 24th Day of June, 1685. and the 24th of June, 1693. (2.) An Act for Granting to His Majeſty an Impoſition upon all Tobacco and Sugar Imported between the 24th Day of June, 1685. and the 24th of June, 1693. (3.) An Act to Attaint James Duke of Monmouth of High-Treaſon. And to Two Private Acts: one, to Enable the Earl of Oſſory to make a Jointure; the other, for Naturalization of ſeveral Perſons. Bill of Attainder.

On the Day before, the King had Publiſh'd A Proclamation againſt Spreading a Traiterous Declaration Publiſh'd by James Duke of Monmouth. And this Day, after Paſſing the Act of Attainder, the King Publiſh'd another Proclamation, Promiſing a Reward of Five thouſand Pounds to ſuch Perſon or Perſons who ſhall bring in the Perſon of James Duke of Monmouth Alive or Dead. Proclamations.

On Thurſday the 18th of June, the Earl of Middleton brought this Meſſage from His Majeſty, to the Houſe of Commons; "That He judges it "Neceſſary for the Members (on whoſe Loyalty "He depends) to be Preſent in their reſpective "Counties, and therefore deſigns there ſhall be a "Receſs in a very few Days. But becauſe the "Rebellion in the Weſt will occaſion an Extraor- "dinary Expence, His Majeſty Deſires there may "be a Good Fund for a Preſent Sum of Money, "to Anſwer the Immediate Charge His Majeſty "muſt be at: And to the end the Bills now "Depending may not be Prejudiced, His Majeſty "is Pleas'd, this Separation ſhall be an Adjourn- "ment, and for ſome ſhort Time only. The King's Meſſage to the Commons.

After the Delivery of which Meſſage, the Commons immediately Reſolved, That a Supply not exceeding Four hundred thouſand Pounds be Given to His Majeſty, for His Preſent Extraordinary Occaſions. And the Two Houſes were ſo Diſpatchful, that on Saturday the 27th of June His Majeſty came to the Houſe of Lords, and gave his Royal Aſſent

1685. Acts Paſſed. Aſſent to, (1.) An Act for Granting an Aid to His Majeſty, by an Impoſition on all French Linnens, and all Eaſt-India Linnen, and ſeveral other Manufactures of India, and on all French Wrought-Silks and Stuffs, and all other Wrought-Silks, and on all Brandies Imported after the 1ſt Day of July, 1685. and before the 1ſt Day of July, 1690. (2.) An Act for Reviving and Continuing Two former Acts for Encouragement of Coinage. (3.) An Act for the Providing Neceſſary Carriages for His Majeſty, in his Royal Progreſs and Removals. (4.) An Act for Reviving an Act for Providing of Carriages by Land and by Water, for the Uſe of His Majeſty's Navy and Ordnance. (5.) An Act for Conſolidating the Eſtates Taile, and Reverſion in Fee, which His Majeſty hath in the Poſt-Office, and Twenty four thouſand Pounds per Annum of the Hereditary Exciſe. (6.) An Act to Enable His Majeſty to make Grants, Leaſes, and Copies of Offices, Lands and Hereditaments, Parcel of His Highneſs's Dutchy of Cornwall, or annexed to the ſame, and for Confirmation of Leaſes and Grants already made. (7.) An Act againſt the Importation of Gun-powder, Arms, and other Ammunition and Utenſils of War. (8.) An Act for Repealing certain Clauſes in an Act of Parliament made in the 29th and 30th Years of the Reign of His Late Majeſty, for Prohibiting French Commodities. (9.) An Act for Reviving a former Act for Exporting Leather. (10.) An Act for Continuance of Three former Acts for Preventing of Theft and Rapine upon the Northern Borders of England. (11.) An Act for Clearing, Preſerving, Maintaining and Repairing the Haven and Peers of Great Yarmouth. (12.) An Act for Rebuilding, Finiſhing and Adorning the Cathedral-Church of St. Paul, London. And to Seven Private Acts.

The Houſes proceeded with great Unanimity, till on Thurſday the 2d of July His Majeſty came again to the Houſe of Peers; And the Commons being ſent for to Attend, He gave His Royal Aſſent to theſe other Bills: (1.) An Act for Reviving and Continuance of ſeveral Acts of Parliament therein mentioned. (2.) An Act to Encourage the Building of Ships in England. (3.) An Additional Act for the Improvement of Tillage. (4.) An Act for Erecting a New Church, to be call'd the Pariſh of St. James, within the Liberty of Weſtminſter. (5.) An Act for the Repair of the Cathedral-Church of Bangor, and for the Maintenance of the Choir there, and for the Augmentation of the Revenue of the Biſhoprick of Bangor; and alſo, for an Augmentation of ſeveral Vicarages within the Comportions of Laudinum in the Dioceſe of Bangor aforeſaid. And then my Lord-Keeper ſpoke thus:

Other Bills Enacted.

My Lords and Gentlemen;

The Lord Keeper's Speech.

"I Am Commanded to let you know, That it is His Majeſty's Pleaſure, That Both Houſes Adjourn forthwith till Tueſday the 4th of Auguſt next. Not that His Majeſty intends that then there ſhall be a Seſſion, but that the Members that are about Town ſhall then Meet and Adjourn themſelves from Time to Time, as there ſhall be Occaſion, till Winter: And when His Majeſty would have a Full Houſe, He will give Notice of it by Proclamation.

So Both Houſes Adjourn'd till the 4th of Auguſt: On which Day, the Earl of Rocheſter being Commiſhon'd to Supply the Place of the Lord Keeper (then Indiſpos'd) as Speaker in the Houſe of Lords, expreſs'd His Majeſty's Pleaſure, That they ſhould farther Adjourn till the 9th Day of November next.

Progreſs of the Duke of Monmouth in the Weſt.

The Duke of Monmouth, by the Concourſe of the Country People, had ſoon the Appearance of an Army, and March'd from Lyme to Taunton a Populous Town in Somerſetſhire, where he was received by Men and Maids with unuſual Demonſtrations of Joy; and at the Solicitations of his Friends, he there ſuffered himſelf to be Proclaimed King; which loſt him ſome Intereſt in the true Old Republicans, and was ſaid to be a Breach of the Promiſe he had made in Holland. He began his Mock-Reign with Three Proclamations; the one, ſetting a Sum of Money on King James's Head: The ſecond, Declaring the Parliament of England a Seditious Aſſembly: And the third, Commanding the Duke of Albemarle to Lay down his Arms, under the Penalty of Suffering as a Traitor. He March'd from Taunton in good Order to Bridgwater, ſtill Encreaſing his Numbers; from thence to Bath, where he was Denied Entrance, and would not ſtay to Force it: The Train-Bands ſtill flying two Days March before him, by Order (as was ſaid) from the Court, to give Pretence to the King to Raiſe more Forces. At Philips-Norton, by a Surprize, he Cut off the beſt part of a Troop of Horſe of the King's Army; the Duke of Grafton narrowly eſcaping with his Life. Encouraged by this Succeſs, he March'd within Two Miles of Briſtol; where a Conſult being held, he was Adviſed, Not to enter that City, but to retreat back to Bridgwater. Which Falſe-Step began to Diſhearten his Party, and to hinder his Recruits: Whereas, if he had entred Briſtol, there being no Force to oppoſe him but the Train-Bands, (and the generality of thoſe for him, not only in their Hearts, but in open Diſcourſes, and publick Healths, he might have have furniſht himſelf with Men, Arms and Money, and thence Marched into Glouceſterſhire among the Clothiers, where great Numbers even of the beſt Eſtates and Degrees waited to Join him.

His Falſe-Step.

When the Prince of Orange heard of the Duke's Landing, and that he began to gather Strength, and was Proclaim'd King, he thought himſelf ſo far concern'd, that he not only diſpatcht over the Six Engliſh Regiments Recalled from the Service of the States, but he likewiſe ſent over Monſ. Bentinck to the King, with Orders to acquaint him, That though he look'd upon the Duke of Monmouth to be a Man of no great Parts, yet that he had a Warlike Genius, and was better Skill'd in the Military Art, than any the King was to Employ againſt him; and therefore, if His Majeſty pleas'd, He would not only Lend him his Troops, but come in Perſon to Head his Army. The ſame Offer had been before communicated to Skelton at the Hague; who was either ſo Jealous of the Prince, or ſo Malicious to him, that he gave the King Notice of it, with a wrong Turn of Suſpicion and Fear: So that the King put off Monſ. Bentinck, with telling him, He ſhould aequaint his Maſter, That their Common Intereſt did require the Prince's ſtaying in Holland: And farther open'd his Mind to him in ſuch Terms, as ſufficiently diſcover'd, He did not take His Highneſs's Zeal for his Service to be at that Time ſeaſonable.

Prince of Orange offers his Service to King James.

The King declines the Acceptance of it.

The firſt Forces which His Majeſty ſent down againſt Monmouth, were ſome of the Earl of Oxford's Regiment, under the Command of my Lord Churchill, who attended the Motions of the Duke with great Conduct. The Duke of Albemarle Headed the Militia of Devonſhire: The Duke of Somerſet the Militia of that County, at Bath: The Duke of Beaufort the Militia of Glouceſterſhire, at Briſtol: The Earl of Pembroke, the Militia of Wiltſhire, at Chippenham. And the Militia of other Counties were on their March towards the Weſt; though the King did not care to Confide in them. And therefore the King ſent away all his Regular Troops and Guards, to Form an Army under the Command of the Earl of Feverſham, who in the Beginning of July Encampt at Sedgmore.

The King's Forces.

The Duke of Monmouth being at Bridgwater near adjoining, thought himſelf Beſieged, and ſaw his Men 1685. Men daily Desert in great Numbers, and therefore resolved to make One Desperate Push for All; and so, in a Council of War, Agreed to Attack the Earl of Feversham on the very first Night of his Encampment. Sunday July 5. the Country People had given the Duke Intelligence, that the King's Forces were very Remiss, the Troopers in Bed, and the Foot Revelling in their Camp: So that the Duke said, They should have no more to do, than to Lock up the Stable-Doors, and Seize the Troopers in their Beds. The Duke began his March about Eleven at Night, without Drum Beating, or Trumpet Sounding, and all were forbid to Fire a Piece till they entred the Camp. The Guide that promis'd to lead them thither a Bye-Way, conducted them round by Chedsey to that part of Sedgmore where Dunbarton's Regiment was Posted; the most Old and Experienc'd Soldiers, who had agreed that an Hundred of them should keep Guard, and Lie upon their Arms all Night. And yet they had been Caught, with all their Caution, had not the Duke's Guide happen'd to lead his Men above the Ford; and they not having patience to wait his Motions, ran Disorderly, as fast as they could, over the Ditch, to come at the Enemy; by which means they lost their Guide: and a Pistol accidentally going off, alarm'd those of Dunbarton's Regiment, who immediately put themselves in Order, and receiv'd their Enemy, as if they had not been Surprized. The Duke's Men began the Engagement with a Volley of Shots and Shouts, and forced the Rear of the King's Foot to Retreat into Weston. The Duke seeing these early Hopes of Success, Ordered the Lord Grey to bring up his Horse, which were ordinary Marsh-Mares and Colts, that would not stand the Noise of Drums and Guns. Two of his best Troops, Commanded by Captain Hewling, were the Day before Detatch'd to bring off some Cannon from Minhead, and did not return till after the Defeat, to which their Absence very much contributed.

Lord Grey Suspected.

The Lord Grey could never get his Horse into a right Posture of Charging; so that upon the Advance of Colonel Oglethorpe and Sir Francis Compton with Two Parties of the King's Horse, His Lordship Retir'd, and quitted the Field, not without great Suspicion of Treachery.

The Duke had another Misfortune; that he was not only Deserted by his Horse, but his Foot wanted Ammunition; because the Baggage, by some default, was not yet brought into the Moor: so that the Duke's Foot, in vain crying out for more Powder and Shot, after a Brave Resistance, gave Ground, and about Four a Clock on Monday Morning were intirely Routed, 300 Kill'd on the spot, 1000 in the Pursuit, and as many taken Prisoners: Those of Note were Colonel Holmes and Major Perrot, both Dangerously Wounded; Captain Madders the Constable of Crookhorn, and one Williams a Menial Servant of the Duke's, who had his Master's Cloak and 200 Guinea's.

The Duke entirely Routed.

The Duke's Army were 5000 Horse and Foot; and the King's did not much exceed in Number, though it did in Strength and Resolution. This Decisive Battle was a Day or two too soon; for immediately after, Capt. Hewling return'd with two of the bravest Troops of Horse; and the very next Day Mr. Vaughan of Somersetshire would have Join'd the Duke with 1000 Men; and Colonel Danvers and Sir Robert Peyton were just ready for a Rising in Essex, which would have given Opportunity for Multitudes in and about London to have Joined with them.

Duke's Flight.

The Duke of Monmouth had much-ado to preserve 50 Horse to secure his Retreat, and they were soon dispers'd. The Duke was advis'd to make down to Uphill a small Creek on the Severn Sea, and from thence to get over into Wales; but He himself was for going toward Limington in Hampshire. The Lord Feversham Sent out several Parties to Pursue him; and on Tuesday Morning July 7. the Lord Grey was Taken in a Disguise at Holtbridge in Dorsetshire, by the Lord Lumley's Men, who enquiring of the Cottagers, were inform'd, that two Men went over a Hedge into an Enclosure over-grown with Fern. So Guards were set on the Avenues, and about Five in the Morning next Day the German Count was Taken, who Confess'd, he parted with the Duke of Monmouth about four Hours before. Hence a more diligent Search was made, and at last one Perkin discover'd him hid in a Ditch cover'd over with Fern, and having some Pease in his Pocket. The Duke at first offer'd to make Resistance; but the Fellow crying out for Help, and some Soldiers running in to his Assistance, the Duke was Taken, and Secured by the Lord Lumley, who, under a strong Guard, conveyed him, the Lord Grey, and the German Count, by easie Journeys, to London.

1685.

Lord Grey Taken.

Duke of Monmouth Taken.

The Duke Wrote to the King from Ringwood, on July 8. the same Day he was Taken, to make his Submission to offer some Discovery, and to desire earnestly to Speak with the King: concluding thus; I hope, Sir, God Almighty will strike Your Heart with Mercy and Compassion for me, as He has done mine with the Abhorrence of what I have done: Wherefore, I hope, Sir, I may Live to shew You how Zealous I shall ever be for Your Service; and could I say but one Word in this Letter, You would be convinced of it; but it is of that Consequence, that I dare not do it. Therefore, Sir, I do Beg of You once more, to let me Speak to You; for then You will be convinc'd, how much I shall ever be,

He Writes to the King.

Your Majesty's Most Humble and Dutiful

MONMOUTH.

This Unhappy Captive was brought to London on the 13th of July, and, by the Intercession of the Queen-Dowager, was brought to the King's Presence, and fell presently at his Feet, and confess'd he Deserv'd to Die; but conjur'd him, with Tears in his Eyes, not to use him with the Severity of Justice, and to Grant him a Life, which he would be ever ready to sacrifice for his Service. He mention'd to Him the Example of several Great Princes, who had yielded to the Impressions of Clemency, on the like Occasions, and who had never afterwards repented of those Acts of Generosity and Mercy: concluding, in a most pathetical manner, Remember, Sir, I am Your Brother's Son, and if you take my Life, it is Your own Blood that You will shed. The King ask'd him several Questions, and made him Sign a Declaration, That his Father told him, He was never Marry'd to his Mother: And then said, He was Sorry indeed for his Misfortunes, but his Crime was of too great a Consequence to be left Unpunisht, and he must of necessity Suffer for it. The Queen is said to have Insulted him in a very Arrogant and Unmerciful manner. So that when the Duke saw there was nothing designed by this Interview, but to satisfie the Queen's Revenge, he rose up from His Majesty's Feet with a new Air of Bravery, and was carry'd back to the Tower; from whence, without any farther Hearing, on Wednesday July 15. he was deliver'd to the Sheriffs of London and Middlesex, on a Warrant for his Execution, about Ten in the Morning: He was conducted by them to a Scaffold on Tower-Hill, where two Eminent Divines exhorted him to Repent of his Treason and Rebellion. He desir'd them, not to trouble him with any unseasonable Discourses: He said, He Repented of all his Sins in General, of the Blood spilt on his Account, and fear'd the ill Consequence of his Enterprize. That he Dy'd in the Faith

Brought to the King.

Begs his Life, in vain.

Insulted by the Queen.

1685. Faith of this, That God would work a Deliverance for his People, and then will be Diſcover'd the Great, Horrid, and ſcarcely to be Parallell'd Villainies our Enemies have been Guilty of: adding, You ſee my Caſe is Deſperate; yet know, I Dye a MARTYR for the People. He hop'd King James would ſhew himſelf of his Brother's Blood, and extend his Mercy to his Children, ev'n as He was wont to his greateſt Enemies; they being not capable to Act, and therefore not Conſcious of any Offence againſt the Government. To one of the Divines he expreſs'd himſelf with ſome Indignation againſt the Lord Shaftsbury, complaining, He was a Tricking Man; and more-eſpecially againſt Ferguſon, who (ſays he) is a Bloody Villain. He ſtay'd on the Scaffold Half an Hour, then laid himſelf down to the Block. The Executioner, after the Sign given, ſtruck him firſt on the Shoulder: He rais'd himſelf a little, and lying down again, his Head was, at two Blows, Sever'd from his Body; which was put in a Black Velvet Coffin, and carry'd in a Velvet Hearſe to the Tower, where 'twas Bury'd in the Chapel.

The D ke of Monmouth Beheaded.

The Lord Grey Pardoned.

The Lord Grey obtain'd a Pardon from the King, which confirm'd the World very much in their Opinion of his Betraying the Duke.

Inquiſition in the Weſt.

The Lord Chief-Juſtice Jeffreys, with Four other Judges his Aſſiſtants, and a Body of Troops Commanded by Colonel Kirk, was ſent into the Weſt of England, with a Special Commiſſion, to Try the Poor Wretches that had been in the Rebellion. At Winchester, Mrs. Alicia Lyle, the Relict of John Lyle one of King Charles the Firſt's Judges, a Woman of extreme Age, was Try'd for Concealing Mr. Hicke's a Nonconformiſt Teacher, and Richard Nelthorp, (the latter being a Stranger, and the former in no Proclamation) and though the Jury brought her in Three times Not Guilty, yet Jeffreys Threats ſo far prevail'd, that ſhe was at laſt Found Guilty of High-Treaſon, and Beheaded for it. A Cruel Judgment, that was afterwards Revers'd by the Convention Called by the Prince of Orange.

Mrs. Lyle Beheaded.

The Judges went next to Dorcheſter, where Jeffreys finding 30 Perſons Return'd by the Grand-Inqueſt, as Aſſiſtants to the late Duke of Monmouth, he contriv'd this Stratagem, of taking the Shorteſt Way with them: When they came upon their Tryals, he told them, That Whoſoever Pleaded Not Guilty, and was Found ſo, ſhould have little Time to Live; but if any expected Favour, they muſt Plead Guilty. But the Priſoners would not truſt him; though they might have depended as well on his Mercy as his Juſtice, and a Confeſſion or Denial had been all one: For of Thirty Pleading Not Guilty, Twenty nine were Found Guilty, and ſoon after Executed; as were Fourſcore more out of Two hundred thirty three, who were Deluded to Plead Guilty to their Indictments, by a Promiſe of Pardon. The ſame was done at Exeter to near as many, who were alike Deluded; as alſo at Taunton, and Wells, where the Lord Jeffreys finiſh'd his Bloody Aſſizes: In theſe two laſt Places he Condemn'd above Five hundred Perſons, whereof Two hundred thirty nine were Executed, and had their Quarters ſet up in the Principal Places and Roads of thoſe Countries, to the Terror of Paſſengers, and the great Annoyance of thoſe Parts.

Cruelty of the Lord Chief-Juſtice Jeffreys.

And yet the Cruelty of the Chief-Juſtice often yielded to the Avarice of the Man, who was not more haſty to Hang up thoſe who had no Money, than he was forward to procure Pardons for thoſe that could pay the Purchaſe of them. He had the Conſcience to take above Fourteen thouſand Pounds from one Gentleman, to Save him; with which he bought an Eſtate, that might juſtly be call'd, The Field of Blood; and ſeem'd to have a Curſe Intail'd upon it, of not being Enjoy'd by a Third Heir. Thoſe Poor Wretches who could not purchaſe Pardons at my Lord's Rates, were Sold for Slaves into the American Plantations.

And when, after this Satiating of Juſtice, there came out a General Pardon; it was clogg'd with ſo many Exceptions, that it was call'd Ridiculouſly Cruel: For not only thoſe were Excepted who had made their Eſcape, but all the Taunton Maidens who had made Colours and Preſented them to the Duke of Monmouth, ſome of them but Girls of Eight or Nine Years old, were all Excepted by Name; and no Pardon could be purchaſed for this Piece of Treaſon, till their Parents had paid more for it, than would have provided a Marriage-Portion for them. 'Tis ſaid, that after this Barbarous Expedition, the Lord Jeffreys, a Man of a Sarcaſtick and Abuſive Wit, was heard to boaſt with ſome Pleaſure, That he had Hang'd more Men, than all the Judges of England ſince William the Conqueror.

The King ſaid to be Diſpleas'd at theſe Proceedings.

Some of the Foreign Popiſh Hiſtorians have affirm'd, That King James was no ſooner inform'd of the Cruelties of Jeffreys, but he ſhow'd his Indignation at his Unwarrantable Proceedings. But this is hardly to be reconcil'd with the Approbation and Reward which the King gave to him: For it is certain, that His Majeſty writ him a Letter, in his Circuit, and bid him Diſpatch the Buſineſs before him, and come and take the Seals, for he was forc'd, in the mean time, to be Chancellor himſelf. And when with greater Haſte and Fury he did Expedite his Buſineſs, and return'd to be made Lord Chancellor; it was expreſsly ſaid to be in Conſideration of the many eminent and faithful Services he had rendred the Crown, aſwel in the Late King's time, as ſince His Majeſty's Acceſſion to the Throne.

Jeffreys made Lord Chancellor.

Nor was Judge Jeffreys the only Perſon who was thought to Execute the King's Order's; but Colonel Kirk, a Soldier of Fortune, a Man of Boldneſs and Looſeneſs, did alſo Act a conſiderable Part in theſe unhappy Tragedies: After the Duke's Defeat, he cauſed Ninety Wounded Men to be Hang'd at Taunton, not only without permitting their Relations to ſpeak with them, but with Pipes playing, Drums beating, Trumpets ſounding, and all other Military Pomp and Joy. At another Town he Invited his Officers to Dinner, near the Place where ſome of the Condemned Rebels were to be Executed, and Order'd Ten of them to be Turn'd off with a Health to the King, Ten in a Health to the Queen, and Ten more in a Health to the Lord Jeffreys. Theſe Cruelties he afterwards endeavour'd to palliate, by pretending, that he did nothing but by Expreſs Order from the King, and his General. But he was charg'd with one Action that could proceed only from his own Brutal Inclination to Luſt and Blood, and that was, the drawing in a poor Maiden to Proſtitute her ſelf to him, with the Promiſe of Saving her Brother's Life, and nevertheleſs cauſing him to be Hang'd on the Sign-poſt of the ſame Houſe, and out of the Window preſenting the credulous Abuſed Damſel with that Barbarous Spectacle of his Treachery and Cruelty.

Barbarities committed by Colonel Kirk.

The Suppreſſing of this Rebellion, was ſo great an Advantage to the Strength and Intereſt of the King, and to the Peace and Quiet of the Nation, that King James, with any Moderation, might have been the Happieſt Prince that ever Sway'd the Engliſh Sceptre. But his Misfortune was, that inſtead of Securing his Juſt Prerogative, and Encouraging his Loyal Subjects, he fell upon the Reſolution of a Standing Army, for the Support of Popery and Arbitrary Power. He had a Houſe of Commons very Pliable to his Deſires in the laſt Seſſion, and very Obſequious in all the Steps of Reducing and Executing the Duke of Monmouth, and as forward in Supplies of Men and Money. The King was willing to miſtake their Zeal in going ſo far, for an Aſſurance of going as much farther as He pleaſed to call them: As if He,

Suppreſſing of this Rebellion turn'd to ill Uſes

and

1685. and his Ministers were not rightly sensible what a Tenderness and Affection English Men have for their Laws and Liberties; and how hard a Matter it is for any Prince to make a House of Commons Accessory to the Enslaving of a Nation. This appear'd in the next Session held at Westminster, on Monday the 9th of November; when His Majesty being come to the House of Peers, and Seated on his Throne, He Sent for the Commons, and made this SPEECH to Both Houses:

Parliament Meet.

My Lords and Gentlemen;

The King's Speech. "AFter the Storm that seem'd to be coming upon Us when We Parted last, I am glad to Meet you in so great Peace and Quietness; God Almighty be Praised, by whose Blessing that Rebellion was Suppress'd. But when I reflect, what an inconsiderable Number of Men Began it, and how long they Carry'd it on without any Opposition, I hope every Body will be convinc'd, that the Militia, which have hitherto been so much Depended on, is not Sufficient for such Occasions; and that there is nothing but a good Force of Well-Disciplin'd Troops in constant Pay, that can Defend Us from such as either at Home or Abroad are dispos'd to Disturb Us. And in truth, My Concern for the Peace and Quiet of My Subjects, aswel as for the Safety of the Government, made Me think it Necessary to Encrease the Number to the Proportion I have done, that I owed aswel to the Honour as the Security of the Nation, whose Reputation was so infinitely expos'd to all Our Neighbours, by having Lain open to this late wretched Attempt, that it is not to be Repair'd, without keeping such a Body of Men on foot, that None may ever have a Thought of finding Us again so miserably Unprovided. It is for the Support of this great Charge, which is now more than Double to what it was, that I Ask your Assistance, in Giving Me a Supply Answerable to the Expences it brings along with it: And I cannot doubt, but that what I have Begun so much to the Honour and Defence of the Government, will be Continued by you with all Cheerfulness and Readiness that is requisite for a Work of so great Importance.

"Let no Man take Exception, that there are some Officers in the Army, not Qualify'd, according to the late Tests, for their Employment: The Gentlemen, I must tell you, are most of them well known to Me; and having formerly Served with Me on several Occasions, and always Approv'd the Loyalty of their Principles by their Practices, I think them now fit to be Employ'd under Me; And will deal plainly with you, That after having had the Benefit of their Services in such Time of Need and Danger, I will neither expose them to Disgrace, nor My Self to the Want of them, if there should be another Rebellion, to make them Necessary to Me.

"I am afraid some Men may be so wicked, to hope and expect that a Difference may happen between you and Me, upon this Occasion: But when you consider what Advantages have risen to Us in a few Months, by the Good-Understanding We have hitherto had; what wonderful Effects it hath already produced in the Change of the whole Scene of Affairs Abroad, so much more to the Honour of the Nation, and the Figure it ought to make in the World; And that Nothing can hinder a further Progress in this Way, to all Our Satisfactions, but Fears and Jealousies amongst Our Selves. I will not apprehend that such a Misfortune can befal Us, as a Division, or but a Coldness between you and Us; nor that any thing can shake you, in your Steadiness and Loyalty to Me, who, by God's Blessing, will ever make you all Returns of Kindness and Protection, with a Resolution to Venture even my own Life in Defence of the True Interest of this Kingdom." 1685.

The Speech was very Offensive.

This Speech was immediately understood to be, the Declaring for a Standing Army, to be Commanded by Popish Officers. And therefore, though the Earl of Middleton Moved, That the House would immediately Return their Thanks to His Majesty, for His most Gracious Speech, and also proceed to the Consideration of Answering the Ends therein mention'd; the House could not but shew their Jealousies and Fears, and Adjourn the Debate till Thursday next: On which Day, Nov. 12. the House Resolved it self into a Committee of the Whole, to take into Consideration His Majesty's Speech. Those on the Court-Side Moved to Vote the Militia Insufficient; and that the New Levies made by the King were Just, Reasonable and Necessary; and that a Supply ought to be Given, for the Keeping up of those Standing Forces. Those call'd the Country-Party, were for Vindicating the Militia, and making them more Useful; were against a Standing Army, and especially against Dispensing with Popish Officers in it; and Sir T. C. spoke boldly thus: —— "His Majesty, "on his first Entrance on the Throne, told us, "He had been Mis-represented; and that He would "Preserve the Government in Church and State, "now Establish'd by Law, and Maintain us in all "our Just Rights and Privileges. Over-joy'd at "this, we run hastily in to Him; we gave "Four Millions (reckoning what we added to "him for Life was worth) at once. The present "Revenue is One million nine hundred thousand "Pounds, or Two Millions Yearly; the Charge "of the Government (admitting this Army "Kept up) is but One million three hundred thou-"sand Pounds Yearly. And pray let us not forget, "that there was a Bill of Exclusion Debated in this "House; I was here, and shew'd my self against "it: The Arguments for it, were, That we should, "in case of a Popish Successor, have a Popish Army. "You see the Act of the Test already broken: "But pray remember what the late Lord Chan-"cellor told you, when the late King (of Blessed "Memory) Passed that Act, (the Words were to "this Effect) By this Act, you are Provided against "Popery, that no Papist can possibly creep into any "Employment. I am Afflicted greatly at this "Breach on our Liberties; and seeing so great "Difference betwixt this Speech and those hereto-"fore made, cannot but believe this was by some "others Advice. This struck at here, is our All: "And I wonder there have been any Men so "desperate, as to take any Employment, not "Qualify'd for it, and would have therefore the "question, that a Standing Army is Destructive to "the Country.

Speeches against a Standing Army.

The Result of this Debate, was, the Appointing a Committee to Draw up an Address to His Majesty; which, on Monday Nov. 16. was Read and Agreed to, in this Form:

Most Gracious Sovereign;

Address of the Commons. "WE Your Majesty's most Loyal and Faithful Subjects, the Commons in Parliament Assembled, do, in the first place, (as in Duty bound) Return Your Majesty our most Humble and Hearty Thanks, for your great Care and Conduct in Suppressing the late Rebellion, which threatned the Overthrow of this Government, both in Church and State, to the Extirpation of our Religion as by Law Established, which is most Dear unto us, and which Your Majesty hath been pleas'd to give "us

1685. "us repeated Assurances, You will always Defend "and Maintain: Which, with all Grateful Hearts, "we shall ever Acknowledge.

"We further crave Leave to Acquaint Your "Majesty, That we have with all Duty and "Readiness taken into our Consideration Your "Majesty's Gracious Speech to us. And as to that "Part of it, relating to the Officers in the Armies, "not Qualify'd for their Employments, according "to an Act of Parliament made in the 25th Year "of the Reign of Your Royal Brother, Intituled, "An Act for Preventing Dangers which may happen "from Popish Recusants;

"We do, out of our bounden Duty, humbly "Represent unto Your Majesty,

"That these Officers cannot, by Law, be Capable "of their Employments; And that the Incapaci- "ties they bring upon themselves that way, can "no way be taken off but by an Act of Par- "liament:

"Therefore, out of that great Reverence and "Duty we owe unto Your Majesty, who have "been Graciously Pleas'd to take Notice of their "Services to Your Majesty, we are Preparing a "Bill to Pass Both Houses, for Your Royal Assent, "to Indemnifie them from the Penalties they "have now Incurred. And because the Con- "tinuing of them in their Employments, may "be taken to be a Dispensing with that Law, "without an Act of Parliament, the Consequence "of which is of the greatest Concern to the Rights "of all Your Majesty's Subjects, and to all the "Laws made for the Security of their Religion;

"We therefore, the Knights, Citizens and Bur- "gesses of Your Majesty's House of Commons, "do most humbly Beseech Your Majesty, That "You would be most graciously Pleas'd to give "such Directions therein, that no Apprehensions "or Jealousies may remain in the Hearts of "Your Majesty's most Loyal Subjects.

This Address was Presented by the Speaker, Attended by the House, to His Majesty, in the Banqueting-House at Whitehall, on Tuesday Nov. 17. When His Majesty, with some Resentment, gave them this Answer:

GENTLEMEN;

King's Answer. I Did not Expect such an Address from the House of Commons. For having so lately recommended to your Consideration the great Advantages a Good-Understanding between Us had produced in a very short Time, and given you Warning of Fears and Jealousies amongst Our Selves; I had reason to hope, that the Reputation God had blessed Me with in the World, would have Seal'd and Confirm'd a Good Confidence in you for Me, and of all that I say to you.

But however you Proceed on your Part, I will be Steady in all My Promises I have made to you; and be Just to My Word in this, and all my other Speeches.

Not pleasing. When this Answer was Read, there was a profound Silence in the House for some time after it: At last a Member Moved, That a Day might be Appointed to Consider of His Majesty's Answer to their late Address; and named Friday next. Mr. C. stood up and Seconded that Motion, and said, I hope we are all English-men, and are not to be Frighted out of our Duty, by a few High Words. Exception was immediately taken at those Words, as Reflecting on the King, and they were Writ down by the Clerk, and Mr. C. was Call'd upon to Explain them: And after much Debate, It was Ordered, That Mr. C. for his Indecent Speech, should be Sent to the Tower.

Supply Granted. In the mean time, the Commons had made their Resolutions, to Give the King as much Money as could possibly Serve his Just Occasions, and be Consistent with their own Liberties and Rights. When the Question was put, That a Supply be Given to His Majesty; It was Carry'd in the Affirmative: But these Words, Towards the Support of the Additional Forces (which one of the Members Moved might be added) were Rejected, and instead of them, it Passed, That the House be Moved to Bring in a Bill to make the Militia Useful. The Sum Demanded by the King's Agents, was One million two hundred thousand Pounds. Which Others thinking Exorbitant, said, That the Measure of their Supply was their Security: That the Use was to Direct the Quantum. That Four hundred thousand Pounds was Enough to Maintain the Additional Forces Two Years, till the Militia be made Serviceable. That they must not Give All at Once, but leave the Door open, for coming thither another Time. Others proceeded to say, That they had that Session already Given Customs and Excises for His Majesty's Life, which amounted to Six Millions. That they ought to give Little now, to have Opportunity of Giving more another time: For if they Gave so Much at one Sitting, they should have Nothing left to Give; Nay, and if Things proceeded thus, what they had, would be taken from them. But nevertheless, after a long Debate, the Question was put, for Seven hundred thousand Pounds, and no more, to be Given to His Majesty: Which Pass'd in the Affirmative; and the House were entred upon Ways and Means for the Raising of it. And to make the King Easie in his Roman Catholick Officers in the Army, they not only offer'd a Bill to Indemnifie them from the Penalties they had already Incurr'd, but they were willing to Capacitate, by Act of Parliament, such a Number of those Officers as his Majesty should give a List of. But the King would Accept of nothing under a profound Submission and Obedience to all his Demands; and therefore he not only gave the Commons his Marks of Displeasure, in his Answer to their Address, Nov. 18. but when they had appointed Nov. 20. to Consider of that Answer, he would not suffer them to enter upon any such Debate, but on that very Morning Prorogued the Parliament.

Compliance of the Commons.

Not Accepted by the King.

The King not pleas'd with the House of Lords. The King was not much better Pleas'd with the House of Lords: For when it was there Debated, Whether they should give the King Thanks for his Speech, or not? some of the Peers were for it, while others warmly oppos'd it; and the Marquess of Hallifax, a Man of sharp Wit, said, by way of Irony, They had now more Reason than ever to give Thanks to His Majesty, since He had dealt so plainly with them, and had Discover'd what He before Intended. What he meant for a Jest, was eagerly laid hold on, by the Courtiers, for Earnest; so an Address of Thanks was Presented: And His Majesty made Answer, That He was very well satisfy'd that their Lordships were well pleas'd with what He said; And that He would never offer any thing to their House, that He should not be convinc'd was for the Good and true Interest of the Kingdom. But the Lords gave greater Offence, by taking Notice of the Violent and Arbitrary Prosecution of the Lord Delamere and the Earl of Stamford, wherein they thought the Privileges of Peerage were Intrench'd upon. The same Day the King made his Speech, the Lord Delamere, in an humble Petition, represented to their Lordships, "That His Ma- "jesty, by his Proclamation, Dated the 19th of "July last, did Require the Petitioner to Appear "before him in Council within Ten Days, not "for any manner of Treason, but for other less "Matters therein contain'd. That accordingly, "within Seven Days, he did Render himself to "my Lord Sunderland: And that after being "brought before His Majesty then sitting in "Council, he was neither Confronted by any "Person 1685. "Perſon that Accuſed him, nor otherwiſe Charg'd "with any manner of Treaſon, but only ask'd "ſome Queſtions relating to Matters of a leſſer "Nature: And had he been Guilty of them, "yet, by Law, he might and ought to be Bail'd. "That yet the Lord Sunderland, by Warrant "bearing Date the 26th of July laſt, did Commit "the Petitioner to the Tower of London, (for "High-Treaſon, in Levying War againſt the "King) where he had remained ever ſince, under "a very Cloſe Reſtraint. And as he avowed "himſelf to be altogether Innocent of any Evil "Practice againſt the King or the Government, "and had in all things behaved himſelf as became "a good Subject: So he humbly Pray'd their "Lordſhips to take his Caſe into their ſerious "Conſideration, and to do therein what ſhould "ſeem meet to their Lordſhips." After ſome Debate, the Queſtion was put, Whether the Lords with White Staffs ſhould Wait on His Majeſty, to know the Reaſon why the Lord Delamere, a Member of their Houſe, was Abſent from his Attendance there? Which being carry'd in the Affirmative, the Earl of Rocheſter, Lord Treaſurer, Reported the next Day, That he, with the other Lords, having Waited on His Majeſty with their Meſſage; His Majeſty was pleas'd to Anſwer, That the Lord Delamere ſtood Committed for High-Treaſon, Teſtified upon Oath; and that His Majeſty had already given Directions, That he ſhould be Proceeded againſt according to Law. The Lords reſumed this Debate on Nov. 16. when the Lord Chancellor Jeffreys, by His Majeſty's Command, gave this Account to their Lordſhips, of the Proceedings had and intended to be had againſt the Lord Delamere; ſays he, To ſhew your Lordſhips, That the King has given Orders for a ſpeedy Proſecution of him, the Treaſon whereof he is Accuſed was Committed in Cheſhire, and that being a County Palatine, the Proſecution muſt be there, and not in the Court of King's-Bench; as it might be, if the Treaſon had been Committed in any other County: And therefore His Majeſty had given Orders for a Commiſſion of Oyer and Terminer, in order to the Finding an Indictment againſt him. Which Commiſſion is already Paſs'd; and if the Indictment be not Found before the End of the Term, the Lord Delamere's Prayer being Entred in the King's-Bench, he may be Bailed. This Noble Lord was afterwards Tryed by his Peers, the Chancellor Jeffreys ſitting as High-Steward, and was Honourably Acquitted; it manifeſtly appearing, That Thomas Saxon the Principal Evidence againſt his Lordſhip, was Guilty of Perjury; for which he Suffer'd Condign Puniſhment.

Ld. Delamere Acquitted.

Petition of the Earl of Stamford to the Lords.

On the 11th of November, the Earl of Stamford did likewiſe put up a Petition to the Lords, importing, "That in July laſt he was taken in "Cuſtody at his own Houſe in Leiceſterſhire; "and being brought to London, was, by the Earl "of Sunderland's Warrant, Committed to the "Tower, (for High-Treaſon, in Conſpiring the "Death of the Late King) where he Remained "ever ſince, and was now a Cloſe-Priſoner, and "had not had the Uſe of Pen, Ink or Paper, "except to Sign Petitions, in the Gentleman-"Porter's or Warden's Preſence: That he took "Leave and Aſſent, That he was Innocent of the "Crime laid to his Charge, and had endeavour'd "to Behave himſelf with all Duty and Loyalty "to the King, and His Royal Brother of Glorious "Memory: That nevertheleſs, he heard there "was an Indictment of High-Treaſon Found "againſt him; but where, when, or how, or upon "what Evidence, or upon what Matter, he knew "not. Wherefore, He humbly Prayed, That their "Lordſhips, according to the Ancient Courſe of "Proceedings of this Moſt Honourable Houſe, be "Pleas'd to Order him to be brought before them "in their Houſe of Parliament, there to Hear the "Matter Charg'd againſt him; And that there-upon ſuch farther Proceedings might be had, as "are agreeable to Juſtice, and the uſual Courſe "of Parliamentary Proceedings in Caſes of the "like Nature." Thereupon their Lordſhips Ordered the Lord-Mayor, and the reſt of the Juſtices for the City of London, forthwith to return into that Houſe, by Virtue of His Majeſty's Writ of Certiorari, the Indictment Found before them againſt the Earl of Stamford. On Nov. 17. the ſaid Earl, purſuant to their Lordſhips Order, was brought to their Bar, and the Indictment Found againſt him. And his Petition being Read, the Lord Chancellor Ask'd him, What he had to Say to the Houſe? The Earl Anſwer'd, He Deſir'd to Hear his Charge. And being Ask'd again, If he had any thing more to Say? His Lordſhip Reply'd, That he had been ſtraightly Confined by Sixteen Weeks Impriſonment, and not allow'd the Liberty of Pen, Ink and Paper, or of Friends to come to him; and therefore he could ſay no more, till he knew his Charge. Whereupon the Houſe Order'd, That the Earl of Stamford's Tryal ſhould be in Weſtminſter-Hall, on the Firſt Day of December next: That in the mean time, he ſhould be allow'd the Liberty of Pen, Ink and Paper, and Friends to come to him, in order for his Tryal; And that the Lords with White-Staffs ſhould Attend the King, to Deſire His Majeſty, on behalf of this Houſe, That a Place may be Appointed in Weſtminſter-Hall, and that His Majeſty would give Order for a Commiſſion to Appoint a Lord High-Steward, in order to the ſaid Tryal. On Nov. 18. the Lords were made acquainted, That the King had Comply'd with their Deſire: But becauſe, the next Day, their Lordſhips Appointed the 23d of that Month for the Reading and Conſidering His Majeſty's Speech, in a Full Houſe; the King apprehending the Reſult of their Debates, and fearing the Jealouſies which the Commons had expreſs'd, he came to the Houſe of Peers on Nov. 20. and the Commons Attending, He Commanded the Lord Chancellor to let Both Houſes know, "That it was His Majeſty's "Pleaſure, for many weighty Reaſons, that this "Parliament be Prorogued till the 10th Day of February next." Soon after, the Earl of Stamford, upon bringing his Habeas Corpus, was admitted to Bail; and in the Beginning of next Year, his Lordſhip, though Innocent, was obliged to accept of a Pardon, whereby his Bail was Diſcharg'd.

His Lordſhip's Tryal.

Parliament Prorogu'd.

Earl of Stamford accepts a Pardon.

And indeed, beſides the Buſineſs in the Weſt, this Year was fill'd with Proſecutions and Penalties, for Crimes and Offences againſt the State. On May the 8th and 9th, Titus Oates was Tryed at the King's-Bench-Bar, upon Two ſeveral Indictments of Perjury, ſaid to be formerly Preferr'd againſt him by the Command and Direction of the Late King (of Ever-bleſſed Memory;) which ſhould have been Tryed the laſt Term, had not His Majeſty's Death prevented it. He was now Convicted of Perjury, on both the ſaid Indictments; and being brought to the King's-Bench-Bar on the 16th of May, the Court awarded Judgment againſt him, as follows; "That he ſhall be Diveſted of "his Canonical Habit for Ever: That on Monday "next he be carry'd round Weſtminſter-Hall with "a Paper on his Head declaring his Offence, in "theſe Words, TITUS OATES, Convicted "upon Full Evidence, for Two Horrid Perjuries: "And that afterwards he ſtand in the Pillory "before Weſtminſter-Hall-Gate, and on Tueſday "before the Royal-Exchange; That on Wedneſday "he be Whipt from Aldgate to Newgate by the "Common Hang-man, and on Friday following "from Newgate to Tyburn; That he ſtand in the "Pillory on every 24th of April, during his Life, "before Tyburn, on every 9th of Auguſt in the "Palace-Yard at Weſtminſter, on every 10th of "Auguſt

Titus Oates Convicted of Perjury.

Severe Sentence.

1685. " August at Charing-Cross, on every 11th of August " at Temple-Bar, and on every 2d of September " before the Royal-Exchange, unless any of these " Days happen to be Sunday, and then on the " Day following; That he Pay a Fine of a " Thousand Marks for each Perjury, and that " he suffer Imprisonment during his Life." There was no Remission of any part of this Sentence: That of Whipping was Executed with the utmost Severity, by Special Order from the Court, and with Rewards given beforehand to the Executioner by several Papists. The Stripes of the first Whipping were so sore and green upon the second, that it was Grievous to the Spectators, and much more to the Sufferer; who had perhaps committed some Mistakes in the Circumstances of Time and Place, but the Substance of his Evidence was undoubtedly True; for the Main of his Depositions was Demonstrated by the Papers of Coleman, and by a Concurrence of many other Acts and Deeds. And it is much to be fear'd, that the Truth of his Evidence had given more Offence to the Court, than any Mistakes in it. However, his Punishment look'd much the worse, for being Inflicted in a Popish Reign: And many imputed to His Majesty the Love of Revenge, as if the King of England could not forget the Injuries done to the Duke of York.

Tryal of Dangerfield.

On May 30. Thomas Dangerfield was Tryed at the King's-Bench-Bar, upon an Information, for Writing and Publishing a most Villainous and Scandalous Libel, call'd his Narrative; wherein, according to his Depositions before the Parliament in 1680. he did Reveal, " That he was Employ'd " by the Popish Party, and chiefly by the Lords " in the Tower, and the Countess of Powys, to " Invent a Meal-Tub Plot, which was to have " thrown the Popish Plot upon the Presbyterians." This Narrative was Ordered to be Printed by the House of Commons, on Nov. 10. 1680. But notwithstanding that Order, their Speaker Mr. Williams was afterwards Fined Ten thousand Pounds, for Licensing it to be Printed, and could not get off without Paying the greatest part of it. And Mr. Dangerfield being now found Guilty, receiv'd Judgment at the King's-Bench-Bar, " That he should stand Twice " in the Pillory; That he should be Whipt from " Aldgate to Newgate, and from Newgate to Tyburn, " and should Pay a Fine of Five hundred Pounds." In his return from Tyburn towards Newgate, after his Whipping, being in a Coach, he had reproachful Words given him by one Robert Francis, a virulent Papist, and was run by him into the Eye with a Tuck at the end of a Cane; of which, together with the Pain of his Whipping, he Died soon after, and Francis was justly Executed for it.

His Narrative.

He is Kill'd by Robert Francis.

It was indeed made the Fashion of the Court, to Disbelieve and Ridicule the whole Popish Plot, and to talk of nothing but the Plot of the Presbyterians; of which a late Writer speaks thus, " This was call'd the Presbyterian or Protestant " Plot; which most People look'd upon as the " Contrivance of the Jesuits, in order to Baffle " the Popish Plot; and to Crush the Ringleaders " of that Party, who for several Years had so " warmly endeavour'd to prevent King James's " Accession to the Throne. Many of these Conspirators had already been Executed in King " Charles's Reign; and the Court being now resolv'd " to Prosecute the rest, the Eloquent Pen of " Dr. Sp—t (not long before made B—p of " R——ter) was industriously set to Work to " Varnish over and Palliate the Flaws of Keeling " and the other Witnesses Depositions. Accordingly in the Beginning of June he Publish'd, " An Account of the Horrid Conspiracy against the " Late King, His Present Majesty, and the Govern- " ment; adorn'd with all those Flourishes of " Oratory, which are so far from Persuading, 1685. " that they rather give Truth an Air of Fiction: " but however, as Affairs were then Managed, a " Romance was as fit to serve the Court, as a " True History.

Presbyterian Plot.

Upon the same Day with Mr. Dangerfield's Tryal at Westminster, in the Afternoon, at the Nisi prius held at the Guildhall, Mr. Richard Baxter the Eminent Writer and Teacher was Convicted, upon an Information, For Writing and Publishing Scandalous and Seditious Notes upon the New Testament, (of which a larger Account shall be given in the State of Religion for this Year.

Tryal of Mr. Ric. Baxter.

On June 25. William Disney Esq; was Tryed by a Special Commission of Oyer and Terminer for the County of Surrey, before the Lord Chief-Justice of England, and other His Majesty's Justices, upon an Indictment of High-Treason, " For Printing " and Publishing a most Vile and Traiterous Paper " against His Majesty and his Government, Intitl'd, " The Declaration of James Duke of Monmouth, &c." Of which being found Guilty, he had Sentence Pass'd upon him, To be Drawn, Hang'd and Quarter'd on Monday next.

Tryal of Mr. Cornish:

On Octob. 19. Henry Cornish Esq; late Sheriff, now Alderman of London, was brought to his Tryal at the Old-Bailey, (having been a Week before Committed Close Prisoner to Newgate) and was Indicted of High-Treason, For Conspiring with other False Traitors to raise a Rebellion within this Kingdom, and the Late King (of Ever-blessed Memory) to Death and final Destruction to bring, and the Ancient Government of this Kingdom to Alter and Subvert. The only Witness against him was Colonel Rumsey, a Loose and Wicked Evidence; there was another indeed Call'd, one Goodenough, but what he Deposed could not affect the Prisoner: However, Mr. Cornish was found Guilty, Condemn'd, and Executed in Cheapside, much Lamented by his Fellow-Citizens, as a Man Unjustly Sacrificed; for they look'd upon the true Reason of this Proceeding against him to be, That Mr. Cornish, when Sheriff of London, had been very Active against the Popish Conspirators, so that now his Blood must Expiate his Zeal for the Protestant Religion.

Unjustly Condemned and Executed

On the same Day were likewise Tryed William Ring, " For Harbouring and Concealing Joseph " Kelloway and Henry Lawrence, who were in the " late Rebellion in the West: John Fernely, For " Harbouring and Concealing James Burton, a " Person Outlawed for High-Treason: And " Elizabeth Gaunt, For Succouring and Assisting " the said Burton with Money, and helping him " to a Passage beyond the Seas:" And were all Three found Guilty of High-Treason, and had Sentence of Death Pass'd upon them.

On Octob. 27. Richard Nelthorp and John Ayloffe were brought from Newgate to the King's-Bench-Bar, where being ask'd what they had to say, why Execution should not be Awarded against them, they standing Attainted by Outlawry of High-Treason, for Conspiring the Death of the Late King, of Ever-blessed Memory? &c. They not being able to say any thing that could avail them, the Court made a Rule, That they should be Executed on Friday; and accordingly they were then Hang'd, Mr. Nelthorp before Grays-Inn, and Mr. Ayloffe before the Temple-Gate.

Execution of Nelthorp & Ayloffe.

On Thursday Nov. 26. the Lord Brandon, by the Name of Charles Gerrard Esq; was brought to his Tryal at the King's-Bench-Bar, upon an Indictment of High-Treason, For Conspiring to raise a Rebellion, and Depose the Late King: Of which he was found Guilty; and being then Remanded to the Tower, he was on Nov. 28. brought again to the King's-Bench-Bar, where Sentence of Death Pass'd upon him, as in Cases of High-Treason; but he afterwards found Means to procure his Pardon.

Tryal of Ld. Brandon.

On

1685. Tryal of Mr. Bateman.

On Wedneſday Decemb. 9. Charles Bateman was brought to his Tryal at the Old-Bailey, upon an Indictment of High-Treaſon; of which he was found Guilty, and received Sentence of Death, which was Executed upon him at Tyburn on Decemb. 18.

Tryal of Mr. Hambden.

On Decemb. 30. John Hambden Eſq; was Arraign'd at the Old-Bailey, upon an Indictment of High-Treaſon, for Conſpiring to raiſe a Rebellion againſt the Late King, &c. He expecting no Favour from the Court or Jury, Pleaded Guilty, and caſt himſelf upon the King's Mercy. After which, he was immediately Sentenc'd to Die, but did obtain a Pardon.

On Febr. 10. Mr. Philibert Vernatti, who, being Attainted by Outlawry, for the Murther of Sir Edmund-Bury Godfrey, had, in the Beginning of this Term, brought a Writ of Error, and Reverſed the ſaid Outlawry, was now Tryed upon the Indictment, and Acquitted of the ſame. And the ſame Day, the Reverend Dr. Edes of Chicheſter was Tryed, upon an Information of High Miſdemeanor, only for ſome Words which he had innocently and freely ſpoken; of which he was found Guilty, and thereupon Committed to the Kings-Bench Priſon.

Aug. 29. His Majeſty being well ſatisfy'd with the good and faithful Services of Sir Richard Bulſtrode, lately his Reſident at Bruſſels, was pleas'd, as a particular Mark of his Favour, to ſend him back with the Character of his Envoy to that Court. The Right Honourable Francis Lord Guilford, Lord Keeper of the Great-Seal of England, Died on Saturday Night, Sept. 5. in his Houſe at Roxton in Oxfordſhire: Upon which His Majeſty taking into his Royal Conſideration the many eminent and faithful Services which the Right-Honourable George Lord Jeffreys of Wem, Lord-Chief-Juſtice of England, had rendred the Crown, aſwel in the Reign of the Late King, as ſince His Majeſty's Acceſſion to the Throne, was pleas'd, on Monday Sept. 28. to commit to him the Cuſtody of the Great-Seal of England, with the Title of Lord Chancellor. And, upon his Advancement, His Majeſty was pleas'd to make Choiſe of Sir Edward Herbert, Chief-Juſtice of Cheſter, to be Lord Chief-Juſtice of the King's-Bench, who was Sworn a Privy-Councellor on Oct. 16. And of Sir Edward Lutwich, one of His Majeſty's Serjeants at Law, to ſucceed him in the Place of Chief-Juſtice of Cheſter. His Majeſty was likewiſe pleas'd to Remove Sir Robert Wright, one of the Barons of the Exchequer, to the Court of King's-Bench, in the Place of Sir Thomas Walcot, deceas'd; And to name Sir Edward Nevill, one of His Majeſty's Serjeants at Law, to be Baron of the Exchequer. And Roger North and Oliver Mountague Eſqrs; both of His Majeſty's Councel at Law, were made, the firſt Attorney, and the other Solicitor-General to the Queen.

Death of the Lord Keeper.

Other Honours and Preferments.

On Oct. 23. His Majeſty was pleas'd to give the White-Staff to to the Earl of Mulgrave, whom His Majeſty had made Lord Chamberlain of his Houſhold, upon the Death of the Earl of Ailesbury, who Died on Tueſday laſt in his Houſe at Ampthill in Bedfordſhire. Two Days before, the Lord-Viſcount Preſton was Sworn of His Majeſty's Privy-Council: And ſome few Days after, the Earl of Plymouth was Sworn, and took his Place at the ſame Honourable Board. About the ſame time, His Majeſty conferr'd the Honour of Knigh-1685. hood upon Paul Rycaut Esq; formerly His Majesty's Consul at Smyrna, and now Chief-Secretary to the Lord-Lieutenant of Ireland.

On Decemb. 4. His Majesty was pleas'd in Council to Declare the Earl of Sunderland (His Principal Secretary of State) to be Lord President of his Council, and his Lordship took his Place at the Board accordingly. About the same time, His Majesty Appointed the Earl of Clarendon to be Lord-Lieutenant of Ireland, who began his Journey toward Chester on Dec. 16. And His Majesty Appointed the Lord-Viscount Tiviot, Colonel Robert Philips, and John Evelyn of Deptford Esq; to execute the Office of Lord Privy-Seal, during the Absence of his Excellency the Earl of Clarendon. On Dec. 20. His Majesty, of his Royal Grace and Favour, was pleas'd to Constitute Theophilus Earl of Huntingdon Lord Chief-Justice and Justice in Eyre of all his Forests, Chases, Parks and Warrens on the South-side of Trent, which Office became Vacant by the Surrendry of the Earl of Chesterfield.

On Febr. 13. the King was pleas'd to Constitute Sir Thomas Jenner (one of His Majesty's Serjeants at Law, and late Recorder of London) one of the Barons of the Exchequer, in the Place of Sir William Gregory: And Sir Henry Bedingfield (His Majesty's Serjeant at Law) one of the Justices of the Common-Pleas, in the Place of Sir Creswel Levinz: And that Eminent Pleader, John Holt of Grays-Inn Esq; (upon whom His Majesty had been pleas'd to conferr the Honour of Knighthood) was made Recorder of London. On Febr. 23. His Majesty Knighted John Bucknall of Oxlie in Hertfordshire Esq; And on Saturday March 20. His Majesty was pleas'd to conferr the same Honour on Major Martin Beckman (His Majesty's Chief-Engineer) in Consideration of his long and good Services. And on the last Day of this Year, March 24th, was Perform'd, at the College of Arms, the Ceremony of the Creation of Sir Thomas St. George Kt. Garter Principal King of Arms, Sir John Dugdale Kt. Norroy King of Arms, Henry Ball Esq; Windsor Herald, and Charles Mawson Gent. Rougecroix Pursivant, after the accustomed manner, pursuant to His Majesty's Warrant to the Earl-Marshal for that Purpose.

State of Religion.

Though it was a great Surprize to the People of England to see the King so suddenly and so openly Declare himself a Roman Catholick, when he had never before publickly Profes's'd that Faith, but had Prosecuted those who had call'd him a Papist, and had obtained exorbitant Fines, for giving him a Name in which he could now Glory: Yet, after all, the King might have enjoy'd his own Religion, if he could have confin'd that Liberty to Himself and his own Court, without obtruding it upon the rest of the Nation. Whether it was his own Zeal, or the Importunity of others, that carry'd him to the Arbitrary Measures of Promoting Popery, is not so easie to Determine; because there seems to be a Complexion of both; a Natural Bigottry in Himself, and a perpetual Solicitation of the Queen and the Jesuits. It is well Attested, That his Royal Brother had often, and particularly a little before his Death, advis'd him, Not to think of Introducing Popery into England, it being a Thing that was both Dangerous and Impracticable. And a very Eminent Politician, Don Pedro Ronquillo the Spanish Ambassador, at his first Audience after the Death of King Charles, is said to have ask'd leave to speak his Thoughts freely to His Majesty, and then made bold to tell him, That he saw several Priests about him, who he knew would Importune him to Alter the Establish'd Religion in England; but he greatly fear'd, That if any such Attempt were made, His Majesty wou'd have reason to Repent it. 'Tis reported, that King James took this Liberty of the Spanish Ambassador very ill, and ask'd him in a Passion, Whether in Spain the Kings did not Advise with their Confessors? Yes, Sir, (reply'd the Ambassador) they do, and that's the reason our Affairs are so badly Managed. Nay, Pope Innocent XI. wrote a Letter to King James, upon his Accession to the Crown, to this effect, That he was highly pleas'd with His Majesty's Zeal for the Catholick Religion, but he was afraid His Majesty might push it too far; and then, instead of contributing to his own Greatness, and to the Advancement of the Catholick Church, he might come to do the greatest Prejudice to the Cause, and Himself, by Attempting that, which His Holiness was well assur'd, by long Experience, could have no Success. These Things, together with the Dangers arising from Monmouth and Argyle, prevail'd a while with King James to Contain his immoderate Zeal for the Romish Religion; and yet there was an early Meaning betray'd of Drawing-in the Church-men to Sacrifice their Dissenting Brethren, and so to Unite and Advance the Strength of Popery. It was under this Management, that on May 27. the Committee for Religion, in the House of Commons, had Drawn up Two Votes: 1. "That it is the "Opinion of the Committee, That this House "will Stand by His Majesty, with their Lives and "Fortunes, according to their bounden Duty "and Allegiance, in Defence of the Reformed "Religion of the Church of England, as it is now "by Law Establish'd. 2. That an Humble Address "be Presented to His Majesty, to Desire him to "Issue forth his Royal Proclamation, to cause the "Penal Laws to be put in Execution against all "Dissenters from the Church of England what-"soever." Had the House fell in with this latter Vote, the King would have preferr'd the Persecution of Dissenters before his following Indulgence of them: But the previous Question being, Whether the Question should be then put, for the House to Agree with the Committee? It was carry'd in the Negative; And the House, with greater Wisdom, Resolved, Nemine Contradicente, "That this House doth Acquiesce and entirely "Rely and rest wholly Satisfy'd on His Majesty's "Gracious Word, and repeated Declaration to "Support and Defend the Religion of the Church "of England, as it is now by Law Establish'd, "which is Dearer to us than our Lives.

1685.

The King Contain'd himself for some time.

Votes of the Commons, for Religion.

Surprize, to see the King a Profes's'd Papist:

More-especially to see him fond of Introducing Popery,

Contrary to the Advice of his best Friends.

The King made another early Attempt in favour of Popery, in the House of Lords, where, within three Days after the King's Speech, a Bill was brought in, For Reversing the Attainder of the Lord Viscount Stafford. The Lords, in a Grand Comittee, made some Alteration in the Title, a considerable Amendment in the Preamble, and a small Amendment in the Enacting Clause, and then the Bill was Ingross'd: And the Reason of the Reversal was in these Words; Whereas it is now manifest, That the said William late Viscount Stafford was Innocent of the Treason laid to his Charge, and the Testimony whereupon he was found Guilty was False; Be it Enacted, &c. It is Remarkable, That before the Question was put, for Ingrossing the Bill, the Earls of Angleſey and Radnor, and some other Lords, desired Leave to enter their Dissents: (1.) "Because the Assertion "in the Bill, of its being now manifest, that the "Lord Viscount Stafford Died Innocent, and that "the Testimony by which he was Convicted was "False, which were the sole Grounds and Reasons "given to Support the Bill, were destituted of all "Proof, Warrant, or Testimony of Witness, or "Matter of Record before them. (2.) That the "Record

1685. " Record of the King's-Bench, read at the Committee, concerning the Conviction, laſt Term, " of one of the Witneſſes for Perjury, in Collateral " Points of the Proof of no affinity to the Lord " Stafford's Tryal, and given ſeveral Years before, " could be no Ground to Invalidate the Teſtimony " upon which the ſaid Viſcount was Convicted; " which could never Legally be by One Witneſs, " and was in Fact by the Judgment of his Peers, " on the Evidence of at leaſt Three. (3.) Becauſe " the ſaid Judgment in the King's-Bench, and the " whole Proceeding, was Unprecedented, Illegal " and Unwarranted, highly Derogatory to the " Honour, Judicature and Authority of this " Court, who have Power to Queſtion and Puniſh " Perjuries of Witneſſes before them, and ought " not to be Impos'd upon by the Judgment of " inferior Courts, or this Attainder of a Peer " Invalidated by Implication: And the Popiſh " Plot, ſo Confirm'd and Puniſhed by his Late " Majeſty and Four Parliaments, after Publick " Solemn Devotion through the whole Kingdom, " by the Authority of the Church and State, to " be Eluded, to the Arraignment and Scandal of " the Government; and only for the Reſtoring " the Family of one Popiſh Lord, and all this " being without any Matter Judicially appearing " before their Lordſhips to introduce the ſame; " and the Records of that Tryal not ſuffer'd to " be Read, for the Information of the Truth, " before the Paſſing of that Bill. (Laſtly,) For " many other weighty Reaſons offer'd and given " by divers Peers, in the two Days Debates of " this Bill both in the Committees and in the " Houſe.

The next Day the Bill was Read the Third time, and Paſs'd; but the fore-mention'd Lords repeated their Proteſtations againſt it, and were Seconded by the Earls of Stamford and Clare, and the Lord Evre, " Becauſe the Preamble of it was " not Amended, and no Defect in Point of Law " alledged as a Reaſon for the Reverſal of the " Attainder." A late Author ſays, That the Court fearing a ſtronger Oppoſition to the Bill in the Lower Houſe, did not think fit it ſhould be ſent thither: But it was certainly Sent down, and and on Friday June 5. was Read a Firſt time, and Ordered a Second Reading; and was accordingly the next Day Read a Second time, and Committed to a Committee of the Whole Houſe, where it dropt, and was heard of no more: To the immortal Honour of the Commons, who, though very forward to Aſſiſt the King in all his Civil Intereſts, yet would by no means Comply with the Two firſt Projects of the Court, which were, the Perſecution of the Diſſenters, and Extinguiſhing the Belief of the Popiſh Plot.

The King begins to favour Popery, with leſs Reſerve.

Before the next Meeting of the Parliament, the King was Elevated with his late Victories, and preſum'd he could now bring the Commons more to his own Will and Pleaſure, and therefore he began to caſt off the Mask, and to Act without Diſguiſe, what, till then, he had in ſome meaſure endeavour'd to Diſſemble: And therefore, in his Speech, he told the Lords and Commons, " That " He would Diſpenſe with the Teſt Act, which was " the greateſt Legal Barrier againſt Popery; That " He would Keep up a Standing Army, to be " Commanded by Popiſh Officers, whom He ex- " preſly recommended, in approving the Loyalty of " their Principles by their Practices.

Courage of the Commons.

But the Commons were ſenſible, that theſe Methods were the Counſels of Popery, and were deſign'd to Weaken, and, by degrees, Alter the Eſtabliſh'd Religion; and therefore the Majority would by no means Comply, and boldly Argued, " That to Employ Officers not taking the Teſt, " was, in effect, a Diſpenſing with All the Laws " at Once; That if thoſe Men were Loyal or " Good, it muſt proceed from their Generoſity, " more than their Principles; That they ought " to remember, It was Treaſon for any Man to " be Reconciled to the Church of Rome; and that " the Pope, by Law, was Declared an Enemy to " this Kingdom, &c. 1685.

Biſhops moſt Obſequious to the King.

The Prelates that were moſt in Favour with the King, becauſe he thought them moſt Obſequious to his Will, were the Biſhops of Durham, Ely, and Rocheſter; and yet hardly one of them would go in to all the following Meaſures of the Court: However, Encourag'd and Diſtinguiſh'd by the Favours of His Majeſty, on Decemb. 29. the Lord Biſhop of Durham was ſworn Dean of His Majeſty's Chapel-Royal, and within few Days after was admitted into the Privy-Council; and at the ſame time, the Lord Biſhop of Rocheſter was ſworn Clerk of the Cloſet to his Majeſty.

Caſe of the Diſſenters.

The Diſſenters thus repreſent their own Caſe; " That the Rigorous Uſage of the Diſſenters in " the foregoing Reign, was owing to Popiſh Coun- " ſels they themſelves never doubted. —— They " little expected better Treatment in this Reign, " when bare-faced Popery lifted up its Head among " us. But (ſay they) Wiſe is that Providence which " Governs the World, which ſerves its own Ends, " even by thoſe very Things whereby poor Mor- " tals are moſt Diſappointed. It is indeed enough " to Amaze any One, to obſerve the Meaſures of " this Reign, with their Conſequences, whereby all " Mankind were Diſappointed. The Church Party " not only expected to have the Diſſenters wholly " under their Feet, but depended ſo much upon " their Merits in their Adherence to the Duke " in his Diſtreſs, and his poſitive Aſſurances, " that they were very ſecure, and thought the " Day their own: But, on a ſudden, found their " All in ſuch Danger, that, without New Methods, " their Religion and Liberty was gone. The Diſ- " ſenters expected not only greater Rigours and " Severities than before; but concluded, they ſhould, " if it were poſſible, be Extirpated: Whenas, to their " Aſtoniſhment, they found themſelves Eas'd of their " foregoing Hardſhips, and Courted and Careſs'd " by Thoſe, who, they knew, would Rejoyce in " in their Ruine, and had left no Method unat- " tempted in order to it. The Papiſts thought, " by Raiſing thoſe who had been ſo long Depreſs'd, " to have inflam'd them with Revenge againſt " their Brethren; to have widen'd the Animoſities " among Proteſtants, that they might All be " thereby rendred the more ſure and ſpeedy Sacrifice " to their Malice and Cruelty: And hereby they " did but drive the Contending Parties the nearer " to each other, and make them at laſt the more " Vigorous in their United Effort, to avert that " Common Ruine which hung over their Heads. " So that all Parties were Surpriz'd, and found " themſelves Miſtaken; but an Infinitely Wiſe " GOD Over-rul'd All for Good.

Some Diſingenuity in the Diſſenters.

There is ſome Diſingenuity in this Way of the Diſſenters repreſenting their own Caſe; for they ought to have acknowledged, that the firſt Deſign of Popery, was, to have ſet the Church upon a vigorous Suppreſſion of all Conventicles, and a fierce Execution of all the Penal Laws. And had the Members of the Church of England in the Houſe of Commons fell in with this Advice of the Court, Confirm'd by a Report from the Committee of Religion, the Diſſenters had not only been grievouſly Oppreſs'd, but intirely Deſtroy'd; when the Rebellion of Monmouth had generally made them more Odious, and the King's Victory had made them more Obnoxious to the Court. And even the Diſſenters, in the ſame Hiſtory, confeſs the Diſpleaſure of the Court againſt them, and a Diſpoſition to Perſecute them, in this Account of the Proceedings againſt their Great Leader, Mr. Baxter, (as follows:)

" In

1685. Proceedings against Mr. Baxter.

" In the Reign of King James II. the ſame " Methods were continued as had been uſed in his " Brother's Time. On Febr. 28. Mr. Baxter was " Committed to the King's-Bench Priſon, by my " Lord Chief-Juſtice Jeffreys's Warrant, for his " Paraphraſe on the New Teſtament, Printed a " little before; which was call'd a Scandalous " and Seditious Book againſt the Government. " On the 6th of May, which was the firſt Day of " the Term, he Appear'd in Weſtminſter-Hall, and " an Information was Order'd to be Drawn up " againſt him. May 14. he Pleaded Not Guilty " to the Information. May 18. he being much " Indispos'd, mov'd, That he might have farther " Time given him for his Tryal; but it was " Deny'd him. He mov'd for it by his Councel: " But Jeffreys cryes out in a Paſſion, I will not " give him a Minute's Time more, to ſave his Life. " We have had (ſays he) to do with other ſort of " Perſons, but now we have a Saint to deal with; " And I know how to deal with Saints aſwel as " *Sinners. Mr. Baxter came firſt into Court, " and with all the Marks of Serenity and Com- " poſure waited for the Coming of the Lord Chief- " Juſtice, who appear'd quickly after with great " Indignation in his Face. He no ſooner ſate " down, than a ſhort Cauſe was Call'd, and Try'd: " After which, the Clerk began to read the Title " of another Cauſe. You Blockhead you, (ſays " Jeffreys) the next Cauſe is between Richard " Baxter and the King. Upon which Mr. Baxter's " Cauſe was Call'd. The Paſſages mention'd " in the Information, were his Paraphraſe on " Matth. v. 19. Mark iii. 6. Mark ix. 39. " Mark xi. 31. Mark xii. 38, 39, 40. Luke x. 2. " John xi. 57. and Acts xv. 2. " My Lord (ſays he) I humbly conceive, the " Biſhops Mr. Baxter ſpeaks of, as your Lordſhip, " if you have read Church-Hiſtory, muſt confeſs, " were the Plagues of the Church of the World.— 1685.

" And when he Concluded, he told the Jury, " That if they in their Conſcience believ'd he " meant the Biſhops and Clergy of the Church " of England, in the Paſſages which the Informa- " tion referr'd to, they muſt find him Guilty; " And he could mean no Men elſe: If not, they " muſt find him Not Guilty. —— When he had " done, ſays Mr. Baxter to him, Do's your Lord- " ſhip think any Jury will pretend to Paſs a " Verdict upon me, upon ſuch a Tryal? —— " I'll Warrant you, Mr. Baxter, (ſays he) Don't " you Trouble your ſelf about That. —— The Jury " immediately laid their Heads together at the " Bar, and found him Guilty.

" He had Subpœna'd ſeveral Clergy-men, who " Appear'd in Court, but were of no Uſe to him, " through the Violence of the Chief-Juſtice.

" The Tryal being over, Sir Henry Aſhhurſt " led Mr. Baxter through the Crowd, (I mention " it to his Honour) and conve'd him away in his " Coach. On June 29. following he had Judgment " given againſt him: He was Fined Five hun- " dred Marks; to lie in Priſon till he Paid it; " and be bound to his Good-Behaviour for Seven " Years.

1686. The King was now deep in the Meaſures of Popery, and Arbitrary Power; but he carry'd them on much faſter in Scotland and Ireland, than he could yet do in England. He had laid a good Foundation in Scotland while he was Commiſſioner there for his Brother, and had ſettled the Miniſtry to his own Mind; and therefore immediately after his Acceſſion to the Throne he Call'd a Parliament at Edinburgh, on Apr. 23. 1685. when the Lord High-Chancellor branded the Preſbyterians with this Character: We have a New Sect among us, ſprung up from the Dunghill, the very Dregs of the People, who Kill by pretended Inſpiration; and inſtead of, The Temple of the Lord, The Temple of the Lord, have nothing in their Mouths but the Word of God; Wreſting that bleſſed Conveyance of his Holy Will to us, to Juſtifie a Practice ſuggeſted to them by him who was a Murderer from the beginning; who having Modell'd themſelves into a Commonwealth, (whoſe Idol is that accurſed Paper the Covenant, and whoſe only Rule is to have none at all) have proceeded to Declare themſelves no longer His Majeſty's Subjects, to forfeit all of us who have the Honour to Serve Him in any Conſiderable Station, and will be ſure, e're long, to do ſo by this Great and Honourable Court. It is now to rid our ſelves of theſe Men, and of all who incline to their Principles, that We are to offer to His Majeſty our Advice, Concurrence, and utmoſt Aſſiſtance. Theſe Monſters being a Publick Reproach upon the Nation, they render us Unquiet and Unſecure at Home: They bring Reproach upon our Religion, and are our great Plague, &c. Under this Fervour, the firſt Act Paſſed was for the Security of the Proteſtant Religion; by which they meant, an Extirpation of the Preſbyterians; Enforcing it by another Act concerning Witneſſes, wherein they Ordain, That ſuch as being Cited to be Witneſſes, in the Caſes of Treaſon, Field or Houſe-Conventicles, or Church Irregularities, do refuſe to Depone, they ſhall be liable to be Puniſh'd, as Guilty of theſe Crimes reſpectively in which they Refuſe to be Witneſſes. And in another Act, containing a Tender of Duty, and Offer of the Exciſe to His Majeſty, They do in the Preamble Declare, " That " they owe all their Bleſſings to the Sacred Race " of their Glorious Kings, and to the Solid, " Abſolute Authority wherewith they were Inveſted " by the firſt and Fundamental Law of their " Monarchy: —— And therefore they again " Declare to the World, That they Abhorr and " Deteſt, not only the Authors and Actors of " all preceding Rebellions againſt the Sovereign, " but alſo all Principles and Poſitions which are " Contrary or Derogatory to the King's Sacred, " Supreme, Sovereign, Abſolute Power and Au- " thority, which None, whether Perſons or Col- " lective Bodies, can participate of any manner " of way, or upon any pretext, but in Dependance " on Him, and by Commiſſion from Him," &c. —— The ſame Parliament Paſs'd Two other Acts; The firſt, " To Forbid the Reſorting to Con- " venticles, and the Preaching in them, under " Pein of Death, and Confiſcation of Goods:" — The other, " Making it High-Treaſon to Give " or Take the National Covenant, as explained " in 1638. or to Write in Defence of it. —— And the more effectually to Introduce a Deſpotick Power, They Paſſed another Act, " To Confirm " and Approve whatever had been done by His " Majeſty's Privy-Council, Juſtice-Court, and " thoſe Commiſſionated by them, in Baniſhing, " Impriſoning or Fining ſuch as Refuſed to Take " and Swear the Oath of Allegiance; and to Aſſert " the Royal Prerogative in the utmoſt Extent of " them.

The King attempts to Repeal the Test and Penal Laws in Scotland.

The King presuming from these Advances, that the Scots would easily Comply with him in all things; it was amongst Them that He first attempted to Repeal the Penal Laws and Test made against Papists: And therefore having Summon'd the Parliament of that Kingdom to Re-assemble on the 29th of Apr. 1686. He wrote a Letter to them, wherein He recommends to their special Care his Innocent Roman Catholick Subjects, who had been always Assistant to the Crown, in the worst of Rebellions and Usurpations, though they lay under Discouragements hardly to be named: These He must heartily recommend to them; to the End, that as they had given good Experience of their True Loyalty, and Peaceable Behaviour, so, by their Assistance, they might have the Protection of his Laws, not suffering them to lie under Obligations which their Religion could not admit of; By doing of which, they would give a Demonstration of the Duty and Affection they had to him, and do Him most acceptable Service. And this Love He expected they would shew to their Brethren, as they saw Him an Indulgent Father to his People.

To Engage the Parliament to Comply with this Desire of the King, the Earl of Murray, who was Appointed Lord High-Commissioner upon this Occasion, made them a Speech, with the finest Words and Promises; "That His Majesty would "Open a free Intercourse of Trade with His King- "dom of England; and had fully Instructed his "Envoy at the Court of France, to recover the "Possession of the several Privileges of the Scots "Merchants Trading with that Kingdom. And "that His Majesty would Redress the Trouble "which the Scotch Merchants met with in the "Matter of the Staple and Trade with the Nether- "lands; and that He would remove the Prejudice "which that Kingdom suffered, by the Importa- "tion of Irish Horses, Cattle and Victuals. And "that the King was willing to Grant them an "Open Mint; the want of which, was a sensible "Prejudice to the Traffick of the Kingdom: And "that He would not at this Time Demand any "more Supplies or Impositions of any kind: And "that He would give his Royal Consent to all such "Laws and Regulations as might secure exact "Payment to the Country from all his Officers "and Soldiers in their Quarters. And, lastly, "That He would Graciously Pass his full and "ample Indemnity, with some few needful and "necessary Exceptions, for all past Crimes and "Misdemeanors whatsoever." —— Concluding thus; —"And now, my Lords and Gentlemen, After "so great and excellent Designs for promoting the "Honour, the Ease and Wealth of this Kingdom; "After his Resolution to Pardon so many Enemies, "and to free so many of the Guilty from further "severe, but Just Prosecutions; His Majesty be- "lieveth that None will wonder, if He Desire, by "the Advice and Consent of His Great Council, to "give Ease and Security to some of his good Subjects "of the Roman Catholick Religion, who have been "in all Times firm to the Monarchy, and ready to "sacrifice their Lives and Fortunes for the Service "and Security of the Crown. So that His Majesty, "who so perfectly understands the Loyal and Dutiful "Temper and Genius of Scotland, rests fully "persuaded of your ready and cheerful Compliance "with his Royal Desire and Inclination, tending so "much to your own Security, and His Satisfaction; "And that you will send me back to my Great "and Royal Master, with the good Tydings of the "Continued and Dutiful Loyalty of this his Ancient "Kingdom: By which you will shew your selves the "best and most affectionate Subjects, to the Best, "the Incomparable, and Most Heroick Prince in the "World.

Ld. Commissioner's Speech.

Assoon as the High-Commissioner had ended this Speech, the Creatures of the Court were for Passing an Act in Favour of the Papists, without looking farther than His Majesty's Desire. But the Wiser part prevailed to have a Committee Appointed to Inspect the Statutes Provided against the Roman Catholicks. After a full Examination of those Laws, the Committee Drew up a Bill, whereby "Papists were to be allow'd the Exercise of their "Religion in Private, without Repealing those "former Acts which made them liable to Penalties "for Publickly Assembling together." The King would have been contented with this Step for the present, hoping to have gain'd more by degrees. But however, this Bill being Presented to the Parliament for their Approbation, they Divided upon it, and many warm Speeches were made against it. The King being inform'd of these Debates, and apprehending the Miscarriage of his Hopes, He dispatcht an Express to the Earl of Murray, with Orders to Dissolve, or at least to Prorogue the Parliament.

1686.

Scots Parliament would not Comply with the King's Desire.

In February following, the King was Resolved to Accomplish, by His Sole Power and Authority, what He could not Effect with a National Consent: And therefore He sent a Letter, Dated Febr. 12. to His Privy-Council of Scotland:

The King resolves to do it by his own Power, in an Arbitrary manner.

WHereas by Our Letter of the 21st of August last past, We were Graciously Pleas'd to Inform you of Our Designs, in order to the Ease of Our Roman Catholick Subjects, (unto which We had your Dutiful Answer in some Days thereafter;) We have now thought fit to Publish these Our Royal Intentions, and to give an additional Ease to those of Tender Consciences: So to convince the World of our Inclinations to Moderation; and to evidence, that those of the Clergy who have been Regular, are Our most particular Care. And though We have given some Ease to those whose Principles We can with any Safety trust; We have at the same time expressed Our highest Indignation against those Enemies of Christianity, as well as Government and Humane So- ciety, the Field-Conventiclers, whom We recommend to you to Root out with all the Severity of our Laws, and with the most vigorous Prosecution of our Forces; it being equally Our and Our Peoples Concern to be rid of them, &c.

With this Letter, there was sent a Proclamation for Liberty of Conscience, and Suspension of the Laws against Papists, of the same Date, running thus: —— "We have thought fit to Grant, and by "Our Sovereign Authority, Prerogative Royal, "and Absolute Power, which All Our Subjects are "to Observe, without Reserve, Do hereby Give "and Grant Our Royal Toleration to the several "Professors of the Christian Religion after-named, "with and under the several Conditions, Re- "strictions and Limitations after-mention'd. In "the first place, We Allow and Tolerate the "Moderate Presbyterians to Meet in their Private "Houses, and there to Hear all such Ministers "as either have or are willing to accept of Our "Indulgence allanerly, and None other. —— "It is Our Royal Will and Pleasure, That Field- "Conventicles, and such as Preach or Exercise at "them, or shall any-wise Assist or Connive at "them, shall be Prosecuted according to the "utmost Severity of our Laws. —— In like "manner, We do hereby Tolerate Quakers to "Meet and Exercise in their Form, in any Place "or Places appointed for their Worship. —— "And considering the Severe and Cruel Laws "made against Roman Catholicks (therein call'd "Papists) in the Minority of Our Royal Grand- "Father (of glorious Memory,) without his Con- "sent, and contrary to the Duty of good Subjects, "by his Regents and other Enemies to their "Lawful Sovereign Our Royal Great-Grand-Mo- "ther Queen Mary (of blessed and pious Memory,) 1686. " wherein, under pretence of Religion, they cloath'd " the worſt of Treaſons, Factions and Uſurpa- " tions; and made theſe Laws, not as againſt the " Enemies of God, but their Own: Which Laws " have been ſtill Continued of courſe, without deſign " of Executing them, or any of them, ad Terrorem, " only on Suppoſition, That the Papiſts, relying " on an External Power, were incapable of Duty " and true Allegiance to their Natural Sovereigns, " and Rightful Monarchs: — We, of Our certain " Knowledge, and long Experience, knowing, That " the Catholicks, as it is their Principles to be " good Chriſtians, ſo it is to be Dutiful Subjects; " and that they had likewiſe, on all Occaſions, " ſhewn themſelves good and faithful Subjects to " Us and Our Royal Predeceſſors, by hazarding, " and many of them actually loſing their Lives " and Fortunes in their Defence, (though of ano- " ther Religion) and the Maintenance of their " Authority, againſt the Violences and Treaſons " of the moſt violent Abettors of thoſe Laws; " Do therefore, with Advice and Conſent of " Our Privy-Council, by Our Sovereign Autho- " rity, Prerogative Royal, and Abſolute Power " aforeſaid, Suſpend, Stop and Diſable all Laws " or Acts of Parliament, Cuſtoms or Conſtitu- " tions, Made or Executed againſt any of Our " Roman Catholick Subjects in any Time paſt, to " all Intents and Purpoſes making void all Prohi- " bitions therein mention'd, Pains or Penalties " therein Ordained to be Inflicted: So that they " ſhall in all things be as Free in all Reſpects, as " any of Our Proteſtant Subjects whatſoever, not " only to Exerciſe their Religion, but to Enjoy all " Offices, Benefices and others which We ſhall " think fit to beſtow upon them in all Time " coming, &c.

"wherein,

Moſt Perſons who ſaw this Proclamation, could not but Obſerve, that this Toleration of Proteſtant Diſſenters was purely for the ſake of the Popiſh Recuſants; and that the Moderate Presbyterians had not ſo great a Liberty allow'd them as the Quakers had; becauſe this laſt Sect bore a nearer affinity to the Papiſts, and were found to be more diſpos'd to the Will of a Popiſh Prince: And laſtly, that the much greater Indulgence granted to the Roman Catholicks, was not only in Tenderneſs to them, but with the higheſt Commendation of them; and the wholſom Laws made againſt them, not only Suſpended, but Cenſur'd and Arraign'd, as Barbarous and Cruel. And yet the Lords of the Council in Scotland were inclin'd to Anſwer, " That His Majeſty's Commands were " exactly Obey'd; and His Royal Proclamation " Printed and Publiſh'd, by which His Majeſty " had given a further Evidence of his Favour and " Goodneſs to all his Subjects. —— Concluding thus — We are very willing that Your Majeſty's Subjects who are Peaceable and Loyal, may be at Eaſe and Security, notwithſtanding of their Profeſſion and Private Worſhip; And do conceive, That ſuch of them as are or ſhall be Employ'd by Your Majeſty in Offices of Truſt, Civil or Military, are ſufficiently Secured by Your Majeſty's Authority and Commiſſion for their Exerciſing the ſame. We return Your Majeſty our moſt humble Thanks, for giving Us Your Royal Word, for Maintaining the Church and our Religion as it is now Eſtabliſhed by Law; and reſt Satisfy'd, believing Your Majeſty's Promiſe to be the beſt and greateſt Security we can have.

The King is more-eſpecially Intent in Promoting Popery in Ireland.

But it was principally in Ireland, where the King's Deſigns of Eſtabliſhing Popery and Arbitrary Power appeared without Diſguiſe, from the very beginning of his Reign. The Duke of Ormond was Lord-Lieutenant of that Kingdom, a Perſon of unſhaken Honour, and true Zeal for the Proteſtant Religion, and the Engliſh Intereſt; and therefore he was thought unfit to ſerve the preſent Government: So, about the End of March 1685. he 1686. received an Order from the Court, to Deliver the Sword of State to the Lord Primate of Ireland and to the Earl of Granard, Appointed by the King to be Lords-Juſtices. But before his Departure, the Duke labour'd with a generous Diligence to ſettle Things on ſuch a Foundation, as that it might not be eaſie for the Papiſts to make a preſent Change, without a manifeſt Violation of the Laws and Conſtitutions of the Kingdom. There is a remarkable Paſſage that ſhews the Great Spirit of that Excellent Patriot; He Appointed a Dinner at the New Hoſpital (a ſtately Fabrick by him erected near Dublin for Poor Soldiers) and Invited the Officers of the Army then in and about that City: After Dinner, he took a large Glaſs in his Hand, bid them fill it to the Brim with Wine, then ſtood up and call'd thus to the Company; Look here, Gentlemen; They ſay at Court, I am become an Old Doating Fool: You ſee my Hand does not ſhake; nor does my Heart fail; Nor do I doubt that I ſhall make ſome of my Enemies ſee their Miſtake: — And ſo Drank the King's Health.

The Duke, at his Arrival at the Engliſh Court, found himſelf in Diſpleaſure with the King; and had ſuch diſmal Apprehenſions of the Poſture of Affairs in Ireland, that it is thought to have broke his Heart, for he Died ſoon after, of a great Age indeed; and yet, till this very Turn, he had enjoy'd ſuch Health of Body, and Cheerfulneſs of Mind, that in the Courſe of Nature he might have Liv'd much longer. Death of the Duke of Ormond.

Before His Grace left the Government, an Order came, for Regulating the Council; which he left for the Juſtices to do: So, upon his Departure the Privy-Council was immediately Diſſolved, and moſt of the Engliſh that were Active in the Proteſtant Cauſe were Turn'd out; and though no Papiſts were immediately Put in, yet it was not long before they made up the Major-part; and thoſe few Proteſtants that were left, ſeldom appear'd at the Board, as being unable to bear up againſt the ſtrongeſt Side.

The Iriſh began now to appear in a National Body againſt the Engliſh, and daily charg'd them with Evil Deſigns againſt the King and Government. They were Countenanc'd by the Privy-Council, who preſt the Lords-Juſtices for Orders to Impower Iriſh Papiſts, and other Creatures of theirs, to Commit, without Bail, any Perſon Accuſed. Theſe Proceedings made the Lords-Juſtices ſoon weary of their Government, and the Lord Granard wrote to England to be Diſmiſt: But the Papiſts repreſented him as a Man fit to be kept in His Majeſty's Intereſt, being very prevalent in the North, among the Scots Presbyterians, of which Perſuaſion his Lady was. So that King James wrote him a Letter with his own Hand, giving him Aſſurance, That Nothing ſhould be acted Prejudicial to the Proteſtant Intereſt, for which his Lordſhip was at that time reputed to be very Zealous.

Monmouth's Rebellion gave a plauſible Opportunity to the Iriſh, more than ever, to contrive Plots, and to faſten them upon the Proteſtants; and to make the King ſo Jealous of the Proteſtant Intereſt in that Kingdom, that He reſolv'd now to keep a Standing Army of Iriſh Papiſts. This could not be well done, without Calling in all the Arms from the Hands of Proteſtants. To Carry on this Deſign, the King and Council wrote over to the Lords-Juſtices, That there was Reaſon to believe, that the Rebellion of Monmouth had been of that ſpreading Contagion, as to Infect many, and Delude more: It was not therefore ſafe for the Kingdom, to have the Arms of the Militia diſpers'd abroad; but they would be in a greater Readineſs, for the Uſe of the Militia, and the Defence of the Country, to have them depoſited in the ſeveral Stores of each County. Letter to the Lords-Juſtices.

1686. Upon these Instructions, a Proclamation was Issued out; and the Lord-Primate prevailing with the City of Dublin to bring in their Arms, that Precedent was soon follow'd by all the Country. The Protestants being thus Disarm'd, the next Design was to New-model the Army, which at that time consisted of about 7000 Men, all Protestants, Zealous and Faithful in the King's Service.

Rise of Colonel Talbot.

For this Purpose, they made Use of Colonel Richard Talbot, a Man of all others most Odious to the English Protestants, and one who had been named by Oates, in his Narrative some Years before, as design'd for this ill Service: So that many before who believed little of the Popish Plot, did now give the greater Credit to it, and said, That if Oates was an ill Evidence, he was certainly a good Prophet.— Talbot began with great Insolence to pursue a Method, which was said to have been design'd immediately before the Death of King Charles II. which was to Displace all Officers that had been in the Parliament or Oliver's Army, and the very Sons of all such. This the Duke of Ormond had Directions to Proceed in; but he made no progress in it, under pretence of gaining Time to find them out, but in reality, because he foresaw it was to make room for the Papists. Talbot having Cashier'd a great part of the Officers, came over into England, and brought with him one Neagle a Cunning Irish Lawyer, and Inveterate Papist, who was constantly with Father Petre, and the rest of the High Cabal. The Queen was altogether for their furious Counsels, but the King was not so violently inclin'd, being every Day advis'd by all his Popish Peers, not to proceed too fast in the Revolution of Ireland, lest thereby he should ruine the general Interest of the Catholicks. However, Talbot was made Earl of Tyrconnel, with a Design of his immediate Return to Ireland in Quality of Lord-Lieutenant: To which Office he had been recommended by Bishop Tyrrill, though with some Reserve, as being a Person confest to be Odious to the English, and therefore not proper to be brought upon the Stage till Matters were come to a greater Maturity. The Lord Bellasis was proposed; but he was Infirm, and excus'd himself from what he thought would be a Hard Work. At last, in Decemb. 1685. it was Resolved, That Tyrconnel should return Lieutenant-General of the Army, and the Earl of Clarendon Lord-Lieutenant of that Kingdom.

Talbot is made Ld. Tyrconnel.

Earl of Clarendon Ld. Lieutenant of Ireland.

Tyrconnel executed his Commission with great Fury, not only Displacing more Officers of the Army, but also Turning out the Private Soldiers. His Will was his Law, and that purely Martial: He brought over Blank Commissions, Sign'd by the King, for any Names that he pleas'd to insert; he did this in an Insulting Barbarous manner, turning off some Soldiers stript of their very Shirts, seizing the Horses of some Officers and Troopers, and giving them Notes and Bills for not above Half their Pay, and commonly loading them with hard Words, and vile Reproaches. The most Noted Officers that were turn'd out, were the Lord Shannon, Capt. Robert Fitz-Gerald, Capt. Richard Coot, and Sir George St. George, &c. In whose Places were put one Kernay that would have Murder'd King Charles II. Anderson an obscure Fellow, Sheldon a virulent Bigot, Graham, and others of the same Stamp. In short, Two or Three hundred English Gentlemen, who had laid-out their Fortunes in purchasing their Military Posts, were now Arbitrarily Disbanded, and Five or Six thousand Private Soldiers sent on Begging.

Tyrconnel in a manner Superior to him.

His Arbitrary and Cruel Proceedings.

The Protestants are encourag'd by the Ld. Lieutenant.

However, these Discouragements of the English were in some measure alleviated by the Integrity of the Lord-Lieutenant, who was very faithful to the Protestants, and endeavour'd to revive their Spirits, by telling them of the great Assurances the King had given him of Protecting their Religion. But indeed, that Noble Earl soon found himself not half a Governor, for Tyrconnel assum'd more than a Share in the Administration of all Affairs. This Passage is remarkable: Upon a Sunday Morning, His Lordship going to Church, perceiv'd an Irish Officer he never saw before Commanding his Guard of Battle-Axes, which very much surpriz'd him; whereupon he made a stop, demanding who he was, and who put him there?— The Irish-man, as much frighted as the Lord-Lieutenant was disturb'd, in broken Expressions told His Excellency, He was a Captain put in by the Lord Tyrconnel.— His Excellency demanding of him, When? — He reply'd, That Morning.— His Excellency bid 'em Call the former Captain, and Dismiss this of Tyrconnel's. The next Day the Lord-Lieutenant question'd Tyrconnel for this Action: — Who reply'd, He did nothing but by the King's Orders. — To which the Earl of Clarendon return'd, That whilst His Majesty Intrusted him with the Government, he would not be Dispos'd by his Lieutenant-General. —— Complaints on both Sides were made to the King, and the mutual Discontents grew every day greater; the Lord-Lieutenant thinking himself Supreme, and the Lieutenant-General daring to be Superior, who therefore went over into England, and Consulted with his Party how to obtain the sole Government of Ireland. The Queen, Father Petre, and the Earl of S——d very much Importun'd the King in his Favour; but the Popish Lords were still against it, and thought his Furiousness would ruine all, and yet they were extremely desirous to have Ireland in the Absolute Power of the Papists: For when some of the most Considerable of them, upon an apprehension of bringing a Storm upon themselves in England, were for Addressing the King to have liberty to Sell their Estates, and that His Majesty would Intercede with the King of France to Provide for them in his Dominions; — The King took Occasion to tell them, That before their Desires came to Him, He had often thought of them, and had provided a sure Sanctuary and Retreat for them in Ireland, if all those Endeavours should be blasted in England, which He had made for their Security, and of the Success whereof He had not yet reason to despair.

1686. Oppress'd by Tyrconnel.

Designs of Removing the Earl of Clarendon.

The Earl of Rochester having been by Accident inform'd of what was then in Agitation, he immediately acquainted the King with it; who absolutely deny'd that there was any Intention of Removing his Brother from the Government of Ireland; but, on the contrary, assur'd him, He was very well satisfy'd with his Conduct there. Within some few Days, the Lord-Treasurer receiv'd from his Brother the Lord-Lieutenant of Ireland the same Intimations about his Removal. Upon which he again apply'd to His Majesty; who as positively deny'd the whole Matter as He had done before; and to remove the Jealousies of the Lord-Lieutenant, wrote a Letter to him, as was said, with his own Hand, assuring him, He had yet no Thoughts, and He believ'd never should have, whilst both of them liv'd, to Call him away from the Government of Ireland. However, about Christmas, it was by the King in Council Resolved, That the Earl of Tyrconnel should be made Lord-Lieutenant of Ireland: And it was said, that the Lord-President Carry'd it for him, against a great Opposition of the Board.

Resolved to make Tyrconnel Lieutenant.

A great Damp to the Protestants.

The Confirmation of this dismal News, struck the Protestants in Ireland with great Damp and Terror: Many of them that had Patentee-Employments, obtain'd License, under the Broad-Seal, to Come away; and many of the Merchants Call'd in their Effects and left the Kingdom. His Excellency the Earl of Clarendon did all he could to assist the poor Protestants, in covering them from the impending Storm; and it was interpreted 1686. interpreted by many as a ſignal Act of Providence, that after Tyrconnel was come to Holyhead, he was there detain'd full Sixteen Days, by contrary Winds. But he at laſt arriv'd at Dublin on Febr. 6. And though his Appearance was with a ſad Conſternation to the Proteſtants, yet Care was taken to Publiſh, by Authority, That there never was ſeen ſo great a Concourſe of People at any Chief-Governor's Landing, as at his; expreſſing their general Satisfaction by loud Acclamations as he paſs'd through the Streets, by Ringing of Bells, and by Bonfires at Night throughout the City, together with all other Publick Demonſtrations of Joy.

Earl of Clarendon Delivers up the Government of Ireland.

On Febr. 12. the Earl of Clarendon cauſed the Privy-Council to Meet at the Palace of the Lord Archbiſhop of Dublin, and did there Deliver up the Sword of State to the Earl of Tyrconnel, with a memorable Speech wherein he told him, "That the Miſunderſtandings and Feuds of that "Kingdom were Things much to be Lamented, "and he could wiſh the Occaſion of them were "remov'd, which was this; viz. That the Engliſh "of that Kingdom had been repreſented as a "Company of Diſaffected and Fanatical People.— "That this was a hard Charge, if it were true: "But from what he had learn'd, both by his own "Obſervation, and the Information of others, he "believ'd them to be as Loyal Subjects, and "generally as true Sons of the Church of England, "as any it has. That it is a Church that can "make it Her Brags, That in all the Conſpiracies, "Plots and Rebellions that ever have been againſt "the King, not one Orthodox Member of Her "Communion has been any way in 'em: That "he profeſs'd himſelf to be of that Church, "and counted it his greateſt Happineſs that "he was ſo. That as for the Proteſtants of "that Kingdom in particular, he could ſay in "their favour, That when the Reſtoration of "the King was oppos'd in England, they were "the Men that us'd their indefatigable Induſtry "to effect it. That he deſign'd to tell this to "the King; and hop'd, by his Lordſhip's Pru-"dence, theſe Calumnies and Aſperſions that had "lain upon them, would be removed; and that "as they and the Roman Catholicks were the Sub-"jects of One Prince, ſo they would Unanimouſly "Agree, in their Love of one another, and in "Promoting his Honour and Happineſs. He "clos'd his Speech, with telling him, That as he "Received the Sword in Peace, ſo he Deliver'd it up "in Peace. ——

Tyrconnel's Anſwer was to this effect: "That "it was the King's Deſign, and conſequently his "Command to him, to Govern that Kingdom "according to the Laws of it, without any Par-"tiality; and therefore he Declar'd, That all Men "ſhould enjoy the Exerciſe of their Religion and "Properties, according to Law. That he knew "there were great Fears in the Kingdom; ſome "Removing their Goods, others Calling in their "Money: What the Reaſon of it was, he could "not imagine; but for his own part, he would not "have any Diſtruſt the King's Protection. That "the Lord Clarendon had hinted, That he would "have no Diſtinction of Names, or any thing elſe "that might breed Jealouſies among the People.— "Which he would make it his whole Buſineſs to pre-"vent; for this was the Command of the King, who "was both the Greateſt and Juſteſt Prince that "Rul'd theſe Kingdoms, &c. —— And further, to Suppreſs, if poſſible, the general Diſcontent of the Engliſh Proteſtants, the New Lord-Deputy Publiſh'd a Proclamation, on Febr. 21.

Tyrconnel Publiſhes a Proclamation.

"WHereas We are Inform'd, That ſeveral Diſaffected Perſons within this His Ma-"jeſty's Kingdom, have been of late very Indu-"ſtrious, by Falſe Reports and Malicious Inſinua-"tions, to ſuggeſt to many of His Majeſty's 1686. "Loyal Subjects, as if We His Majeſty's Chief-"Governor intended to Govern, under His Ma-"jeſty, here, otherwiſe than by the known Laws "of this Land of Ireland; and as if ſome of His "Majeſty's Loyal Subjects ſhould ſtand in hazard "of being Diſturb'd and Diſquieted in their Juſt "Liberties, Properties, and other Rights due to "them by Law: Which Calumnies have been "heightn'd and encourag'd by ſome few Fiery "Spirits in the Pulpits, by taking upon them to "Treat of Matters that do not lie within their "Province, &c. We therefore Publiſh and De-"clare, That We will, by the Grace of God, "apply all Our Care and Induſtry to yield and "exact a perfect Obedience to His Majeſty's Com-"mands; and to take diligent Care, that all "His Majeſty's Subjects within this Kingdom, "of what Perſuaſion in Religion ſoever they be, "ſhall be Protected in their Juſt Rights and "Properties due to them by Law, and in the "free Exerciſe of their Religion; Provided they "Perſevere in their Duty and Allegiance to His "Majeſty, without giving any Occaſion of Di-"ſturbance to the Peace of the Kingdom, &c. —— But as this fair Pretenſion of Tyrconnel was not at all believ'd, ſo it was immediately confuted by his own Practice.

Attempts of Arbitrary Power and Popery in England.

While Things were thus prepar'd and diſpos'd in Scotland and Ireland, the like Meaſures were concerted for Reducing England to an Arbitrary Government. The King was reſolv'd to have no Other Sitting Parliament, till He could form This or a New one to His Own Mind and Pleaſure: And therefore, as on Nov. 20. the Parliament, under the King's Diſpleaſure, had been Prorogued to Febr. 10. following; ſo it was on that Day, by Commiſſion, farther Prorogued to the 10th Day of May 1686. and even then again Prorogued to the 22d of Nov. next; and from that time farther Prorogued to Febr. 15. and then Prorogued till the 28th of Apr. 1687. In the mean time, the King reſolv'd to have Weſtminſter-Hall intirely at his own Command, and fill'd only with thoſe Judges who ſhould aſſert his Diſpenſing Power, i.e. ſhould execute or break the Laws, when and how His Majeſty pleas'd. To this End, His Majeſty Cloſeted the Old Judges; and before He would make any New ones, He entred into a profeſs'd Bargain with them, That they ſhould Maintain His Prerogative of Diſpenſing with the Penal Laws and Teſt. The firſt Man the King attempted to perſuade, was Sir Thomas Jones, Lord Chief-Juſtice of the Common-Pleas, who ſhew'd a great Averſeneſs, and at laſt told the King plainly, He could not do it. — The King anſwer'd, He would have Twelve Judges of his own Opinion. — To which Sir Thomas reply'd, That poſſibly He might find Twelve Judges of his Opinion, but He would ſcarce find Twelve Lawyers to be ſo. —— Upon this Reluctancy of the Judges, on Apr. 21. Sir Thomas Jones Lord Chief-Juſtice of the Comon-Pleas, William Mountague Eſq; Lord Chief-Baron of the Exchequer, Sir Job Charlton One of the Juſtices of the Common-Pleas, and Sir Edward Nevill One of the Barons of the Exchequer, had all their Quietus: And in their Places, Sir Henry Bedingfield (One of Juſtices of the Common-Pleas) was ſworn Lord Chief-Juſtice of the ſame Court, Sir Edward Atkyns (One of the Barons of the Exchequer) was ſworn Lord Chief-Baron, Sir Edward Lutwich (Chief-Juſtice of Cheſter) was ſworn One of the Juſtices of the Common-Pleas, and Richard Heath Eſq; (Serjeant at Law) was made One of the Barons of the Exchequer. Yet, upon the Humble Petition of Sir Job Charlton, ſo Diſplac'd, His Majeſty was pleas'd to conſtitute him Chief-Juſtice of Cheſter.

The Old Judges are Cloſeted.

The Beſt of them Turn'd out.

1686. Call of New Serjeants.

Two Days after, there was a Call of Serjeants at Law: Sir John Holt Recorder of London, Sir Ambroſe Philips, Chriſtopher Milton Eſq; John Powell Eſq; John Tate Eſq; William Rawlinſon, Eſq; William Killingworth Eſq; Hugh Hodges Eſq; Thomas Geers Eſq; and George Hutchins Eſq; who gave Rings with this Motto, Deus, Rex, Lex: And to give the Reputation of Law to the Court, Sir John Holt and Sir Ambroſe Philips were made the King's Serjeants. But within few Days, Chriſtopher Milton, a profeſs'd Papiſt, was Knighted, and made One of the Barons of the Exchequer; Sir John Powell One of the Juſtices of the Common-Pleas, and Sir Thomas Powys Solicitor-General, in the Place of Heneage Finch Eſq; On Octob. 22. His Majeſty was pleas'd to conferr the Honour of of Knighthood upon another Popiſh Lawyer, Richard Allibone of Grays-Inn Eſq; and to make him One of his Councel at Law, and ſoon after a Judge.

The Privy-Council New-model'd.

His Majeſty was pleas'd to Model the Privy-Council, in much the ſame manner as he had the Benches in Weſtminſter-Hall: For at Hampton-Court, on July 17. the Earl of Powys, the Lord Arundel of Wardour, the Lord Bellaſis, and the Lord Dover, all known and zealous Papiſts, were ſworn of His Majeſty's Moſt Honourable Privy-Council, and accordingly took their Places at the Board; and on Octob. 8. the New Earl of Tyrconnel was admitted to the ſame Honour.

Though the King, for Popularity and Protection of the Papiſts, had reſolv'd upon Indulgence to the Diſſenters, and intended to make all Parties quiet, that the Popiſh Party might more eaſily prevail; yet ſome Severities were exercis'd, to create a continual Fear, of not Offending the Government. On May 14. Miles Prance was brought to the King's-Bench, upon an Information Exhibited againſt him, for Wilful and Malicious Perjury, in the Evidence he gave at the Tryals of Green, Berry and Hill, relating to the Murther of Sir Edmund-Bury Godfrey. He was perſuaded to Plead Guilty: And being brought again to the King's-Bench on June 15. he was prevail'd on to declare his hearty Sorrow and Repentance for his heinous Offence, and then receiv'd this Judgment; "That he Pay a Fine of an Hundred Pounds; "That he be brought on Monday next to all the "Courts of Weſtminſter with a Paper on his Head "declaring his Offence; And that he ſtand the "ſame Day in the Pillory before Weſtminſter-Hall-"Gate, and on Wedneſday following at the Royal-"Exchange, and on Monday following at Charing-"Croſs; And that he be Whipt from Newgate to "Tyburn; And Committed in Execution until he "had Paid the Fine.

Severities on ſome Witneſſes of the Popiſh Plot.

Mr. Edward Whitaker had been Convicted in Eaſter-Term, 1682. for Juſtifying the Rebellion of Forty One, and the Murther of King Charles I. and flying for the ſame, had Abſconded ever ſince. Mr. Attorney-General, in Michaelmas-Term, moved for Judgment againſt him; and the Court Adjudged him, "To Pay a Fine of a Thouſand "Marks, aud remain in Priſon (when Taken) till "the ſame be Paid.

Soon after, Mr. Attorney-General moved the Court of King's-Bench for Judgment againſt George Speake Eſq; Convicted for a Riot, and for Reſcuing John Trenchard Eſq; from His Majeſty's Meſſengers, who had a Warrant to Apprehend him for High-Treaſon. And the Court Adjudged him, "To Pay "a Fine of Two thouſand Marks.

But it ſeems, the Man who moſt Provok'd the Government, was Mr. Samuel Johnſon, a Miniſter of the Church of England, who had been Author of a very Rational Treatiſe againſt Paſſive Obedience, under the Title of [Julian the Apoſtate.] He had now the Courage to write An Addreſs to the Engliſh Proteſtants in King James's Army, (as follows:)

GENTLEMEN;

1686. Mr. Samuel Johnſon's Addreſs to the Engliſh Soldiers.

NEXT to the Duty we owe to GOD, which ought to be the principal Care of Men of your Profeſſion, who carry your Lives in your Hands, and often look Death in the Face, in the Service of your Native Country, wherein you drew your firſt Breaths, and breathe a free Engliſh Air: Now I deſire you to Conſider, how you will Comply with theſe two Main Points, by engaging in the Preſent Service. Is it, in the Name of GOD, for His Service, that you have join'd your ſelves with Papiſts? Who indeed muſt Fight for the Maſs-Book, but will Burn the Bible; and who ſeek to Extirpate the Proteſtant Religion with Your Swords, becauſe they cannot do it with their own. And will you be Aiding and Aſſiſting to Set up Maſs-Houſes, to Erect that Kingdom of Darkneſs and Deſolation amongſt us, and to train up all our Children in Popery! How can you do theſe Things, and call your ſelves Proteſtants!

What Service can you do your Country, by being under the Command of French and Iriſh Papiſts, and by bringing the Nation under a Foreign Yoke? Will you help them to make forcible Entry into the Houſes of your Country-men, under the Name of Quartering; contrary to Magna Charta, and Petition of Right? Will you be Aiding and Aſſiſting to all the Murther and Outrages which they ſhall commit by their Void Commiſſions, which were declared Illegal, and ſufficiently Blaſted by Both Houſes of Parliament, if there had been any need of it? For it was very well known before, that a Papiſt cannot have a Commiſſion, but by Law is utterly Diſabled and Diſarm'd. Will you exchange your Birthright of Engliſh Laws and Liberties, for Martial and Club-Law; and help to Deſtroy all Others, only at laſt to be Eaten up your Selves? If I know you well, As you are Engliſh-men, you Hate and Scorn theſe things. Therefore be not unequally Yok'd with Idolatrous and Bloody Papiſts: Be Valiant for the Truth, and ſhew your ſelves Men.

The ſame Conſiderations are humbly Offer'd to all Engliſh Sea-men, who have been the Bulwark of this Nation, againſt Popery and Slavery, ever ſince 1588.

Upon this, in Trinity-Term, an Information of High-Miſdemeanor was brought againſt him in the King's-Bench, for Writing and Publiſhing Two moſt Scandalous and Seditious Libels, to Stir up His Majeſty's Subjects to Rebellion. Of which he was Convicted: And in the next Term the Court Awarded this Judgment againſt him, "That he "ſtand in the Pillory on Monday next at Weſt-"minſter, on Wedneſday following at Charing-Croſs, "and the Monday after at the Royal-Exchange; "That he Pay a Fine of Five hundred Marks; "And that he be Whipt from Newgate to Tyburn. Before his Suffering, for a pretence of Reſpect to the Gown, he was to be Degraded; and accordingly, on Nov. 20. he was brought before the Lords the Biſhops of Durham, Rocheſter and Peterborough, Commiſſioners appointed by His Majeſty to Exerciſe all manner of Eccleſiaſtical Juriſdiction within the Dioceſe of London, during the Suſpenſion of the Lord Biſhop of London, who were Met, with ſeveral of the City Divines, in the Chapter-Houſe of St. Paul's; where the ſaid Mr. Johnſon is ſaid, According to the Eccleſiaſtical Laws, in a Full Court, to have receiv'd Sentence of Degradation, and to have been Degraded and Diveſted accordingly; and Deliver'd over, as a meer Lay-Perſon, into the Hands of the Secular Officer, to Undergo the Puniſhments Adjudged to him.

Severe Sentence on Mr. Samuel Johnſon.

The King did not only Cloſet his Judges and Officers, upon the Queſtion of the Penal Laws and Teſt, but he ſolicited his Prime-Miniſters to be reconcil'd 1686. reconcil'd to the Church of Rome. His Majeſty firſt undertook to manage the Earl of Sun——d, who is ſaid to have been very Obſequious to the King's Deſire, and to have bowed low at the Popiſh Altar, though he did not care to be formally reconciled (as the Term was) to the Church of Rome. What the Tenor of that Diſcourſe was which the King had with him, was never known; but however, Father Petre is ſaid to have extremely manifeſted the Earl's Obedience, at a Meeting with the Jeſuits; adding, That it was neceſſary for him as yet to appear a Proteſtant, for weighty Reaſons of State.

The King endeavours to reconcile his Prime-Miniſters to his own Religion.

The King's next Solicitation was to the Earl of Rocheſter, for whom the King had a particular Affection and Eſteem, not only as his Brother-in-Law, but as his Faithful Servant, on whom He had therefore beſtow'd the Place of Lord High-Treaſurer of England, upon his firſt Advancement to the Throne: Yet it ſeems, nothing could maintain the Earl in this Poſt, without changing his Religion, and embracing the King's, which, by this time, was become almoſt the only Means of gaining or keeping Preferment. His Lordſhip being preſt and fatigu'd by the King's Intreaties, told His Majeſty, "That to let Him ſee it was "not through any Prejudice of Education, or "Obſtinacy, that he perſevered in his Religion, "he would freely conſent to hear ſome Proteſtant "Divines Diſpute with ſome Popiſh Prieſts, and "promis'd to Side with the Conquerors." Thereupon the King appointed a Conference to be held at Whitehall, at which His Majeſty and ſeveral Perſons of Honour were preſent with the Earl of Rocheſter. The Proteſtant Champions were, Dr. Simon Patrick (now Lord Biſhop of Ely;) and Dr. William Jane, Profeſſor of Divinity in Oxford. Thoſe on the Popiſh Side, were one Gifford, a Doctor of the Sorbonne; and Mr. Tilden, who having turn'd Roman Catholick at Lisbon, went under the Name of Dr. Godden: And the Subject of their Diſpute was, The Rule of Faith, and, The Proper Judge in Controverſies. This Conference was very long; and at laſt the Romiſh Doctors were preſt with ſo much Strength of Reaſon and Authority againſt them, that they were really put to Silence. Whereupon the Earl of Rocheſter openly declared, "That the Victory "the Proteſtant Divines had gain'd, made no Alteration in his Mind, being before-hand convinc'd of "the Truth of his Religion, and firmly reſolv'd "never to forſake it. —— His Majeſty going off abruptly, was heard to ſay, He never ſaw a Bad Cauſe ſo Well, nor a Good One ſo Ill Maintain'd.— And the Jeſuits were ſo Exaſperated againſt the Lord Treaſurer for refuſing to be a Convert, that one of them ſaid, That Lord muſt be Anathematiz'd; And that the King could never Proſper while ſuch a Heretick was near him.—— Within few Days after, the King ſent to the Earl for his Commiſſion of High-Treaſurer; which he preſently reſign'd: And in the Beginning of January, His Majeſty was pleas'd to Conſtitute John Lord Bellaſis, Sidney Lord Godolphin, Henry Lord Dover, Sir John Ernle (Chancellor of the Exchequer,) and Sir Stephen Fox, Commiſſioners for Executing the Office of Lord High-Treaſurer of England. But to alleviate the Loſs of the Treaſury, His Majeſty aſſign'd to the Earl of Rocheſter an Annuity of Five thouſand Pounds per Ann. upon the Poſt-Office. Which ſo Engag'd his Lordſhip, that he afterwards went over to Holland to take Care of the King's Intereſt there, and to do him the beſt Service he could. There was leſs Care taken of his Elder Brother the Earl of Clarendon, who not only loſt his Government in Ireland, but his Privy-Seal in England; for on March 11. (at the End of this Year) His Majeſty was pleas'd to Conſtitute Henry Lord Arundel of Wardour Keeper of the Privy-Seal, and he was that Day Sworn in Council.

A Conference, for Satisfying the Earl of Rocheſter.

His Lordſhip's Declaration for the Proteſtant Religion:

And ſo Turn'd out of the Treaſury.

New Commiſſioners Appointed.

Lord Clarendon loſes the Privy-Seal.

1686.

As to other Honours and Preferments, they were moſt of them conferr'd with a like View upon the Roman Intereſt and Religion. On May 13. His Majeſty was pleas'd, in Conſideration of the good and faithful Services of John Lytcott Eſq; to conferr upon him the Honour of Knighthood. And on May 28. His Majeſty being in his Camp on Hounſlow-Heath, after having declared his great Satisfaction with the Earl of Bath's Regiment of Corniſh Men, was pleas'd to conferr, at the Head of the Regiment, the Honour of Knighthood upon Captain Beville Granvil, his Lordſhip's Nephew, and Grandſon to Sir Beville who was ſlain in the Battle of Landſdown. On July 11. His Majeſty, in his Bed-Chamber, Knighted Thomas Jefferys Eſq; his Conſul at Alicant. On Aug. 8. His Majeſty conferr'd the ſame Honour of Knighthood upon Thomas Rawlinſon Eſq; One of the Aldermen of the City of London. Upon the Death of Sir William Stapleton (Governor and Captain-General of His Majeſty's Leeward Iſlands in America) the King was pleas'd in Auguſt to conferr that Government upon Sir Nathanael Johnſon, in Conſideration of his many faithful Services, and approved Loyalty. On Aug. 22. at Windſor, His Majeſty was pleas'd to conferr the Honour of Knighthood upon Thomas Mongomery of the Middle-Temple Eſq; On Sept. 26. His Majeſty conferr'd the Honour of Knighthood upon Thomas Fowle Eſq; One of the Aldermen of the City of London; and then Appointed him and Sir Thomas Rawlinſon to be Sheriffs of London and Middleſex for the Year enſuing. On Oct. 22. William Bridgman Eſq; was Sworn One of the Clerks of His Majeſty's Privy-Council, in the Place of Sir Philip Floyd, deceas'd. And at the ſame time William Blathwaite Eſq; was Sworn One of the Clerks of the ſaid Council in Ordinary. On Decemb. 1. His Majeſty, in his Bed-Chamber, conferr'd the Honour of Knighthood upon Edmund Gardiner Eſq; Deputy-Recorder of the Town of Bedford. And near the ſame time His Majeſty did the like Honour to Ric. Neale Eſq; High-Sheriff of the County of Northumberland for the Year enſuing. Decemb. 18. His Majeſty was pleas'd to conſtitute Dr. Richard Raines (Judge of the Prerogative-Court) Judge of His Majeſty's High-Court of Admiralty, and at the ſame time to conferr upon him the Honour of Knighthood. Toward the End of the ſame Month, Sir Charles Cotterell having humbly Petition'd the King for Leave (by reaſon of his Age) to reſign His Office of Maſter of the Ceremonies; His Majeſty was graciouſlyly pleas'd, in Conſideration of his faithful Services to his Royal Father, Brother, and Himſelf, to receive his Son Charles-Lodowick Cotterell Eſq; into the ſaid Office, and to conſtitute his Grandſon John Dormer Eſq; Aſſiſtant-Maſter of the Ceremonies, in his Place. On Jan. 21. His Majeſty conferr'd the Honour of Knighthood upon James Tillie of Pillaton in the County of Cornwall Eſq; And about the ſame time, was pleas'd to conſtitute, by Commiſſion under the Great-Seal of England, Sir Thomas Jefferys his Agent and Conſul-General in the Kingdoms of Valencia and Murcia, and the Iſlands of Majorca, Minorca, Ivica and Sardinia, in Conſideration of his Loyalty, and the good Services perform'd by him. At the beginning of February His Majeſty was pleas'd to Conſtitute the Earl of Yarmouth Treaſurer of his Houſhold; and the Lord Waldegrave Comptroller; and ſoon after, Colonel James Porter Vice-Chamberlain of the ſame.

Other Honours and Preferments.

It is hard now to ſeparate the Affairs of Religion from thoſe of the State, becauſe the whole Buſineſs of the King and Court was to purſue the Ways and Means of Introducing Popery. The Regular Clergy of

State of Religion.

1686. of the Church of England thought it their Duty not to be Silent in the Common Danger, and therefore made their Sermons and Publick Diſcourſes more expreſly againſt the Errors and Corruptions of the Church of Rome. The King was taught to believe, That whatever was ſaid againſt his Religion, was a Reflection upon his Perſon and his Government: And therefore he was importun'd to Reſtrain the Liberty of the Pulpit; and to that Purpoſe he Order'd the Directions concerning Preachers, Publiſh'd in 1662. to be now Reprinted, and Reinforc'd by a Letter of the King, Directed to the Lords the Archbiſhops of Canterbury and York, given at Whitehall the 5th of March 1685. in the Second Year of his Reign, To Prohibit the Preaching upon Controverſial Points.——

The King intent upon introducing Popery.

Would not bear the Clergy to Preach againſt it.

A late Author makes this proper Remark upon it: "An Order was Directed to the Proteſtant Biſhops about Preaching: Which was, "upon the Matter, forbidding them to Defend "their Religion in the Pulpit; when it was at "the ſame time Attackt by the Popiſh Prieſts with "all the Vigour they were capable of, both in "their Sermons and Books. This Order was "taken from a Precedent in Queen Mary's Time; "for the firſt ſtep She made to Introduce Popery, "(notwithſtanding her Promiſes to the Gentlemen "of Suffolk and Norfolk to the contrary, upon "their Appearing firſt of any, upon the Death "of her Brother) was to Iſſue out a Proclamation "forbidding the Preaching upon Controverted "Points of Religion, for fear, as was ſaid, of "raiſing Animoſities among the People. But "notwithſtanding this enſnaring Letter of King "James, the Clergy of the Church of England "were not wanting in their Duty: For, to "their Immortal Honour, they did more to Vin"dicate the Doctrine of their own Church, and "Expoſe the Errors of the Church of Rome, both "in their Sermons and Writings, than ever had "been done, either at Home or Abroad, ſince the "Reformation; and in ſuch a Style, and with ſuch "an inimitable force of Reaſoning, as will be a "Standard of Writing to ſucceeding Ages.

Eccleſiaſtical Commiſſion.

"To haſten on the Project againſt the Eſtabliſh'd "Church, a New Court of Inquiſition was Erected, "under the Name of a Commiſſion for Eccleſiaſtical "Affairs: And, to blind the People, there were "ſome Biſhops of the Church of England named "Commiſſioners; whereof one refuſed to Act "from the Beginning; and another Excus'd him"ſelf, after he came to ſee where the Deſign of it "was Levell'd. This Commiſſion was another "manifeſt Violation of the Laws, and againſt an "expreſs Act of Parliament. And, as if that "had not been enough to mortifie the Church "of England, there were ſome Roman Catholicks "Appointed Commiſſioners; and conſequently, the "Enemies of the Proteſtant Religion were become "the Judges and Directors of a Proteſtant Church, "in its Doctrine and Diſcipline.——

[The Commiſſion it ſelf, becauſe it is the Laſt of that Kind that we hope will be ever Given out, deſerves to be here inſerted.]

In Witneſs, &c.

Illegality of this Commiſſion.

It muſt be Obſerved, That King Henry VIII. by Virtue of a full Supremacy, was Enabled not only to Delegate Commiſſioners, but to Appoint a Vicar-General to Act in Eccleſiaſtical Cauſes, after a manner too Abſolute for any Prince. And by Virtue of a Branch of an Act in 1 Eliz. the Queen was again Impowered to Exerciſe the Eccleſiaſtical Supremacy, and did Set up a High-Commiſſion-Court, to Reſtrain the Growth of Popery, and to Support the Eſtabliſh'd Church of England. Now becauſe the Commiſſioners had Proceeded in ſuch Cauſes with too much Severity, and, as commonly thought, with too much Arbitrary Power, therefore there was another Act, 17 Car. I. cap. 11. for a Repeal of the Branch of a Stat. 1 Eliz. concerning Commiſſioners for Cauſes Eccleſiaſtical; Enacting, That the ſaid Clauſe Impowering the Queen to Commiſſion any Perſons to Exerciſe Eccleſiaſtical Juriſdiction, &c. ſhall be made Void for Ever; And that no New Court ſhall be Erected with the like Power, Juriſdiction or Authority, as the ſaid High-Commiſſion-Court hath, or pretendeth to have. The High-Commiſſion-Court being thus Put down, ſome Papiſts and ſome Diſſenters would have deny'd that there was any Power remaining in the Church; and did pretend, That all manner of Coërcive Juriſdiction was taken from the Arch-Biſhops and Biſhops, and other Ordinaries. To Obviate this Objection, there was another Law made, 13 Car. II. cap. 12. Intituled, An Act for Explanation of a Clauſe contained in an Act of Parliament made in the 17*th Year of the late King* Charles, &c. Reciting, That upon the ſaid Statute of 17 Car. I. ſome Doubt had been made, That all Ordinary Power of Coërcion and Proceedings in Cauſes Eccleſiaſtical were Taken away, whereby the Ordinary Courſe of Juſtice in Cauſes Eccleſiaſtical had been Obſtructed; It was therefore Enacted, That neither the ſaid Act, nor any thing therein contained, doth or ſhall Take away any Ordinary Power or Authority from any of the ſaid Archbiſhops, Biſhops, or any other Perſon or Perſons named, as aforeſaid. —— And further Enacting, That the afore-recited Act of Decimo ſeptimo Caroli, and all the Matters and Clauſes therein contained, (Excepting what concerns the High-Commiſſion-Court, or the Erection of ſome ſuch-like New Court by Commiſſion, ſhall be, and is hereby Repealed. —— Provided always, That neither this Act, nor any thing therein contained, ſhall extend or be conſtrued to Revive or give Force to the ſaid Branch of the ſaid Statute made in 1 Eliz. and mention'd in the Act 17 Car. I. but that the ſaid Branch of the ſaid Stat. 1 Eliz. ſhall Stand and be Repealed in ſuch ſort as if this Act had never been made.

1686.

This Act 13 Car. II. was now Interpreted, To reſtore to the Crown a Power of Erecting a High-Commiſſion-Court, though with leſs Power of Fining, Impriſoning, &c. But it had been formerly thought to extinguiſh all ſuch Extraordinary Courts, and therefore none ſuch had been erected in the Reign of King Charles II. So that the very Granting of this New Commiſſion, was by many of the beſt Lawyers thought Illegal. And the very Creatures of the Court ſeem'd to be very Conſcious of it: For though it was Granted in the beginning of April, yet it was not Open'd till the beginning of Auguſt following: And then it was thought ſtrange, That the Power of Excommunication, which is a pure Spiritual Act, ſhould be Granted to meer Lay-men; for the Quorum in the Commiſſion were, the Chancellor and any other Two. For theſe Reaſons, the Archbiſhop of Canterbury, who was firſt Named, refuſed to Act in it; and the Biſhop of Cheſter was Put in, as a fitter Tool.

The Archbiſhop of Canterbury refuſes to Act in this Commiſſion.

Theſe Commiſſioners thought fit to begin the Exerciſe of their New Power, with the Suſpenſion of Dr. Compton, Biſhop of London. This Noble Prelate, by a Conduct worthy of his Birth, and Station in the Church, had acquired the Love and Eſteem of all the Proteſtant Churches at Home and Abroad; and was, for that Reaſon, the Mark of the Envy and Hatred of the Romiſh Party at Court. They had waited for an Occaſion to Enoble their Eccleſiaſtical Commiſſion with ſuch an Illuſtrious Sacrifice; and ſuch an Occaſion was rather taken than given, in the Buſineſs of Dr. Sharp (now Archbiſhop of York.)

Suſpenſion of the Biſhop of London.

The Prieſts about the King, knowing how much it was their Intereſt that the Proteſtant Clergy ſhould not have leave to Refute the Errors of the Church of Rome, in their Sermons, had adviſ'd him to ſend to the Biſhops the Enſnaring Letter or Order before-mention'd, containing Directions about Preachers. The Learn'd Dr. Sharp, taking Occaſion, in ſome of his Sermons, to Vindicate the Doctrine of the Church of England, in Oppoſition to Popery; this was, in the Court Dialect, underſtood to be, The endeavouring to beget in the Minds of his Hearers an ill Opinion of the King and

Offence given by Dr. Sharp

1686. and his Government, by insinuating Fears and Jealousies, to dispose them to Discontent, and to lead them into Disobedience and Rebellion; and consequently, a Contempt of the said Order about Preachers. Whereupon King James sent a Letter to the Bishop of London, which was deliver'd at Fulham on Thursday June 17. by Mr. Atterbury the Messenger, and was as followeth:

JAMES R.

The King's Letter, for suspending this Worthy Preacher.

RIGHT Reverend Father in GOD, We Greet you Well. — Whereas We have been Inform'd, and are fully Satisfied, That Dr. John Sharp, Rector of the Parish-Church of St. Giles in the Fields in the County of Middlesex, and in your Diocese, notwithstanding Our late Letter to the Most Reverend Fathers in GOD, the Arch-Bishops of Canterbury and York, and Our Directions concerning Preachers, Given at Our Court at Whitehall, the 15th of March, 1685. in the Second Year of Our Reign; yet he the said Dr. John Sharp, in Contempt of the said Orders, hath, in some of his Sermons since Preached, presumed to make Unbecoming Reflections, and to utter such Expressions as were not fit or proper for him; endeavouring thereby to beget in the Minds of his Hearers, an evil Opinion of Us and Our Government, by insinuating Fears and Jealousies to dispose them to Discontent, and to lead them into Disobedience and Rebellion. These are therefore to Require and Command you, immediately upon Receipt hereof, forthwith to Suspend him from further Preaching in any Parish-Church or Chapel in your Diocese, until he has given Us Satisfaction, and Our further Pleasure be known herein: And for your so Doing, this shall be your Warrant. And so We bid you heartily Farewell.

Given at Our Court at Windsor, the 14th Day of June, 1686. In the Second Year of Our Reign.

By His MAJESTY's Command.

SUNDERLAND.

The Bishop of London perceiv'd that the Design of this Letter was absolutely to forbid all Preaching against Popery, and the Effect of it might be to Suspend all the Eminent Preachers in England: His Lordship, however, endeavour'd to divert the Storm that threatned the Church and Clergy, and therefore wrote this submissive Letter to the Earl of Sunderland, to be communicated to the King, and made Dr. Sharp himself the Bearer of it to Hampton-Court, on Friday the 18th of June.

My LORD,

Answer of the Bishop of London.

I Always have, and shall count it my Duty to Obey the King in whatever Commands He lays upon me, that I can perform with a safe Conscience; but in this, I humbly conceive, I am oblig'd to Proceed according to Law, and therefore it is impossible for me to Comply; because, though His Majesty Commands me only to Execute his Pleasure, yet, in the Capacity I am to do it, I must Act as a Judge: And Your Lordship knows, No Judge Condemns any Man, before He has Knowledge of the Cause, and has Cited the Party. However, I Sent to Mr. Dean, and Acquainted him with His Majesty's Displeasure; whom I find so ready to give all reasonable Satisfaction, that I have thought fit to make him the Bearer of this Answer; From Him that will never be Unfaithful to the King, nor otherwise than,

(My LORD)

Your Lordship's Most Humble Servant,

H. LONDON.

No Answer could be obtained to this Letter of the Bishop; And therefore, on the Sunday following, Dr. Sharp carry'd this Petition to Windsor. 1686.

To the KING's Most Excellent Majesty.

The Humble PETITION of John Sharp, Clerk,

SHEWETH;

Petition of Doctor Sharp to the King.

THat nothing is so Afflictive to your Petitioner, as his Unhappiness to have incurred Your Majesty's Displeasure: Which he is so sensible of, that ever since Your Majesty was pleas'd to give Notice of it, he hath forborne all Publick Exercise of his Function, and still continues so to do.

Your Petitioner can with great Sincerity affirm, That ever since he hath been a Preacher, he hath faithfully endeavour'd to do the best Service he could in his Place and Station, as well to the Late King Your Royal Brother, as Your Majesty, both by Preaching, and otherwise.

And so far he hath always been from venting any thing in the Pulpit tending to Schism, or Faction, or any-way to the Disturbance of Your Majesty's Government, that he hath upon all Occasions, in his Sermons, to the utmost of his Power, set himself against all sorts of Doctrines and Principles that look that way: And this he is so well assur'd of, that he cannot but apprehend that his Sermons have been very much Mis-represented to Your Majesty.

But if in any Sermon of his, any Words or Expressions have unwarily slipt from him, that have been capable of such Constructions as to give Your Majesty Cause of Offence; as he solemnly professes he had no ill Intention in those Words or Expressions, so he is very Sorry for them, and resolves, for the future, to be careful in the Discharge of his Duty; that Your Majesty shall have reason to believe him to be Your most Faithful Subject.

And therefore he earnestly Prayeth, That Your Majesty, out of Your Royal Grace and Clemency, would be pleas'd to lay aside the Displeasure you have conceiv'd against your humble Petitioner, and restore him to that Favour which the rest of the Clergy enjoy, under Your Majesty's Gracious Government;

So Your Petitioner shall ever Pray, &c.

This Petition was not admitted to be Read; for a Resolution had been taken to Execute the Displeasure of the King upon the Bishop of London: And therefore, on Tuesday Aug. 3. the Commissioners Opened their Commission; and immediately sent a Citation to the Bishop of London, to Appear before them, in the Council-Chamber at Whitehall, on Aug. 9.

Bishop of London Cited to Appear before the Ecclesiastical Commissioners.

The Bishop did accordingly Appear: And the Commissioners then present, were the Lord Chancellor, the Lord Treasurer, the Lord President, the Lord Bishop of Duresme, the Lord Bishop of Rochester, and the Lord Chief-Justice Herbert. The Lord Chancellor Charg'd the Bishop, with not Observing His Majesty's Commands, in the Case of Dr. Sharp. — The Bishop humbly begg'd a Copy of the Commission, and a Copy of his Charge; and insisting upon this Desire, he was bid to Withdraw: And after a short time, being Call'd in again, was told thus by the Lord Chancellor; Their Lordships have Consider'd of what Your Lordship Desir'd, and are of Opinion, That you shall neither have a Copy of, nor see the Commission; neither will they give a Copy of the Charge. — The Bishop then desir'd Time to Advise with Councel, and to have them Plead. — The Lord Chancellor ask'd, What Time His Lordship desir'd? — His Lordship answer'd, Considering the Season of the Year, and that there is not one Civilian in the Commons, I hope you'll Give me till towards the Term. — But the Commissioners would Grant Proceedings.

1686. but a Week only; and so Adjourn'd to Aug. 15. On which Day the Bishop Appear'd again, and desir'd longer Time; For (says he) I wrote to several considerable Councel out of Town, none of which are come up; and those few that are here, the Thing is so new to them, that they could not thoroughly consider Matters in so short a Time. Then the Bishop Withdrew; and being Call'd in again, was told, Their Lordships were resolved to give no Time for Pleading to their Jurisdiction, but for any other Answer they would grant a Fortnight;— and so they Adjourn'd till Aug. 31. In the mean time, the Bishop sent his Proctor to their Register, for a Copy of what Orders and other Minutes they had Set down concerning his Business. But it was refused: Though his Councel told him, it was never deny'd in any Court.

The Bishop's second Appearance.

The Bishop's third Appearance.

On the said 31st of August the Bishop Appear'd, and begg'd their Lordship's Leave to offer his Plea to their Jurisdiction; For (says he) I am told, It is a Right every One has to make Use of, when he finds it for his Advantage. I would not hazard being so Impertinent as to offer any thing upon my own head: Your Lordships gave me Time to Advise with Councel; and they that are Learn'd in the Laws of the Land, Advise me to Plead to your Jurisdiction, and will be ready to Argue it.— The Commissioners refusing, the Bishop proceeded; I am far from Disowning any part of the King's Supremacy; I Acknowledge it, and am so bound to do, in its Just Extent over all Persons, and in all Causes: What I have to offer in Plea to your Jurisdiction, is, That I conceive, this Commission you Act by is not Good, as being contrary to an Act of Parliament: Upon which Point, I beg my Councel may Argue.— The Bishop being Over-rul'd, Protested his Right to this Plea; which he would have given in, if the Lords Commissioners would have suffer'd it to be Argued.

The Bishop's Plea against their Jurisdiction.

"I Henry Bishop of London do Declare and Acknowledge, That the King's Majesty is the only Supreme Head and Governor of this Realm, and all other His Majesty's Dominions and Countries, as well in all Spiritual or Ecclesiastical Causes, as Temporal. Nevertheless, I the said Bishop, by Protestation, not Acknowledging any Just or Legal Authority in Your Lordships (otherwise than as by Law I am bound) to Question or Censure me in any Matter or Thing Ecclesiastical whatsoever; Do offer and shew to Your Lordships, That at the Parliament of King Charles I. (of blessed Memory) late King of England, holden on the 3d Day of November, in the Sixteenth Year of his Reign, a certain Act and Statute was made, Intituled, [A Repeal of the Branch of a Statute Primo Elizabethæ, concerning Commissioners for Causes Ecclesiastical;] Setting forth, That in the Parliament holden in the First Year of the Reign of Queen Elizabeth, there was an Act Made and Established, Intituled, [An Act Restoring to the Crown the Ancient Jurisdiction over the State Ecclesiastical and Spiritual;] And Abolishing all Foreign Power repugnant to the same. In which Act, among other things, there is contain'd one Clause, Branch, Article or Sentence, whereby it was Enacted to this Effect, namely, — That the said late Queen's Highness, Her Heirs and Successors, Kings or Queens of this Realm, should have full Power and Authority, by Virtue of that Act, by Letters-Patents under the Great-Seal of England, to Assign, Name and Authorize, when, and as often as Her Highness, Her Heirs or Successors, should think meet and convenient, and for such and so long Time as should please Her Highness, Her Heirs or Successors, such Person or Persons, being Natural-born Subjects to Her Highness, Her Heirs or Successors, as Her Majesty, Her Heirs or Successors, should think mete, to Exercise, Use, Occupy and Execute, under Her Highness, Her Heirs and Successors, all manner of Jurisdictions, Privileges and Preheminences in any-wise touching or concerning any Spiritual or Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction within these Her Realms of England and Ireland, or any other Her Highness's Dominions and Countries; And to Visit, Reform, Redress, Order, Correct and Amend all such Errors, Heresies, Schisms, Abuses, Offences, Contempts and Enormities whatsoever, which by any manner of Spiritual or Ecclesiastical Power, Authority or Jurisdiction, can or may Lawfully be Reformed, Ordered, Redressed, Corrected, Restrained or Amended, to the Pleasure of Almighty God, the Encrease of Vertue, and the Conservation of the Peace and Unity of this Realm. And that such Person or Persons so to be Named, Assigned and Appointed by Her Highness, Her Heirs or Successors, after the said Letters-Patents to him or them made and delivered, as aforesaid, should have full Power and Authority, by Virtue of that Act, and of the said Letters-Patents under Her Highness, Her Heirs or Successors, to Exercise, Use and Execute all the Premisses, according to the Tenor and Effect of the said Letters-Patents; Any Matter or Cause to the contrary in any-wise notwithstanding. ——— And Setting forth likewise, — That, by the colour of some Words in the foresaid Branch of the said Act, whereby Commissioners are Authorized to Execute their Commission, according to the Tenor and Effect of the King's Letters-Patents, and by Letters-Patents grounded thereupon; The said Commissioners have, to the great and unsufferable Wrong and Oppression of the King's Subjects, used to Fine and Imprison them, and to Exercise other Authority not belonging to Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction, Restor'd by that Act; and divers other great Mischiefs and Inconveniences have also ensued to the King's Subjects, by Occasion of the said Branch; and Commissions Issued thereupon, and the Executions thereof. And therefore, for the Repressing and Preventing of the aforesaid Abuses, Mischiefs and Inconveniences in Time to come, It was by the said Act made at the said Parliament of the said King Charles the First, Enacted, — That the aforesaid Branch, Clause, Article or Sentence contained in the said Act of Primo Elizabethæ, and every Word, Matter and Thing contain'd in that Branch, Clause, Article or Sentence, should from thenceforward be Repeal'd, Annull'd, Revok'd, Annihilated, and utterly made Void for ever; Any thing in the said Act to the contrary in any-wise notwithstanding.—— And it was thereby also Enacted, by the Authority aforesaid, That no Arch-Bishop, Bishop, nor Vicar-General, nor any Ordinary whatsoever, nor any other Spiritual or Ecclesiastical Judge, Officer, or Minister of Justice, nor any other Person or Persons whatsoever Executing Spiritual or Ecclesiastical Power, Authority or Jurisdiction, by any Grant, License or Commission of the King's Majesty, His Heirs or Successors, or by any Power or Authority derived from the King, His Heirs or Successors, or otherwise, should from and after the First Day of August, in the Year of Our Lord, 1641. Award, Impose, or Inflict any Pain, Penalty, Fine, Amerciament or Imprisonment, or other Corporal Punishment upon any of the King's Subjects, for any Contempt, Misdemeanor, Crime, Offence, Matter or Thing whatsoever, belonging to Spiritual or Ecclesiastical Cognizance or Jurisdiction; or shall, ex Officio, or at the Instance or Promo-

After the Rejecting of this Plea, the Biſhop ſpoke thus; I have another thing to beg Your Lordſhip's Advice and Judgment in: I have Right, as a Biſhop, by the moſt Authentick and Univerſal Eccleſiaſtical Laws, to be Tryed firſt before my Metropolitan, precedent to any other Court whatſoever. — The Court ſaid, Still this was to Plead againſt their Juriſdiction. —— And the Biſhop went on thus; If I am Over-rul'd in this, I muſt beg Your Lordſhip's Patience in one Plea more. Your Lordſhips, in this Commiſſion, after the general Words, are Directed to Proceed according to the Tenor of the Letters-Patents, &c. Now I conceive, in the Capacity I am in, you are only Warranted to Try me for Offences After the Date of the Commiſſion. —— But the Court Reſolved, That they had Authority to Look back. —— Then the Biſhop put in his Anſwer in Writing, which was read by Mr. Bridgman, in this Form:

The Biſhop's Anſwer to the Charge

" TO to the Queſtion which was Propoſed to " me, by Your Lordſhips, (viz.) Why did " you not Obey the King's Command, in his Letter " concerning the Suſpending Dr. Sharp? I Henry " Biſhop of London do Anſwer; That imme- 1686. " diately upon Receipt of His Majeſty's Letter " from my Lord Preſident, (the Tenor whereof " follows, &c.) I took the beſt Advice I could " get concerning Dr. Sharp; and was Inform'd, " That the Letter being Directed to me, as Biſhop " of London, to Suſpend a Perſon under my Ju- " riſdiction; I was therein to Act as a Judge, it " being a Judicial Act; and that no Perſon could, " by Law, be Puniſh'd by Suſpenſion, before he " was Call'd, or without being admitted to make " his Defence; I thought it therefore my Duty, " forthwith humbly to repreſent ſo much to " my Lord Preſident, that ſo I might receive His " Majeſty's further Pleaſure in that Matter. " Nevertheleſs, That I might Obey His Majeſty's " Commands, as far as by Law I could, I did " then ſend for Dr. Sharp, and acquainted him " with His Majeſty's Diſpleaſure, and the Occa- " ſion of it, by ſhewing him His Majeſty's Letter. " But he having never been Call'd to Anſwer any " ſuch Matter, or make his Defence, and Pro- " teſting his Innocence, and likewiſe Declaring " himſelf moſt ready to give His Majeſty full " Satisfaction therein; In order thereto, I advis'd " him to forbear Preaching, till he had apply'd " himſelf to His Majeſty; And, at his Requeſt, " I made him the Bearer of my Letter to my " Lord Preſident; waiting for His Majeſty's " farther Orders to Proceed againſt him Judicially, " in caſe he ſhould not at that time give His Ma- " jeſty the Satisfaction required: And the ſaid " Dr. Sharp hath not ſince Preach'd within my " Dioceſe.

HENRY LONDON.

The Biſhop being then ask'd by the Lord Chancellor, Whether he had any thing more to ſay? —— He only ſaid, That the Words of His Majeſty's Letter were liable to two Conſtructions, upon a double Sence of the Word SUSPEND; either a Suſpenſion ab Officio, which was a Judicial Act, and he could not do but in a Judicial manner. The other Sence of the Word SUSPEND, might be taken at large for SILENCING: And therefore he had Advis'd the Doctor not to Preach till he knew His Majeſty's farther Pleaſure. Which Advice (ſays he) from a Judge, the Learn'd in the Laws, tell me, is Tantamount to an Admonition; and that if he had not Submitted to it, I could have Cenſur'd him for his Diſobedience. So that if this laſt was His Majeſty's Meaning, I have, in effect, Obey'd the Letter: Which is all I ſhall ſay at preſent; and beg, my Councel may be Heard, to Clear the Matter in Point of Law. —— After this, the Biſhop's Councel, who were Dr. Oldys, Dr. Hodges, Dr. Brice, and Dr. Newton, Argued ſtrenuouſly in behalf of the Biſhop: And after their learned Pleadings, the Biſhop ſpoke thus; I have but little more to ſay: I ſuppoſe my Councel have Satisfy'd Your Lordſhips, that, in the ſevereſt Conſtruction, Malice or Wilful Diſobedience could not be imputed to me. But, as my Lord Chancellor has now explain'd it to Dr. Oldys, That the King's Meaning was, only to SILENCE; They have made plain to Your Lordſhips, That I have effectually Obey'd His Majeſty's Commands: And if in any Circumſtance I have been wanting, I am ready to make Reparation, by performing that likewiſe, and to beg His Majeſty's Pardon. —— After this, the Biſhop was Appointed to Attend the Commiſſioners on Monday Sept. 6. when this Sentence was read againſt him:

The Biſhop's farther Plea.

By His MAJESTY's Commiſſioner's for Eccleſiaſtical Cauſes.

Sentence againſt the Biſhop.

" WHEREAS Henry Lord Biſhop of " London hath been Convened before Us, " for his Diſobedience, and other his Contempts 1686. " mention'd in the Proceedings of this Cauſe; " And the ſaid Lord Biſhop of London being fully " Heard hereupon: We have thought fit, after " mature Conſideration of the Matter, to Proceed " to this our Definitive Sentence; Declaring, " Decreeing and Pronouncing, That the ſaid Lord " Biſhop, ſhall, for the ſaid Diſobedience and " Contempts, be Suſpended during His Majeſty's " Pleaſure. And accordingly We do, by theſe " Preſents, Suſpend him the ſaid Henry Lord " Biſhop of London; Peremptorily Admoniſhing " and Requiring him hereby to Abſtain from the " Function and Execution of his Epiſcopal Office, " and from all Epiſcopal and Eccleſiaſtical Ju- " riſdiction, during the ſaid Suſpenſion, under " Pain of Deprivation and Removal from his " Biſhoprick.

Given under Our Seal, the Sixth Day of September, 1686.

The Biſhop would have ſpoken, before the Sentence was read, to have Recapitulated the Heads of his CASE, and to have offered full Proof of his Compliance, in Silencing Doctor Sharp; And to have deſired, Since Their Lordſhips had hitherto been his Accuſers and Judges, They would at laſt, according to the uſual Cuſtom, have been his Councel, and Order'd their Advocate to lay down the Nature of the Crime, the Law it Offended, and the Law it was to be Puniſh'd by; that he might have given in his Exceptions: But no Speaking was allowed, till the Sentence was read. And when, after the reading, the Biſhop ſaid, Have Your Lordſhips any farther Service to Command me? —— The Lord Chancellor anſwer'd, No. —— And immediately after, the Biſhops of Dureſme, Rocheſter and Peterborough were Appointed Commiſſioners to Exerciſe all manner of Eccleſiaſtical Juriſdiction within the Dioceſe of London, during the Suſpenſion of the Biſhop.

Juriſdiction of the See of London committed to Others.

Dr. Sharp was likewiſe Judicially Suſpended; but, in pretended Mercy, was ſoon after Reſtored to the Exerciſe of his Function.

Other Attempts of Introducing Popery.

There were many other Violent Attempts in Favour of Popery, and in Prejudice to the Eſtabliſh'd Church; which are thus well deliver'd in the Memoirs of a late Writer: — " King James " made haſte to Accompliſh the Grand Deſign, " which a Head-ſtrong Party about him Puſh'd on, " as the certain Way, in their Opinion, to Eternize " his Name in This World, and to Merit an " Eternal Crown in the Other. They foreſaw, " that this was the Critical Juncture, and the " only one that happen'd ſince the Days of " Queen Mary, to Reſtore their Religion in England: " And if they were wanting to themſelves in " making Uſe of it, the Proſpect of a Proteſtant " Succeſſor would infallibly prevent their having " any ſuch Opportunity for the future. King " James was pretty far advanc'd in Years; and " what was to be done, requir'd Expedition; for " all their Labour would be loſt, if he ſhould Die " before the Accompliſhment. If he had been " Younger, or the next Preſumptive-Heir had not " been a Proteſtant, there had been no ſuch abſo- " lute neceſſity for Diſpatch; but the Uncertainty " of the King's Life, call'd for more than ordi- " nary Diligence, in a Deſign that depended " meerly upon it.

" The Party being reſolved, for theſe Reaſons, " to bring about, in the compaſs of one ſingle " Life, and that already far ſpent, what ſeem'd " to be the Work of an whole Age; they made " large Steps towards it. Roman Catholicks were " not only Employ'd in the Army, but brought " into Places of greateſt Truſt in the State. The " Earl of Clarendon was forthwith remov'd from " the Office of Privy-Seal, and the Government 1686. " of Ireland, to make room for the Earl of Tyr- " connel in the one, and the Lord Arundel in the " other. Father Petre, a Jeſuit, was Sworn of " the Privy-Council. And though, by the Laws, " it was High-Treaſon for any to aſſume the " Character of the Pope's Nuncio; yet theſe were " become too ſlender Cobwebs to hinder a Roman " Prelate to appear Publickly at London in that " Quality: And one of the greateſt Peers in " England was Diſgrac'd, for not paying him " that Reſpect, which the Laws of the Land " made Criminal.

Ambaſſador ſent to the Pope.

" To bear the Publick Character of Ambaſſador " to the Pope, was likewiſe an open Violation of " the Laws: But ſo fond was the Governing-Party " about King James to ſhew their New-acquir'd " Trophies at Rome, that the Earl of Caſtlemain " was Diſpatch'd thither Extraordinary Ambaſ- " ſador, with a Magnificent Train, and a moſt " Sumptuous Equipage. What his Secret Inſtruc- " tions were, may be partly gueſs'd by his Pub- " lick ones, which were, To Reconcile the Kingdoms " of England, Scotland and Ireland to the Holy " See; from which they had, for more than an Age, " fallen off, by Hereſie.

His Reception at Rome.

" Innocent XI. receiv'd this Ambaſſie, as One " that ſaw farther than thoſe who ſent it. The " Ambaſſador had but a Cold Reception of the " Holy Father; and none of the Cardinals but " thoſe of a particular Faction, and the good-natur'd " Cardinal of Norfolk, took any further Notice " of it, than Good-Manners oblig'd them. The " Court of Rome were too refin'd Politicians to be " Impos'd upon with Shew and Noiſe; and knew " the World too well, to expect great Matters " from ſuch Haſty, Ill-tim'd Advances as were " made to them. Not only ſo, but Innocent " having an Averſion in his Nature to a Faction " he knew King James was embark'd in, which " he never took pains to diſſemble, was not over- " fond of an Ambaſſie from a Prince who was in " an Intereſt he had long wiſh'd to ſee humbled. " King James met with nothing but Mortifications " at Rome, in the Perſon of his Ambaſſador; which " occaſion'd his making as ſhort a Stay as was " poſſible. In which may be ſeen the vaſt " difference there was betwixt the Politicks of Italy, " and thoſe of a Head-ſtrong Party in England. " And however the World has been Impos'd upon, " to believe, that the Pope's Nuncio at the Engliſh " Court, who is ſince made a Cardinal, was an " Inſtrument to puſh on Things to Extremities; " yet certain it is, he had too much good Senſe " to approve of all the Meaſures that were taken; " and therefore deſir'd often to be Recall'd, leſt he " ſhould be thought to have a Hand in them.

" Although the Earl of Caſtlemain was pleas'd, " upon his Examination before the Parliament, " to ſay, That his Ambaſſie to Rome, was only " ſuch as is between Two Temporal Princes, about " Compliment and Commerce; yet Father Warner, " in his Manuſcript Hiſtory, quoted by a learned " Author, gives us another Account of it, in " theſe Words; Things being thus ſettled (ſays he) " within the Realm; the next Care His Majeſty had, " was to Unite his Countries to the Obedience of " the Biſhop of Rome, and the Apoſtolick See; which " had been cut off, by Hereſie, about an Age and an " half before. To try the Pope's Inclination, in " the Year 1685. he ſent Mr. Carryl thither; who " ſucceeding according to his Wiſhes, and being re- " call'd, the Earl of Caſtlemain was ſent the next " Year as Extraordinary Ambaſſador to the Pope, " in the Name of the King and the Catholicks of " England, to make their Submiſſion to the Holy " See.

" Caſtlemain had ſeveral Audiences of the Pope, " but to little Purpoſes; for whenever he began " to 1686. " to talk of Buſineſs, the Pope was ſeaſonably " attack'd with a Fit of Coughing, which broke off " the Ambaſſador's Diſcourſe for that time, and " oblig'd him to retire. Theſe Audiences and " Fits of Coughing continu'd from time to time, " while Caſtlemain continu'd at Rome, and were " the Subject of Diverſion to all but a particular " Faction at that Court. At length he was advis'd " to come to Threats, and to give out, That he " would be gone, ſince he could not have an Op- " portunity to Treat with the Pope about the " Buſineſs he came for. Innocent was ſo little " Concern'd for the Ambaſſador's Reſentment, " that when they told him of it, he anſwer'd " with his ordinary Coldneſs, E bene, ſe voul " anderſene ditegli adonque che ſi levi di buon " matino al freſco e che a mezzo giorno ſi repoſi, " per che in queſti paeſi non biſogna viaggiare al " caldo del giorno. —— i. e. Well! let him go; " And tell him, It were fit he riſe early in the " Morning, that he may reſt himſelf at Noon; for " in this Country it's dangerous to travel in the " Heat of the Day.

Ambaſſador Recall'd from Rome.

" In the end, he was Recall'd; being able to " obtain of the Pope two trifling Requeſts only, " that could hardly be deny'd to an ordinary " Courier: The one was, a Licenſe for the " Mareſchal De Humier's Daughter to Marry her " Uncle: And the other, a Diſpenſation of the " Statutes of the Jeſuits Order, to Father Petre " to enjoy a Biſhoprick: —— The want of which, " (ſays my Author) was the reaſon that the " Archbiſhoprick of York was kept ſo long " Vacant.

Little Reſpected by the Pope,

" Though the Pope carry'd himſelf in this " manner towards the Engliſh Ambaſſador, yet the " Jeſuits paid him the higheſt Reſpect imaginable; " which did him no Service with the Old Man, " for He and that Order were never hearty Friends.

But only by the Jeſuits.

" They Entertain'd him in their Seminary with the " greateſt Magnificence; and nothing was wanting " in Nature or Art, to grace his Reception. All " their Stores of Sculpture, Painting, Poetry and " Rhetorick ſeem to have been exhauſted upon " this Entertainment. And though all the Inſcrip- " tions and Emblems did centre upon the Triumph " of the Romiſh Religion, and the Ruine of Hereſie " in England; yet Care was taken, not to omit " ſuch particular Trophies and Deviſes as were " adapted to their New-acquired Liberty of ſetting " up their Publick Schools at London. Among a " great many other Panegyricks upon King James, " the following Diſtich was plac'd below an Emblem " of England:

" To ſee King James Neglected at Rome in the " Pontificat of Innocent XI. was not ſo ſtrange, " conſidering what has been ſaid of his Antipathy " to a Faction wherein that Prince was concern'd: " But that in the Time of Innocent's Predeceſſor, " and when he was Duke of York, he ſhould be " deny'd a common Favour, which that Court " ſeldom or never refuſes to any one, was a Thing " altogether unaccountable: Yet ſo it was, That " he having ſent the late Earl of Peterborough to " Italy, to Eſpouſe the Princeſs of Modena in his " Name; all the Intereſt he could make, was not " able to obtain a Diſpenſation for the Marriage. " The Account of this Matter being ſo little known, " and that Earl's Book wherein he mentions it, " being ſo rare, and, as I am told, but Twenty-" four Copies Printed, I ſhall give it in the Earl's " own Words: ——

" But now from Rome there was Advice (ſays he) " by the Abbot of Angeo, of the great Difficulties " that aroſe in the Conſultations of this Affair, " (meaning the Marriage.) The French Ambaſ-" ſador (the Duke D'Eſtrees) favour'd the Mar-" riage, with all the Power of the French Faction; " ſo did Cardinal Barberini, and all the other " Friends and Allies of the Houſe of Eſté. But " His Holineſs himſelf was very averſe; and Car-" dinal Altieri, who was the Governing Nephew, " a profeſs'd and violent Oppoſer. The main " Pretence for this Obſtinacy, was the Duke of " York's not Declaring himſelf Publickly of the " Romiſh Church, though they knew that he was " of a long time reconcil'd to it.

" But now at laſt (continues the Earl of Peter-" borough) came from Rome the Abbot of Angeo " without the Diſpenſation, which he could by " no means obtain, by reaſon that Cardinal Altieri " was Inflexible; and Threats of Excommunication " were Iſſued out againſt any that ſhould undertake " to Perform or Celebrate the Marriage. Whereupon " we were all upon the Fears and Expectations of a " total Rupture. The Dutcheſs of Modena herſelf, " a Zealous, if not a Bigot Woman, was in great " pain about the Part that might ſeem Offenſive " to His Holineſs, or Neglective of his Authority: " And the Young Princeſs took Occaſion from " hence to ſupport her Unwillingneſs. But in " truth, Cardinal Barberini, upon whom the Dutcheſs " had great dependance, and all the other Adhe-" rents and Relations of the Houſe of Eſté, being " every day more and more poſſeſs'd of the Honour " and Intereſt they were like to find in this " Alliance, were ſcandaliz'd at the unreaſonable " Obſtinacy of the Pope and his Nephew; and " did frankly adviſe the Dutcheſs of Modena " ſuddenly to Make up and Perfect the Marriage: " The Peace and Excuſe of the Thing being eaſier " to be had after it was done, than any preſent " Licenſe to be obtain'd for doing it. 1686.

" The Biſhop of Modena was then applied to " (adds the Earl) for the Performance: But he " refuſing, a poor Engliſh Jacobine was found, " Brother to Jerome White, that afterwards ſerv'd " the Dutcheſs, who having nothing to loſe, and " on whom the Terror of Excommunication did " not ſo much prevail, did Undertake it, and ſo " he Perform'd the Ceremony. —— (Thus far " the Earl of Peterborough.)

Oppreſſion to the Church, in making New Biſhops.

But perhaps one of the moſt fatal Ways of Oppreſſing the Church of England, was by bringing New Biſhops into it, for an Injury and Reproach to Religion. Thus, upon the Death of two of the moſt Eminent Prelates of the Church of England, who had beſt defended it, and grac'd it with Piety and Learning, Dr. John Pearſon, Biſhop of Cheſter, and Dr. John Fell, Biſhop of Oxford; the King was pleas'd to pick out two Succeſſors the moſt remote from the Character of thoſe their Predeceſſors: For about the middle of Auguſt, the King nam'd Dr. Thomas Cartwright, Dean of Rippon, to be Biſhop of Cheſter; and Dr. Samuel Parker, Archdeacon of Canterbury, to be Biſhop of Oxford. And on Octob. 17. they were Conſecrated at Lambeth, and ſoon after made the unhappy Tools of Popery and Arbitrary Power; but, as it pleas'd God, to their own Deſtruction, rather than to the intended Ruine of the Church.

Caſe of the Diſſenters.

It is very plain, That if King James could have got the Biſhops and Clergy and Body of the Church of England to have Perſecuted and Extirpated the Diſſenters, he would have choſe that Way of utmoſt Severity, much rather than that of Indulgence and Toleration. The Diſſenters (by their own Confeſſion) were this Year Proſecuted in the wonted manner. " Their Meetings were frequently " Diſturb'd both in City and Country: Fines " were Levied upon them: The Informers broke in " upon Mr. Fleetwood, Sir John Hartop, and ſome " others, at Stoke-Newington, to Levy Diſtreſſes, " for Conventiclers, to Six or Seven hundred Pounds; " and many were Excommunicated, and had " Capias's Iſſued out againſt them: But particular " Perſons, upon their making Application to " thoſe Above, were more favour'd than had been " uſual.

" Injunctions went out from ſeveral of the Bi-" ſhops, under the Seal of their Offices, to all Miniſters " in their Dioceſes, ſtrictly to Enjoin and Require " all Churchwardens to Preſent thoſe that did not " come to Church, or that receiv'd not the Sacra-" ment at Eaſter. Theſe Injunctions were Publickly " Read in Hertfordſhire and Eſſex, and many " other Places: And it ſeem'd to be a prevailing " Opinion, That the Proteſtant Diſſenters muſt be " Proſecuted, or Popery could not be Suppreſſed. " And therefore the Juries in ſome Places at the " Aſſizes this Year, preſented it as their Opinion, " That unleſs the Diſſenters were effectually Pro-" ſecuted, their Dangers could not be Prevented " or Remedy'd. But the Unſeaſonableneſs of " ſuch Rigors, and the Scandalous Villanies and " Perjuries of many of the moſt Noted Informers, " both in City and Country too, made Senſible " Men ſoon Weary.

" A Diſpenſation or Licenſe-Office was Set up " this Year, where all Comers might have " Diſpenſations, paying only Fifty Shillings for " themſelves and their Families. Many of thoſe " who were Proſecuted as Conventiclers, took out " Diſpenſations; which not only ſtopt all Proceſſes " that were commenc'd, but gave them Liberty " to keep Meetings for the future. Many were " Releaſed from their Impriſonment, and had " their Fines Remitted, by the King's Pardon: " Among the reſt, Mr. Baxter obtain'd his Pardon, by 1686. " by the Mediation of the Lord Powis: His Fine " was Remitted: And on Wednesday Nov. 24. " Sir Samuel Aſtry ſent his Warrant to the Keeper of " the King's-Bench Priſon to Diſcharge him. But he " gave Sureties for his Good-Behaviour: His Ma- " jeſty Declaring, (for his Satisfaction) That it " ſhould not, in him, be interpreted a Breach of the " Good-Behaviour, for him to reſide in London; " which was not allowable, according to the " Oxford Act: And this was entred upon his Bail- " piece, i. e. the Parchment in which his Bail was " given. Notwithſtanding this, he continu'd ſome " time after in the Rules: And on Febr. 28. fol- " lowing, removed to a Houſe he took in Charter- " Houſe-Yard.

1687. The King reſolv'd to Repeal the Penal Laws and Teſt,

The King was now fully Reſolv'd upon Repealing, if poſſible, the Penal Laws and Teſt, and upon Diſpenſing with them in the mean time. So that Father Petre himſelf was now of the Privy-Council: And moſt of the Engliſh Papiſts were put into Offices Military and Civil; Popiſh Sheriffs, Popiſh Juſtices, without Oaths, or any other Qualification but that of the King's Religion. Some of the Proteſtant Gentlemen, when they found the Laws were to Bind them only, not the Roman Catholicks, they put in for an Exemption aſwel as the others. It was pleaſant enough to read, from Whitehall, March 1. 168⅚. " The Right- " Honourable the Earl of Craven, Cuſtos Rotulorum " for the County of Middleſex, this Day ac- " quainted His Majeſty, That the Bench of " Juſtices of the Peace for the ſaid County, had " deſir'd his Lordſhip (at their General Seſſion " of the Peace) in their Names, humbly to " Beſeech His Majeſty to be Graciouſly Pleaſed " to Grant the ſame Diſpenſation from taking " the Oaths to the Proteſtant Juſtices, He has " been pleas'd to Grant to the Catholicks; but " in ſuch manner as His Majeſty ſhall think fit. " Which Method His Majeſty was pleas'd to " receive very Graciouſly; and was pleas'd to ſay, " He took kindly their putting their Confidence in " Him, and He would certainly take Care of them.— And ſo, by this means, the Adminiſtration of Country Juſtice, and the Magiſtracy in Cities and other Corporations, were put into the worſt of Hands, the moſt Bigotted Papiſts, and the Fierceſt Fanaticks.

And to Diſpenſe with taking any Oaths.

The Beginnings of a Diſpenſing Power,

It is ſaid, " King Charles II. was the firſt " King of England that ever Aim'd at any thing " like a Diſpenſing Power.— In the Year 1662. he was prevail'd upon, for ſome Reaſons of State, to Iſſue out a Proclamation, Diſpenſing with ſome few things that related to the Act of Uniformity, but without the leaſt Regard to Roman Catholicks. And though, in his Speech to the Parliament upon that Occaſion, he did in a manner acknowledge that he had no ſuch Power, by ſaying, That if the Diſſenters would Demean themſelves Peaceably and Modeſtly, He could heartily wiſh He had ſuch a Power of Indulgence to uſe upon Occaſion. Yet the Parliament were ſo jealous of this Innovation, that they Preſented the King with an Addreſs againſt the Proclamation, and plainly told him, That He had no Power to Diſpenſe with the Laws, without an Act of Parliament.— Notwithſtanding this Remonſtrance, King Charles made another Attempt, in the Year 1672. and in a Speech to both Houſes, did mention his Declaration of Indulgence, and acquainted them with the Reaſons that induc'd him to it; telling them withal, how little the Roman Catholicks ſhould be the better for it.— Upon which the Houſe of Commons made an Addreſs to His Majeſty, for Recalling this Declaration; wherein they told him, That in Claiming a Power to Diſpenſe with Penal Laws, His Majeſty had been very much Miſ-inform'd, ſince no ſuch Power was ever Claim'd or Exercis'd by any of his Prede-

Under K. Charles II.

ceſſors; And if it ſhould be admitted, might tend to the Interrupting of the Free Courſe of the Laws, and Altering the Legiſlative Power, which has always been acknowledged to reſide in his Majeſty, and his Two Houſes of Parliament. King Charles was ſo far ſatisfy'd in the Matter contain'd in this Addreſs, That he immediately cancell'd his Declaration of Indulgence, tore off the Seal himſelf, and acquainted both Houſes that he had done ſo; with this further Declaration, which was entred upon Record in the Houſe of Lords, That it ſhould never be drawn into Example or Conſequence.

K. James claims a more Abſolute Diſpenſing Power.

And yet ſuch a Diſpenſing Power, and in a far larger Extent, King James would arrogate to himſelf; though a very Loyal Houſe of Commons had Proteſted againſt it, in their Addreſs about the Popiſh Officers. The King had already carry'd this Point in Scotland with a High Hand; and the Privy-Council there had not only obſequiouſly Submitted to it, but ſeem'd to Rejoice at it. For in a Letter to His Majeſty, 14 Febr. 168⅚ they boaſt to His Majeſty, That His Commands were exactly Obey'd, and that His Royal Proclamation for Liberty of Conſcience was Printed and Publiſh'd; And aſſur'd His Majeſty, That they believ'd his Promiſe, to be the beſt and greateſt Security they could have, That He would Maintain the Church and their Religion as it was Eſtabliſh'd by Law.

This ready Compliance of the Scots, flatter'd the King into Hopes, that his Engliſh Subjects would be as Complaiſant to his Will and Power. So on March 18. His Majeſty having Aſſembled his Privy-Council, did open his Mind to them, by owning, " That He had Reſolv'd to Iſſue out " a Declaration for a General Liberty of Conſcience " to all Perſons, of what Perſuaſion ſoever: " Which He was moved to do, by having ob- " ſerved, That although an Uniformity in Re- " ligious Worſhip had been endeavour'd to be " Eſtabliſh'd within this Kingdom, in the ſucceſ- " ſive Reins of Four of his Predeceſſors, aſſiſted " by their reſpective Parliaments; yet it had " prov'd altogether Ineffectual. That the Reſtraint " upon the Conſciences of Diſſenters, in order " thereunto, had been very Prejudicial to the " Nation, as was ſadly Experienc'd by the horrid " Rebellion in the Time of His Majeſty's Father. " That the many Penal Laws made againſt " Diſſenters, had rather Encreas'd than Leſſen'd the " Numbers of them. And that nothing could more " conduce to the Peace and Quiet of this King- " dom, and the Encreaſe of the Number aſwel " as of the Trade of his Subjects, than an intire " Liberty of Conſcience; it having always been " his Opinion, as moſt ſuitable to the Principles " of Chriſtianity, That no Man ſhould be Per- " ſecuted for Conſcience-ſake: For he thought " Conſcience could not be forced; and that it " could never be the true Intereſt of a King of " England to endeavour to do it.— In purſuance of this Speech, the King preſently after Publiſh'd this Declaration.

The King Declares for Liberty of Conſcience.

His Majeſty's Gracious DECLARATION to all His Loving Subjects, for Liberty of Conſcience.

JAMES R.

Publick Declaration for Liberty of Conſcience.

" IT having pleas'd Almighty GOD, not only " to bring Us to the Imperial Crown of theſe " Kingdoms, through the greateſt Difficulties, but " to Preſerve Us, by a more than ordinary Pro- " vidence, upon the Throne of Our Royal An- " ceſtors; there is Nothing now that We ſo " earneſtly Deſire, as to Eſtabliſh Our Govern- " ment on ſuch a Foundation, as may make Our " Subjects Happy, and Unite them to Us, by

" Inclination

1687. " Inclination aſwel as Duty; Which, We think, " can be done by no Means ſo effectually, as by " Granting to them the Free Exerciſe of their " Religion for the Time to come; and add that " to the perfect Enjoyment of their Property, " which has never been in any Caſe invaded by " Us, ſince Our coming to the Crown: Which " being the Two Things Men value moſt, ſhall " ever be preſerved in theſe Kingdoms, during " Our Reign over them; as the trueſt Methods " of their Peace, and Our Glory. We cannot but " heartily Wiſh, as it will eaſily be believ'd, that " all the People of Our Dominions were Members " of the Catholick Church; yet we humbly " Thank Almighty God, it is, and hath of long " time been Our conſtant Senſe and Opinion, " (which upon divers Occaſions We have Declared) " That Conſcience ought not to be Conſtrained, " nor People Forced, in Matters of meer Religion: " It has ever been directly contrary to Our Incli- " nation, as We think it is to the Intereſt of " Government, which it Deſtroys, by Spoiling " Trade, Depopulating Countries, and Diſcou- " raging Strangers; and finally, that it never " obtain'd the End for which it was employ'd. " And in this We are the more confirm'd by the " Reflections We have made upon the Conduct of " the Four laſt Reigns: For after all the frequent " and preſſing Endeavours that were uſed in each " of them, to reduce this Kingdom to an exact " Conformity in Religion, it is viſible, the Succeſs " has not anſwer'd the Deſign, and that the " Difficulty is Invincible. We therefore, out of " Our Princely Care and Affection unto all Our " Loving Subjects, that they may live at Eaſe and " Quiet, and for the Encreaſe of Trade, and En- " couragement of Strangers, have thought fit, by " Virtue of Our Royal Prerogative, to Iſſue forth " this Our Declaration of Indulgence; making no " doubt of the Concurrence of Our Two Houſes " of Parliament, when We ſhall think it conve- " nient for them to Meet.

" In the Firſt place, We do Declare, That We " will Protect and Maintain Our Arch-Biſhops, " Biſhops and Clergy, and all other Our Subjects " of the Church of England, in the free Exerciſe " of their Religion, as by Law Eſtabliſh'd, and " in the quiet and full Enjoyment of all their " Poſſeſſions, without any Moleſtation or Diſtur- " bance whatſoever.

" We do likewiſe Declare, That it is Our " Royal Will and Pleaſure, That from henceforth, " the Execution of all and all manner of Penal " Laws in Matters Eccleſiaſtical, for not Coming " to Church, or not Receiving the Sacrament, or " for any other Non-conformity to the Religion " Eſtabliſh'd, or for or by reaſon of the Exerciſe " of Religion in any manner whatſoever, be im- " mediately Suſpended; And the further Execu- " tion of the ſaid Penal Laws, and every of them, " is hereby Suſpended.

" And to the End, that by the Liberty hereby " Granted, the Peace and Security of Our Govern- " ment in the Practice thereof, may not be endan- " gered; We have thought fit, and do hereby " ſtraightly Charge and Command all Our Loving " Subjects, That as We do freely give them Leave " to Meet and Serve God after their Own Way " and Manner, be it in Private Houſes, or Places " purpoſely hired or built for that Uſe; ſo that " they take eſpecial Care, That nothing be " Preach'd or Taught amongſt them, which may " any-ways tend to Alienate the Hearts of Our " People from Us or Our Government; And that " their Meetings and Aſſemblies be Peaceably, " Openly and Publickly held, and all Perſons " freely Admitted to them; And that they do " ſignifie and make-known to ſome One or " more of the next Juſtices of the Peace, what " Place or Places they ſet a-part for thoſe 1687. " Uſes.

" And that all Our Subjects may enjoy ſuch " their Religious Aſſemblies with greater Aſſurance " and Protection, We have thought it Requiſite, " and do hereby Command, That no Diſturbance " of any kind be made or given unto them, under " Pain of Our Diſpleaſure, and to be further " Proceeded againſt with the utmoſt Severity.

" And foraſmuch as We are Deſirous to have " the Benefit of the Service of all Our Loving " Subjects, which, by the Law of Nature, is " inſeparably Annexed to, and Inherent in Our " Royal Perſon; And that none of Our Subjects " may, for the future, be under any Diſcourage- " ment or Diſability (who are otherwiſe Well- " inclined, and fit to Serve Us) by reaſon of ſome " Oaths or Teſts, that have been uſually Admi- " niſtred on ſuch Occaſions; We do hereby further " Declare, That it is Our Royal Will and " Pleaſure, That the Oaths commonly call'd, " The Oaths of Supremacy and Allegiance, and alſo " the ſeveral Teſts and Declarations mention'd in " the Acts of Parliament made in the 25th and " 30th Years of the Reign of Our late Royal " Brother, King Charles the Second; ſhall not " at any time hereafter be Required to be Taken, " Declared or Subſcribed by any Perſon or Perſons " whatſoever, who is or ſhall be Employed in " any Office or Place of Truſt, either Civil or " Military, under Us, or in Our Government.

" And We do farther Declare it to be Our " Pleaſure and Intention, from Time to Time " hereafter, to Grant Our Royal Diſpenſations " under Our Great Seal, to all Our Loving Sub- " jects ſo to be Employed, who ſhall not Take " the ſaid Oaths, or Subſcribe or Declare the ſaid " Teſts or Declarations in the above-mention'd " Acts, and every of them.

" And to the End that all Our Loving Sub- " jects may receive and enjoy the full Benefit and " Advantage of Our Gracious Indulgence hereby " intended, and may be Acquitted and Diſcharg'd " from all Pains, Penalties, Forfeitures and " Diſabilities by them, or any of them, Incurred " or Forfeited, or which they ſhall or may at " any time hereafter be liable to, for or by reaſon " of their Non-conformity, or the Exerciſe of " their Religion, and from all Suits, Troubles or " Diſturbances for the ſame; We do hereby give " Our Free and Ample Pardon unto all Non- " conformiſts, Recuſants, and other Our Loving " Subjects, for all Crimes and Things by them " committed or done contrary to the Penal Laws " formerly made, relating to Religion, and the " Profeſſion or Exerciſe thereof. Hereby Declaring, " That this Our Royal Pardon and Indemnity " ſhall be as Good and Effectual, to all Intents " and Purpoſes, as if every individual Perſon had " been therein particularly named, or had par- " ticular Pardons under Our Great-Seal; which " We do likewiſe Declare ſhall, from Time to " Time, be Granted unto any Perſon or Perſons " deſiring the ſame. Willing and Requiring Our " Judges, Juſtices, and other Officers, to take " Notice of, and Obey Our Royal Will and " Pleaſure herein before Declared.

" And although the Freedom and Aſſurance We " have hereby Given, in relation to Religion and " Property, might be ſufficient to remove from " the Minds of Our Loving Subjects all Fears and " Jealouſies in relation to either; yet We have " thought fit further to Declare, That We will " Maintain them in all their Properties and Poſſeſ- " ſions, aſwel of Church and Abbey-Lands, as in " any other their Lands and Properties whatſoever.

Given at Our Court at Whitehall, the Fourth Day of April, 1687. In the Third Year of Our Reign.

The

1687. The Diſſenters naturally fond of this Indulgence.

The Diſſenters were generally fond and proud of this Declaration, and caught greedily at the Bait, without diſcerning the Hook in it. They were not content with a ſilent Acceptance of this Liberty, but were Drawn in to make Inſults of Joy for it; and Preſented Addreſſes of Thanks ſo flattering and ſo fulſom, that ſome of them were thought Offenſive to the very Ears of the King.

Their Addreſſes of Thanks for it.

The Anabaptiſts in and about London began the Officious Courſe of Addreſſing, Apr. 14. telling the King; GREAT SIR! 'Tis the Senſe of this Invaluable Favour and Benefit, derived to us from Your Royal Clemency, that compels us once more to Proſtrate our ſelves at Your Majeſty's Feet, with the tender of our moſt humble Thanks for Peace and Liberty. —— Such Demonſtrations as theſe, of Your Majeſty's Tender Care of the Proſperity and Quiet of your Peaceable Subjects, will Abſolutely Command the Hearts of them All, &c.

Then came the Quakers, and ſaid; May it Pleaſe the KING! Though we are not the firſt in this Way, yet we hope we are not the leaſt ſenſible of the great Favours we are come to Preſent the King our Humble, Open and Hearty Thanks for.—— We Rejoyce to ſee the Day, that a King of England ſhould from His Royal Seat ſo Univerſally Aſſert this Royal Principle, "That Conſcience ought not to be "Reſtrain'd, nor People Forc'd, for Matters of "meer Religion, &c.

The Independents follow'd with a like Harangue; SIR! The great Calamity we have been a long time under, through the ſevere Execution of the Laws in Matters of Religion, has made us deeply ſenſible of Your Majeſty's Princely Clemency towards us Your Diſſenting Subjects; eſpecially, ſince in the Indulgence vouchſafed, there are no Limitations hindring the Enjoyment of it with a good Conſcience, &c.

The Presbyterians came not far behind the reſt, and made their Grateful Acknowledgments, "That His Majeſty's Princely Pity had now "Reſcued them from their long Sufferings; and "by the ſame Royal Act, had Reſtored GOD to "the Empire over Conſcience; and Publiſh'd to "the World his Royal Chriſtian Judgment, "That Conſcience may not be Forced; And his "Reſolution, That ſuch Force ſhall not be attempted "in His Majeſty's Kingdoms, during His Majeſty's "Reign; Which they therefore Pray may be "long over them, &c.

And the Papiſts, as it was very proper, fell in with them; and in an Addreſs of May 28. They teſtified their Thankfulneſs to Almighty God, and His Majeſty, for ſo Happy an Expedient for the Eaſe and Comfort of all his Subjects: And though they were thought not to Deſire the leaſt Eaſe or Good to thoſe that Differ'd from them in Opinion; yet they did not only Rejoyce in the Univerſality of His Majeſty's Bounty, but that it flow'd from a Prince of their own Religion.

A late Author obſerves, "The Presbyterians, "Quakers, Anabaptiſts, and other Diſſenters, had "lately been ſo Haraſs'd and Perſecuted, that 'tis "no wonder they were ſo Eager to lay hold of "this Opportunity of ſheltring themſelves from "Oppreſſion. And indeed, 'tis Natural for People "that labour under violent and racking Pains, "greedily and thankfully to receive any Reme-"dies that are offer'd them for preſent Eaſe, "without conſidering whether it is a Friendly "or Unfriendly Hand that adminiſters the "quieting Potion: But then again, aſſoon as "the treacherous Effects of a Pulliative Medi-"cine are over, and the old Diſtemper returns "with redoubled Fury, Men are apt to Curſe the "Authors of their additional Torments, and have "recourſe to more effectual, though perhaps more "violent Remedies. Thus the Presbyterians being releaſed from their Priſons, and allow'd the "Free and Publick Exerciſe of their Religion, "thought no Praiſes too great to expreſs their "Gratitude, no Bleſſings ſufficient to Reward their "Deliverer and Benefactor: Nay, ſo extrava-"gantly Thankful were ſome of them, in their "Addreſſes, as to fill them with Acknowledgments "that nearly border'd upon Blaſphemy. 1687.

Diſſenters, by degrees, perceiv'd the ill Deſign,

"But at laſt they open'd their Eyes: They "perceiv'd the Venom that lay hid in thoſe "Indulgent Declarations; and plainly ſaw, that "though the King had Granted a General Tolera-"tion to his Subjects, yet the Papiſts only were "deſign'd to receive the Benefit of it; and that "all the Places of Truſt, both Civil and Military, "wou'd ſoon devolve into their Hands. And as "the ſudden Favours we receive from an inveterate "Enemy, are always ſuſpicious; they likewiſe "diſcover'd, that the reaſon of this ſeeming-"Kindneſs of the Court, was only, becauſe their "Efforts to Engage the Church of England in "their ſiniſtruous Deſigns had prov'd ineffectual. "Then reflecting on this fundamental Maxim of "the Roman Catholicks, That they are not bound "to keep Faith with Hereticks, but may uſe all "manner of Equivocations and Retractations, "either to Convert or Exterminate them; — leſt "they ſhould be Acceſſory to their own Ruine, "they held private Conferences with the Epiſcopal "Party, about the moſt proper Means to diſpel "the Storm that threatn'd them. To this End, "a Reconcilement in Point of Religious Worſhip, "was chiefly thought neceſſary: And ſome "Presbyterian Teachers preſt it ſo much in their "Pulpits, that the Diſſenters of Canterbury, "Rocheſter, and ſome other Places in Kent, De-"clared, they were ready to Join in Communion "with the Church of England.

And began to come to a better-underſtanding with the Church of England.

"On the other hand, The Church of England "ſaw preſently through this Jeſuitical Contrivance, "and dreaded the Conſequences: They look'd upon "it as a Juſt Judgment from Heaven, for the "Rigour they had exercis'd againſt the Non-"conformiſts in King Charles IId's time; they began "to blame the Over-ſtrain'd and Indiſcreet Zeal "of ſome of their Ambitious Prelates, which had "reduc'd the Diſſenters, both in England, Scotland "and Ireland, to the neceſſity not only of Accepting "of, but even of Suing for this General Indulgence. "In ſhort, They were now made ſenſible, that Thoſe "who put them upon Executing the Penal Laws, "did but make them Properties to hinder the "Diſſenters from Uniting with the Church of "England, and play them againſt One Another; "that their Diviſions might add Strength to the "Papiſts, to Deſtroy them Both. Thus, by the "Liberty of Conſcience, King James loſt his Epiſcopal "Party, who had ſet the Crown upon his Head, "without winning the Presbyterians, that had en-"deavour'd to Exclude Him. And both Church-"men and Diſſenters perceiving their Common "Danger, forgot, at leaſt ſuſpended their old "Animoſities, and join'd Counſel, to prevent "their imminent Ruine.

Behaviour of the Members of the Church of England.

The beſt Apology for the Moderate *Non-*Diſſenters Apology for themſelves.
conformiſts in the Uſe of this Liberty, is thus given by an Author of their own: "The Diſſenters "were not ſo fond of Hard-Uſage, as to refuſe "a Liberty ſo freely offer'd them; nor did they "think it Good-Manners to enquire too narrowly "how that Indulgence came about, ſo long as "they were ſhelter'd by it from Oppreſſion. "A Letter of Advice was hereupon Publiſh'd, by "that Accompliſh'd States-man the Marqueſs of "Halifax, though without his Name. The Letter "was written with a great deal of Artifice, with "deſign to inſinuate a two-fold Caution; That 1687. " their New Friends were to be Suſpected; And, " it would neither be Chriſtianity nor Prudence " to hazard the Publick Safety, either by deſire " of Eaſe, or Revenge. —— His Cautions were " regarded by the Wiſer part of them, notwith- " ſtanding the Uncertainty with what Deſign this " Application was made to them. As Thankful " as they were for their Eaſe and Liberty, they " were yet fearful of the Iſſue; neither can any " Number of them, of any Conſideration, be " charg'd with hazarding the Publick Safety, by " falling in with the Meaſures of the Court, of " which they had as great a Dread as their " Neighbours. And as for Revenge, though they " had a fair Opportunity for it, yet could they " not think it a thing deſirable, either as Men, or " as Chriſtians. If they Over-did it in their " Addreſſes, they thought the High-Church Party, " who had been ſo us'd to topping Flights of " Compliment, when returning Thanks for Diſ- " ſolving one of the beſt of Parliaments, had little " reaſon to Reflect on them. But they were not " many that cou'd be Charg'd: Among the reſt, " Mr. Baxter had no Concern in Addreſſing; but " ſet himſelf at Rutland-Houſe in Charter-Houſe- " Yard, where he Exercis'd his Miniſtry, in Con- " junction with Mr. Sylveſter, to make a Peaceable " Improvement of the Liberty afforded, ſo as to " do all the Good he could, without Offence to " any: The like did his Brethren in other Places. " And therefore they waited in Expectation of " ſeeing the Effects of the Marqueſs's Declaration " on behalf of the Church Party; That all their " former Haughtineſs (they are his own Words) " towards the Diſſenters, was for ever extinguiſht; " and that the Spirit of Perſecution was turn'd into " a Spirit of Peace, Charity and Condeſcenſion: " That the Church of England was Convinc'd of " its Error, in being Severe to them; and all " Thinking Men were come to a General Agree- " ment, No more to Cut our ſelves off from the " Proteſtants Abroad, but rather Inlarge the Foun- " dations upon which we are to Build our Defences " againſt the Common Enemy.

Deſigns of getting a Parliament to Repeal the Penal Laws and Teſt,

And yet, after all, this Declaration, however founded on an Arbitrary Diſpenſing Power, had kept things ſoft and ſmooth enough, if the King had gone no farther. But it ſoon appear'd, that this Liberty was to ſerve and facilitate a greater Deſign, that of Compounding a Parliament to Take off the Penal Laws and Teſt. For this Purpoſe, the Magiſtrates, Officers, and Private Gentlemen were meanly Cloſeted by the King himſelf, and were Continued in, or Diſmiſs'd from their Places, accordingly as they ſhewed a ſordid Compliance, or a generous Reluctancy to the private Teſt put by the King. Nay, the Judges, in their Circuit, had ſecret Inſtructions from Above, to feel the Pulſe of the Gentry Com- miſſion'd in the Militia, or in the Peace; and where they found any Averſe to the King's Intention, to Turn them out of all Offices and Employments. And as if it were a Judgment on the King, to court an Oppoſition to this Project of Repealing the Laws, He muſt needs attempt to Invite the Prince and Princeſs of Orange to join in it by their Aſſent and Approbation.

And to Draw in the Approbation of the Prince and Princeſs of Orange,

On May 20. the Heer Van-Dyckvelt, an Agent from the Dutch, had his Audience of Leave of the King and Queen. The King told him, That He doubted not but that he ſhould have the Prince of Orange's Approbation for Taking off the Penal Laws, and Teſt; and would have him acquaint the Prince therewith. —— Dyckvelt replied, That he was bound to acquaint the Prince with His Majeſty's Command, and would do ſo; but he underſtood ſo much of the Prince's Senſe, that He was bold to ſay, His Highneſs was not of that Opinion. —— The King would not be ſatisfy'd with the freedom of Dyckvelt's Reply, but reſolv'd to ſolicite the Prince and Princeſs with the utmoſt Importunity: For they were then Preſumptive-Heirs of the Crown, and their Concurrence would look like a Sanction to the Law, of Repeal at Home and Abroad, to the preſent Age, and to Poſterity. But however, the King would not directly Write upon this Subject to Their Highneſſes, but he employ'd Mr. James Stewart a Lawyer (whom He had Pardon'd, and receiv'd into Favour, after a long Exile, and who pretended to be intimately Acquainted with Monſ. Fagel the Penſionary of Holland) in whom the Prince repos'd an intire Confidence. So Mr. Stewart Wrote to him on this Subject. But the Prince and Princeſs were ſo cautious in meddling with ſo Nice an Affair, and ſo unwilling to allow Monſ. Fagel to return an Anſwer, which they knew would not be Pleaſing; that Mr. Stewart was ſeveral times obliged to repeat his preſſing Requeſts, owning in his Letters, That he Wrote them by the King's immediate Direction. 1687.

By means of Monſ. Fagel.

Upon this Demurr, the Papiſts induſtriouſly ſpread it abroad, That the Prince and Princeſs of Orange had fully Agreed with His Majeſty's Deſign of Taking off the Penal Laws, and Teſt: And the Marqueſs of Albyville (the King's Miniſter in Holland) ſent over ſeveral Letters, intimating, That the Prince had told him the ſame thing; and the chief of theſe Letters was alſo made publick.

And therefore, to diſſipate theſe falſe Reports, Their Highneſſes were obliged to direct Monſieur Fagel to Write to Mr. Stewart to this Effect: —

M. Fagel's Anſwer.

" That ſince he earneſtly deſired to know of " him, what the Prince and Princeſs of Orange's " Thoughts were, concerning the Repeal of the " Penal Laws, and more particularly of the Teſt; " he would deal very plainly with him in that " Matter, ſince Mr. Stewart had ſaid, in his " Letters, That they were Written by the King's " Knowledge and Allowance. — Firſt, He moſt " poſitively aſſured him, That their Highneſſes " had often Declared, as they did in a particular " manner to the Marqueſs of Albyville, That it " was their Opinion, That no Chriſtian ought to " be Puniſh'd for his Conſcience, or be ill Uſed, " becauſe he Differed from the Publick and " Eſtabliſh'd Religion; and therefore, That They " could Conſent, that the Roman Catholicks in " England, Scotland and Ireland ſhould be ſuffer'd " to Continue in their Religion, with as much " Liberty as Allowed them in the United Provinces, " where it could not be denied but that they " enjoy'd full Liberty of Conſcienc. And as to " the Nonconformiſts, Their Highneſſes did not " only Conſent, but heartily Approved of their " having an Intire Liberty of Conſcience for the " Exerciſe of their Religion, without any Trouble, " Hindrance or Moleſtation upon that ſcore. " And, That Their Highneſſes were ready to " Concurr at any time with His Majeſty, in the " Settling and Confirming that Liberty, and to " Protect and Maintain it, as far as in Them " lay, according to the Language and uſual Form " of Treaties, and likewiſe to Confirm it with " Their Guarantee, as Mr. Stewart had mention'd " in his Letters. And if His Majeſty thought fit " to have Their Concurrence in Repealing the " Penal Laws, Their Highneſſes were ready to give " it; Provided thoſe Laws ſtill remained in their " full Rigour, whereby the Roman Catholicks were " ſhut out of both Houſes of Parliament, and " out of all Publick Employments both Civil " and Military; as likewiſe all thoſe other Laws " which Confirmed the Proteſtant Religion, and " Secured it againſt all the Attempts of the " Roman Catholicks: — But Their Highneſſes could " by no means Agree to the Repeal of the Teſt, 1687. " and thoſe other Penal Laws laſt mention'd, that " tended to the Security of the Proteſtant Religion; " ſince the Roman Catholicks received no other " Prejudices from theſe, than their being Excluded " from Parliament, and Publick Employments; " and that, by them, the Proteſtant Religion was " ſheltred from all the Deſigns of the Roman Catho- " licks againſt it, or againſt the Publick Safety. " That neither the Teſt, nor thoſe other Laws, " could be ſaid to carry any Severity in them " againſt the Roman Catholicks, upon Account of " their Conſciences, being only Proviſions quali- " fying Men to be Members of Parliament, or to " be capable of bearing Office; by which they " muſt Declare before God and Men, that they " were for the Proteſtant Religion. So that indeed, " all this amounted to no more than a Securing " of the Proteſtant Religion from any Prejudice " it might receive from the Roman Catholicks.

" and

" More than this, (added the Penſionary) " Their Highneſſes have thought, and do ſtill " think, it ought not to be ask'd or expected from " them; ſince, by that Means, the Roman Catholicks " and their Poſterity would be for ever ſecured " in their Perſons or Eſtates, or in the Exerciſe of " their Religion: And they thought the Roman " Catholicks ought to be ſatisfy'd with that, and " and not diſturb the Quiet of the Kingdom, " under pretence, that they were ſhut out of Par- " liament and Employments; and becauſe thoſe " Laws wherein the Security of the Proteſtant " Religion chiefly conſiſted, were not Repealed, by " which they might be put into a Condition to " Overturn it.

" As to what Mr. Stewart had writ, That the " Roman Catholicks in Holland were not excluded " from Employments and Places of Truſt; he " was groſly miſtaken: For their Laws were " expreſs in that Point, excluding Roman Catho- " licks by Name from all Share in the Govern- " ment, and from all Employments whatſoever. " It was true, he did not know any expreſs Law " that excluded them from Military Employ- " ments: That had been hard indeed; ſince, in " the firſt Foundation of their State, they joined " with them in aſſerting the Publick Liberty, " and did them eminent Service during the " Wars; therefore they were not excluded from " Military Employments: For the Publick Safety " was no ways endangered by that, both becauſe " the Numbers of thoſe of their Religion that " ſerved in their Troops were but ſmall, and be- " cauſe the States would eaſily prevent any Incon- " veniency that might ariſe from thence; which " could not have been ſo eaſily done, if the Roman " Catholicks had been admitted to a Share in the " Government, and in the Policy and Juſtice of " their State.

He ſaid, " He was aſſured of this Truth, and " could give undeniable Proof of it, That Their " Highneſſes deſired nothing more earneſtly, than " that His Majeſty might Reign happily, and in " a perfect good Intelligence with his Subjects; " And that his Subjects, being perſuaded of His " Majeſty's Paternal Affection towards them, " might upon all Occaſions make ſuitable Returns " to his Goodneſs, by all poſſible Demonſtrations " of Duty and Loyalty: But Their Highneſſes " were convinced in their Conſciences, That both " the Proteſtant Religion, and the Safety of the " Nation, would be expoſed to moſt certain Dan- " gers, if either the Teſts, or thoſe other Penal " Laws, of which he had made frequent mention, " ſhould be Repealed; Therefore They could not " Concurr with His Majeſty in thoſe Matters; for " They believ'd they ſhould have much to Anſwer " to God, if the Conſideration of any preſent " Advantage ſhould induce them to Conſent to " Things which they believ'd would not only " be very Dangerous, but Prejudicial to the 1687. " Proteſtant Religion.

" Laſtly, (he Concluded,) That Their High- " neſſes ever had, and were reſolved ever to pre- " ſerve a profound Submiſſion to His Majeſty, as " they thought themſelves in Duty bound by the " Laws of God, and Nature: But ſince the Matter " that was then in hand related not to the making " of New Laws, but to the total Abrogation of " thoſe already made both by King and Parlia- " ment; Their Highneſſes did not ſee how it " could be expected of Them, that They ſhould " Conſent to ſuch an Abrogation, to which they " had ſo juſt an Averſion; as being a thing that " was contrary to all the Laws and Cuſtoms of " all Chriſtian States, whether Proteſtants or " Papiſts, who admitted none to a Share in the " Government, or Publick Employments, but " thoſe who profeſs'd the Publick and Eſtabliſh'd " Religion, and endeavour'd to ſecure it againſt " all Attempts whatſoever.

This Letter was communicated by Stewart to the Earls of Sunderland and Melfort, and even to King James himſelf; and he alſo let Monſieur Fagel know as much, without communicating to him whether the Court deſired it ſhould be kept ſecret, or made publick. In the mean time, it was Printed in England; and a Pamphlet having been ſoon after Publiſh'd in England, Intituled, Parliamentum Pacificum; or, The Happy Union of King and People in an Healing Parliament, &c. wherein it was affirmed, That the Letter written to Mr. Stewart, was not only Suppoſititious, but alſo, that the Author miſ-repreſented the Sentiments of the Prince and Princeſs of Orange, concerning the Repeal of the Teſt, and Penal Laws. Monſieur Fagel thought himſelf oblig'd to prevent the World's being Impos'd upon by that Impoſture, and to that Purpoſe he not only Printed ſome of Mr. Stewart's Letters, but Wrote alſo to the Marqueſs of Allyville the following Letter; which he likewiſe cauſed to be made Publick.

Monſieur Fagel's Letter to M. d'Allyville.

My Lord;

" WE have ſeen here a Pamphlet in Engliſh, " call'd Parliamentum Pacificum, Printed " this Year in London, with the Earl of Sunder- " land's Allowance; of which I cannot forbear " Complaining, how averſe ſoever I am to make " Expoſtulations: The Author of it maintains, " That the Letter I wrote on the 4th of November " laſt, relating to the Teſt, and Penal Laws, is " either a Forgery, or that I wrote it without " the Order of Their Highneſſes, or at leaſt of " Her Royal Highneſs. Not that I pretend to " enter into the Particulars of that Pamphlet, " with deſign to Confute any thing in it, being " little agreeable to my Character, and Inclination " to meddle with Publick Diſputes of that nature. " But you muſt not think it ſtrange, if I put " you in mind, That it was not of my own ſelf " that I engaged in Writing the ſaid Letter, but " rather, after I had been powerfully preſſed to it " for ſome Months together, from or in the Name " of His Majeſty; and when at laſt I was pre- " vailed upon to Write it, I did it with all the " Precaution which ſo Nice an Affair ſeem'd to " require; inſomuch, that in all that Letter, " there is not one Period which I ought to fear " might Diſpleaſe His Majeſty: Nevertheleſs, " I ſee that in a Writing Printed by Publick Au- " thority, that Letter is branded as Suppoſititious; " although His Majeſty, and even all the Court, " know the Truth of the Buſineſs: And beſides " that, I have Owned it here to Your Lordſhip " as the King's Miniſter, and to all thoſe that " have ſpoken to me of it. But what is moſt 1687. " Injurious to me, is, That I am Charg'd therein " with having abuſed Their Highneſſes Names, " particularly that of Her Royal Highneſs; as " if I were a Perſon capable of ſo infamous a " Cheat, and of a Falſity ſo unworthy of all " Men of Honour, and that too in an Affair of " the higheſt Importance.

" You will not take it ill, My LORD, if in " this Matter I referr my ſelf to the Knowledge " you have of it, and to what you have often " told me your ſelf, to wit, That Their Highneſſes, " and in particular Her Royal Highneſs the " Princeſs had declared her Thoughts to you " concerning the Teſt, and Penal Laws, in the " ſame manner as I had repreſented them; That " you had acquainted the Court with it a long " time before I wrote my Letter; And that you " could not conceive what Reaſon there was for " preſſing me to Write to Mr. Stewart. I do " aſſure you, That I would not be much offended " at that Pamphlet, nor at any other of that " nature, having already foreſeen I ſhould not " fail being attackt on that ſcore, wherein I " could eaſily have allow'd every-body the liberty " of pleaſing themſelves; but that Writing being " Publiſh'd under the Authority of the Preſident " of the King's Council, and Secretary of State, " my Honour is concern'd to Clear my ſelf to " the World, of ſo unjuſt an Accuſation as is " laid to my Charge.

" Therefore I thought I could not do better " than to Addreſs my ſelf to you, My LORD, as " being His Majeſty's Miniſter, and a Perſon " perfectly-well Inform'd of the Buſineſs in " Queſtion, deſiring you wou'd be pleas'd to Write " to the Earl of Sunderland about it. I believe " he has neither ſeen nor examin'd the Paſſages " of that Pamphlet which reflected upon me; " and I am alſo perſuaded, that if he had, he " would not have Signed the Printing Allowance: " For the ſaid Earl of Sunderland knows aſwel as " any-body, that the ſaid Letter of Mr. Stewart " is no Suppoſition, ſince he has ſeen the Letter " it ſelf, or the Engliſh Copy of it, which I had " ſent along with it. He ought alſo to be no leſs " aſſured by your Letters, and by what you " have related by Word-of-Mouth, that Their " Highneſſes, and particularly Her Royal High- " neſs the Princeſs, have ſeveral times told you " their Opinion concerning the Teſt, and Penal " Laws, as I have expreſs'd it in my Letter to " Mr. Stewart. Therefore I do promiſe my ſelf " from the Juſtice and Goodneſs of the Earl of " Sunderland, that he will take Care that the " Allowance which was ſurreptitiouſly gained for " the Printing of that Pamphlet may be recall'd, " and the Author of ſo manifeſt and outragious " a Calumny brought to Condign Puniſhment. " Neither will I conceal from you, that I deſign " to Publiſh what has paſſed in this Affair, aſwel " as what I now take the liberty to Write to " you; not with deſign to enage any farther in " the Main Buſineſs, much leſs to gratifie any- " body, but ſolely to ſhelter my Honour from ſo " falſe and heinous an Imputation.

Some old Laws revived and executed.

The King was not more ready to Annull ſome Laws of preſent force and neceſſity, than he was to Reinforce others that were obſolete and dead, and to Revive them with a ſharper Edge than had been at firſt ſet upon them. Hence, becauſe there was found an old Act of Parliament, that made it Death for any Soldier taking Pay in the King's Service, in his Wars Abroad, or on the High Sea, or in Scotland, to Deſert from his Colours; the King would have this Law executed in time of perfect Peace, upon the Soldiers in his Standing Army, for a Terror to Hounſlow-Heath. And becauſe the Worthy Recorder of London, Sir John Holt, would not expound that Law according to the King's Deſire, he was put out of his Place; and ſo was Sir Edward Herbert from being Chief-Juſtice of the King's-Bench, to make way for Sir Robert Wright, who ventur'd to Hang two or three poor Soldiers upon that anti-quated Statute, that, if in full Force and Virtue, would not have come up to the preſent Caſe. 1687. Sir J. Holt turn'd out.

Some New Changes in Weſtminſter-Hall.

And though the Courts in Weſtminſter-Hall had been before ſufficiently purg'd of the ſtout Old Lawyers, and fill'd with New Men of Weakneſs or Wilful Compliance; yet a further Regulation was ſtill to be made, that the King and his Judges might be perfectly Unanimous. So in the begin-ning of this Eaſter-Term, His Majeſty was pleas'd to Conſtitute Sir Robert Wright (one of the Juſtices of the King's-Bench) Lord Chief-Juſtice of the Common-Pleas; and Mr. Juſtice Powell was there-upon removed from the Court of Common-Pleas to the King's-Bench; and Mr. Baron Milton from the Exchequer to the Common-Pleas. And in the ſame Term, to ſerve the Deſign before-mention'd, His Majeſty thought fit to remove the Lord Chief-Juſtice Herbert to the Common-Pleas, and the Lord Chief-Juſtice Wright to the King's-Bench: And Sir Francis Wythens (one of the Juſtices of the King's-Bench) had his Quietus. On Apr. 28. Sir Richard Allibone (one of His Majeſty's Councel at Law) an angry Papiſt, and Charles Ingleby Eſq; both of Grays-Inn, were Call'd by the King's Writ to the State and Degree of Serjeants at Law, and gave Rings with this triumphant Motto, A Rege Lex: And the ſame Day, Sir Richard Allibone was Sworn before my Lord Chancellor, One of the Juſtices of the King's-Bench; and Mr. Serjeant Powell One of the Barons of the Exchequer. So that Legal Innocence might be now a Crime; and what was Treaſon by the Law, might be now a Merit and a Reward. Popiſh Judges.

A Nuntio ſent from the Pope.

And therefore, as an Ambaſſador had been the laſt Year humbly ſent to Rome; ſo a Nuntio from thence was this Year to be glorioufly re-ceived. Signior Ferdinando d'Adda, Domeſtick Prelate and Aſſiſtant to the Pope, who was the Queen's Favourite, had follow'd the Engliſh Court ever ſince the King's Acceſſion to the Crown: He had been privately Commiſſion'd to be Nuntio of the Apoſtolick See; and to fill up the Character with more Pomp and Luſtre, he had been Con-ſecrated Arch-Biſhop of Amaſia, in the Royal Chapel at Whitehall, by Biſhop Layburn Vicar-Apoſtolical in England, aſſiſted by two other Iriſh Biſhops. He was now to make his Publick Entry as a Foreign Miniſter, and the Government it ſelf was to glory in this Account of it: " The 3d of " July, Monſignior Ferdinand d'Adda, Arch-Biſhop " of Amaſia, Domeſtick Prelate and Aſſiſtant to " His Holineſs the Pope, and Apoſtolick Nuntio, " had Publick Audience of Their Majeſties at " Windſor, being Conducted by His Grace the " Duke of Grafton, and Sir Charles Cotterell One " of the Maſters of the Ceremonies, in one of " His Majeſty's Coaches, with all the Honours " and Ceremonies uſually Obſerved on the like " Occaſions. And on July 5th, he had Audience " of the Queen-Dowager at Somerſet-Houſe, being " Conducted by the ſaid Sir Charles Cotterell in " one of Her Majeſty's Coaches, in the uſual " Manner. Account of his Pub-lick Entry.

There having been no ſuch Sight in England for about an Hundred and fifty Years before, the Concourſe of People was extraordinary great upon this Occaſion: Yet their Surprize at the Pomp and Magnificence of this Solemnity was much leſs, than their Indignation to behold a Repreſentative of the Pope in all his Pontificalibus, preceded by a Croſs-Bearer, and attended by a flock of Prieſts and Monks in the Habits of their reſpective Orders. This Ceremony occaſion'd the 1687. Duke of Somerſet refuſes to Attend.

Diſgrace

Diſgrace of that Illuſtrious Patriot the Duke of Somerſet, Firſt Gentleman of the Bed-Chamber to the King: For His Grace being then in Waiting, His Majeſty Ordered him to Attend the Nuntio to his Audience; but he deſir'd His Majeſty to Excuſe him from Countenancing any Act which the Laws of the Land made Criminal. The King reiterated his Orders; and the Duke was conſtant in his Refuſal of them: Upon which His Majeſty told him in a Paſſion, "That he "would trouble him no more with any Com- "mands, and therefore expected he ſhould Reſign "his Places of Gentleman of the Bed-Chamber, "and Colonel of Dragoons." The Duke immediately did ſo, without the leaſt Concern; as being abundantly ſatisfy'd that he kept his Conſcience and his Honour, while he loſt nothing but his Places. And yet a Biſhop of the Church (or rather of the Court) is ſaid to have made no ſcruple in this Matter, but to have made up part of the Nuntio's Train, as if he had been One of the Roman Retinue: But however, his Lordſhip's Coach-man was a ſtout Proteſtant, and would not Drive his Maſter that Way; and if the Man Suffer'd, no doubt he meant it for his Maſter's Honour.

A Proteſtant Coach-man.

The Nuntio wanted an Opportunity to Appear Publickly in London; and therefore it was contriv'd, that he ſhould be Invited to come with the King himſelf to Dine at Guildhall on the Lord-Mayor's-Day: And he was accordingly Receiv'd at Temple-Bar by Sir John Parſons and Sir Baſil Firebraſs the Two Sheriffs; and was Complimented by Sir John Shorter the Lord-Mayor. And when a Publick Account was given of the City Entertainment, there was ſpecial Care taken to expreſs, that among the Foreign Miniſters who were Invited, there were Preſent the Pope's Nuntio, and the French Ambaſſador.

The Nuntio Entertain'd by the City.

Character of him.

Some were of Opinion, That the Nuntio was an Inſtrument of puſhing things to the fatal Extremities that were now upon the Anvil. Others again ſay, "Tis certain that he had a "greater ſhare in the Intrigues of the Ruelle, than "in thoſe of the Cabinet, and had too much Senſe "to approve of all the Meaſures that were taken: "And therefore he often deſir'd to be Recall'd, "leſt he ſhould be thought to have a Hand in "them.

The Parliament Prorogued, becauſe the Members would not Comply,

As to the Parliament now in being, the King intended they ſhould Sit again, if, by Cloſeting and Tampering with Favours and Diſgraces, he could have bought up a Majority to be his Servants and Creatures in Repealing the Penal Laws, and Teſt: But when His Majeſty ſaw that by all his Endeavours, he made but a ſlow Progreſs in Captivating the Judgment and Conſcience of the Chief Members of Both Houſes, he reſolv'd to take a longer Time. So when on Apr. 28. the Parliament Met at Weſtminſter, in purſuance of their laſt Prorogation; it was, by Commiſſion, further Prorogued till the 22d of November. But before that Day, by Proclamation Given at Hampton-Court, Jul. 2. The King's Moſt Excellent Majeſty, for weighty Reaſons, hath thought fit to Diſſolve this preſent Parliament; And doth, by this His Royal Proclamation, Diſſolve the ſame accordingly. Nor was any Promiſe made of a New Parliament: This was to be lodg'd in the King's Breaſt, and was to depend on the Succeſs of the ſame Intrigues. Unleſs a Parliament could be form'd to Confirm and Sanctifie the Meaſures of the Court, it could be to no purpoſe but to break, or at leaſt to retard thoſe Meaſures. And therefore ſome of the Miniſtry were againſt running the hazard of referring their Proceedings to the Approbation of the Two Houſes; and judg'd it more expedient, to truſt to a Set of Judges, and a Standing Army. "Yet, (ſays a late Writer) as Men who follow "wrong Meaſures, are always fluctuating in their "Counſels, it was not long before they conſider'd, "that the Superſtructure they were erecting upon "an Illegal Foundation, would tumble to the "Ground aſſoon as the Legal Power ſhould take "place: That the Army and Fleet encreaſing "every Day, the King's Neceſſities would at laſt "inevitably oblige him to Call a Parliament: "And that the longer the Meetings of that Auguſt "Aſſembly were put off, and their Authority "diſregarded, the more fatal to the King's Deſign "their Reſolutions would prove." Theſe Reflexions made the Popiſh Party ſenſible of the neceſſity of Calling a Parliament; and therefore all the Methods and Artifices imaginable were uſed to procure ſuch a Lower Houſe, as would Confirm all the King's Proceedings. In order to that, Writs of Quo Warranto were again Iſſued out againſt Corporations; and the Magiſtrates thereof terrify'd with His Majeſty's Diſpleaſure, if they dared to inſiſt upon their Legal Rights, and contend with Him at Law. Beſides that, Judges were prepared to Over-rule the Pleas of all ſuch Cities and Towns as would ſtand upon their Franchiſes and Privileges; witneſs the Cities of Oxford and Wincheſter, which were declar'd to be Diſſolv'd at the King's Pleaſure. In ſhort, by a Decree of the Court of King's-Bench, moſt Cities and Boroughs were Ordered to Surrender their Charters; which reduced them to that Condition, as to have no Magiſtrates or Officers but at His Majeſty's Will.

1687.

And then Diſſolv'd;

And the King to Reign without a Parliament.

Servile Promiſes of Chuſing Members grateful to the Court.

To Carry on this Servile Humour, many of the Officious Addreſſes did expreſly promiſe to Chuſe ſuch Repreſentatives as ſhould be ready to Obey the King's Deſire. Thus the Diſſenters in the County of Oxon: — When Your Sacred Majeſty, in Your great Wiſdom, ſhall think fit to Summon another Parliament, we will uſe our utmoſt Endeavours to Elect ſuch Perſons as may Abrogate and Abeliſh ſuch Laws as have impeded the free Exerciſe of Religion. And even the High-Sheriff, with the Grand-Jury and Juſtices of the Peace for the County of Hereford, were ſo Packt together, as to expreſs their great Hopes, That whenever Your Majeſty ſhall pleaſe to Call another Parliament, All Places will Concurr to Elect ſuch Members as will be Ready and Diſpoſed to Second your Clement Inclinations to Aboliſh the Teſt, and Penal Laws.

The King takes a Progreſs.

It was to ſolicite this Cauſe, that the King took a large Progreſs this Summer; and One of his cloſeſt Attendants was his Loyal Friend William Penn the Reputed Quaker. His Majeſty's Intention in this Journey, was given out to be, the taking a View of his Ports and Harbours, and particularly of the Haven and Fortifications of Portſmouth; but the ſecret Deſign was plainly, to Influence and Prepare the Electors of every Corporation through which he paſſed. And as the Preſence of a Sovereign, ſtrikes an Awful and Commanding Veneration on the Minds of thoſe who ſeldom approach Majeſty; it can hardly be expreſs'd with what Joyful Acclamations He was receiv'd, and what Dutiful Acknowledgments were paid him at Portſmouth, Bath, Gloceſter, Worceſter, Ludlow, Shrewsbury, Cheſter, Newport, Lichfield, Coventry, Banbury, Briſtol and Wincheſter. The Univerſity of Oxford diſtinguiſht themſelves upon this Occaſion, endeavouring by all poſſible Demonſtrations of Duty and Reſpect to remove the King's Prepoſſeſſions againſt them: But all their Elegance of Speeches and Entertainment were not able to atone for the Oppoſition given to the King's Command at Magdalen-College; ſo that the King left Oxford very much Diſſatisfied.

After His Majeſty's Return from this elaborate Progreſs, he was reſolv'd to make a more Open Declaration, That He would have the Penal Laws Repealed; And that He would endure None in any any Place of Authority, but ſuch as would Concurr with Him. This Reſolution He publickly Declar'd in Council at Whitehall, on Sunday Dec. 11. and then ſent it abroad by Authority, in theſe words: "His Majeſty having by His Gracious Declaration of the 4th Day of April laſt, "Granted a Liberty of Conſcience to all his Subjects; And Reſolving not only to Maintain the "ſame, but to uſe His utmoſt Endeavours that "it may Paſs into a Law, and become an "Eſtabliſh'd Security to After-Ages; hath thought "fit to review the Liſts of the Deputy-Lieutenants "and Juſtices of the Peace in the ſeveral Counties, that thoſe may be Continued, who ſhall be "ready to contribute what in them lies towards "the Accompliſhment of ſo good and neceſſary a "Work; And ſuch Others added to them, from "Whom His Majeſty may reaſonably expect the "like Concurrence and Aſſiſtance.

Ways and Arts to Influence Elections.

The Lord Lieutenants, upon this New Model, were Order'd by the King, to Summon, in His Name, the Chief Officers and Gentlemen in their reſpective Counties, and to lay the Caſe before them, ſo as to flatter or terrifie them out of their Freedom in the Election of Parliament-Men. Another ſort of People, call'd Regulators, were Commiſſion'd to the ſame Purpoſe, being ſent all over England, to Delude the People, either by fair Promiſes or Menaces, into a fatal Compliance with the King. But notwithſtanding all theſe Wiles and Weapons, His Majeſty found himſelf diſappointed of his hopes of having a Parliament at his own devotion. In ſome Counties, almoſt all the Gentry diſappear'd on a ſudden, to avoid the Summons of the Lords Lieutenants. The Gentlemen of Dorſetſhire being Aſſembled by the Earl of Briſtol, were no ſooner Acquainted with the King's Intentions, but they Anſwer'd, That an Affair of ſo great Importance deſerv'd to be diſcuſs'd in the Great Council of the Nation; to which they would ſend their Repreſentatives, when His Majeſty ſhould think fit to Call a Free Parliament. The like Anſwer was made in ſeveral other Counties: And in Cheſter, of about Seven hundred Perſons, there were only Seventeen who could be made to promiſe a Conſent to the Repealing of the Penal Laws and Teſt.

Honours and Preferments.

And yet the King had all the Advantage in the world on his ſide, by filling his Privy-Council and his Court with Creatures of his own making; and by diſpenſing all his Honours, as ſo many Pledges of Obedience to his Will and Pleaſure. On the Death of George Duke of Buckingham, who Died in a moſt inglorious ſtate of Poverty at a mean Houſe in Yorkſhire, on Apr. 16. His Majeſty, out of his Royal Favour to the Right Honourable the Earl of Sunderland (Lord Preſident of the Council, and His Majeſty's Principal Secretary of State) was pleas'd to give him the Garter, on Apr. 26. and he was Inſtall'd at Windſor on May the 23d. The Duke of Berwick (the King's Natural Son) was deſign'd for General of the Standing Forces; and to qualifie him with more Experience and better Reputation, he was ſent over into Hungary to paſs a Campaign in the Imperial Army: And His Majeſty Knighted Edward Vandrey Eſq; who was to Attend His Grace in that Campaign. Capt. William Phipps being on June 28. preſented to the King by the Duke of Albemarle; His Majeſty receiv'd him very graciouſly, and was pleas'd to conferr upon him the Honour of Knighthood, in Conſideration of his Loyalty and good Services in a late Expedition, having brought home a very conſiderable Treaſure which was taken out of the Sea, after it had lain there Forty four Years. On Jul. 3. His Majeſty conferr'd the Honour of Knighthood upon John Sparrow Eſq; Clerk-Comptroller of His Majeſty's Board of Green-Cloth. The Lord Spencer was Apointed, in Auguſt, to go over Envoy Extraordinary, to make the Compliments of Condolence, in Their Majeſty's Names, with His Highneſs the Duke of Modena, upon the Death of the late Dutcheſs of Modena the Queen's Mother. Within the ſame Month, His Majeſty was pleas'd to conferr upon Sir Francis Ratcliff of Driſton in the County of Northumberland Bar^t the Dignity of an Earl of this Kingdom, Creating him Baron of Tindale, Viſcount Ratcliff and Langley, and Earl of Derwentwater. On Sept. 25. Roger Earl of Caſtlemain (His Majeſty's late Ambaſſador Extraordinary to the Pope) was Sworn of His Majeſty's Privy-Council, and took his Place at the Board. On Octob. 14. His Grace William Duke of Hamilton, and Sir Nicholas Butler (One of the Commiſſioners of His Majeſty's Cuſtoms) were Sworn, and took their Places at the ſame Board. On Octob. 25. His Majeſty was pleas'd to conferr the Honour of Knighthood on Charles Carteret Eſq; And at the Feaſt in Guildhall, Octob. 30. His Majeſty conferr'd the ſame Honour upon Two of the Aldermen then preſent, John Boden and William Aſhhurſt Eſqrs. On Nov. 11. the Famous Political Jeſuit, under the Title of the Honourable and Reverend Father Edward Petre (Clerk of the Cloſet to His Majeſty) was Sworn of His Majeſty's Moſt Honourable Privy-Council, and accordingly took his Place at the Board. On March 6. His Majeſty was pleas'd to conferr the Honour of Knighthood, as a Mark of his Favour, on William Hedges Eſq; His Grace the Duke of Albemarle was this Year ſent over Governor of Jamaica.

Father Petre a Privy-Councellor.

There ſeem'd now to be but One Reſtraint upon the Papiſts, which was, a Senſe of the King's Declining Age, and the Proſpect of a Proteſtant Succeſſor. They had but One thing therefore for the Subject of their Prayers and their Plots, which was, that the Queen might have a Son. And therefore, at this very Juncture, they began the Whiſpers of the Queen's being with Child. Which was not much credited, till His Majeſty Proclaim'd it to all the Nation, That it had pleas'd Almighty God, (who (in Signal Manner) had bleſs'd His Majeſty and this Kingdom, under His Majeſty's Government, with great Proſperity, Peace and Plenty) to give His Majeſty alſo apparent Hopes and good Aſſurance of having Iſſue by His Royal Conſort the Queen, who, through God's great Goodneſs, was now with Child. Wherefore, His Majeſty Appoints, That on the Fifteenth of January next, within the Cities of London and Weſtminſter, and upon the Twenty ninth in all other Places, Publick Thankſgiving and Solemn Prayer ſhould be offer'd up to God, on this Occaſion, in a Form of Prayer and Religious Service, to be Prepared by the Lords the Biſhops of Durham, Rocheſter and Peterborough.

Declaration of the Queen's being with Child.

The Papiſts, who ſeem'd already to Triumph over the Proteſtants, were ſtill more Elevated upon this News: Nay, ſome of them had the Impudence to aſſert, That though the Child ſhould prove a Daughter, yet it would cut off the Princeſſes of Orange and Denmark from the Succeſſion; upon a fooliſh Suppoſal, That a Daughter born ſince the King's Advancement to the Throne, ought to take Place before any Others born while he was but Duke of York: But others of them durſt rather to be confident that it would certainly be a Son. And becauſe the Queen's Breeding was in a manner Miraculous, the Jeſuits gave out, That either it was the Effect of a Petition which the lately deceas'd Dutcheſs of Modena had put up in Heaven to the Bleſſed Virgin Mary; or of a Vow the Queen had made to Our Lady of Loretto, with the Preſent of a Golden Image enricht with Precious-Stones.

The Papiſts very confident of a Son.

Theſe

1687. These fabulous Stories relating to the Queen's Conception, after she had intermitted Breeding for several Years; the more credible Reports of her Physicians, and Domesticks, that they were not yet satisfied in the Signs of it; the Impatience of the Popish Party, in presuming and prophesying the Birth of a Son; and several other concurring Reasons, made the Protestants suspect a pious Fraud; and they were confirm'd in their Suspicion, by reflecting, that a-like Deceit had been put upon the People in the Reign of Queen Mary: For then, to relieve themselves from the Fears of a Protestant Princess in Succession, the Romish Priests gave it out, That the Queen was with Child; and Prayers were Order'd for her Safe-Delivery; and a Popish Preacher at St. Paul's pretended to tell of the Birth, and to Describe the Boy: When, after all the Sham was carry'd no farther on; because (as verily believ'd) King Philip was too Just and Generous to Consent to any such Imposture. The Remembrance of that former Fact, gave now a Natural Application of it; and the Story of that Mock-Conception (as deliver'd by Mr. Fox in his Acts and Monuments) was now Reprinted and dispersed with the Title of Idem Iterum, or, Queen Mary's Big-Belly. —— Let this Matter conclude with the Words of a late Writer of Memoirs: "The Fears of a Protestant Successor, "had been the only Allay that rendred the "Prosperity of the Roman Catholicks less perfect. "Now the Happiness of having an Heir to the "Crown to be bred up in their own Religion, "quasht all those Fears, and aton'd for the "Uncertainty of the King's Life. It was so much "their Interest to have One, and there were so "many Circumstances that seem'd to render his "Birth suspicious, that the Nation in general "were inclinable to believe, that this was the "last Effort of the Party to Accomplish our "Ruine.

If this were design'd to divert the People of England from fixing their Eyes and Hearts upon a Protestant Successor, it had not that effect. But, on the contrary, the Nation look'd more and more toward the Court in Holland, and the Princess Anne at Home. The King was sensible of it, and found the Prince and Princess of Orange to be more Popular, for refusing to approve of the Repeal of the Penal Laws and Test. Under this Aprehension, the King began to give out Commissions for the Raising of new Troops, and was Preparing a better Fleet with extraordinary Diligence, as foreboding, That on the Birth of a Son, he should have occasion to assert his Title by Force of Arms. Hence, on Jan. 17. His Majesty wrote a Letter to the States of Holland, to Demand the Six English and Scotch Regiments that were in their Service: And on the 2d of March, His Majesty Issued out a Proclamation, forbidding his Natural-born Subjects to Enter or List themselves in the Service of any Foreign Prince or State, either by Sea or Land.

The States return'd a Civil Answer to His Majesty's Letter, but excus'd themselves for not Complying with his Desire. They Declar'd, by a Resolution taken in their Assembly, Febr. 2. That having examin'd all the Treaties of Alliance, and all that had pass'd thereupon, when those Regiments were form'd, they could find no Agreement or Capitulation, that could oblige them to Grant His Majesty's Demand, especially in that Juncture of Time. They own'd indeed, That by the Treaties Concluded between England and the States-General, it was Agreed, That in Case that Crown should have War with any Neighbouring Prince, or suffer under any Intestine Rebellion, the States should be then obliged to Send back the Six Regiments into England, as they did in 1685. upon the Rebellion of Monmouth: But that now His Britannick Majesty was in Peace with his Neighbours, and had no Troubles at Home; and therefore they saw no Reason that could oblige them to Send back those Troops. However, to preserve a good Correspondence with His Majesty, they offer'd Passes to all the Officers of the Six Regiments, that were willing to return Home; which about Forty of them accepted. The Marques of Albyville presented a Memorial to the States, to press them to Comply with His Majesty's Desire: But they persisting in their Resolution, a Proclamation was Issued out, Commanding a Return of all the King's Subjects, who had taken Arms under, and were then in the Service of the States-General of the United Provinces either by Sea or Land; though upon no other Allegation, than that the King thought it fit for his Service. This Proclamation caus'd a Debate among the States-General; the Result of which seem'd to be an Unwillingness to let the English and Scotch Regiments Return; alledging, besides what has been already mention'd, That there was nothing so agreeable to Nature, as that he who is Born Free, should have the Right and Liberty to Settle himself wheresoever he shall think it most advantageous for him, and that it is in his Power to be Naturaliz'd, and become a Subject to them under whose Sovereignty he submits his Person: And that any Government receiving such, does thereby acquire over him the same Right it has over its own proper and Natural Subjects. The Marques of Albyville, by expres Orders from his Master, deliver'd a Second Memorial to the States, peremptorily Demanding the Dismission of the said Troops; —for that pretended Natural Liberty could not subsist, after that Dominion and Obedience had been introduced; so that the Right of Sovereignty and Subjection were now only to be consider'd: And that by virtue of these Rights, it had been the Common Opinion, in all Times, That no Natural Subject can withdraw himself from the Obedience he owes to his Lawful Prince; and therefore he insisted upon his Demand, as a Right the King would never depart from. But, it seems, few or none were willing to Return; which Justify'd the Resolutions of the States-General, and rendred the Instances of His Majesty's Envoy ineffectual.

The King very Importunate with the States, to no purpose.

These mutual Jealousies between the King and the States of Holland had another Foundation in them. The King was apparently in the Interests and Counsels of France; which the States had reason to hate and oppose. A late Author has deliver'd this good Account: "While King James "was thus Pusht on by a Head-strong Party to "Enslave his Subjects, the other Princes and States "of Europe look'd on with quite different Senti- "ments, according as their own Interests and "Safety mov'd them. The greater part did "commiserate the Fate of these Three Kingdoms, "and wish'd for their Deliverance. The Pro- "testants saw, with Regret, that themselves were "within an immediate Prospect of losing the most "considerable Support of their Religion; and "both They and the Roman Catholicks were equally "convinc'd, that it was their Common Interest "to have England continue in a Condition to be "the Arbiter of Christendom, especially at a Time "when they saw they most needed it. On the "other hand, It was the Interest of another Prince, "that not only the King of England should be his "Friend, but the Kingdom of England should be- "come Inconsiderable Abroad, which it could not "fail to be when Enslav'd at Home.

The States of Holland thought the King of England in the French Interest.

"King James had been again and again soli- "cited, not only by Protestant Princes, but those "of his own Religion, to Enter into other Mea- "sures, for the Common Safety of Europe; at "least, not to contribute to its Ruine, by espousing "an Interest which they judg'd was opposite to it.

"The

1687. "The Emperor, among others, had, by his Ambaſſador, made repeated Inſtances to him to this "Purpoſe; but with no better Succeſs than the "reſt, as appears by a Letter he wrote to him "after his Abdication, which has been Printed in "ſeveral Languages, and was conceiv'd in Elegant "Latin, as all the Publick Diſpatches of that "Court are. But all theſe Remonſtrances had no "weight with King James; though they had this "good Effect in the End, as to put thoſe Princes "and States upon ſuch Meaſures as ſecur'd to "them the Friendſhip of England in another "way.

The Power of France was by this time become "the Terror and Envy of the reſt of Europe; "and that Crown had upon all ſides extended its "Conqueſts. The Empire, Spain and Holland "ſeem'd to enjoy a precarious Peace, while the "Common Enemy of the Chriſtian Name was making "War with the Emperor and the State of Venice, "and was once very near being Maſter of the "Imperial Seat, whereby he might have carry'd "the War into the Bowels of Germany. The "main Strength of the Empire being turn'd againſt "the Turks, and that with various Succeſs, "there was another War Declar'd againſt the "Emperor by France: So that it came to be "abſolutely neceſſary for Spain and Holland to "interpoſe; not as Mediators, for that they were "not to hope for, but as Allies and Partners in "the War. Theſe laſt, aſwel as the other Princes "and States that lay neareſt the Rhine, were "expos'd to the Mercy of a Prince whom they "were not able to reſiſt, if England ſhould Look on "as Neuters, or Take part againſt them; the laſt "of which they had reaſon to fear.

"Thus it happen'd, that the Fortune of "England and that of the greateſt part of "Chriſtendom came to be link'd together, and "their Common Liberties muſt of neceſſity have "undergone one and the ſame Fate. The latter, "from a Natural Principle of Self-Preſervation, "were reſolv'd to make the laſt Effort to break "the Fetters which they ſaw were ready to be "impos'd upon them; And the other, animated "by the Example of their Anceſtors, and the "Conſtitution of their Country, which is diame-"trically oppoſite to Tyranny, were reſolv'd to "venture All, to retrieve themſelves and their "Poſterity from the Chains that were already "put upon them.

"Both the one and the other might have "ſtruggl'd in vain till this day with the Ruine "that threatned them, if Heaven, in pity to "their Condition, had not provided, in the Perſon "of the Prince of Orange, the only Sanctuary "that was left them to ſhelter their ſinking State. "This Prince, by his Mother, was a Nephew of "England, and, in Right of the Princeſs his Wife, "the Preſumptive-Heir of the Crown. By his "Father's ſide he was Heir of an Illuſtrious "Family, that Eterniz'd their Name, by De-"livering their Country from Slavery, and lay-"ing the Foundation of a Mighty Commonwealth, "which has ſince prov'd the Greateſt Bulwark of "the Proteſtant Religion, and the Chief Support "of the Liberty of Chriſtendom. A Family Born "for the Good of Mankind, to be the Scourge of "Tyrants, and Deliverers of the Oppreſſed.

Perſecution of the Proteſtants in France.

The Perſecution of the Proteſtants in France, was as Effectual as Wit and Tyranny could make it. Vaſt Numbers of thoſe Diſtreſſed People were glad to flie for Refuge to other more Merciful States and Kingdoms, till their very Flight was made Criminal, aſwel as their Profeſſion. Many of them came over into England, of whom ſome few brought or had privately ſent over ſufficient Effects with them; but far greater Numbers came in a true State of Perſecution, Empty and Naked, to depend on the Hoſpitality and Charity of this Good-Natur'd Kingdom. And indeed, Divine Providence made Things and Perſons work here together for their Good. The King was the more bountiful to them, that he might ſeem to condemn their Perſecution for Conſcience; the Liberty whereof, He profeſs'd to be his Principle and Practice. And the People of England were more-eſpecially Liberal on this Occaſion; becauſe they began to think, it might be their own Caſe, and muſt be every-where the Effect of Popery and Arbitrary Power. 1687.

But though theſe miſerable French Refugees met with a Kind Reception from the King and his Subjects: Yet their own Monarch purſu'd them, as it were, into England; and by his Ambaſſador in our Court, reſtrain'd them from Complaining of the Hardſhips they had Suffer'd. So that here in their Place of Refuge, they were to undergo another grievous Perſecution; which was, To be Afflicted, without daring to Bemoan themſelves. An Inſtance of this new Mortification to them, is thus related by Authority: — Whitehall, May 8. 1686. The French Ambaſſador having by a Memorial Complained to His Majeſty, That a Book, Intituled, [Les Plaintes des Proteſtants Cruellement Opprimes dans le Royaume de France] was Sold and Diſpers'd in this Kingdom, in which Book are many Falſities and Scandalous Reflections upon the Moſt Chriſtian King; And that the ſaid Book was likewiſe Tranſlated into Engliſh, and Printed here: His Majeſty was pleas'd to Order, That diligent Enquiry ſhould be made after the Tranſlator and Printer of the ſame, that they may be Proſecuted according to Law. And that a Printed Copy of the ſaid Book in French, and another in Engliſh, ſhould be Publikly Burnt by the Hands of the Common Hangman: Which was accordingly put in Execution on Wedneſday laſt before the Royal Exchange. Not ſuffer'd to Complain of their Perſecution.

It is ſome Juſtice to ſet down what a late Hiſtorian obſerves: "At the ſame time that "King James advanced Popery, it cannot be "denied, but that his Generoſity extended, in a "particular manner, to the Diſtreſſed Proteſtants "who had lately fled from France upon Account "of Religion; for he not only Granted them "Briefs, but Gave them alſo large Sums out of "his Privy-Purſe, to Excite the Charity of his Sub-"jects, by his Royal Example. Nevertheleſs, thoſe "Briefs had not all the good Effect which was in-"tended by His Majeſty: Many People refuſing to "Contribute towards thoſe Charitable Collections, "upon an ill-grounded Suſpicion, That they were "Deſign'd by the Court for the Maintenance of "French Papiſts that were Invited over to Serve "the King's Deſigns. — Others endeavour'd to "leſſen King James's Bounty, by ſaying, It was "but a Piece of Policy, in order to curry Favour "with his own Proteſtant Subjects. — All that "an Hiſtorian can ſay in this Matter, is, That "where the Benefit is Real, 'tis a kind of Ingra-"titude too nicely to enquire into the Motive "of it. Generoſity of King James, in Relieving them.

Some of the French Refugees had a better "Senſe of the King's Favours: For Monſ. Daillon, "one of their Miniſters, to Compliment the Court "upon their beloved Project of Liberty of Conſcience, "ſolicited a Patent for the Erecting a Non-"conforming and Independent French Church in "Soho-Fields; which was readily Granted: And "from hence it is that the French call that Meeting-"Houſe La Patente to this very Day.

"The Miniſters of the French Church in the "Savoy were not wanting in expreſſing their Gra-"titude to His Majeſty, but yet they did it with "more Reſerve and Circumſpection; as appear'd "upon the following Occaſion: The Jeſuits, "ever ſince their Settlement in the Savoy, had a

"Deſign

1687. " Deſign upon the French Chapel there; and " Mr. Pulton, their Rector or Principal, tamper'd " with Dr. Dubourdieu, in order to engage him " to Reſign that Church; promiſing, as from the " the King, to Build them another on any Ground " they ſhould think moſt convenient between Whitehall and Temple-Bar, with a large Sum of Money " into the Bargain.— Monſieur Dubourdieu " made Anſwer, That being but One, he deſir'd " Time to communicate his Propoſal to the Other " Miniſters, and Church-wardens of the Savoy.— " Theſe being Met upon this Critical Affair, it " was Agreed, That before they ſhould give the " Jeſuits a poſitive Anſwer, they ſhould conſult " with ſuch Lords who were moſt Conſpicuous " for their Wiſdom, and their Affection to the " Proteſtant Intereſt.— Accordingly Monſieur " Dubourdieu waited upon the Lords Hallifax, " Danby, Nottingham, and ſome few others; who " all, as it were by Conſent, adviſ'd 'em after " this manner: Never hearken to any Terms with " the Jeſuits; Let them purſue their violent " Meaſures: Suffer not your ſelves to be thruſt " out of your Church; for by that Means you'll do " your own Buſineſs, and the Nations.

tate of eland. The State of Ireland, under King James, is Fully and Juſtly deliver'd by Dr. King, at the of time Writing it Biſhop of London-Derry; and a later Author has thus Abridg'd His Lordſhip's Account: —" Ireland was the Inexhauſtible Source " whence England was to be furniſh'd with a " Romiſh Army; and an Iriſh Roman Catholick was " the moſt Welcome Gueſt at Whitehall. They " came over in Shoals to take Poſſeſſion of the " Promis'd Land; and had already ſwallow'd " up, in their Hopes, the beſt Eſtates of the " Hereticks in England. Over-and-above com- " pleat Regiments of them, there was ſcarce a " Troop or Company wherein ſome of them were " not plac'd, by expreſs Order from Court. " Several Proteſtants that had Serv'd well and " long, were Turn'd out, to make Room for " them; and Seven Conſiderable Officers were " Caſhier'd in one Day, meerly for refuſing to " Admit them. The chief Forts, and particularly " Portſmouth and Hull, the two Keys of England, " were put into Popiſh Hands; and the Garriſons " ſo Modell'd, that the Majority were Papiſts.

" As Ireland was remarkable for having fur- " niſh'd King James with Romiſh Troops ſent into " England, ſo was it much more for the bare- " fac'd and open Invaſions that were made there, " upon the Liberties and Rights of the Proteſtants. " That Kingdom was the moſt proper Field to " ripen their Projects in; conſidering, that the " Proteſtants were much Out-numbred by the " Papiſts, and had been for ſome Ages the con- " ſtant Object of their Rancour and Envy; which " had been more than once expreſs'd in Letters of " Blood.

" King James did Recall the Earl of Clarendon " from the Government of Ireland, ſoon after he " was Sent thither; and Appointed the Earl of " Tyrconnel to Succeed him, who was a Gentleman " had ſignaliz'd himſelf for his Bigottry to the " Church of Rome, and his Hatred to the Pro- " teſtants. The Roman Catholick had recommended " him to King James for that Poſt, in a Letter, " As One that did firſt eſpouſe, and chiefly main- " tain the Cauſe of the Catholick Clergy, againſt their " many and Powerful Enemies for the laſt Five and " twenty Years; and was then the only Perſon under " whoſe Fortitude and Popularity in that Kingdom " they durſt with Cheerfulneſs and Aſſurance own " their Loyalty, and aſſert [illegible] Majeſty's Intereſt. " Making it therefore their humble Requeſt, That " His Majeſty would be pleas'd to lodge his Authority " in his Hands, to the Terror of the Factious, and " Encouragement of His Majeſty's moſt Faithful 1687. " Subjects in Ireland; promiſing to receive him " with ſuch Acclamations as the long Captiv'd Jews " did their Redeemer Mordecai.— Which Letter " ſhew'd they were no leſs miſtaken in their Hiſtory " of the Bible, than in their Advice to the King; " for it does not appear by the Story of Mordecai " in the Scripture, that he was ever ſent to the " Jews, or remov'd from the City of Suſa, after " he came into Favour with Ahaſuerus.

" However, Tyrconnel fully anſwer'd the Hopes " and Expectations of the Papiſts, and the Fears " of the Proteſtants of Ireland; for by the " Miniſtry of this Ridgid Man, was the Ruine " of the Proteſtant Engliſh Intereſt in that King- " dom in a great meaſure compleated.

" At King James's Acceſſion to the Crown, " the Army of Ireland conſiſted of above Seven thou- " ſand Men, all Proteſtants, and zealous to the " Service: Theſe were in a little time all Turn'd- " out, and the whole Army made up of Papiſts, " moſt of them the Sons, or Deſcendants, or near " Relations of thoſe that were Attainted for the " the Rebellion in 1641. or others that had diſtin- " guiſh'd themſelves ſince that time, by their " notorious Villanies, and implacable Hatred to " the Engliſh and Proteſtant Intereſt.

" Though in King Charles's time, by the " Influence of the Duke of York, there had been " Grounds of Complaint againſt ſome of the " Judges in Ireland, upon the Account of their " Partiality to the Papiſts; yet when King James " came to the Crown, theſe very Judges were not " thought fit enough for the Work that was de- " ſign'd. It was judg'd neceſſary to employ the " moſt Zealous of the Party, thoſe that from In- " tereſt and Inclination were the moſt deeply " engag'd to deſtroy the Proteſtant Intereſt; and " accordingly ſuch were pick'd out to Sit in every " Court of Juſtice.

" The Cuſtody of the King's Conſcience and " Great Seal, was given to Sir Alexander Fitton, " a Perſon Convicted of Forgery, not only at " Weſtminſter-Hall and at Cheſter, but Fined for " it by the Lords in Parliament. This Man was " taken out of Jail, to diſcharge the Truſt of " Lord High-Chancellor; and had no other Qua- " lities to recommend him, beſides his being a " Convert to the Romiſh Church, and a Renegado " to his Religion and Country. To him were " added, as Maſters of Chancery, one Stafford a " Popiſh Prieſt, and O-Neal the Son of one of " the moſt Notorious Murtherers in the Maſſacre " in 1641.

" In the King's-Bench, Care was taken to place " one Nugent, whoſe Father had loſt his Honour " and Eſtate, for being a Principal Actor in the ſame " Rebellion: This Man, who had never made any " Figure at the Bar, was pitch'd upon to Judge " whether the Outlawries againſt his Father and " Fellow-Rebels ought to be Revers'd; and whe- " ther the Settlements that were made in Ireland " upon theſe Outlawries, ought to ſtand good.

" The next Court is that of Exchequer, from " which only, of all the Courts in Ireland, there " lies no Appeal, or Writ of Error, in England. " It was thought fit, that one Rice, a Profligate " Fellow, and Noted for nothing but Gaming, " and a mortal Inveteracy againſt the Proteſtants, " ſhould fill the Place of the Lord Chief-Baron: " This Man was often heard to ſay, before he " came to be a Judge, That he would drive a " Coach and Six Horſes through the Act of Settle- " ment. And before that Law was actually " Repeal'd in King James's Parliament, he declar'd " upon the Bench, That it was againſt Natural " Equity, and did not Oblige. It was before him, " that all the Charters in the Kingdom were " damn'd in the ſpace of a Term or two; ſo 1687. much was he for Diſpatch. A Learned Prelate (from whoſe Book all the Things that here relate to that Country are taken) does Obſerve, That if this Judge had been left alone, 'twas believ'd, in a few Years, he would, by ſome Contrivance or other, have Given away moſt of the Proteſtants Eſtates in Ireland, without troubling a Parliament to Attaint them.

In the Court of Common-Pleas, it was thought adviſeable, that a Proteſtant Chief-Juſtice ſhould Continue; yet ſo, as to Pinion him with Two of their own Sort, that might Out-Vote him, upon Occaſion.

"The Adminiſtration of Juſtice and the Laws being in ſuch Hands, it was no wonder that the poor Proteſtants in Ireland wiſh'd rather to have had no Laws at all, and be left to their Natural Defence, than be cheated into the neceſſity of ſubmitting to Laws that were executed only to Puniſh, and not to Protect them. Under ſuch Judges the Roman Catholicks had a glorious Time; and be their Cauſe never ſo Unjuſt, they were ſure to Carry it: When the Lord Chancellor did not ſtick on all Occaſions, and ſometimes upon the Bench, to declare, That the Proteſtants were all Rogues! And that among Forty thouſand of them, there was not One that was not a Traitor, a Rebel, and a Villain!

"The Supreme Courts being thus fill'd up, it was but reaſonable all other Courts ſhould keep pace with them. In the Year 1687. there was not a Proteſtant Sheriff in the whole Kingdom, except one, and he put in by miſtake, for another of the ſame Name that was a Roman Catholick. Some few Proteſtants were Continu'd in the Commiſſion of the Peace; but they were rendred uſeleſs and inſignificant, being Overpower'd in every thing by the great Number of Papiſts join'd in Commiſſion with them, and thoſe, for the moſt part, of the very Scum of the People, and a great many whoſe Fathers had been Executed for Theft, Robbery or Murther.

"The Privy-Council of Ireland is a great part of the Conſtitution, and has conſiderable Priviledges and Powers annexed to it: This was likewiſe ſo Modell'd, that the Papiſts made the Majority; and thoſe few that were Proteſtants choſe for the moſt part to decline appearing at the Board, ſince they could do thoſe of their Religion no Service.

"The great Barrier of the Peoples Liberties, both in England and Ireland, being their Right to Chuſe their own Repreſentatives in Parliament, which being once taken away, they become Slaves to the Will of their Prince; The Proteſtants in Ireland finding a neceſſity of ſecuring this Right in their own Hands, had procured many Corporations to be founded, and had built many Corporate-Towns at their own Charges; from all which, the Roman Catholicks were by their Charters excluded. This Barrier was broken through at one ſtroke, by Diſſolving all the Corporations in the Kingdom, upon Quo Warranto's brought into the Exchequer-Court, and that without ſo much as the leaſt ſhadow of Law. Hereupon New Charters were Granted, and fill'd up chiefly with Papiſts, and Men of deſperate or no Fortunes: And a Clauſe was inſerted in every one of them, which ſubjected them to the Abſolute Will of the King; by which it was put in the Power of the Chief-Governor to Turn out and Put in whom he pleas'd, without ſhewing a Reaſon, or any formal Tryal at Law.

"The Proteſtant Clergy felt, upon all Occaſions, the weight of Tyrconnel's Wrath. The Prieſts began to declare openly, That the Tythes belong'd to them, and forbad their People, under Pain of Damnation, to pay them to the Proteſtant Incumbents. This Paſs'd afterwards into an Act of Parliament; by which not only all Tythes payable by Papiſts were given to their own Prieſts, but likewiſe a Way was found out to make the Popiſh Clergy capable of enjoying the Proteſtants Tythes: Which was thus, If a Proteſtant happen'd to be poſſeſs'd of a Biſhoprick, a Dignity, or other Living, he might not by this New Act demand any Tythes or Eccleſiaſtical Dues from any Roman Catholick; and aſſoon as his Preferment became Void by Death, Ceſſion, or Abſence, a Popiſh Biſhop or Clergy-man was put into his Place. And the Act was ſo expreſs, that there needed no more to oblige all Men to repute and deem a Man to be a Roman Catholick Biſhop or Dean of any Place, but the King's ſignifying him to be ſo, under his Privy-Signet, or Sign-Manual. Aſſoon as any One came to be thus Intitled to a Biſhoprick, Deanery, or Living, immediately all the Tythes, aſwell of Proteſtants as Papiſts, became Due to him, with all the Glebes and Eccleſiaſtical Dues. 1687.

"The only great Nurſery of Learning in Ireland, is the Univerſity of Dublin, conſiſting of a Provoſt, Seven Senior, and Nine Junior Fellows, and Seventy Scholars, who are partly Maintain'd by a Yearly Salary out of the Exchequer. This Salary the Earl of Tyrconnel ſtopt, merely for their not Admitting into a Vacant Fellowſhip, contrary to their Statutes and Oaths, a Vicious Ignorant Perſon, who was a New-Convert. Nor could he be prevail'd with, by any Interceſſion or Intreaty, to remove the Stop; by which, in effect, he diſſolv'd the Foundation, and ſhut up the Fountain of Learning and Religion. This appear'd more plainly afterwards to have been his Deſign: For it was not thought enough, upon King James's Arrival, to take away their Maintenance, but they were further Proceeded againſt, and the Vice-Preſident, Fellows and Scholars all turn'd out, their Furniture, Library and Communion-Plate ſeiz'd, and every thing that belong'd to the College, and to the private Fellows and Scholars, taken way. All this was done, notwithſtanding that when they Waited upon King James at his firſt Arrival at Dublin, he was pleas'd to promiſe them, That he would preſerve them in their Liberties and Properties, and rather Augment than Diminiſh the Privileges and Immunities that had been Granted them by his Predeceſſors. In the Houſe they plac'd a Garriſon, and turn'd the Chapel into a Magazine, and the Chambers into Priſons for the Proteſtants. One Moore, a Popiſh Prieſt, was made Provoſt; and One Mackarty, alſo a Prieſt, was made Library-Keeper; and the Whole deſign'd for them and their Fraternity.

"One Arch-Biſhoprick, and ſeveral Biſhopricks, and a great many other Dignities and Livings of the Church, were deſignedly kept Vacant, and the Revenues firſt paid into the Exchequer, and afterwerds diſpos'd of to Titular Biſhops and Prieſts, while in the mean time the Cures lay neglected; ſo that it appear'd plainly, that the Deſign was to Deſtroy the Succeſſion of Proteſtant Clergy-men. At length Things came to that height, after King James was in Ireland, that moſt of the Churches in and about Dublin were Seiz'd upon by the Government; and at laſt Lutterell, Governor of Dublin, Iſſued out his Order, Forbidding more than Five Proteſtants to Meet together, under Pain of Death. Being ask'd, Whether this was deſign'd to hinder Meeting in Churches? He anſwer'd, It was deſign'd to hinder their Meeting there, aſwell as in other Places: And accordingly all 1687. " the Churches were ſhut up, and all Religious " Aſſemblies through the whole Kingdom for- " bidden, under Pain of Death.

"the

" It were endleſs to enumerate all the Miſeries " that Reverend Author mentions, which the " Proteſtants of Ireland Suffer'd in the Reign of " King James: But to give a Deciſive Blow, " there was Act of Attainder Paſs'd in Parliament; " in order to which, every Member of the Houſe " of Commons Return'd the Names of all ſuch " Proteſtant Gentlemen as liv'd near them, or " in the County or Borough for which he Serv'd; " and if he was a Stranger to any of them, he " ſent to the Country for Information about " them. When this Bill was Preſented to the " King, for His Aſſent, the Speaker of the Houſe " of Commons told him, That many were Attainted " in that Act, upon ſuch Evidence as Satisfy'd the " Houſe; and the reſt upon Common Fame.

" In this Act there were no fewer Attainted, " than Two Arch-Biſhops, One Duke, Seventeen " Earls, Seven Counteſſes, Twenty eight Viſcounts, " Two Viſcounteſſes, Seven Biſhops, Eighteen Barons, " Thirty three Baronets, Fifty one Knights, Eighty- " three Clergy-men, Two thouſand one hundred " eighty two Eſquires and Gentlemen: And All " of them (Unhear'd) Declared and Adjudged " Traytors, Convicted and Attainted of High-Treaſon, " and Adjudg'd to ſuffer the Pains of Death, and " Forfeiture. The famous Proſcription of Rome, " during the laſt Triumvirate, came not up, in " ſome reſpects, to the Horror of this; for there " were Condemn'd in this little Kingdom, more " than Double the Number that were Proſcrib'd " through the vaſt Bounds of the Roman Empire. " And to make this of Ireland yet the more " Terrible, and to put the Perſons Attainted out " of a poſſibility of Eſcaping, the Act it ſelf was " conceal'd, and no Proteſtant allow'd a Copy " of it till Four Months after it was Paſs'd. Whereas " in that of Rome, the Names of the Perſons " Proſcrib'd were affix'd upon all the Publick " Places of the City, the very Day the Proſcription " was concerted; and thereby Opportunity was " given to many of the Nobleſt Families in " Rome to preſerve themſelves, by a ſpeedy " Flight, for better Times.

State of Religion. The Proceedings of the Eccleſiaſtical Commiſſioners this Year, are thus faithfully Abridg'd by a late Writer: " The Thunderbolts of the Ec- " cleſiaſtical Commiſſion fell next on both the " Univerſities, and firſt of all upon Dr. Peachet " the Vice-Chancellor of Cambridge, for refuſing " to Admit one Alban Francis a Benedictine Monk, " to the Degree of Maſter of Arts, without taking " the Oaths, according to the King's Mandate, " wherein His Majeſty diſpens'd with Francis, though " not having that neceſſary Qualification. This " Mandate being read in the Conſiſtory, it was " unanimouſly Agreed, That they could not " Admit the Monk to a Degree, without taking " the uſual Oaths, unleſs they broke their own; " and thereupon Appointed Two of their Body " to wait upon His Majeſty, and acquaint him, " how ready they were to Obey all his Com- " mands, where their Compliance did not claſh " with their Conſciences: humbly hoping His " Majeſty would not force them to Wilful Perjury; " of which, by the Statutes of the Univerſity, " they muſt be Guilty, if they ſhould Admit " Alban Francis, thus Unqualify'd, to that Degree. " When the Two Fellows came to London, they " firſt made their Application to the Duke of " Albemarle their Chancellor, who us'd his Intereſt " to ſerve them, though to little purpoſe; for at " length they received this Anſwer from the " Secretary of State, That His Majeſty had ſeen " the Vice-Chancellor's Letter; was offended at the " Proceedings of the Univerſity; and would take " Order, ſhortly, to give them a further Anſwer. " What this Anſwer was, appear'd in a little " time; for Atterbury the Meſſenger came to " Cambridge, to Summon the Vice-Chancellor to " Appear before the Eccleſiaſtical Commiſſioners, " and Anſwer to ſuch Things as ſhould be Objected " againſt him, on His Majeſty's behalf. — The " Vice-Chancellor, and Eight more of that Body, " Appear'd, and put in their Anſwer in Writing, " in the Name of the Univerſity; alledging " Three Acts of Parliament in their Juſtification, " with many unanſwerable Arguments againſt " the Illegality of this New Court: Which being " read, the Court took ſome Time to Conſider " of the Matter, and Adjourn'd till Saturday the " 7th of May, 1687. That Day being come, and " the Vice-Chancellor and Delegates Appear- " ing, after ſome trifling Queſtions propounded " by Chancellor Jeffreys, they were Commanded " to Withdraw; and being call'd in again, Jeffreys " told the Vice-Chancellor of Cambrige, That he " being Guilty of great Diſobedience to the King's " Commands, and other Crimes and Contempts, " the Court had Sentenc'd him, To be Perpetual of " his Office of Vice-Chancellor, and Suspended [illegible] " ab Officio & Beneficio of his Headſhip of Mag- " dalen-College, and that he ſhould not preſume to " meddle in any Publick Buſineſs relating to the " Univerſity.

" The Storm which ſoon after broke out upon " the whole College of St. Mary Magdalen in " Oxford, as it was a longer Time a Gathering, " ſo it prov'd more Furious and Diſmal in its " Effects. And becauſe the boldeſt Stroaks of " that Arbitrary Spirit, by which King James's " Counſels were animated, were ſeen in a parti- " cular manner through the Courſe of this Affair, " a full Relation of the Whole cannot be thought " foreign to this Hiſtory. — St. Mary Magdalen's " College is one of the Nobleſt Foundations that " perhaps was ever erected for Learning in the " World; and 'twas no wonder the Popiſh Clergy " look'd with an envious and greedy Eye upon " this rich Prize, and made their utmoſt Efforts " to ſnatch it from the Hands of thoſe they " call'd Hereticks. This Illuſtrious Society, from " repeated Grants of Kings, Confirm'd by ſeveral " Acts of Parliament, and from their own Statutes, " were in an uninterrupted, aſwel as unconteſted " Poſſeſſion of a Right to Elect their own Pre- " ſident. That Place being Vacant, by the Death " of Dr. Clarke; the Vice-Preſident, Dr. Aldworth, " gave Notice to all the Fellows preſent in the " Chapel to proceed to the Election of another, " on the 13th of April following, to fill up the " Vacancy. But before the Day of Election, " being inform'd that His Majeſty had Granted " his Letters-Mandatory in behalf of Mr. Anthony " Farmer a Man of an ill Reputation, who had " promis'd to declare himſelf a Papiſt; They moſt " humbly repreſented to His Majeſty, in their " Petition, That the ſaid Mr. Farmer was a Perſon " in ſeveral reſpects incapable of that Character, " according to their Founder's Statutes; and did " moſt earneſtly Beſeech His Majeſty, either to leave " them to their Duty and Conſciences, according to " His Majeſty's late moſt Gracious Toleration, and " their Founder's Statutes, or to recommend ſuch a " Perſon, who might be more ſerviceable to His " Majeſty, and to this College. The Petition was " deliver'd to the Earl of S———d, Preſident of " the Council, by Doctor Thomas Smith, and " Captain Bagſhaw; and lay four Days in His " Lordſhip's Hands, with a Promiſe of his Favour; " but at laſt his Anſwer was, That the King muſt " be Obey'd. On Monday Apr. 11. His Majeſty's " Mandate was deliver'd by Mr. Robert Charnock, " Maſter of Arts, Fellow of the ſaid College, a 1687. " New Convert, and a Man wholly devoted to " the Court, directed to the Vice-Preſident and " Fellows, requiring them forthwith to Elect the " ſaid Mr. Farmer, and Admit him Preſident. " This Mandate the Vice-Preſident read, with " decent Reſpect, in the Chapel of the College, " before the Fellows there preſent, and ask'd " them, Whether they, in Obedience to His Ma- " jeſty's Letters, would forthwith Elect Mr. Farmer " Preſident? They all agreed to deferr their " Anſwers till Wedneſday following. All the " Fellows being then Met, the Vice-Preſident " read the Statute concerning the Choiſe of a " Preſident; and another againſt Corrupt and " Irregular Elections: Then he read the King's " Letter in behalf of Mr. Farmer, and a ſecond " time demanded their Anſwer, which was to " this effect; That having a Petition lying at that " time before His Majeſty, they ought not to " proceed to Election, till they had receiv'd His Ma- " jeſty's Anſwer to the ſame. And thereupon " they all Agreed, (except Mr. Charnock) That " the Election ſhould be deferr'd till the next " Day. On Thurſday in the Morning, the " Vice-Preſident told them, That the Choiſe of a " Preſident had been put off upon Account of " their Petition to His Majeſty; in Anſwer to " which, They had not then receiv'd His Ma- " jeſty's Pleaſure: That the next Day was the " utmoſt Time they had Power to Prorogue the " Election to, by the Statutes, and therefore it " was neceſſary they ſhould come to ſome Reſolu- " tion. He told them further, That the King " had Commanded them to Elect Mr. Farmer; " and ask'd their Senſe therein? Which was " Unanimous, (except Mr. Charnock) That the " Election ſhould be deferr'd till the next Morning. " Accordingly, Friday Apr. 15. at Eight a Clock " in the Morning, the Vice-Preſident and Fellows " being Met, Dr. Tho. Smith and Capt. Bagſhaw, " two of the Fellows acquainted the reſt, from " the Lord Preſident of the Council, That in " Anſwer to their Petition, His Majeſty having " ſent His Letter to the College, expected to be " Obey'd. After which, the Vice-Preſident read " again the King's Mandate, and ask'd them " whether they would Comply with it? They " deſir'd they might proceed to an Election. " And the Vice-Preſident having propos'd, whe- " ther they would make any further Addreſs to " His Majeſty? The Vice-Preſident, Dr. Fairfax, " Dr. Pudſey, and Dr. Tho. Smith were for a " ſecond Addreſs, but all the reſt declar'd im- " mediately for proceeding to an Election. Then " the Vice-Preſident propos'd, whether they would " go to an Election Viva voce, or by Scrutiny? " The Vice-Preſident, Mr. Thomſon, and Mr. Char- " nock were for proceeding in it Viva voce; but " all the reſt were for a Scrutiny, (except Doctor " Thomas Smith, who was for deferring the " Election till they had once more Petition'd " the King.) Therefore it being the Senſe of " the Majority, That they ought to proceed to " the Election of a Preſident, according to the " Statutes, and this the laſt Day limited; in " order to it, the Holy Sacrament was ſolemnly " taken by all, (except Charnock.) Then the " Statutes relating to the Choiſe of a Preſident, " and againſt Corrupt Election, were read by " the Vice-Preſident. Every one took the Oath " preſcribed in the Statutes, (except Mr. Thompſon " and Mr. Charnock, who refus'd it) and the " Two Senior Fellows were Sworn Scrutators in " the Scrutiny of the whole Society. For the " Nomination of a Preſident, Dr. Hough and " Mr. Maynard had each of them the Major- " part of the Voices. And then the Thirteen " Senior Fellows being Met to Elect One of theſe " Two; Dr. Hough had Eleven Voices, and was " accordingly pronounc'd Preſident by the Senior 1687. " Scrutator; And Mr. Maynard was Appointed " by the Thirteen Senior Fellows to Preſent him " as Preſident-Elect to the Viſitor, in order to his " Admiſſion. After this, Mr. Charnock and " Mr. Thompſon declar'd Viva voce for Mr. Farmer, " according to His Majeſty's Letter. The next " Day, Dr. Hough being preſented to the Viſitor, " was Sworn, and Admitted Preſident by his " Lordſhip, according to the Statutes; and on " the Sunday next following he took the ſame " Oath again before the Society; and afterwards, " as Preſident, took his Seat in the Chapel.

" The King being inform'd of it, Ordered the " Lord Sunderland to Write to the Fellows; which " he did in the following Terms: Gentlemen, The " King being inform'd, That notwithſtanding his " late Mandate, ſent to you for Electing Mr. Farmer " to be Preſident of your College, you have made Choiſe " of another Perſon; His Majeſty Commands me to " let you know, He is much ſurpriz'd at theſe " Proceedings, and expects you ſhould ſend me an " Account of what paſs'd on that Occaſion, and whe- " ther you did receive His Majeſty's ſaid Mandate " before you Choſe Dr. Hough.

" Thereupon the Vice-Preſident and Fellows " drew up their Caſe relating to the late Election " of a Preſident; which was preſented to the " Duke of Ormond, Chancellor of the Univerſity " of Oxford, with a Letter wherein they humbly " begg'd His Grace to Interpoſe with His moſt Sacred " Majeſty for them; that they might not lie under " the Weight of His Diſpleaſure, for not being in a " Capacity of Obeying His Commands. This Sub- " miſſion not being ſatisfactory, and the Duke of " Ormond's Interpoſition little regarded, the Vice- " Preſident and Fellows were Cited to Appear " before the Eccleſiaſtical Commiſſioners at White- " hall.

" On June 6. the Vice-Preſident and Dr. Fair- " fax, Dr. J. Smith, Mr. Hammond, Mr. Dobſon " and Mr. Fairer, Deputed Fellows, Appear'd be- " fore the Lords Commiſſioners, according to the " above-mention'd Citation. And it being de- " manded of them, Why they refus'd to Obey the " King's Mandate? They deſir'd Time to Con- " ſider of it: Which was Granted to the 13th; " at which time Appearing, the Vice-Preſident " deliver'd in their Anſwer; which was read by " Mr. Bridgman, and wherein they alledg'd; " That the College of St. Mary Magdalen in Oxon " is a Body-Corporate, Govern'd by Loyal Statutes, " Granted and Confirm'd to them by His Majeſty's " Predeceſſors. That by the ſaid Statutes of the " College, to the Obſervation of which each Fellow " is Sworn, it is Order'd, That the Perſon Elected " Preſident thereof, ſhall be a Man of good Life and " Reputation, of approv'd Underſtanding, and good " Temper, Diſcreet, Provident and Circumſpect " both in Spiritual and Temporal Affairs. That at " the time of Election of a Preſident, the ſaid Fellows " are bound by the ſaid Statutes to take an Oath, " That they ſhall Nominate none to that Office, but " ſuch as are, or have been Fellows of the ſaid Col- " lege, or of New-College in Oxon; or if they are " not actually Fellows at the time of Election, that " they be ſuch as have left their Fellowſhips in their " reſpective Colleges upon Credible Accounts: And " when Two Qualify'd Perſons ſhall be Nominated at " the time of Election, by the greater Number of all " the Fellows, to the ſaid Office of Preſident; the " Thirteen Seniors alſo Swear, That they will Elect " One of them, whom, in their Conſciences, they " think moſt proper and ſufficient, moſt Diſcreet, " moſt Uſeful, and beſt Qualify'd for the Place, " without any Regard to Love, Hatred, Favour or " *Fear. " This Anſwer was Sign'd but by five of the " Delegates, Dr. Fairfax not Conſenting to it; " and therefore he deſir'd their Lordſhips to " Hear him a-part, and take his Reaſons why he " could not Subſcribe. After the reading of the " Anſwer, the Lord Chancellor Jeffreys being in " hopes he would ſubmit, gave him leave to " ſpeak, ſaying; Ay, this looks like a Man of " Senſe, and a good Subject; Let's hear what he " will ſay: —— But finding his Miſtake, and " that Dr. Fairfax chiefly inſiſted, That in Eccle- " ſiaſtical Courts there ſhould be a Libel given to " the Party Appeal'd, that he may know what he " is Accus'd of; that he deſir'd that Libel, and " did not know what he was Call'd there for; " and that the Matter did not lie in that Court, " but in Weſtminſter-Hall. The Chancellor en- " deavour'd to baffle his Plea, by telling him, " He was a Doctor of Divinity, but not of Law. " To this the Doctor reply'd, That he deſir'd to " know by what Commiſſion and Authority they Sate? " Which put Jeffreys into ſuch exceſſive Paſſion, as " made him cry out; Pray, what Commiſſion " have you to be ſo Impudent in Court? — This " Man ought to keep in a Dark Room; Why " do you ſuffer him without a Guardian? — " Why did you not bring him to me, to beg " him? — Pray let the Officers ſeize him. —— " Then the Delegates were Order'd to Withdraw; " and after a whole Hour's Debate, the Vice- " Preſident was Call'd in alone, and Order'd to " Attend the Court, with the reſt of the Deputed " Fellows, on Wedneſday the 22d of the ſame " Month.

" On the Appointed Day the Delegates Ap- " pear'd again, according to the Commiſſioner's " Order, and Gave in their Allegations againſt " Mr. Farmer; the moſt material of which were, 1687. " That he had Miſ-behav'd himſelf in Trinity- " College in Cambridge, and had there receiv'd " Admonition from the Maſter, in order to his " Expulſion: — That having left Cambridge, he " taught School at Chippenham in Wiltſhire, under " a Non-conformiſt Miniſter without Licenſe: — " That in Septemb. 1683. he was Admitted of " St. Mary Magdalen Hall in Oxon; where ſuch " frequent Complaints were brought againſt him " to the Principal, for his troubleſom Humour " and unquiet Temper, that, to preſerve the Peace " of the Society, he was deſir'd to leave the ſaid " Hall: — That after his leaving Magdalen-Hall, " he was admitted into Magdalen-College, where " diſcourſing about Religion, he declar'd, That " there was no Proteſtant but would Cut the King's " Throat: — Though at other times he ſaid, " That whatſoever he pretended, he was really a " Member of the Church of England; and that " he made an Intereſt with ſome Roman Catholicks, " only to get Preferment by their Means, and for " that reaſon was willing to be thought of their " Religion: — And that, in general, The ſaid " Mr. Farmer had had the unhappineſs to lie " under an ill Fame, as to his Life and Conver- " ſation. ——— Theſe Allegations were Con- " firm'd by ſeveral Letters and Certificates pro- " duced in Court; which Mr. Farmer vainly en- " deavour'd to confute: But nevertheleſs, the " Eccleſiaſtical Commiſſioners Depriv'd Dr. Hough " of his Preſidentſhip, and Suſpended Dr. Aldworth " and Dr. Fairfax, and Order'd the Fellows of the " College to cauſe their Sentence to be executed, " and affixed to the Gates of their College. " Which they neglecting to do, they were Cited " to Appear before the Commiſſioners at Whitehall, " upon the 29th of June, to Anſwer the ſaid " Contempt.

" The Court, by this time, finding that Farmer " was a Man of ſo profligate a Life, that though " he had promis'd to advance the Intereſt of the " Papiſts, and even to declare himſelf one of " them, upon his Promotion to that Place; yet " they began to be aſham'd of him: And there- " fore, inſtead of inſiſting on the former Mandate " in his favour, the King Granted another, in " behalf of Dr. Parker, then Biſhop of Oxford, " and one of the Court Creatures. The Place " of Preſident being already, in a Legal manner, " fill'd up by Dr. Hough, (which though it had " not been, yet the Biſhop of Oxford was likewiſe " incapable, by the Statutes of the College, of being " Choſen) the Fellows did not think themſelves " oblig'd to proceed to a ſecond Election.

" The King was ſo Incens'd at this freſh Con- " tempt of his Orders, that he came to Oxford " in Perſon; and having Commanded the Fellows " of Magdalen-College to attend him at Chriſt- " Church, he ask'd Dr. Pudſey, the Senior of the " Fellows that appear'd before him, Whether they " did receive his Letter? When the Doctor an- " ſwer'd, They did; the King, in an angry Tone, " reply'd, Then you have done very Uncivilly by Me, " and Undutifully. —— Here they all Kneel'd; " and Dr. Pudſey offer'd a Petition, wherein they " humbly ſhew'd, It was an inexpreſſible Affliction " to them, to find themſelves reduced to ſuch an " Extremity, that either they muſt Diſobey His Ma- " jeſty's Command, contrary to their Inclinations, " and that conſtant Courſe of Loyalty which they had " ſhewn upon all Occaſions; or elſe Break their " Founder's Statutes, and deliberately Perjure them- " ſelves. —— Then they mention'd the Statutes, " and the Oaths that every one of them had taken " at their Admiſſion to their Fellowſhips; and " Concluded with an humble Prayer to His Ma- " jeſty, To give them leave to lay their Caſe and " Themſelves at His Majeſty's Feet, earneſtly be- " ſeeching 1687. " ſeeching him to extend to them that Grace and " Tenderneſs which he vouchſafed to all his other " Subjects. But their ſubmiſſive Poſture did not " appeaſe the King, who refuſing to receive their " Petition, vented his Reſentment in theſe paſſio- " nate Words; Ye have been a Stubborn, Turbulent " College; I have known you to be ſo this Six and " twenty Years: You have Affronted Me in this. — " Is this your Church of England Loyalty? One " wou'd wonder to find ſo many Church of England- " Men in ſuch a Buſineſs. Go home, and ſhew your " ſelves good Members of the Church of England. — " Get you gone! — Know, I am your King! — " I will be Obey'd; and I Command you to be gone! — " Go, and Admit the Biſhop of Oxon Head, Principal, " What d'yee call it? of your College; (One that " ſtood by ſaid, Preſident) I mean, Preſident of " the College. Let them that refuſe it look to it; " They ſhall feel the Weight of their Sovereign's " Diſpleaſure! The Fellows offering again their " Petition on their Knees, the King ſaid to them; " Get you gone! I will receive nothing from you, " till you have Obey'd Me, and Admitted the Biſhop " of Oxon. Thereupon they immediately went " to their Chapel; and Dr. Pudſey propoſing, Whe- " ther they wou'd Obey the King? They anſwer'd, " They were as ready to Obey His Majeſty in " all things that lay in their Power, as any of " the reſt of his Subjects; but the Electing the " Biſhop of Oxon being directly contrary to their " Statutes, and the poſitive Oaths they had taken, " they could not apprehend it in their Power to " Obey him in this Matter.

" Whereupon they drew up an Addreſs, " expreſſing in moſt ſubmiſſive Terms the ſaid " Reſolutions, which they gave to the Lord Sun- " derland, Preſident of the Council, and which " was afterwards deliver'd to His Majeſty " at Bath. Where-ever His Majeſty came, he " work'd a miraculous Converſion, (as his " Flatterers expreſs'd it) except in Oxford; and " therefore this being the only Oppoſition he " receiv'd in his Progreſs, it could not but provoke " a Monarch, who expected to be Obey'd in every " thing. Yet before he made Magdalen-College " feel the Weight of his Diſpleaſure, William Penn, " the Head of the Quakers, or, as ſome then " thought, an Ambitious Crafty Jeſuit, who, " under a Fanatical Out-ſide, promoted King " James's Deſigns, was induſtriouſly employ'd; " Not to Trapan them, (as he pretended in his " Letter to Dr. Bailey one of the Fellows) but " out of a paſſionate Concern for their Intereſt, to " perſwade 'em either to a Compliance with His Ma- " jeſty's Letter, or to think among themſelves of " ſome Expedient, to prevent the Ruine of their " College and Themſelves; and to offer it to His " Majeſty's Conſideration, that the Order for the " Quo Warranto againſt the Colleges might be re- " call'd, before it was too late; for they could not " but be ſenſible, how highly His Majeſty was " *Incens'd againſt them. " To this Letter the College return'd an " Anſwer, wherein, amongſt other things, they " declare, They are not Conſcious of ever having " given His Majeſty any ſuch Offence, and there- " fore have no reaſon to fear the Iſſuing out of a " Quo Warranto againſt them: And as for the " reſt, they believe no Inſtance can be given of a " Quo Warranto brought againſt a College or Hall " in the Univerſities, or any other Eccleſiaſtical Cor- " poration, for the Abuſes of ſome of the Conſtitu- " *tions and Franchiſes in them. " Several other Perſons uſed their Endeavours " to bring the Fellows to a Compliance; which " proving ſtill ineffectual, they were Cited before " the Biſhop of Cheſter, Sir Robert Wright Chief- " Juſtice of the King's-Bench, and Sir *Tho. " In the Afternoon, the Commiſſioners being " ſate the Biſhop of Cheſter, ask'd Dr. Hough, " whether they would Submit to this Viſitation? " To which the Doctor anſwer'd, in the Name of " himſelf, and the greater part of the Fellows, " That they Submitted to it, as far as it was " conſiſtent with the Laws of the Land, and the " Statutes of the College, and no farther; And 1687. " deſir'd their Lordſhips that this Declaration " might be Recorded. The next Queſtion the " Biſhop put to him, was, Whether they Obſerv'd " all thoſe Statutes? — And the Preſident an- " ſwering, He hop'd they did: — You have a " Statute there for Maſs, (reply'd he) Why don't " you read Maſs? — This Queſtion from a " Biſhop was a little Surpriſing; but the Preſi- " dent ſoon ſatisfy'd it, by telling him, That " the Matter of that Oath was Unlawful; and " in ſuch a Caſe, no Man was oblig'd to Obſerve " an Oath; and beſides, that that Statute was " taken away by the Laws of the Land. — After " ſeveral other frivilous Expoſtulations, the Biſhop " of Cheſter Demanded, Firſt, All their Regiſters. " Secondly, The Revenues of their College, with " an Acount of their Benefactors; to what Uſe the " Money was aſſign'd, how employ'd, and how far " converted to other Uſes; or, in plain Engliſh, " how far it was deſign'd for Hoſpitality? And, " Thirdly, A Copy of all the Leaſes they had Lett " for Two Years laſt paſt.

" deſir'd

" On Saturday Morning, Dr. Hough was ſeveral " times requir'd to Deliver up the Keys, and " quiet Poſſeſſion of the Lodgings, to the Perſon " whom His Majeſty had Appointed Preſident: " Which the Doctor refuſing to Obey, alledging " the Legality of his Election, the King's Proctor " ſtood up, and accus'd him of Contumacy: And " then the Biſhop of Cheſter Admonith'd him " Three times, To Depart peaceably out of the " Lodgings, and to Act no longer as Preſident, or " pretended Preſident of his College. The ſame " Day in the Afternoon, the Biſhop of Cheſter " ask'd the Fellows, Whether they wou'd Admit " the Biſhop of Oxon Preſident; ſince Dr. Hough's " Place was declared Void? To which the greater " part anſwer'd, They cou'd not do it, without " premeditated Perjury, and therefore wou'd not " do it.

" During this Examination, Dr. Hough came " into Court, without any Attendance; and having " waited till it was ended, and the Commiſſioners " at a Pauſe, he deſir'd Leave to ſpeak a few Words: " Which being Granted, he ſaid, That they having " been pleas'd to Deprive him of his Place of Preſi- " dent of that College, he did Proteſt againſt all " their Proceedings in Prejudice of him and his " Right, as Illegal, Unjuſt, and Null; And there- " fore he Appeal'd to his Sovereign Lord the King, " in his Courts of Juſtice. Upon which the " Strangers and Young Scholars in the Room " gave a Humm —— Which ſo Incens'd their " Lordſhips, that notwithſtanding all the Prote- " ſtations the Preſident and Fellows cou'd make, " the Preſident in particular offering to purge " himſelf, by Oath, that he was no ways ac- " ceſſory to it; yet the Lord Chief-Juſtice was " not to be pacify'd, but charging it upon " Dr. Hough, bound him in a Bond of a Thouſand " Pounds, and Security to the like Value, to " make his Appearance at the King's-Bench-Bar " the Term following. Moreover, the Lord Chief- " Juſtice ſaid, They had met with nothing but " Affronts from the College: That as for himſelf, " he valu'd not what People ſaid of him, but " was reſolv'd to Vindicate the Honour of his " Maſter, to the laſt drop of his Blood; And " if the Civil Power coud not keep 'em in Order, " the Military ſhou'd. —— Baron Jenner like- " wiſe ſhew'd his Reſentment upon this Occaſion, by " punning on the late Preſident's Name, and ſaying " to him, Sir, You muſt not think to Huff (Hough) us. " About which time, ſeveral Officers, then in " Town, came into the Room.

" On Tueſday, the Court being Met, Dr. Staf- " ford, one of the Fellows, offer'd a Paper in " Anſwer to what was Objected the Friday before, " That the King's Mandate in favour of Mr. Farmer, " implied an Inhibition. Which their Lordſhips 1687. " having peruſed, would not ſuffer to be read " publickly, but ask'd the Fellows whether they " wou'd Sign it? bidding them to do it at their " Peril. The Fellows being Withdrawn, and " not thinking it was neceſſary to Sign a " Plea which the Commiſſioners refus'd to have " Argu'd, they return'd the Paper into the " Court, Subſcrib'd only by Dr. Fairfax and " Dr. Stafford. Their Lordſhips taking no further " Notice of that Paper, the Biſhop of Cheſter ask'd " the Fellows, Whether they wou'd Inſtall the " Biſhop of Oxford Preſident, or Aſſiſt at the " Inſtalling of him? — To this they anſwer'd, " as before, That as they could not do it, without " deliberate Perjury; ſo it was not in their Power " to do it. — Therupon Mr. Wiggins, Chaplain " to the Biſhop of Oxford, Impower'd as a Proxy " to be Inſtall'd Preſident, for his Lord, (then " confin'd to his Chamber, by ſome Indiſpoſition) " was put into the Preſident's Stall by the Biſhop " of Cheſter, none of the Fellows being preſent " but Mr. Charnock, and took the Oaths which " the Statutes enjoin the Preſident at his Ad- " miſſion, and the Oath of Allegiance and Su- " premacy. Then their Lordſhips conducted " him to the Preſident's Lodgings; where knocking " three times, and the Door not being open'd, " a Smith was ſent for to force it open, and " Mr. Wiggins took Poſſeſſion of the Lodgings.

" Immediately after, the Biſhop of Cheſter " ask'd the Fellows, Whether they would Obey " the Biſhop of Oxon, as now Inſtall'd Preſident, " by Virtue of the King's Mandate? — Doctor " Fairfax anſwer'd, He neither cou'd nor wou'd Obey " him, having already a Lawful and Statutable " Preſident. — Others Comply'd with His Ma- " jeſty's Pleaſure; and others again deſir'd Time " to Conſider on ſo weighty a Queſtion: Which " was Granted; the Biſhop of Cheſter bidding " them go and Conſult about it among them- " ſelves. In the Afternoon, this Anſwer was " given in by the Society, (except Dr. Fairfax) " That whereas His Majeſty had been pleas'd, by " his Royal Authority, to cauſe the Biſhop of Oxon to " be Inſtall'd Preſident, they did Submit, as far as was " Lawful, and Agreeable to the Statutes of the Col- " lege, and no way prejudicial to the Right and Title " of Dr. Hough. — This Anſwer was accepted, " except the laſt Clauſe, which the Lord Chief- " Juſtice, and Baron Jenner, declar'd, as Judges, " to be inſignificant; ſince nothing they could " do, cou'd any-way invalidate Dr. Hough's Title, " but left them ſtill at liberty to be Witneſſes for " him, or to be any other way ſerviceable to him " in the Recovery of his Right: And upon this " Aſſurance, the Society was prevail'd with to leave " out the laſt Clauſe. Dr. Fairfax perſiſting in his " former Anſwer, receiv'd Sentence of Expulſion: " Againſt which he Proteſted, as Null, Unjuſt and " Unlawful. This Proteſtation was Over-rul'd " by the Commiſſioners; and a Copy of the Sen- " tence deny'd, though moſt earneſtly deſir'd at " the Inſtance of Dr. Hedges and Mr. Vice- " Chancellor. Two Days after, their Lordſhips " thinking they had gain'd their Point, declar'd, " That they were well ſatisfy'd with the Anſwer " the Society had given them; And though be- " fore they had laid a Libel to their Charge, yet " that Night, they declar'd they had met with " nothing but Civility, and that they ſhould " receive the ſame from them: That they had " ſhewn themſelves Men of excellent Tempers, " and that they would repreſent it faithfully " Above, to their Advantage; — (and imme- " diately diſpatcht an Expreſs to Court, with " an Account of their Proceedings.)

" On Wedneſday Morning, the Fellows having " been Order'd the Day before to bring in their

" Anſwer

1687. " Anſwer to the following Queſtions : 1. What " Gifts and Proviſions they had, for the Entertain- " ment of Strangers? 2. What was the Value of " them? 3. How they were Apply'd? 4. And where " was the Place of Entertainment? They made " it appear very ſatisfactorily, That one Year " with another, they gave almoſt a Hundred " Pounds in Charity-Money, Over-and-above what " by their Statutes they were obliged to give. " Upon which their Lordſhips expatiated upon " their generous Bounty and Liberality, ſaying, " The Complaint on this Account was groundleſs, " and that it would induce His Majeſty to en- " tertain better Thoughts of them in all other " Matters.

" On Thurſday, the Fellows having preſented " to the Commiſſioners a Liſt of Leaſes, which " had been Renew'd for Two Years laſt paſt; " Mr. Charnock (the New-Convert) ask'd their " Lordſhips, whether theſe Leaſes ſtood good, which " had been Seal'd ſince Dr. Hough's Election? The " Lord Chief-Juſtice anſwer'd, Yes; for Corpora- " tions always ſpeak by their Seals. Then their " Lordſhips perus'd the College Regiſters; and " finding nothing in them to Object againſt, they " were Return'd, and the Court Adjourn'd.

" On Friday Morning, the Commiſſioners ac- " quainted the Fellows, They had repreſented " them fairly to the King, but that His Majeſty " expected ſome farther Submiſſion; which they " Advis'd them to make, by acknowledging their " Contempt to His Sacred Majeſty in Perſon, and to " his Letters; That they ſhould promiſe to behave " themſelves Loyally for the future; That they " ſhould own the Proceedings and Legality of the " Court, implore His Majeſty's Pardon, and lay " themſelves at his Feet; And that they ſhould " declare their intire Submiſſion to the Biſhop of " Oxon, as their Preſident. The Fellows Anſwer'd, " in Writing, That they had endeavourd, in all " their Actions, to expreſs their Duty to His Ma- " jeſty; and being conſcious to themſelves, that in the " whole Conduct of the Buſineſs before their Lord- " ſhips, they had done nothing but what their Oaths " and Statutes had indiſpenſably oblig'd them to; " they could not make any Declaration, whereby " to ackowledge they had done any thing amiſs; " having acted according to the Principles of Loyalty " and Obedience, ſo far as they cou'd, without " doing Violence to their Conſciences, or Prejudice " to their Rights, (one of which, they conceiv'd the " Electing a Preſident to be) from which they " were Sworn upon no Account to depart. — Upon " the peruſal of this Anſwer, their Lordſhips " expreſs'd their Diſlike of it, ſaying, It did not " come up to the Addreſs ſent to His Majeſty at " Bath, nor to the Paper they deliver'd in on " Tueſday. Whereupon a freſh Queſtion being " put to the Fellows, Whether they wou'd Obey " the Biſhop of Oxford as their Preſident? All, " except one or two, anſwer'd, They cou'd not " do it. — Then Mr. Fulham being particularly " Interrogated; he alledg'd, That the Biſhop of " Oxford had not Poſſeſſion in due Form of Law, nor " by proper Officers; And that he was inform'd, " that the proper Officers to give Poſſeſſion of a Free- " hold, was the Sheriff, with a Poſſe Comitatus. — " To this the Lord Chief-Juſtice reply'd, in a " Paſſion, Pray, who's the beſt Lawyer, you or I? " Your Oxford Law is no better than your Oxford " Divinity: If you've a mind to a Poſſe Comitatus, " you may have one ſoon enough. — Mr. Fulham " endeavour'd to make an Excuſe for what he " had ſaid: Which their Lordſhips rejected; " and having thought fit to Suſpend him from " the Profits of his Fellowſhip, for his Contempt, " and Opprobrious Language, they Adjourn'd till " the 16th of November, and immediately went " for London.

" The King having ſeen an Account of 1687. " the Proceedings of the Viſitors, His Majeſty " Order'd them, That at their Return to the " College, they ſhould Summons all the Fellows " to Appear before them, and endeavour to make " them ſenſible of their Offences; and if they " ſhou'd refuſe to Subſcribe the above-mention'd " Submiſſion, immediately to Expell them, for " their Obſtinacy. Purſuant to theſe Inſtructions, " the Lords Commiſſioners return'd to Oxford; " and being Sate, the firſt thing they did, was " to ſend for the Buttery-Book; then they call'd " for Mr. Joyner and Mr. Allibone, two Roman " Catholicks, whom they Entred actual Fellows; " all Oaths being diſpens'd with, beſides that of " the College. Not only the Church-of-England-Men were abundantly ſatisfied that the King's Declaration of Indulgence was to prepare the Way to Popery, but the very Diſſenters themſelves began to be convinc'd that this alone was the Deſign of it. Nay the King Himſelf was now conſcious that his Proteſtant Subjects generally underſtood his Meaning, and expected no Liberty, either to the Church or to ſeparate Congregations, any longer than till the Papiſts were able to exerciſe their full and abſolute Will and Power. To take away this Jealouſy of the People, the King repeated and confirm'd his former Declaration in a manner that did but increaſe the Fears of Popery. This New Declaration was in this Form.

James R.

New Declaration for Liberty of Conſcience.

" OUR Conduct has been ſuch in all Times " as ought to have perſwaded the World, " That we are Firm and Conſtant in our Reſo- " lutions: Yet that eaſie People may not be a- " bus'd by the Malice of crafty wicked Men, " We think fit to Declare, That our Intentions " are not changed ſince the 4th of April, 1687. " when We Iſſued out Our Declaration for Li- " berty of Conſcience in the following Terms. [Here the Declaration was recited, and then it follows.] " Ever ſince We granted this Indul- " gence We have made it Our Principal Care to " ſee it preſerv'd without Diſtinction, as we are " encourag'd to do daily by Multitudes of Ad- " dreſſes, and many other Aſſurances We receive " from our Subjects of all Perſwaſions, as Teſti- " monies of their Satisfaction and Duty; the " Effects of which We doubt not, but the next Par- " liament will plainly ſhew; and that it will not " be in vain, That We have reſolved to uſe Our " utmoſt Endeavours to eſtabliſh Liberty of Con- " ſcience, on ſuch juſt and equal Foundations as " will render it unalterable, and ſecure to all " People the Free Exerciſe of their Religion for " ever; by which future Ages may reap the Be- " nefit; of what is ſo undoubtedly for the general " Good of the whole Kingdom. It is ſuch a Se- 1688. " curity We deſire without the Burthen of Oaths " and Teſts, which have been unhappily made by " ſome Governments, but could never ſupport any: " Nor ſhould Men be advanced by ſuch Means " to Offices and Employments, which ought to " be the Reward of Services, Fidelity, and Merit " We muſt Conclude, That not only good Chriſtians " will joyn this, but whoever is concerned for the " Increaſe of the Wealth and Power of the Na- " tion. It would perhaps prejudice ſome of our " Neighbours, who might loſe Part of thoſe Ad- " vantages they now enjoy, if Liberty of Con- " ſcience were ſettled in theſe Kingdoms, which " are above all others moſt capable of Improve- " ments, and of commanding the Trade of the " World. Given at our Court at Whitehall, the Twenty-Seventh Day of April, 1688. In the Fourth Year of Our Reign.

This Declaration ordered to be Read in all Churches.

The Biſhops and Clergy generally refuſe to do it.

The King was not contented to have this Declaration Publiſh'd in the uſual Manner, but he was Reſolv'd to have it ſolemnly Read in all Churches, as the Political Goſpel of his Reign. The Biſhops and Clergy were of all others the moſt averſe to the Subject-Matter of the Declaration, as being moſt ſenſible of the ill Deſign and ill Effects of it; and therefore the Court ſeem'd the more willing to mortify theſe their Enemies, and make them become Acceſſary to their own Ruin; and even to eat their own Dung, as Father Petres proudly Threatned, and therefore this Order of Council was Made and Publiſh'd at the Court at Whitehall, the 4th of May, 1688.

By the KING's Moſt Excellent Majeſty, and the Lords of His Majeſty's Moſt Honourable Privy-Council.

Order of Council for it.

" IT is this Day Order'd by His Majeſty in " Council, That His Majeſty's late Gracious " Declaration, bearing Date the 27th of April laſt, " be read at the uſual Time of Divine Service, " upon the 20th and 27th of this Month, in all " Churches and Chapels within the Cities of Lon- " don and Weſtminſter, and Ten Miles thereа- " bouts: And upon the 3d and 10th of June next " in all other Churches and Chapels throughout 1688. " this Kingdom. And it is hereby further Or-

" der'd, That the Right Reverend the Biſhops,
" cauſe the ſaid Declaration to be ſent and di-
" ſtributed throughout their ſeveral and reſpective
" Dioceſſes, to be Read accordingly.

W. BRIDGMAN.

The Biſhops and whole Clergy of the Church of England were not ſo much ſurpriz'd, as they were troubled at this Imperious Order, which they had Reaſon to take as the greateſt Hardſhip and Oppreſſion that could be put upon them. On this Occaſion there was a Meeting in the Arch-Biſhop's Palace at Lambeth, to Conſult what ought to be done upon ſuch an extraordinary Juncture. After Prayers and mature Deliberation, It was Agreed, That the " Matter of the Declaration was alto-
" gether Illegal, the Foot upon which it ſtood be" ing a Power not only to Diſpenſe in contingent
" and particular Caſes, which, if the Lawgivers
" could have foreſeen, they would have provided
" a Diſpenſation for them, but it was to Diſpenſe
" with all ſorts of Laws in Caſes contrary to the " very Deſign and End of making them: That
" this was not properly a Diſpenſing but a Diſ-
" anulling Power, highly prejudicial to the King
" Himſelf, becauſe it took away that Faith and
" Truſt which the People repoſe in him when a
" Law is made, which they look upon as their
" Security: That 'twas true, each Biſhop or Mi-
" niſter was not a capable Judge in ſuch Caſes;
" but however he was a Judge for his own pri-
" vate Conſcience, againſt which he muſt not go:
" That this Caſe was publickly adjudg'd in Par" liament, 1672; That the general Forbearance
" of Addreſſes, grounded upon the Illegality of
" of that Diſpenſing Power, ſhew'd this to have " been the Judgment of the greateſt Part of the " Clergy and others: That the Declaration of the " preſent Judges, went no farther than the parti" cular Military Caſe of Sir Edward Hales, which,
" in whatſoever Words it was expreſs'd, yet never " came Legally to the Cognizance of the Subject:
" That an unlawful Matter was not to be Publiſh'd
" if he who Publiſh'd it, thought the Matter un-
" lawful; for it cannot come to him, being Il-
" legal, by any Authority, for the King can do
" no Illegal Thing, and if his Officers do it, they " do it not by the King's Authority, and therefore
" the refuſing of it is no Diſobedience, being no
" Illegal Refuſal: That if then, the Biſhops Pub-
" liſh'd the Declaration, they did it voluntarily
" as their own Act, and conſequently Publiſh'd
" an Illegal Thing without Legal Authority, and " were puniſhable for it: That many and great
" were the ill Conſequences of Reading the Decla-
" ration: Firſt, That many would juſtly judge
" the Clergy either Cowards or Hypocritical
" Time-ſervers, in Publiſhing what they thought
" Illegal, and Illegally ſent to them. Secondly,
" That many who had Votes for Parliament-Men,
" would take this for the Conſent of the Pub-
" liſhers, and be ſtrengthened in the Chuſing ſuch
" Men, as ſhould be Friends not only to the Indul-
" gence, but to the Foundation of it, the Diſpenſing
" Power. Thirdly, That the World would have
" Reaſon to take this Publication for an Appro-
" bation, becauſe there could be no other In" tention in ordering it to be Publiſhed, but " to make the Clergy Parties to it; for it was
" as much known before it was Read as it would " be after the Reading of it; and therefore the " making it known was not the only Thing in" tended. And Fourthly, That after this they
" muſt expect further Things to be Publiſh'd
" by them, at which they muſt make a Stand;
" and their making a Stand when they had loſt
" their Reputation would be of no Force: That

The Biſhops Meet at Lambeth to Conſider;

And agree to refuſe.

" therefore in Prudence as well as Conſcience, 1688.
" they ought not to Publiſh a Declaration, which " they knew to be againſt Law, and which in " its Nature and Deſign was levell'd againſt
" their own Intereſt, and that of their Religion.
" Some objected, That their Refuſal would be in" terpreted by the Papiſts, as a Failure in the " great Principles of Loyalty, to which the " Church of England made Pretence; others ſaid,
" That Diſſenters would conſtrue it, as a Decla-
" ration againſt all Tenderneſs to them; and o" thers again, That Suſpenſion or Deprivation
" of the Refuſers might follow, whereby the Peo" ple of their Church might be left as Sheep
" without a Shepherd. To the Firſt Objection
" it was anſwer'd, That their Non-Addreſſing
" had been reflected on in Books as well as Diſ-
" courſes, but had no Effect to blaſt their Loy" alty, tho' the Clergy refus'd to Addreſs even
" in a Branch that made for themſelves, becauſe
" of that one Foundation, on which that Clauſe
" ſtood with the reſt, of the Diſpenſing Power:
" That Loyalty being Obedience according to " Law, they were the Loyal Men who acted not " contrary thereunto; That the beſt Friends to
" the Crown are thoſe who ſupport the Law,
" and that they ſtill maintain'd the Principle
" of Suffering without any unchriſtian Oppoſi-
" tion. To the Second, That the Diſſenters
" had never ſuch Aſſurances from Church-Men
" of their Inclination to Tenderneſs to them, as " they then receiv'd; That they could not but
" ſee, that this Refuſal was not to hinder any " Favours to them by this Indulgence, but the " Diſpenſing Power; which, if it took Place,
" they could not but diſcern, that a New Magna
" Charta for Liberty of Conſcience would be of " no Validity to them, for a New Declaration
" might diſpenſe with it at Pleaſure: And that
" the wiſeſt and beſt of them would look upon
" their Refuſal as a Teſtimony of their Since-
" rity to the Proteſtant Religion, and not of " any Diſaffection to them. To the Laſt Ob-
" jection it was anſwer'd, That the Church
" and their Religion would ſuffer leſs by the " Conſciouſneſs of their Suſpended Prelates or
" Miniſters, than it would by their Illegal Com-
" pliance in ſo great and Fundamental a Point:
" That they have better Thoughts of the King's " Clemency and Juſtice, when he ſhould be in-
" form'd by Men of Conſcience, againſt the " Counſels of Men of Intereſt; for how could
" the King, at the very Time he Proclaim'd en-
" tire Liberty of Conſcience to all, even thoſe
" who formerly were look'd upon as his Ene-
" mies, do an open Violence to the Conſciences
" of thoſe who had ever been acknowledg'd to " be his Friends? And in ſhort, That they " ought to perform their Duty, and leave the " Event to God; and that a certain Evil muſt not
" be done to avoid a Contingent one.

Upon this Conſultation the Arch-Biſhop and Biſhops, conſidering how great a Penalty was falling upon the whole Clergy of England, if they ſhould be Suſpended for not Reading the Declaration, and being unwilling to lay them under ſo great a Temptation, as to ſave themſelves from Ruin by a ſinful Compliance, choſe rather to take the Blame and the Puniſhment upon themſelves, in refuſing to ſend the Declaration to their Clergy. An Heroical Act becoming the Character of Biſhops of the Church of England, who dar'd to be Confeſſors, as their Predeceſſors had been Martyrs, for the Proteſtant Religion. And therefore, before they parted they drew up an Humble Petition, Agreed to and Subſcrib'd by all the Prelates who were then preſent, Dr. Sancroft, Lord Arch-Biſhop of Canterbury;

Their Lordſhip reſolve not to ſend the Declaration to the Clergy.

They draw up a Petition to the King.

To the KING's Moſt Excellent Majeſty.

The Humble PETITION of William, Arch-Biſhop of Canterbury, and divers of the Suffragan-Biſhops of that Province (now preſent with him) in Behalf of themſelves, and others of their abſent Brethren, and of the Inferiour Clergy of their reſpective Dioceſſes,

HUMBLY SHEWETH,

"THAT the great Averſeneſs they find in "themſelves to the Diſtributing and Pub-"liſhing in all their Churches Your Majeſty's "late Declaration for Liberty of Conſcience, pro-"ceeds neither from any Want of Duty and "Obedience to Your Majeſty (Our Holy Mo-"ther, the Church of England, being both in her "Principles and in her conſtant Practice unque-"ſtionably Loyal, and having to her great Honour "been more than once publickly acknowledged "to be ſo, by Your Gracious Majeſty;) Nor "yet from any Want of Tenderneſs to Diſſen-"ters, in Relation to whom We are willing to "come to ſuch a Temper as ſhall be thought fit, "when the Matter ſhall be Conſidered and Set-"tled in Parliament and Convocation: But a-"mong many other Conſiderations, from this "eſpecially, becauſe that Declaration is founded "upon ſuch a Diſpenſing Power, as hath been "often declared Illegal in Parliament, and par-"ticularly in the Years 1662, and 1672. and "in the Beginning of Your Majeſty's Reign; "And is a Matter of ſo great Moment and "Conſequence to the whole Nation, both in "Church and State, that Your Petitioners can-"not in Prudence, Honour or Conſcience, ſo "far make themſelves Parties to it, as the Di-"ſtribution of it all over the Nation, and the "Solemn Publication of it once and again, even "in God's Houſe and in the Time of his Di-"vine Service, muſt amount to in common and "reaſonable Conſtruction.

"Your Petitioners therefore Moſt Humbly and "Earneſtly Beſeech Your Majeſty, That You will "be Pleaſed not to inſiſt upon their Diſtributing-"and Reading Your Majeſty's ſaid Declaration;

And Your Petitioners, as in Duty bound, ſhall ever Pray, &c.

The Biſhops deliver their Petition.

The ſame Evening, May 18th. the Six Suffragan-Biſhops went over directly to Whitehall, and being introduc'd by the Earl of Sunderland, deliver'd their Petition to the King, none but themſelves and their Metropolitan being Privy to it. Upon the Reading of it the King ſtartled, and ſhew'd himſelf to be very much incens'd, and made this Anſwer in a very angry Manner:

The King's Anſwer.

I have heard of this before, but did not believe it. I did not expect this from the Church of England, eſpecially from ſome of You. If I change my Mind, you ſhall hear from Me; If not, I expect my Command ſhall be Obey'd. The Biſhops reply'd, We reſign our ſelves to the Will of God; and then immediately retir'd.

The King's Threatning Anſwer could not but ſtrike a kind of Terror into the Minds of thoſe Reverend Prelates, yet it was not able to make them forget their Duty, or to depart from their worthy Reſolution. Indeed the New Biſhops made by King James, and Two or Three other of his Creatures and Commiſſioners, did for Love or Fear diſperſe the Declaration, and yet even in thoſe Dioceſſes few of the Clergy would ſubmit to the Reading of it: Nay, and in thoſe Pariſh-Churches where the Miniſters comply'd with the Orders of their Superiours, the greateſt Part of their Congregation run out as ſoon as they began to Read the ſaid Declaration. 1688.

Some few Biſhops comply.

This Affair of the Biſhops made a great deal of Noiſe throughout the Kingdom; The Church of England was alarm'd, and upon the Ferment; The Diſſenters ſtood gazing at a Diſtance, and the Court was both uneaſie, and unreſolv'd what Courſe to ſteer in ſo Critical a Juncture. Some thought the King would now exert his Arbitrary Power, and Deprive thoſe Prelates of their Dignities, by his ſole Diſpenſing Authority; others, That he would be contented to deliver them to the Eccleſiaſtical Commiſſioners and cauſe them to be Suſpended: And others again, That He would refer the Matter to the Enſuing Parliament: But the Popiſh Party had other Methods in View.

The Arch-Biſhop and Biſhops brought before the Council.

And therefore the Arch-Biſhop of Canterbury and the Six Biſhops were Summon'd before the Council on June 8. and having made their Appearance, they were asked, Whether they own'd the Petition? They immediately Anſwer'd, They humbly hop'd, That if they ſtood there as Criminals, His Majeſty would not take Advantage againſt them, for they were always ready to Obey his Juſt Commands. Thereupon they were Order'd to withdraw, and being called in a Second Time, they made the ſame Anſwer to the ſame Queſtion: But the Chancellor preſſing them to own or diſown the Paper at the Third Coming in, the Arch-Biſhop confeſs'd that it was Written with his Own Hand, and the reſt acknowledg'd that They had Sign'd it and Deliver'd it, adding withal, That they had done nothing but what they were ready to Juſtifie. The Lord-Chancellor fell into Anger and Reproaches, and pretended to endeavour to make them ſenſible of the ill Conſequences of their Diſobedience, which tended to diminiſh the King's Authority, and to diſturb the Peace of the Kingdom; and then at laſt ask'd them, Whether they would give their Recognizances to appear before the Court of Kings-Bench to Anſwer this High Miſdemeanour? This they all refus'd to do, inſiſting on the Privilege of their Peerage which they were Reſolved to maintain, as well as the Rights of the Church, being equally bound by their Callings to oppoſe all Innovations both in Government and Religion. This bold Anſwer put the whole Council into ſome Amazement, and the Chancellor Jefferies threatned to ſend them to the Tower, unleſs they did immediately Recant, and withdraw their Petition. They unanimouſly Anſwer'd, That they were ready to go whitherſoever His Majeſty would pleaſe to ſend them, They hop'd the King of Kings would be their Protector and their Judge; They fear'd Nothing from Men, for having Acted according to Law, and their own Conſciences, no Puniſhment ſhould ever be able to ſhake their Reſolutions. Thereupon a Warrant was drawn, and Subſcrib'd by Chancellor Jefferies, the Earl of Sunderland, the Lord Arundel, the Marqueſs of Powis, and others, to Commit them to the Tower. 'Tis ſaid ſome of the Judges there preſent refuſed to ſet their Hands to that Warrant: But however, it was immediately put in Execution; but for fear the People ſhould be too much affected with ſuch a moving Sight, they were ſent away by Water. And yet for all this Caution, the Notice of their Commitment flew about the Town, and

The Biſhops ſent to the Tower.

1688. the People flockt in Shoals to the River-ſide, and with loud Acclamations extol'd the Conſtancy and Courage of the Biſhops, and crav'd their Benedictions. They were no ſooner Landed at the Tower, but moſt of the Officers and Soldiers fell on their Knees, to beg their Bleſſings. Their Lordſhips were ſuffer'd to go immediately to the Chappel, to Evening-Prayer, where the Second Leſſon was, by the Courſe of the Church, extremely well-adapted to their Condition, 2 Cor. vi. Giving no Offence in any thing, that the Miniſtry be not blamed: but in all things approving our ſelves as the Miniſters of God, in much patience, in afflictions, in diſtreſſes, in ſtripes, in impriſonments, &c.

Repreſentation of this Matter, in the language of the Court.

The Court, to put a Colour upon this Arbitrary Action, thus repreſented it to the World: "Whitehall, June 8. The Lord Arch-Biſhop of "Canterbury, and the Biſhops of St. Aſaph, Ely, "Chicheſter, Bath and Wells, Peterborough, and "Briſtol, being Summon'd to Appear before His "Majeſty in Council, to Anſwer to ſuch Matters "of Miſdemeanor as ſhould be Objected againſt "them; they accordingly Appear'd this Day: "And the Petition they lately preſented to His "Majeſty being owned by them, they were "required to enter into Recognizance for their "Appearance at the King's-Bench, the Firſt Day "of the next Term. Which they refuſing to do, "they were, by Warrant Signed by the Lords of "the Council, Committed to the Tower, for "Contriving, Making and Publiſhing a Seditious Libel "againſt His Majeſty and His Government. And "Mr. Attorney and Solicitor-General were Or-"dered to Proſecute them for the ſame the next "Term.

Preparations for the Birth of a Prince of Wales.

It was now high-Time for the Jeſuit's Prophecy of the Birth of a Prince of Wales, to be accompliſh'd. It had been for ſome Months uncertain, whether Windſor, Hampton-Court or Whitehall, was to be the Place where the Queen deſign'd to Lie in: But on the ſudden, Her Majeſty had this Week given Orders for the Fitting up of an Apartment for that Purpoſe in St. James's-Houſe; and ſent many repeated Commands, That it muſt be Finiſh'd by Saturday-night. Accordingly Her Majeſty, on Saturday June 9. was carry'd in a Chair to St. James's, after ſhe had play'd at Cards at Whitehall till Eleven a Clock at Night: And the next Morning between the Hours of Nine and Ten, People were not a little ſurpriz'd, to hear that ſhe was Brought-to-Bed of a Prince. Nay, the News was told with as much Confidence before the Delivery, as after it: As if it were a Secret committed to ſome People who could not keep it. An Eminent Citizen now living, Sir S. E. is ready to Atteſt it upon Oath, That he was Call'd up early that Morning to come to an Iriſh Agent of the King's, and while he was with him, a Meſſenger came to him from the Court, in very great haſte and joy, and told him in a great Rapture, That they had got a Prince of Wales: Which was ſome Hours before the Time that was afterwards given out. In ſhort, The former Suſpicions concerning Her Majeſty's Big-Belly, were now ſtrengthen'd by the Circumſtances of her Delivery, at a time when moſt Proteſtant Ladies were at Church, the Biſhops Impriſon'd, the Princeſs Anne of Denmark at Bath, and the Dutch Ambaſſador never Call'd to be a Witneſs in behalf of the Princeſs of Orange. However, this Account was Publiſh'd by Authority:

Suſpicions in this Matter.

Whitehall, June 10. 1688. "This Day, between Nine and Ten in the Morning, the Queen was ſafely Deliver'd of a Prince at St. James's; "His Majeſty, the Queen-Dowager, moſt of the "Lords of the Privy-Council, and divers Ladies "of Quality being preſent: And about Noon, "the Council being Met, it was Order'd, That "there ſhould be a General Thankſgiving, to be "Obſerv'd within the Cities of London and *Weſt-*1688. "minſter, and Parts adjacent, on Sunday the 17th "Inſtant; and Fourteen Days after, in all other "Parts of this Kingdom: And that Notice ſhou'd "be given of the Birth of the Prince, to the "Lord-Mayor of London, that Bonfires and Publick "Rejoycings might be made. Which was accordingly perform'd, after Firing of the Cannon "of the Tower, with all the Demonſtrations of "the Extraordinary Joy, with which ſo great a "Bleſſing beſtow'd upon Their Majeſties, and all "His Majeſty's Dominions, has fill'd the Hearts "of all his Subjects." On the ſame Day, His Majeſty publiſh'd a Proclamation, "That it having "pleas'd Almighty God, of his great and con-"tinu'd Mercy to His Majeſty and his Kingdoms, "to bleſs Him and His Royal Conſort the Queen "with a Son, and theſe his Kingdoms and Do-"minions with a Prince; His Majeſty thought "fit to Appoint a Time of Publick Thankſgiving "for ſo great a Bleſſing, on Sunday June 17. "within the Cities of London and Weſtminſter; "and on July 1. in all other Places. And for "this Purpoſe, His Majeſty had ſignified his "Royal Pleaſure to Thomas Lord Biſhop of "Rocheſter, to Prepare a Form of Religious "Service and Publick Thankſgiving ſuitable "to this Occaſion, &c." Theſe Days were Solemniz'd with extraordinary Rejoycings by the Popiſh Party; but the Proteſtants were generally Silent and Reſerv'd, as doubting the Fact, and dreading the Conſequence. His Majeſty, to expreſs his Satisfaction, was pleas'd, by the Queen's Bed-ſide, ſoon after her Delivery, to confer the Honour of Knighthood upon Doctor William Walgrave, Her Majeſty's Phyſician, for his Skill and particular Services to Her Majeſty: And the King, farther to ſhow his Exultation, beſtow'd great Preſents upon ſeveral of his Miniſters, and gave conſiderable Charities to the Poor.

Publick Account given of it.

Biſhops Tryal.

On June 15. came on the Biſhops Tryal, the moſt Important, perhaps, that was ever known before in Weſtminſter-Hall; not only Seven Prelates Contending for the Rights of the Anglican Church, but Seven Peers of the Realm Standing up for the Liberties of England. The Court of King's-Bench being Sat, His Majeſty's Attorney-General mov'd for a Habeas Corpus, directed to Sir Edward Hales Lieutenant of the Tower, to bring up His Grace the Lord Arch-Biſhop of Canterbury, and the Six Biſhops; which was granted, and the Priſoners were accordingly brought up by Water. At their Landing, they were receiv'd by ſeveral Divines, and Perſons of Quality, and by a vaſt Concourſe of People, who with repeated Acclamations uttered Wiſhes for their Deliverance. On the Bench ſate Sir Robert Wright Lord Chief-Juſtice, and Mr. Juſtice Holloway, two of the King's Creatures; Mr. Juſtice Powell a Proteſtant of great Integrity, and Mr. Juſtice Allibone a profeſs'd Papiſt. The Councel for the King, was Sir Thomas Powis Attorney-General, Sir William Williams Solicitor-General, Sir Bartholomew Shower Recorder of London, Serjeant Trinder a Papiſt, &c. And for the Priſoners, Sir Robert Sawyer, Mr. Finch, Mr. Pollexfen, Sir George Treby, Serjeant Pemberton, Serjeant Levinz, and the laſt and greateſt, Mr. Somers. The Court was extremely fill'd, and with Perſons of the Higheſt Quality, as if they interpos'd in the laſt Tryal for the Liberties of the Church and Nation; The Marqueſſes of Hallifax and Worceſter, the Earls of Shrewsbury, Kent, Bedford, Dorſet, Bullingbrooke, Mancheſter, Burlington, Carliſle, Danby, Radnor and Nottingham; Viſcount Falconberg, and the Lords Grey of Ruthyn, Paget, Shandois, Vaughan, and Carberry. The Return and Warrant being read, the Attorney-General mov'd, That the Information might be read 1688. read to the Priſoners, and that they might immediately Plead to it. This Motion the Biſhops Councel oppoſed; Objecting, Firſt, That the Priſoners were Committed by the Lord Chancellor, and ſome other of the Privy-Council, without expreſſing in the Warrant, That it was by Order of the Privy-Council; And therefore, That the Commitment was Illegal, and that the Priſoners were not Legally in Court. And, Secondly, That the Fact for which they were Committed, was ſuch, as they ought not to have been Impriſon'd for; becauſe a Peer ought not to be Committed, in the firſt Inſtance, for a Miſdemeanor. Judge Powel refuſed to deliver his Opinion, before he had conſulted Books: But the Lord Chief-Juſtice, Judge Allibone and Judge Holloway Agreed, That the Fact charg'd in the Warrant, was ſuch a Miſdemeanor, as was Breach of the Peace; And therefore, That the Information ought to be read, and the Biſhops muſt Plead to it. After the reading the Information, the Biſhops Councel deſir'd that they might have an Imparlance till the next Term, to Conſider what they had to Plead. Sir Samuel Aſtry Clerk of the Crown, being ask'd what was the Courſe of the Court? Anſwer'd, That of late Years, if a Man Appear'd upon a Recognizance, or was a Perſon in Cuſtody, he ought to Plead at the firſt Inſtance; but that he had known it to be at the Diſcretion of the Court to grant what Time they pleas'd. After this Anſwer, the Lord Chief-Juſtice declar'd, That the Biſhops ſhould now Plead to the Information. Thereupon the Lord Arch-Biſhop of Canterbury offer'd a Plea, in behalf of himſelf and his Brethren the other Defendants, alledging, That they were Peers of this Kingdom of England, and Lords of Parliament, and ought not to be compell'd to Anſwer inſtantly, for the Miſdemeanor mention'd in the Information; but that they ought to be requir'd to Appear by due Proceſs of Law; and upon their Appearance, to have a Copy of the ſaid Information, and reaſonable Time given them to Imparle thereupon. The King's Councel labour'd hard to have the Plea rejected. After a long Debate, Judge Powel ſaid, He was for receiving the Plea, and Conſidering of it; but the reſt of the Judges declar'd for Rejecting of it: So the Priſoners at laſt Pleaded, Not Guilty. The King's Councel pray'd, the Clerk might join Iſſue on behalf of the King; and deſir'd the Defendants to take Notice, That they intended to Try this Cauſe on that Day Fortnight; adding, That they were Bailable, if they pleas'd. Sir Robert Sawyer deſir'd, that their own Recognizance might be taken; which was readily granted.

Plea of the Arch-Biſhop & Biſhops.

Great Appearance of the Nobility.

On June 29. the Biſhops Appear'd before the Court of King's-Bench, according to their Recognizance, the Appearance being ſtill greater than a Fortnight before; for there were now preſent the Marqueſſes of Hallifax and Worceſter, the Earls of Shrewsbury, Kent, Bedford, Pembroke, Dorſet, Bullenbrooke, Mancheſter, Rivers, Stamford, Carnarven, Cheſterfield, Scarſdale, Clarendon, Danby, Suſſex, Radnor, Nottingham, and Abington, Viſcount Falconberg, and the Lords Newport, Grey of Ruthyn, Paget, Shandois, Vaughan, Carberry, Lumley, Carteret, and Oſſulſton. This Splendid Appearance was chiefly owing to the indefatigable Care and Solicitation of the Clergy, and eſpecially of the Reverend Dr. Tenniſon. And indeed, the making ſuch a Figure in the Court, had poſſibly ſome good Effect upon the Jury, if not upon the Bench: And it was afterwards obſerv'd, by way of Jeſting upon Words, That the Biſhops were Deliver'd by the Nobilee before, and the Mobilee behind. The Information being Read, and Open'd to the Jury; the Attorney-General, to take off the Odium of this Proſecution, and in ſome meaſure to pacifie the People, who could not forbear ſhowing their Reſentments, even in the face of the Court, began with Obſerving, Firſt, That the Biſhops were not Proſecuted as Biſhops, much leſs for any Point or Matter of Religion, but as Subjects of this Kingdom, and only for a Temporal Crime, as having Cenſur'd and Affronted the King to his very Face. Secondly, That they were not Proſecuted for Omitting to do any thing; but as they were Actors in Accuſing, and, in effect, of Arraigning His Majeſty, and his Government, &c. A great deal of Time was ſpent in Proving, That the Petition produc'd in Court, was the Hand-Writing of the Arch-Biſhop of Canterbury; That it was Sign'd by him and the Six Biſhops; And that it was the ſame which was Preſented to His Majeſty. After an Elaborate Proof of theſe Particulars, by the Depoſitions of Sir John Nicholas, Mr. Bridgman, Mr. Muſgrave and Mr. Blaythwait, and by the Earl of Sunderland, who in Court affirm'd, That he Introduc'd the Biſhops, and was in the Room when they deliver'd the ſaid Petition to His Majeſty. The Fact being Prov'd, the Biſhops Councel were very Learned and Eloquent in Defence of their Clients: Mr. Somers ſpoke laſt, and mention'd the great Caſe of Thomas and Sorrel in the Exchequer-Chamber, upon the Validity of a Diſpenſation; urging, That there it it was the Opinion of every one of the Judges, That there never could be an Abrogation, or a Suſpenſion (which is a Temporary Abrogation) of an Act of Parliament, but by the Legiſlative Power: That indeed it was Diſputed, how far the King might Diſpenſe with the Penalties in ſuch a particular Law, as to particular Perſons; but that it was Agreed by all, That the King had no Power to Suſpend any Law: That by the Law of all Civiliz'd Nations, If the Prince does require ſomething to be done, which the Perſon who is to do it takes to be Unlawful; it is not only Lawful, but his Duty, Reſcribere Principi; which is all the Biſhops had done here, and that in the moſt humble manner: That as to Matters of Fact alledg'd in the ſaid Petition, there cou'd be no Deſign to Diminiſh the Prerogative, becauſe the King has no ſuch Prerogative: That the Petition cou'd not be Seditious, becauſe it was Preſented to the King in Private, and Alone; Nor Falſe, becauſe the Matter of it was True; Nor Malicious, for the Occaſion was not ſought, the Thing was preſs'd upon them; Nor, in ſhort, a Libel, becauſe the Intent was Innocent, and they kept within the Bounds ſet by the Act of Parliament, that gives the Subject leave to apply to his Prince by Petition, when he is aggriev'd.

1688. Argument of the Attorney-General, againſt the Biſhops.

Argument of Mr. Somers, for the Biſhops.

When the Councel on both ſides had done, Chief-Juſtice Wright Summ'd up the Evidence, and told the Jury, That ſometimes the Diſpenſing Power had been allow'd, as in Richard IId's time, and ſometimes deny'd; but that it was a Queſtion out of the preſent Caſe: If they believ'd the Petition to be the ſame that was Preſented by the Biſhops to the King, then the Publication was ſufficiently Prov'd: And whatever tended to Diſturb the Government, or make a Stir among the People, was certainly within the Name of Libellus Famoſus; and his Opinion, in ſhort, was, That the Biſhops Petition was a Libel.

The Evidence ſumm'd up by the Ld. Chief-Juſtice Wright.

Mr. Juſtice Holloway declar'd, That the End and Intention of every Action was to be Conſider'd: That the Biſhops were Charg'd with Delivering a Petition, which, according to their Defence, was done with all the Humility and Decency imaginable: That the Delivering of a Petition could be no fault, it being the Right of every Subject to Petition: Therefore, if the Jury were ſatisfy'd, They did it with no Ill Intention, but only to ſhew the Reaſons of their Diſobedience to the King's Command, he cou'd not think it to be a Libel.

Opinion of the Judges.

Mr. Juſtice

1688. Mr. Juſtice Powel more plainly declar'd, That He could diſcern no Sedition or any other Crime fixed upon the Biſhops, ſince there was nothing offer'd by the King's Counsel to render the Petition Falſe, Seditious or Malicious. He admoniſh'd the Jury to Conſider that the Contents of the Petition were, That the Biſhops Apprehended the Declaration to be Illegal, as being founded upon a Diſpenſing Power claim'd by the King; And that for his Part he did not remember in any Caſe in all the Law, that there was any ſuch Power in the King, and if not, the Petition could not be a Libel. He concluded with telling them, That he could ſee no Difference between the King's Power to Diſpenſe with the Laws Eccleſiaſtical, and his Power to Diſpenſe with any other Laws whatſoever: That if this was once allow'd of, there would be no need of Parliaments, and all the Legiſlature would be in the King, and ſo he left the Iſſue to God and their Conſciences.

Mr. Juſtice Allibone was prepoſſeſs'd againſt Proteſtant Biſhops, and to deliver his Opinion of their Guilt, he laid down Two odd Poſitions; 1. That no Man can take upon him to Write againſt the Actual Exerciſe of the Government, unleſs he have Leave from the Government, but he makes a Libel by what he Writes, whether True or Falſe. 2. That no private Man can take upon him to Write concerning the Government, and therefore if he intrudes himſelf into the Affairs of the Publick, he is a Libeller for ſo doing. Theſe Poſitions he back'd by a Reſolution of the Judges in King James Iſt's Time; That to frame a Petition to the King to put the Penal Laws in Execution, was next Door to Treaſon; Which was a groſs Miſquotation, in ſtead of a Petition againſt the Penal Laws, and for which, being taken up by Juſtice Powel and Serjeant Pemberton, little Heed was given to any thing that he ſaid afterwards. Whereupon the Jury withdrew, ſat up all Night, and next Morning brought in the Reverend Prelates, Not Guilty.

The Jury bring in their Verdict Not Guilty.

There were immediately very Loud Acclamations thro' Weſtminſter-Hall, and the Words Not Guilty, Not Guilty, went round with ſuch Shouts and Huzza's, that the King's Sollicitor mov'd very earneſtly that ſuch as had Shouted in the Court might be Committed; whereupon a Gentleman of Grey's-Inn was laid hold on, but ſoon diſcharg'd with this ſhort Reproof from the Chief-Juſtice; Sir, I am as glad as you can be that Lords the Biſhops are Acquitted, but your Manner of Rejoycing here is Indecent, you might Rejoice in your Chamber, or elſewhere, and not here. But the Shouts were carry'd on through the Cities of Weſtminſter and London, and flew preſently to Hounſlow-Heath, where the Soldiers in the Camp Eccho'd them ſo Loud that it Startled the King, who was that Day Entertain'd in the Earl of Feverſham's Tent: Inſomuch that His Majeſty ſent him out to know what was the Matter. The Earl came back and told the King, It was nothing but the Soldiers Shouting upon the News of the Biſhops being Acquitted. The King reply'd, And do you call that Nothing? but ſo much the worſe for them. What His Majeſty meant by the laſt Words he had not much Time to Interpret: He could only ſhew ſome Indignation, That the Biſhops had eſcap'd a Legal Penalty, and He Threatned to deliver them up to the Eccleſiaſtical Commiſſioners. And for the Two Judges, Holloway and Powel, He immediately turn'd them out, and would have meditated ſome farther Severity, if his following Reign would have allow'd it.

Great Rejoycings.

This Acquitment of the Biſhops encouraged the Clergy in their Honeſt Reſolutions of not Reading the Declaration; but the Eccleſiaſtical Commiſſioners were Inſtructed to call them to an Account for it, for which Purpoſe on July 12. they Met in the Council-Chamber and made an Order, That whereas they had received Information that divers Rectors, Vicars and Curates had omitted or neglected to Read the ſaid Declaration, to the manifeſt Contempt of His Majeſty's Authority-Royal, They do hereby Command and Require all Chancellors, Arch-Deacons, Commiſſaries and Officials, to inquire ſtrictly within their reſpective Juriſdictions, in what Churches and Chapels His Majeſty's ſaid Declaration was Read, and in what Churches and Chapels the ſame was Omitted, and to tranſmit an Account thereof upon the 16th Day of Auguſt next. The Commiſſioners Met again on that Day, and finding that little or no Inquiry had been made, they were much divided what to do in the Matter. After a long Conſultation they were content to give longer Time, and therefore Publiſh'd another Order, Commanding all Chancellors, Arch-Deacons, Commiſſaries, Officials, and others having Eccleſiaſtical Juriſdiction, ſtrictly to inquire of the Church-Wardens, as one of their Articles of Inquiry, at their reſpective Viſitations, (which Viſitations they were requir'd to hold and keep before the 15th Day of November next) in what Churches and Chapels His Majeſty's ſaid Declaration was Read, and in what the ſame was Omitted, and to tranſmit an Account thereof to them on the 6th Day of December next: But Providence prevented a Return to this Inquiry. The Biſhop of Rocheſter finding by this Time the Drift of the Eccleſiaſtical Commiſſion, thought it inconſiſtent with his Profeſſion and Character to Act any longer in it, and therefore he wrote a Letter to his Colleagues, deſiring to be excus'd from Sitting amongſt them.

1688. Eccleſiaſtical Commiſſioners proceed againſt the Inferiour Clergy.

The King continu'd to make his Honours and Preferments ſubſervient to his Religion and his Power. Upon the Day of the Birth of the Prince of Wales, the Lady Marchioneſs of Powis, was Sworn by the Lord-Chamberlain of His Majeſty's Houſhold, Lady-Governeſs of their Majeſties Children, and the Lady Strickland, Under-Governeſs. On June the 29th His Majeſty was pleaſed to confer the Honour of Knighthood upon Thomas Jefford, Eſq; Mayor of Exeter, in Conſideration of his Faithful Services. After the Diſcharge of the Arch-Biſhop and Biſhops, the King, to condemn thoſe Judges who had ſpoke in Favour of their Lordſhips, was pleaſed to remove Sir Richard Holloway and Sir John Powel, from being Juſtices of the King's-Bench; and to Place in their Stead, Sir Thomas Powel, one of the Barons of the Exchequer, and Sir Robert Baldock, one of His Majeſty's Serjeants at Law. His Majeſty was alſo pleaſed, in Conſideration of the great Age and Infirmities of Sir Chriſtopher Milton, one of the Juſtices of the Common-Pleas, to permit him to have his Writ of Eaſe, and put in his Place Sir Thomas Jenner, one of the Barons of the Exchequer; and in the Stead of Mr. Baron Jenner and Mr. Baron Powel, His Majeſty was pleaſed to Place Mr. Serjeant Ingleby and Mr. Serjeant Rotheram in the Exchequer. And to prepare for a Succeſſion of Judges, in Trinity-Term, William Le Hunt, John Rotheram, Vincent Denn, Salathiel Lovel of Greys-Inn, Eſqrs; Sir Henry Chancey, of the Middle-Temple, Kt. William Moſes, of Grays-Inn; Henry Trinder, and Francis Fuller, of the Inner-Temper; and William Thompſon, of the Middle-Temple, Eſqrs; were called by the King's Writ, to take upon them the State and Degree of Serjeants at Law, and they gave Rings with this Courtly Motto, Rex, Princeps, & Chriſtiana Libertas. On July 6th. Sir John Trevor, Kt. Maſter of the Rolls; Chriſtopher Vane, Eſq; and Silas Titus, Eſq; were by His Majeſty's Command

Honours and Preferments.

1688. Command Sworn of the Privy-Council, and accordingly took their Places at the Board; and on July 13th, Sir Thomas Strickland, Kt. was admitted to the ſame Honour. On July 14th, His Majeſty being graciouſly pleaſed to beſtow a Mark of his Royal Favour upon Thomas Elmes, of Lilford, in the County of Northampton, Eſq; for his many Faithful Services, conferr'd upon him the Honour of Knighthood. Tho' the Duke of Ormond had been long out of Favour, yet upon his Death this Publick Commendation was given of him, That on Saturday, July 21, at Kingſton-Hall in Dorſetſhire, in the Seventy Ninth Year of his Age, Died His Grace, James, Duke of Ormond, Lord-Steward of His Majeſty's Houſhold, One of the Lords of His Majeſty's Moſt Honourable Privy-Council, and Knight of the Moſt Noble Order of the Garter. He Serv'd the Crown as Lord-Lieutenant of Ireland ſeveral Times, as well under King Charles the Firſt of Bleſſed Memory, as ſince the Reſtauration of His Late Majeſty, whom he faithfully followed during his Exile, ever behaving himſelf at all Times with great Fidelity and Honour. In Auguſt His Majeſty was graciouſly pleaſed to Conſtitute Sir Eneas Mackpherſon, of Invereſſie, Kt. to be Lieutenant-Governour of Nevis, in America, in the Place of Sir James Ruſſel, Deceas'd. On Auguſt 12th, Sir Gilbert Gerrard Coſſine, Bar. and Samuel Gerrard, Eſq; were to pay their Duties to His Majeſty at Windſor, before they went into the Country, who, as a particular Mark of his Royal Favour, was graciouſly pleaſed, in his Bed-Chamber, to Confer on the ſaid Samuel Gerrard, Eſq; the Honour of Knighthood. On Tueſday Sept. 4th, Died the Right Honourable Sir John Shorter, Kt. Lord-Mayor of London, about Eleven a Clock in the Morning; and on Sept. 8th, Sir John Eyles, Kt. being Appointed Lord-Mayor for the remaining Part of this Year, and the next enſuing, was Sworn at the Guild-Hall, according to the Cuſtom of the City.

Death of the Duke of Ormond.

The King endeavours to New-Model his Army.

But the Royal Favours ſo beſtow'd did but help a general Defection in the People of England. The King found he could depend on nothing but his Army; Nor could he be fully ſatisfied in their Fidelity. Therefore, to try how far he might depend upon them, He endeavour'd to make both Officers and Common Soldiers Subſcribe a Writing, whereby they ſhould engage themſelves to Contribute, as far as in them lay, towards the Repeal of the Teſt and Penal Laws. To effect this, it was thought fit to propoſe the Thing to all the Regiments one by one, not doubting but that if Two or Three ſubmitted, the reſt would follow their Example. Accordingly the Major of the Earl of Litchfield's Regiment was order'd to open His Majeſty's Deſire to that Battalion, and to command all ſuch as would not inſtantly comply therewith, to lay down their Arms: But he was not a little ſurpriz'd to find, That except Two Captains and ſome few Popiſh Soldiers, the whole Regiment obey'd the latter Part of his Command. The King himſelf who ſaw it was in great Aſtoniſhment, and after ſome deep Silence He commanded them to take up their Arms again, adding with a ſullen diſcontented Look, That for the future He would not do them the Honour to ask their Advice. Upon this the King found He muſt New-Model His Army before He could put any Confidence in them, and therefore upon ſome little Pretence or other, He Caſhier'd ſeveral Proteſtant Officers and Soldiers, and fill'd them up with as many Papiſts as He could poſſibly procure. But this Regulation of his Troops was ſo far from a Security, that it brought on New Diſcontents and Dangers. For when ſeveral Popiſh Iriſh were put into the Duke of Berwick's Regiment, it was vigorouſly oppoſed by the Lieutenant-Colonel Beaumont and other Officers; the former in the Name of the reſt, declaring to the Duke, That he was deſir'd by thoſe Gentlemen (with whoſe Senſe he concurr'd) to inform his Grace, That they did not think it conſiſtent with their Honours, to have Forcigners impoſed upon them, without being complain'd of, that their Companies were weak, or Orders had been ſent to recruit them; not doubting, but if ſuch Orders had been given, they that firſt, in very ill Times, rais'd them Hundreds, could eaſily now have made them, according to the King's Compliment. Therefore they humbly Petition'd they might have Leave to fill up their Companies with ſuch Men of this Nation, as they ſhould judge moſt ſuitable for the King's Service, and to ſupport their Honours; or otherwiſe, that they might be permitted with all imaginable Duty and Reſpect, to lay down their Commiſſions. An Account of this (as alſo of a Serjeant and 18 private Centinels, leaving their Colours upon the ſame Score) was forthwith tranſmitted to His Majeſty then at Windſor, who, fearing the ſpreading of this Example, immediately commanded a Party of Horſe down to Portſmouth, to bring up into Cuſtody, Lieutenant-Colonel Beaumont, Captain Paſton, and Four other Captains; and a Court-Martial was appointed to proceed againſt 'em as Mutineers. If the French Ambaſſador's Memorial had not come in that Morning, to ſhew the Danger the Popiſh Party was in, ſome of theſe Officers would in all Probability have loſt their Lives: But now the Court was content to Caſhier 'em. About a Month before, another Captain who was Quartered at Scarborough, caus'd the Mayor of that Town, tho' a Man devoted to the Court, to be Toſs'd in a Blanket by his Soldiers, for being Saucy to him; which Indignity the King did not think fit to puniſh at this Juncture. Nor were the Sea-Forces more favourable to Popery, for the King having caus'd Maſs to be ſaid on Board his Men of War, there happen'd ſo great a Diſorder and Mutiny in the Fleet, that the Officers had much a-do to keep the Prieſts from being thrown over Board.

1688.

Under this Diſpoſition of the King to Popery, and of the People to a Self-Defence, this Memorial of the Church of England was Preſented to their Royal Highneſſes, the Prince and Princeſs of Orange.

People of England caſt their Eyes and Hearts on Holland.

At this Juncture, all the Proteſtant Eyes and Hearts in England were caſt and fix'd on Holland; and many of the Nobility and Gentry were Soliciting the Prince, for the Redemption of their Country. The Earl of Macclesfield had withdrawn into Holland, whilſt the Duke of Monmouth was preparing for his unfortunate Expedition; and leſt he ſhould have the ſame Fate in Holland with Sir Thomas Armſtrong, he had retir'd into Germany; from whence he now came back to the Hague, to Negotiate the Common Cauſe. Dr. Gilbert Burnet, whom the Papiſts had maliciouſly accus'd of High-Treaſon in Scotland, had fled, for Protection, to the Prince's Court, where he had Married a Lady of great Fortune and Intereſt, and had kept a ſecret Correſpondence with many of the Great Families in England; and by his extraordinary Parts, and Zeal to the Proteſtant Religion, became One of the Prime Inſtruments in the following Revolution. The Lord Wharton, though advanc'd in Years, took a Journey through Holland to Germany; and Colonel Sidney, afterward Earl of Romney, and ſome others, went over to the Spaw, giving out, That it was only for the Benefit of the Waters. The Earl of Devonſhire (who had an Indignity put upon him by Colonel Culpeper, and who, out of Generoſity, had Pardon'd the Colonel, upon Condition, That he ſhou'd never appear in Whitehall; having afterwards met him in the King's Preſence-Chamber, contrary to Agreement, cou'd not forbear ſtriking him on the Face; for which he was Adjudg'd to Pay a Fine of Thirty thouſand Pounds to His Majeſty) was zealouſly diſpos'd to Invite the Prince of Orange; and, by degrees, the greateſt part of the Lords implor'd His Highneſs's Aſſiſtance, to prevent their Ruine. Some zealous Gentlemen, particularly Mr. Hamden and his Son, and even ſome of the Ladies, eſpecially the Counteſs of Sunderland, a Woman of ſubtil Wit, and admirable Addreſs, were privy to the whole Deſign. The Earl of Shrewsbury having quitted his Regiment of Horſe, and Mortgag'd his Eſtate for Forty thouſand Pounds, went over to the Prince, to offer him both his Sword and his Purſe. He was ſoon after follow'd by Admiral Herbert (afterward Earl of Torrington,) Mr. Herbert (afterward Lord Herbert of Cherbury,) Mr. Ruſſel (now Earl of Orford,) the Lord Mordant (now Earl of Peterborough,) the Marqueſs of Winchester (afterwards Duke of Bolton,) and ſeveral other Perſons of Honour. 1688. Many of the Nobility retire to Holland.

The Prince of Orange, finding by this time a general Concurrence in the Engliſh Nation to favour his Deſign, prevail'd with the States to join with him, and to prepare a good Fleet, and ſufficient Forces for a Deſcent upon England. Sir Bevil Skelton, whilſt he was at the Hague, had intercepted a Letter, intimating, That a great Project was ſecretly Carry'd on againſt the King; of which he immediately gave an Account to His Majeſty: But it was either not well-repreſented, or not at all regarded; and Skelton, being ſent ſoon after Envoy Extraordinary to Paris, entred there into a Correſpondence with one Monſieur De Verace, who was lately gone from Holland to Geneva, and there offer'd to reveal the whole Intrigue; and upon his Advices, Skelton is ſaid to have ſent over ſeveral Letters to the Court of England. But the King, in a Supine Negligence, gave little heed to them, though they were confirm'd with many of the like Conjectures from the Marqueſs of Albeville, the Engliſh Envoy at the Hague. Count D'Avaux, the French Ambaſſador in Holland, diſcover'd, from many convincing Circumſtances, That their great Preparations were Intended againſt England, and gave Notice of it to his Maſter at Paris, from whom King James had the firſt certain and poſitive Intelligence. But the Heer Van Citters, the Dutch Ambaſſador in England, is ſaid to have aſſur'd His Majeſty, That the States were indeed Preparing for ſome Conſiderable Action, but France had moſt reaſon to be Alarm'd at it. The French King thought he could not meet with a fairer Opportunity to Engage King James in an Offenſive and Defenſive League, than the preſent Dangerous Condition of his Affairs; and therefore he immediately diſpatcht to him Monſieur De bon Repoſe, to offer him Thirty thouſand of his Men. This gave a Jealouſie to the Spaniſh Ambaſſador Don Pedro Ronquillo, who, in a Cloſet-Conference with the King, aſſured him, The Dutch could have no Deſign upon England; and then repreſented to him, the fatal Conſequences of His entring into Alliances with France; and how ill it wou'd ſound in the Nation, That whilſt He pretended to Call a Free Parliament, He ſhou'd Introduce Foreign Troops into the Kingdom. But it is certain, the Earl of Sunderland contributed much more to the Refuſal of the French King's Offers; which ſome of the Popiſh Cabal were for accepting, and which perhaps Providence alone prevented. Prince of Orange Prepares for England. Preparations of the Dutch. Intrigues of the French King: He offers K. James an Army.

During this Amuſement, the Engliſh Envoy at the Hague was Order'd to Demand of the States-General, what they meant by their great and ſurpriſing Warlike Preparations both by Sea and Land, at that Time of the Year when no Expedition, eſpecially at Sea, cou'd be thought ſeaſonable? To which the States made Anſwer, That they Arm'd, in Imitation of His Britannick Majeſty; and might with more reaſon Demand a better Satisfaction about the Alliances into which His Majeſty was lately entred. This Bold Anſwer, which at another time might have occaſion'd a Rupture, was now left without Reply. The King of France ſeem'd Impatient, that his Brother of England wou'd not accept his Aſſiſtance, nor his Advice: But to ſhew himſelf ſtill heartily Concern'd for him, he Commanded his Ambaſſador Count D'Avaux to deliver a Memorial to the States; which he did on Enquiry into theſe great Preparations. Bold Anſwer of the States.

on Septemb. 9. to this effect; "That many "Circumſtances inclin'd the King his Maſter, "with Reaſon, to believe that their Preparations "threatned England: Therefore His Majeſty had "Commanded him to declare to them, That the "Ties of Friendſhip and Alliance between Him "and the King of Great-Britain wou'd oblige "Him not only to Aſſiſt Him, but alſo to look "on the firſt Act of Hoſtility that ſhould be "committed by their Troops or their Fleet "againſt His Majeſty of Great-Britain, to be "a manifeſt Rupture of the Peace with His "Crown.

Diſown'd by the Engliſh Court.

The States-General return'd no Anſwer to this French-Memorial, but charg'd the Heer Van-Citters to Complain thereof to the Court of England. Whereupon a Council was held, wherein it was Reſolv'd to Diſown the Proceedings of Count D'Avaux. This Reſolution the Earl of Middleton (Secretary of State) immediately communicated to Van-Citters; and the Engliſh Miniſters at the Hague, Bruſſels, and Madrid, were Order'd to Declare, That the French-Memorial was Preſented without His Majeſty's Knowledge or Approbation: And more effectually to Pacifie the Dutch, Skelton was Recall'd from France; and upon his Arrival, was Committed Priſoner to the Tower, for going beyond his Inſtructions, and Diſcovering his Maſter's Secrets: Yet he was ſet at Liberty a few Days after, and made Colonel of a Regiment; nay, and ſhortly after was made Governor of his late Priſon the Tower. Which was indeed too quick a way of revealing the Secret of feigning Anger and Puniſhment.

Skelton Recall'd, and Committed to the Tower.

New Overtures of France.

After all theſe Diſcouragements, Monſieur Barillon the French Ambaſſador made another Propoſal to the Engliſh Court, That France ſhou'd abandon the Deſign of Beſieging Philipsburgh, and carry the War into Holland. Four or Five of the Council highly Approv'd the Overture; but Others warmly Oppos'd it, alledging, That ſuch a Violation of former Treaties with Holland, wou'd be ſufficient to raiſe the Clamours of the whole Nation, and to alienate the Minds of all the Engliſh Proteſtants from His Majeſty. It was again very Providential, that this Offer was likewiſe Rejected; for the Acceptance of it, muſt have prevented, or at leaſt retarded the Deſigns of the Prince of Orange.

K. James at laſt convinc'd of an Invaſion from Holland.

King James was too late convinc'd of the Truth of an Intended Invaſion; and therefore He now (too late) began to ſoften Matters, and, if poſſible, to reconcile the Hearts of his People to him. To this Purpoſe, after having Declar'd in Council, on Aug. 24th, That He had Reſolv'd to Call a Parliament to Meet on the 27th of November next; He Publiſh'd a Declaration on Septemb. 21. That it was His Royal Purpoſe, to endeavour a Legal Eſtabliſhment of an Univerſal Liberty of Conſcience for all His Subjects. That it was alſo His Reſolution, Inviolably to Preſerve the Church of England; and that He ſhou'd be willing the Roman-Catholicks ſhou'd remain Incapable to be Members of the Houſe of Commons. And He did likewiſe aſſure all his Loving Subjects, That he ſhou'd be ready to do every thing elſe, for their Safety and Advantage, that becomes a King who will always take Care of His People.

He Publiſhes a Declaration,

And many fair Promiſes,

On Septemb. 26. He was pleas'd farther to Declare, That He had Authoriz'd and Impower'd the Lords-Lieutenants of the ſeveral Counties, to Grant Deputations to ſuch Gentlemen as had been lately Removed from being Deputy-Lieutenants: And that He had farther given Directions to the Right-Honourable the Lord-Chancellor of England to put into the Commiſſion of the Peace, ſuch Gentlemen as had been laid aſide. And on Septemb. 28. the King Publiſh'd a Proclamation, That He had receiv'd undoubted Advice, That a great and ſudden Invaſion from Holland, with an Arm'd Force of Foreigners and Strangers, wou'd ſpeedily be made, in an Hoſtile manner, upon this His Kingdom; and that no leſs Matter, by this Invaſion, was propos'd and purpos'd, than an abſolute Conqueſt of theſe His Kingdoms, and the utter Subduing and Subjecting Him and all His People to a Foreign Power; which was promoted (although it may ſeem almoſt incredible) by ſome of His Subjects, being Perſons of Wicked and Reſtleſs Spirits, Implacable Malice, and Deſperate Deſigns. — That although He had Notice ſome time ſince, That a Foreign Force was Preparing againſt Him; yet He had always declin'd any Foreign Succours, but rather had choſen, next under God, to rely upon the true and ancient Courage, Faith and Allegiance of His Own People. — That He had intended to have Met His Parliament in November next; but in regard of this ſtrange and unreaſonable Attempt from his neighbouring Country, (without any manner of Provocation) He found it neceſſary to Recall His ſaid Writs. And foraſmuch as the approaching Danger, now at hand, wou'd require a great and vigorous Defence, He do's ſtrictly Charge and Command all His Loving Subjects, both by Sea and Land, to be Prepared to Defend their Country, &c. 1688.

And a ſerious Proclamation.

Other ſoftning Methods.

On Septemb. 30th, the King gave this farther Satisfaction, in theſe words, from Whitehall: "Several of my Lords the Biſhops having At- "tended the King on Friday laſt, His Majeſty "was pleas'd, among other Gracious Expreſſions, "to let them know, That He wou'd ſignifie His "Pleaſure for Taking off the Suſpenſion of the Lord "Biſhop of London, which is done accordingly.

And becauſe there had been a confident Report, That there was a Secret League between the Kings of England and France, in prejudice to the Intereſt of Holland, and the Common Liberties of Europe; Therefore, on Octob. 6th, N. S. the Marqueſs D'Albyville (Envoy-Extraordinary from His Majeſty) had a Conference with Eight Deputies of the States-General, and deliver'd them the following Memorial.

A Memorial to the States, denying the Treaty betwixt England and France.

THE under-written Envoy-Extraordinary from the King of Great-Britain, has receiv'd Order to repreſent to Your Lordſhips, "That al- "though His Majeſty had believ'd, that what he had "already declar'd to your Ambaſſador in England, "and the Orders he had given to His ſaid Envoy- "Extraordinary upon the ſame Subject, might "have ſatisfy'd Your Lordſhips, That there is "no other Treaty between His Majeſty and the "Moſt Chriſtian King, than thoſe that are Pub- "lick, and in Print: Yet ſince a great deal of "Artifice and Induſtry has been made uſe of, to "make the World believe that the King his Maſter "is entred into other Treaties and Alliances with "the Moſt Chriſtian King; His Majeſty, to ſhew the "great Regard he has to the Friendſhip and Al- "liances which are between Him and Your Lord- "ſhips, and His Deſire to Continue the ſame, "has Commanded the ſaid Envoy-Extraordinary, "in His Name, to aſſure Your Lordſhips, That "there is no other Treaty between His Majeſty "and the Moſt Chriſtian King, than thoſe that "are Publick, and in Print. And farther, That "as His Majeſty extremely deſires the Preſerva- "tion of the Peace and Repoſe of Chriſtendom, "ſo He will be alſo glad to take ſuch Meaſures "with Your Lordſhips, as may be moſt conve- "nient for maintaining the Peace of Nimeguen, "and the Truce of Twenty Years, Concluded "in 1684.

Given at the Hague, the 5th of Octob. 1688.

M. D'Albyville.

1688. And yet this Memorial was ſuſpected to be another Blind, at a Juncture when every thing was thought Lawful that could gain a Point. There was afterward Publiſh'd An Account of the Private League betwixt the late King James II. and the French King, In a Letter from a Gentleman in London to a Gentleman in the Country.

To Encourage the Principal Nobility and Gentry to come in to the King's Aſſiſtance; it was Publiſh'd, Sept. 30. "That his Grace the "Duke of Newcaſtle, the Earl of Lindſey, the "Earl of Derby, the Lord Germaine, and others "of the Nobility, had, upon the News of the "intended Invaſion, humbly offer'd their Ser- "vices to His Majeſty, who received very gra- "ciouſly that Tender of their Duty, and had "ſent Commiſſions to ſeveral of them to raiſe "Men in their Countries". And within Two or Three Days Publick Notice was further given, "That ſeveral of the Nobility and Gentry had "daily offer'd their Service to the King, and "were raiſing Men: And that His Majeſty had "been pleaſed to give a Commiſſion to his Grace "the Duke of Newcaſtle, to raiſe a Regiment of "Foot; to the Lord Brandon, and the Marqueſs "de Miremont, Nephew to the Earl of Feverſham, each a Regiment of Horſe; to Colonel "Henry Gage and Colonel Solomon Richards, Re- "giments of Foot, and many Independent Troops "and Companies to ſeveral of the Nobility and Gentry". And after this other Advertiſements were given, "That among ſeveral of the Nobi- "lity and Gentry who continued to offer their Ser- "vices to His Majeſty, were, the Lord-Marqueſs "of Winchеſter, the Earls of Pembroke, Weſtmore- "land and Denbigh, and the Lord Hunting- "tower.

Offer of Services to the King.

Other Arts of Sweetning the People.

To Sweeten, and, if poſſible, to Secure the City of London, Information was given, Oct. 2. "That the Lord-Mayor, Aldermen and Sheriffs, "with ſeveral other Eminent Citizens had At- "tended the King that Evening, and His Ma- "jeſty was pleaſed to tell them, That out of "his Concern for the Peace and Welfare of the "City, and, as a Mark of the great Confidence "He had in them at this Time, that the King- "dom is threatned with an Invaſion, He had "reſolved to Reſtore them to their Ancient "Charter and Privileges, and to put them into "the ſame Condition they were at the Time of the "Judgment pronounced againſt them upon the Quo "Warranto; That ſo they might be the better "enabled to Serve him with that Duty and Loy- "alty which they had given the King his Bro- "ther, and Himſelf ſo many Teſtimonies of, and "upon which His Majeſty would now depend. Accordingly within Four Days after, the Lord-Chancellor himſelf carried into the City, the "Inſtrument of Reſtitution and Confirmation "under the Great Seal of England, and Sir John "Chapman thereby Conſtituted Lord-Mayor, was "Sworn in the Guild-Hall with the uſual Solem- "nity, and the Aldermen then in being, that "were, at the Time of the ſaid Judgment, took "their former Places, and the Vacancies were "to be ſupply'd by the Election of the Citizens "according to the ancient Cuſtom of the City.

The King adviſes with the Arch-Biſhop and Biſhops.

On Wedneſday Oct. 3. the Arch-Biſhop of Canterbury, and the Biſhops of London, Winchеſter, St. Aſaph, Ely, Chicheſter, Rocheſter, Bath and Wells, and Peterborough, waited upon the King according to an Invitation and Encouragement of His Majeſty, who had lately told them, That He deſir'd the Aſſiſtance of their Counſels in this preſent Exigency, aſſuring them, That He was ready to do whatever they ſhould think neceſſary for the Security of the Proteſtant Religion, and of his Peoples Rights, without derogating from his own Prerogatives. And therefore He deſir'd them to Conſult together, and bring their Opinions to Him; They came therefore now with the Arch-Biſhop at the Head of them, who Addreſs'd himſelf to his Majeſty in this Manner. 1687.

May it Pleaſe Your MAJESTY;

Their Anſwer to His Majeſty.

"WHEN I had lately the Honour to wait upon You, You were pleaſed briefly to Acquaint me with what had paſſed Two Days before between Your Majeſty and theſe my Reverend Brethren: By which, and by the Account which they themſelves gave me, I perceived that in Truth, there paſſed nothing, but in very general Terms and Expreſſions of Your Majeſty's Gracious and Favourable Inclinations to the Church of England, and of our reciprocal Duty and Loyalty to Your Majeſty: Both which were ſufficiently underſtood and declared before; and, (as one of my Brethren then told You) would have been in the ſame State, if the Biſhops had not ſtirr'd one Foot out of their Dioceſſes. SIR, I found it Grieved my Lords, the Biſhops, to have come ſo far, and to have done ſo little; and I am aſſured they came then prepared to have given Your Majeſty ſome more particular Inſtances of their Duty and Zeal for Your Service, had they not apprehended from ſome Words which fell from Your Majeſty, That You were not then at Leiſure to receive them. It was for this Reaſon that I then beſought Your Majeſty, to Command us once more to Attend You all together, which Your Majeſty was pleaſed Graciouſly to Allow and Encourage. We therefore are here now before You with all Humility to beg Your Permiſſion, That we may Suggeſt to Your Majeſty ſuch Advices as we think proper at this Seaſon, and conducing to your Service, and ſo leave them to your Princely Conſideration. Which the King being graciouſly pleaſed to permit, the Arch-Biſhop proceeded as followeth.

"1. Our Firſt Humble Advice is, That Your "Majeſty will be graciouſly pleaſed to put the "Management of your Government in the ſe- "veral Counties, into the Hands of ſuch of the "Nobility and Gentry there, as are Legally qua- "lified for it.

2. That Your Majeſty will be graciouſly "pleaſed to annul your Commiſſion for Eccleſia- "ſtical Affairs, and that no ſuch Court, as that "Commiſſion ſets up, may be erected for the fu- "ture.

"3. That Your Majeſty will graciouſly be "pleaſed, That no Diſpenſation may be granted "or continued, by Virtue whereof, any Perſon "not duely qualified by Law, hath been, or "may be put into any Place, Office or Prefer- "ment, in Church or State, or in the Univer- "ſities, or continued in the ſame, eſpecially ſuch "as have Cure of Souls annexed to them; "and in particular, That You will be gra- "ciouſly pleaſed to reſtore the Preſident and Fel- "lows of St. Mary-Magdalen-College in Oxford.

4. That Your Majeſty will graciouſly be "pleaſed to ſet aſide all Licences or Faculties "already Granted, by which any Perſons of the "Romiſh Communion may pretend to be Enabled "to Teach Publick Schools; and that no ſuch be "Granted for the future.

"5. That Your Majeſty will be graciouſly "pleaſed to deſiſt from the Exerciſe of ſuch a "Diſpenſing Power, as hath of late been uſed; "and to permit that Point to be freely and "and calmly Debated and Argued, and finally "Setled in Parliament.

"6. That

1688. " 6. That Your Majeſty will be graciouſly pleaſed to inhibit the Four Foreign Biſhops, who ſtile themſelves Vicars-Apoſtolical, from further invading the Eccleſiaſtical-Juriſdiction, which is by Law Veſted in the Biſhops of this Church.

" 7. That Your Majeſty will be pleaſed graciouſly to fill the vacant Biſhopricks, and other Eccleſiaſtical-Promotions within your Gift, both in England and Ireland, with Men of Learning and Piety; and in particular, (which I muſt own to be my peculiar Boldneſs, for 'tis done without the Privity of my Brethren) That You will be graciouſly pleaſed forthwith to fill the Arch-Epiſcopal Chair of York (which has ſo long ſtood empty, and upon which a whole Province depends) with ſome very worthy Perſon: For which (Pardon me, SIR, if I am bold to ſay) you have now here before you a very fair Choice.

8. " That Your Majeſty will be graciouſly pleaſed to Superſede all further Proſecution of Quo Warranto's againſt Corporations, and to reſtore to them their ancient Charters, Priviledges and Franchiſes, as we hear God hath put into Your Majeſty's Heart to do for the City of London, which we intended to have made otherwiſe one of our Principal Requeſts.

" 9. That if it pleaſe Your Majeſty Writs may be iſſued out with convenient Speed, for the calling of a Free and Regular Parliament, in which the Church of England may be Secured according to the Acts of Uniformity; Proviſion may be made for a due Liberty of Conſcience, and for Securing the Liberties and Properties of all Your Subjects; and a mutual Confidence and good Underſtanding may be Eſtabliſhed between Your Majeſty and all Your People.

" 10. Above all, That Your Majeſty will be graciouſly pleaſed to permit Your Biſhops to offer You ſuch Motives and Arguments as (we truſt) may, by God's Grace, be effectual to perſwade Your Majeſty to return to the Communion of the Church of England, into whoſe Moſt Holy Catholick Faith You were Baptized, and in which You were Educated, and to which it is our Daily Earneſt Prayer to God, that You may be Re-united.

" Theſe, SIR, are the Humble Advices, which out of Conſcience of the Duty we owe to God, to Your Majeſty, and to our Country, We think fit at this Time to offer to Your Majeſty, as ſuitable to the preſent State of Your Affairs, and moſt conducing to Your Service; and ſo to leave them to Your Princely-Conſideration. And we heartily Beſeech Almighty God, in whoſe Hand the Hearts of all Kings are, ſo to diſpoſe and govern Yours, that in all Your Thoughts, Words and Works, You may ever ſeek his Honour and Glory, and ſtudy to preſerve the People committed to Your Charge, in Wealth, Peace and Godlineſs, to Your own both Temporal and Eternal Happineſs: Amen.

We do heartily Concur.

The King promiſes to comply with their Lordſhips Advice.

Theſe Propoſals would at another Time have rais'd the King's Indignation, but the Neceſſity of his Affairs obliged him now to Thank their Lordſhips, and to promiſe that He would comply with them. Accordingly on Oct. 5. " His Majeſty was graciouſly pleaſed to Declare in Council, " That in Purſuance of his Reſolution and Intentions to Protect the Church of England, " and that all Suſpicions and Jealouſies to the " contrary may be removed, He had thought fit 1688.

Yet ſoon after, that News being contradicted, and the Dutch Fleet reported to be in a Sailing-Poſture, the Affection to the Church of England reviv'd, and ſo the Buſineſs of the College was effected on the 24th of that Month. This Paſſage is the more remarkable, becauſe it loſt King James many Friends, and leſſened him in his Character and Intereſt, as if his Politicks were to change with the Wind, and as News varied He was playing Faſt and Looſe with his Subjects.

General Belief of an Impoſture, in the Prince of Wales.

This Triumph of Popery, did but ſerve to encreaſe the General Suſpicion and Report of an Impoſture; and a Common Fame was ſpread, That the Mother of the Prince of Wales was to be brought over in the Dutch Fleet. To ſtifle this News, the Privy-Council was Aſſembled; where were likewiſe preſent, by His Majeſty's Deſire and Appointment, the Queen-Dowager, and ſuch of the Peers, both Spiritual and Temporal, as were in Town, as alſo the Lord-Mayor and Aldermen of London, and the Judges, and ſeveral of Their Majeſties Councel Learn'd in the Law; and then the Ladies, Lords, and Others that were preſent at the Queen's Labour, did Appear there, and Declar'd upon Oath, what they knew of the Birth of His Royal Highneſs the Prince of Wales: Of all which, a full and particular Relation was made Publick, and was Inroll'd in Chancery, to very little Purpoſe.

The King labours to wipe off the Suſpicion.

Places and Honours.

Under this Affrightment, His Majeſty was pleas'd to make the Earl of Derby Lord-Lieutenant of the Counties of Cheſter and Lancaſter, the Earl of Oxford Lord-Lieutenant of Eſſex, and the Earl of Feverſham Lord-Lieutenant of Kent: The Duke of Berwick and the Duke of Ormond were Honour'd with Garters; and the former, who was a little diſcontented becauſe he did not Command the Fleet, was made Governor of the Tower, in the room of Sir Edward Hales a Roman-Catholick: And on Octob. 28 His Majeſty was pleas'd to Conſtitute the Right-Honourable the Lord Viſcount Preſton One of His Principal-Secretaries of State, upon the Removal of the Earl of Sunderland from that Office, whom the King diſcover'd (as He did other things) too late, to be inclinable to the expected Revolution.

Prince of Orange Prepares for England;

While King James was under theſe Diſtractions at Home and Abroad, the Prince of Orange was Embarking his Troops with extraordinary Diligence; and to juſtifie His Undertaking to the whole World, He Publiſh'd a Declaration, Dated Octob. 10. N. S. divided into Six and twenty Articles, which may be reduc'd to Three Principal Heads.

Publiſhes a Declaration.

"The Firſt contain'd an Enumeration of the "Grievances of the Engliſh Nation, particularly "His Majeſty's Arrogating to Himſelf a Diſpenſing Power; His Advancing Papiſts to Civil, "Eccleſiaſtical and Military Employments, and "allowing them to Sit in the Privy-Council: His "Setting up an Illegal Commiſſion for Eccleſiaſtical Affairs, (in which there was one of His Majeſty's Miniſters of State, who made Publick "Profeſſion of the Popiſh Religion, and who, at "the time of his firſt Profeſſing it, declar'd, "That for a great while before, he had believ'd "that to be the only True Religion;) and by "which not only the Biſhop of London was "Suſpended, but the Preſident and Fellows of "Magdalen-College Arbitrarily Turn'd out of their "Free-holds, contrary to that expreſs Proviſion "in Magna Charta, That no Man ſhall loſe Life, or "Goods, but by the Law of the Land: His Allowing Popiſh Monaſteries, and Colleges of Jeſuits, "to be Created: His Turning out of Publick Employments, all ſuch as would not Concur with "His Majeſty, in the Repeal of the Teſt, and Penal 1688.
"Laws: His Invading the Privileges, and Seizing
"on the Charters of moſt Corporotions, and Placing
"Popiſh Magiſtrates in ſome of them: His Subject-
"ing the Courts of Judicature to His Arbitrary and
"Deſpotick Power, and putting the Adminiſtration
"of Juſtice into the Hands of Papiſts: His not "only Arming the Papiſts, in Contempt of the "Laws, but likewiſe raiſing them up to the "greateſt Military Truſt, both by Sea and Land,
"Strangers aſwell as Natives, and Iriſh aſwell as
"Engliſh, that He might be in a Capacity to
"Enſlave the Nation: His putting the whole
"Government of Ireland into the Hands of Papiſts:
"His Aſſuming an Abſolute and Arbitrary Power
"in the Kingdom of Scotland; from which it was "apparent, what was to be look'd for in England.
Secondly, "His Highneſs alledg'd, That thoſe great "and inſufferable Oppreſſions, and the open Con-
"tempt of all Law, together with the Apprehen-
"ſions of the ſad Conſequences that muſt certainly "follow upon it, had made the Subjects to look
"after ſuch Remedies as are allow'd of in all Na"tions, and in the moſt Abſolute Monarchies; all
"which had been without Effect: His Majeſty's
"Evil-Counſellors having endeavour'd to make all
"Men apprehend the Loſs of their Lives, Liber-
"ties, Honours and Eſtates, if they ſhou'd go
"about to preſerve themſelves from this Oppreſ-
"ſion, by Petitions and Repreſentations; an Inſtance
"of which, was the Proſecution of the Seven Biſhops:
"That a Peer of the Realm was treated as a Cri"minal, only becauſe he ſaid, *That the Subjects
"were not bound to Obey the Orders of a* Popiſh
"Juſtice of Peace; though 'tis evident, That
"they being by Law render'd Incapable of all
"ſuch Truſts, no Regard is due to their Orders:
"That both He, and His Conſort the Princeſs,
"had endeavour'd to ſignifie, with Terms full of
"Reſpect to the King, the juſt and deep Regret
"which all theſe Proceedings had given Them, and
"declar'd what their Thoughts were, touching
"the Repealing of the Teſts, and Penal Laws; but "that theſe Evil-Counſellors had put ſuch Ill Con-
"ſtructions on their Good Intentions, that they "had endeavour'd to alienate the King more and "more from them. That the laſt and great "Remedy for all theſe Evils, was, the *Calling of a
"Parliament*; which cou'd not yet be compaſs'd,
"nor cou'd be eaſily brought about: For thoſe
"Men apprehending, that a Lawful Parliament
"wou'd bring them to Account for all their open
"Violations of Law, and for their Conſpiracies
"againſt the Proteſtant Religion, and the Lives
"and Liberties of the Subjects; they had endea-
"vour'd, under the ſpecious Pretence of *Liberty
"of Conſcience*, firſt to ſow Diviſions between
"thoſe of the Church of England and Diſſenters,
"with Deſign to Engage Proteſtants, who are "equally concern'd to preſerve themſelves from
"Popiſh Oppreſſion, into mutual Quarrellings;
"that ſo, by theſe, ſome Advantages might be "given to them to bring about their Deſigns; and
"that, both in Elections of Members of Parlia-
"ment, and afterwards in the Parliament itſelf:
"That they had alſo made ſuch Regulations as "they thought fit and neceſſary, for Securing all the "Members that were to be Choſen by the Cor-
"porations; by which means, they hop'd to "avoid the Puniſhment they had deſerv'd; though
"it was apparent, that all Acts made by Popiſh
"Magiſtrates, were Null and Void of themſelves:
"So that no Parliament cou'd be Lawful, for "which the Elections and Returns were made by
"Popiſh Magiſtrates, Sheriffs and Mayors of "Towns; and therefore as long as the Magiſtracy
"was in ſuch Hands, it was not poſſible to have a
"Free Parliament, Legally Call'd and Choſen.
"That there were great and violent Preſumptions,
"inducing

1688. " inducing His Highneſs to believe, that thoſe " Evil-Counſellors, in order to the gaining the " more Time for the Effecting of their Ill Deſigns, " had Publiſh'd, That the Queen had brought- " forth a Son; though there had appear'd, both " during the Queen's pretended Bigneſs, and in " the Manner wherein the Birth was managed, ſo " many juſt and viſible Grounds of Suſpicion, that " not only He Himſelf, but all the good Subjects " of this Kingdom, did vehemently ſuſpect, That " the pretended Prince of Wales was not born of " the Queen. And though many both doubted " of the Queen's Bigneſs, and of the Birth of the " Child; yet there was not any one thing done " to ſatisfie them, or put an end to their Doubts. " That ſince His Conſort the Princeſs, and like- " wiſe He Himſelf, had ſo great an Intereſt in " this Matter, and ſuch a Right as all the World " knew to the Succeſſion of the Crown; ſince all " the Engliſh did in the Year 1672, when Holland " was Invaded with a moſt Unjuſt War, uſe their " utmoſt Endeavours to put an End to that War, " and that in Oppoſition to thoſe who were then " in the Government; ſince the Engliſh Nation had " ever teſtify'd a moſt particular Affection and " Eſteem both to His Highneſs's Deareſt Conſort, " and to Himſelf, He could not excuſe Himſelf " from eſpouſing that Intereſt, in a Matter of " ſuch high Conſequence, and from contributing " all that in Him lay, for the Maintaining both " of the Proteſtant Religion, and of the Laws and " Liberties of theſe Kingdoms: To the doing of " which, His Highneſs was moſt earneſtly Solicited by " a great-many Lords, both Spiritual and Temporal, " and by many Gentlemen, and other Subjects of " all Ranks.

Laſtly, " His Highneſs Declar'd, That for the " foremention'd Reaſons, He has thought fit to " Go over to England, and to Carry with Him " a Force ſufficient to Defend Him from the " Violence of thoſe Evil-Counſellors: That His " Expedition was intended for no other Deſign, " but to have a Free and Lawful Parliament " Aſſembled, aſſoon as it was poſſible; and that " in order to this, all the late Charters, by which " the Elections of Burgeſſes were Limited, contrary " to the Ancient Cuſtom, ſhou'd be conſider'd as " Null, and of no Force. That to this Parliament, " He wou'd refer the Enquiry into the Birth of the " pretended Prince of Wales, and of all Things " relating thereto, and to the Right of Succeſſion. " That He wou'd Concur in every thing that " might procure the Peace and Happineſs of the " Nation, under a Juſt and Legal Government. " That He wou'd keep the Forces under His Com- " mand, under all the Strictneſs of Martial Diſci- " pline; and promis'd, that He would ſend-back " all thoſe Foreign Forces, aſſoon as the State of " the Nation wou'd admit of it. That therefore, " He Invited and Required all Perſons whatſoever " to Come and Aſſiſt Him, in order to the Execu- " ting his Deſign, againſt all ſuch as ſhou'd en- " deavour to Oppoſe Him. That He wou'd like- " wiſe take Care that a Parliament ſhou'd be Call'd " in Scotland, for Reſtoring the Ancient Conſtitution " of that Kingdom, and for bringing the Matters " of Religion to ſuch a Settlement, that the People " might live Eaſie and Happy. That He wou'd " alſo ſtudy to bring the Kingdom of Ireland to " ſuch a State, that the Settlement there might be " Religiouſly Obſerv'd, and that the Proteſtant " and Britiſh Intereſt there might be Secured. And Concludes thus; " That He wou'd endeavour, " by all poſſible Means, to procure ſuch an " Eſtabliſhment throughout all the Three Kingdoms, " that they might all Live in a Happy Union " and Correſpondence together; and that the " Proteſtant Religion, and the Peace, Honour and " Happineſs of theſe Nations might be Eſtabliſh'd " upon Laſting Foundations.

This Declaration was ready to be ſent-over to England, with another to the ſame Purpoſe for Scotland; when His Highneſs being inform'd, that King James, by Granting moſt of the Biſhops Demands, had taken Meaſures to render it ineffectual, caus'd the following Addition to be made to it. 1688.

" After We had Prepar'd and Printed Our " Declaration, We have underſtood, that the Sub- " verters of the Religion and Laws of theſe King- " doms, hearing of Our Preparations to Aſſiſt " the People againſt them, have begun to retract " ſome of the Arbitrary and Deſpotick Powers that " they had aſſum'd, and to vacate ſome of their " Unjuſt Judgments and Decrees: The Senſe of " their Guilt, and the Diſtruſt of their Force, " have induc'd them to offer to the City of London, " ſome ſeeming Relief from their great Oppreſſions; " hoping thereby to quiet the People, and to divert " them from demanding a Re-eſtabliſhment of " their Religion and Laws, under the Shelter of " Our Arms: They did alſo give out, That We " do intend to Conquer and Enſlave the Nations; " And therefore it is We have thought fit to add " a few Words to Our Declaration.

" We are confident, that no Perſons can have " ſuch hard Thoughts of Us, as to imagine We " have any other Deſign in this Our Undertaking, " than to procure a Settlement of the Religion, " and of the Liberties and Properties of the Sub- " jects, upon ſo ſure a Foundation, that there may " be no Danger of the Nation's relapſing into the " like Miſeries at any time hereafter. And as " the Forces We have brought along with Us, are " utterly Diſproportion'd to that Wicked Deſign " of Conquering the Nation, if We were capable " of Intending it; ſo the great Numbers of the " Principal Nobility and Gentry, that are Men " of Eminent Qualities and Eſtates, and Perſons " of known Integrity and Zeal both for the Reli- " gion and Government of England, many of them " being alſo Diſtinguiſh'd by their conſtant Fide- " lity to the Crown, who do both Accompany Us " in this Expedition, and have earneſtly Solicited " Us to it, will cover Us from all ſuch malicious " Inſinuations: For it is not to be imagin'd, that " either Thoſe who have Invited Us, or Thoſe " who are already come to Aſſiſt Us, can join " in a Wicked Attempt of Conqueſt, to make void " their own Lawful Titles to their Honours, " Eſtates and Intereſts.

" We are alſo confident, that all Men ſee how " little weight there is to be laid on all Promiſes " and Engagements that can be now made, ſince " there has been ſo little Regard had in the time " paſt to the moſt ſolemn Promiſes. And as that " imperfect Redreſs that is now offer'd, is a plain " Confeſſion of thoſe Violences of the Government " that we have ſet-forth; ſo the Defectiveneſs of " it is no leſs apparent: For they lay-down no- " thing which they may not take-up at Pleaſure; " and they reſerve entire, and not ſo-much as " mention their Claims and Pretences to an " Arbitrary and Deſpotick Power; which has been " the Root of all their Oppreſſion, and of the " total Subverſion of the Government. And it " is plain, that there can be no Redreſs, no " Remedy offer'd, but in Parliament, by a Decla- " ration of the Rights of the Subjects that have " been Invaded, and not by any pretended Acts of " Grace, to which the Extremity of their Affairs " has driven them. Therefore it is that We have " thought fit to Declare, That We will refer All " to a Free Aſſembly of this Nation, in a Lawful " Parliament.

King James, by a Proclamation Dated Nov. 2d, endeavour'd to keep the Prince's Declaration from the knowledge of the People; but it was the more induſtriouſly ſpread: So that the Court itſelf thought

K. James's Proclama- tion.

1688. thought fit it ſhou'd be Printed, with ſome ſpecious Animadverſions upon it. And about the ſametime, this Letter of the Prince to the Engliſh Army was likewiſe Printed.

Gentlemen and Friends,

The Prince of Orange's Letter to the Engliſh Army.

" WE have given you ſo full and true an Account of Our Intentions in this Expedition, in Our Declaration; that as We can add nothing to it, ſo We aſſure Our Selves you can deſire nothing more of Us. We are come to Preſerve your Religion, and to Reſtore and Eſtabliſh your Liberties and Properties: And therefore We cannot ſuffer Our Selves to doubt, but that all true Engliſh-Men will come to Concur with Us, in Our Deſire to ſecure theſe Nations from Popery and Slavery. You muſt all plainly ſee, that you are only made uſe of, as Inſtruments to Enſlave the Nation, and Ruine the Proteſtant Religion: And when that is done, you may judge, what your ſelves ought to expect, both from the Caſhiering of all the Proteſtants, both Engliſh Officers and Soldiers in Ireland, and by the Iriſh Soldiers being brought over to be put in your Places; and of which you have ſeen ſo freſh an Inſtance, that We need not put you in mind of it. You know how Ill many of your Fellow-Officers have been uſed, for their ſtanding Firm for the Proteſtant Religion, and to the Laws of England; and you cannot flatter Your Selves ſo far, as to expect to be better uſed, if thoſe who have broke their Word ſo often, ſhou'd, by your Means, be brought out of thoſe Straits to which they are reduc'd at preſent. We hope likewiſe you will not ſuffer your ſelves to be abus'd, by a falſe-Notion of Honour; but that you will, in the firſt place, conſider what you owe to Almighty GOD, and your Religion, to your Country, to your Selves, and to your Poſterity; which you, as Men of Honour, ought to prefer to all private Conſiderations and Engagements whatſoever. We do therefore expect, that you will conſider the Honour that is now ſet before you, of being the Inſtruments of Serving your Country, and Securing your Religion: And We will ever Remember the Service you will do Us upon this Occaſion; and will Promiſe unto you, That We ſhall place ſuch particular Marks of Our Favour on every one of you, as your Behaviour at this time ſhall deſerve of Us, and the Nation. In which We will make a great Diſtinction of thoſe that ſhall ſeaſonably Join their Arms with Ours: And you ſhall find Us to be,

Your Well-wiſhing
and Aſſured Friend,

W. H. P. O.

This Letter was ſpread (under-hand) through the whole Army and Militia, and had a ſtrange Effect upon the Minds of them; for they now at leaſt Reſolv'd never to Draw their Swords againſt His Highneſs, till the Religion and Liberties of England were Secured: And Admiral Herbert, from on-board the Leyden at the Goree, wrote a Letter to the Engliſh Fleet, that had the like Influence upon the Sea-men, Concluding thus; I, as a True Engliſh-man, and your Friend, Exhort you to Join your Arms to the Prince, for the Defence of the Common-Cauſe, the Proteſtant Religion, and the Liberties of your Country. It is, what I am well-aſſur'd, the major and beſt-part of the Army aſwel as the Nation will do, aſſoon as Conveniencies offer. Prevent them, in ſo-good an Action, whilſt it is in your Power; and may it appear, That as the Kingdom hath always Depended on the Navy for its Defence; ſo you will yet go farther by making it as much as in you lies, the Protection of her Religion and Liberties; and then you may aſſure your ſelves of all Marks of Favour and Honour ſuitable to the Merits of ſo great and glorious an Action.

Letter of Admiral Herbert to the Engliſh Fleet.

The Prince was now ready to Embark, and therefore on the 26th of Oct. N. S. He went into the Aſſembly of the States-General to take his Leave of them, and deliver'd himſelf to this Effect; " That He was infinitely oblig'd to them, " and was ſorry He had no Opportunity to " ſhew his Inclination, Love and Affection unto " Them as They had done to Him: That He " had hitherto been Encouraged and Supported " by their Aſſiſtance, which they had ſo abundantly contributed to him, both by Counſel " and otherwiſe: That it was needleſs for him " to Re-capitulate the Reaſons which induced Him " to leave his Native Country: That He Hop'd " and Pray'd, That God would endue him with " Wiſdom, Foreſight and Courage, and not with-" draw his Arm from him in Time of Need: " That He called God to Witneſs He did not " undertake ſuch an Arduous Affair, but for his " Glory: That his only Aim was for the Ho-" nour of God, the Welfare of their Country, " and of the Chriſtian Religion; and that there-" fore He hoped God would beſtow his Bleſſing on " it, and if by the Bleſſing of God He ſhould " attain his Ends, to ſet the States at greater " Liberty, and Free them from the Fear of their " Neighbours, and the haughty Tyranny of thoſe " that would enſlave them: That He had left " the Care of the Army to Prince Waldeck, and " earneſtly deſir'd the States to Aſſiſt him, and " to be Unanimous among themſelves". Here He ſeem'd to ſtop, and after ſome Pauſe He paſſionately recommended one Thing more to them, " That as He did not know how God might " diſpoſe of him ſince He had put on his Sword, " and knew not when He ſhould put it off; " But in Caſe God ſhould let that befal him " which had happened to many others, and that " he ſhould loſe his Life in the Expedition, They " would then take the Princeſs, his Wife, under " their Protection, who was as well-affected to " that Country and the Proteſtant Religion, as " He himſelf was; and He was ſatisfy'd She " could no-where find ſuch a Secure Place as " under the Wings of the States: That He had " but One Thing more to deſire, which was, " That they would always remember him in " their Publick and Private Prayers, as in his own " he ſhould have the ſame Regard for them". With which the Tears ran down his Face, and the Penſionary return'd him an Anſwer in a very affectionate Manner.

Speech of the Prince of Orange to the States-General.

On Oct. 20th, the Dutch Fleet, conſiſting of 52 Men of War, 25 Frigots, as many Fire-ſhips, with near 400 Victuallers and other Veſſels for Tranſportation of 3560 Horſe, and 10692 Foot, Sail'd from the Flats near the Brill, with the Wind S.W.S. The Prince Embark'd on a Frigot of about 30 Guns, and with him Count Naſſau, General of the Horſe; Colonel De Soames, Colonel of his Foot-Guards; Count Stirum, Monſieur Auverquerque, Monſieur Bentink, and Monſieur Zeuleſtein. In the other Ships were many of the Nobility and Gentry of England, of which the Chief were, the Earl of Shrewsbury, the Earl of Macclesfield, Viſcount Mordant, the Earl of Argile, the Lord Wiltſhire, the Lord Pawlet, the Lord Elan, Son to the Marqueſs of Halliſax, and the Lord Dunblaine, Admiral Herbert, Mr. Henry Herbert, Mr. Sidney, Mr. Ruſſel, Sir Rowland Gwyn, Major Wildman, Mr. Harbord, Dr. Burnet, Mr. Liſter, and many others. And among Foreigners were the Great-Mareſchal Schomberg, with his Son, Count

The Prince Embarks.

1688. Count Charles Schonberg; Monſieur Calimote, Son to the Marqueſs De Ruvigni, and Two or Three Hundred French-Officers, who had left their Country for their Religion. Admiral Herbert had the Van of the Fleet, Vice-Admiral Everſon brought up the Rear, and the Prince placed himſelf in the Main-Body, carrying a Flag with Engliſh Colours, and their Highneſſes Arms with this Motto, The Proteſtant Religion and the Liberties of England. And underneath it the Motto of the Houſe of Naſſau, Je maintiendrai. The Fleet were all under Sail, when the Wind coming more Weſtwardly, there aroſe ſuch a Violent Storm in the Night, which continu'd with ſo much Fury for Twelve Hours, That they were forced to return to Helvoet-ſluice, or put into other Harbours.

The Dutch Fleet driven back by a Storm.

This a great Joy to the Engliſh Court

This Diſaſter was a mighty Joy to the Papiſts, and Care was taken to aggravate the Loſs in the Engliſh Gazette; That 400 Horſes had been thrown over Board, and ſeveral dead Men, One of their Men of War Stranded, and another Diſabled. And then again, That the Damage ſuſtain'd by the Dutch Fleet did appear to be much greater than was at firſt reported: That there were 1500 Horſes dead and unſerviceable; the Prince of Orange had loſt moſt of his own, and the Mareſchal Schonberg the beſt of his Horſes; his Son, Count Charles, was in great Danger, the Ship he was in having ſpent her Main-Maſt; a Captain of Horſe in the Sieur Bentinck's Regiment was miſſing, with his whole Troop; and Two Captains of the Foot-Guards were likewiſe miſſing, with their Companies, &c. The ſame aggravating Reports were induſtriouſly ſpread in Holland, with a different Deſign for to make the Engliſh Court more remiſs in their Preparations; the Harlem and Amſterdam Gazettes were order'd to make a Lamentable Relation of the great Damages the Dutch-Fleet and the Army a-board them, had ſuſtain'd. Nine of the Men of War loſt, beſides others of leſs Value; 1000 Horſes caſt over-board; Dr. Burnet and ſeveral Engliſh Gentlemen drown'd; what an ill Opinion the States-General had of the Expedition; and that it was next to an Impoſſibility, that the Prince could be in a Condition to purſue his Deſign till the next Spring.

In the mean Time Captain Langham, who belong'd to one of the Engliſh Regiments in Holland, and was juſt arriv'd from thence, was Seized upon Suſpicion, and in his Portmanteau were found a Bundle of the Prince of Orange's Declarations, which were the firſt that were brought over. When that Expreſſion came to be read, That the Prince was moſt earneſtly invited hither by divers of the Lords both Spiritual and Temporal, and by many Gentlemen and others; The King ſent for the Arch-Biſhop of Canterbury, and Two or Three more who were then in Town, and asked them, whether the Contents of the Prince's Declaration relating to their inviting Him hither were true? The Biſhops were Cautious in their Anſwer, and would only promiſe their faithful Allegiance to His Majeſty, and that they would own no other King. His Majeſty then required a Paper under their Hands, in Abhorrence of the Prince's intended Invaſion, which they ſeem'd readily to comply with, after they had Conſulted with their other Brethren, and therefore deſir'd Time to Conſider of it, which His Majeſty allowed. Some few Days after the Prince's Landing, the Biſhops were call'd upon to perform what the King call'd their Promiſe; They anſwer'd, "That the Prince "of Orange had in his Declaration given out "that He was Invited by the Lords Spiritual "and Temporal, and therefore They being but "Five or Six in Number, could not Sign a Pa-"per which concern'd not only the whole Epiſcopal-Order, but alſo all the Peers in England; "and therefore deſir'd His Majeſty to refer that "Matter to a Free-Parliament". The King was highly diſſatisfied with this Anſwer, and the Lord Preſton, who was then with the King, told the Biſhops, His Majeſty expected more from their Loyalty, and from the Principles of their Church. The Arch-Biſhop of Canterbury, who came only with the Biſhops of London, Rocheſter and Peterborough, ſeeing the Biſhops of Cheſter and St. David's in the King's Chamber, told the Lord Preſton, that if His Majeſty would have him ſpeak, He ſhould be pleaſed to command thoſe Two of their Brethren to withdraw; which being granted, the King asked them again, if they had brought their Declaration of Abhorrence, according to Promiſe? They anſwer'd, they had never promiſed any ſuch thing poſitively, but only to conſider of it, which the Lord Preſton confirm'd. They proceeded to ſay, That it was contrary to their Peerage and their Profeſſion, to promote War againſt a Prince ſo nearly Allied to the Crown; however if their Verbal Diſowning of the Allegations of the Prince of Orange, relating to the Spiritual Lords, could be of any Service to His Majeſty, they conſented it ſhould be Printed, tho' they could not give it under their Hands for the Reaſons above-mention'd. The King reply'd, That People would never give Credit to any ſuch Printed Declaration without Names; but perceiving they continu'd firm in their Refuſal to Subſcribe, His Majeſty with ſome Indignation, left them abruptly, and told them, He would truſt to his Army. From this Time the Biſhop of Durham would appear no more at the Council-Board, but is ſaid to have told the Arch-Biſhop of Canterbury, That He was ſorry for having ſo long concurr'd with the Court, and deſir'd now to be reconcil'd to his Grace and the other Biſhops.

1688. The King is Angry.

Their further Anſwer.

Biſhop of Durham comes over.

The King expected that the Prince of Orange would have Landed at Burlington-Bay, or at leaſt at ſome other Part in the North of England, and therefore He had ſent a ſtrong Detachment of his Army that way. He was the more ſurpriz'd to hear by ſeveral Expreſſes that the Dutch-Fleet was ſeen off of Dover on the 3d of November, Steering their Courſe Weſtward: That on the 4th they lay near Portſmouth and the Iſle of Wight, and that on the 5th they Landed at Torbay. His Majeſty likewiſe expected that the Lord Dartmouth, his Admiral, would have Attack'd the Dutch-Fleet according to his Orders, and therefore was the more concern'd to hear, that he never ſtirr'd from the Gun-Fleet near Harwich, where he rode with 37 Men of War and 17 Fire-ſhips. Whether a Fog interpos'd between the Engliſh and Dutch Navy, or whether the Lord Dartmouth found his Officers and Seamen ready to deſert him, or whether his Lordſhip himſelf was unwilling to hinder the Deliverance of his Country, is yet unknown. Whatever it was, there was a particular Providence, that the Prince of Orange found no Interruption at Sea, and loſt but Three little Veſſels of all his Prodigious Fleet.

The King expected the Prince ſhould Land in the North:

And expected that his Engliſh Fleet ſhould attack the Dutch.

The King queſtions the Arch-Biſhop and Biſhops.

Their Anſwer.

He requires a Paper under their Hands.

They refuſe to give it.

Upon this Alarm of the Prince's Landing, the Duke of Berwick was ſent down to Portſmouth, with ſeveral Troops to ſecure that Important Place, and to prevent, if poſſible, the People's running in to the Prince; and the reſt of the Forces juſt before encreaſed by the coming over of 4000 Iriſh, were order'd to March with all Speed towards Salisbury-Plain, where the King propoſed to have an Army of 30000 Men, and to Command 'em in Perſon. At the ſame time all Endeavours were uſed to repreſent the Prince and his Army Contemptible in the Sight of the People, by Printing a falſe Liſt, and giving out that but Nine of the Nobility and Gentry, and a few of the Rabble appear'd for him; and the King himſelf did appear ſo confident of his own Strength,

The Duke of Berwick is ſent to Portſmouth.

The Prince of Orange repreſented as Contemptible.

1688. Strength, that when He was inform'd that the City of London, and the Counties of York and Kent design'd to Address Him for some Accommodation with the Prince of Orange; His Majesty Declar'd in Council, That He look'd upon all those as His Enemies, who shou'd pretend to Advise Him to Treat with the Invader of His Kingdoms: And thereupon He caus'd a Proclamation to be Issued out, on Novemb. 6th, Declaring, "That He cou'd "not Call a Parliament, till His Kingdoms were "Deliver'd from this Invasion; and that He cou'd "no-ways doubt but that all His Faithful and "Loving Subjects wou'd readily and heartily "Concur and Join with Him, in the entire Suppression and Repelling of those His Enemies, "and Rebellious Subjects, who have so Injuriously "and Disloyally Invaded and Disturb'd the Peace "and Tranquillity of these His Kingdoms.

The King Declares against any Treating with the Prince; And Calls upon all His Subjects to Oppose Him.

The Progress of the Prince; He enters into Exeter.

The Prince, upon Landing, went to the House of Sir William Courtney, and rested there two or three Nights, and then March'd with his Army towards Exeter, whither Dr. Burnet was sent before, to prepare Quarters for His Highness in the Deanery. On Friday Novemb. 9th, His Highness Enter'd the City of Exeter in a Glorious and Triumphant manner, and went directly to the Cathedral-Church, to Thank God for His Safe Arrival. After Prayers, Dr. Burnet began to read His Highness's Declaration: At which some of the Choir were so afraid, that they immediately left their Seats, and went out with some bustle; however, the Doctor continu'd reading, and at the Conclusion, said, God save the Prince of Orange. To which the major-part of the Congregation answer'd, Amen, Amen. As for the Bishop, Dr. Lamplugh, assoon as he heard that the Prince was Marching toward that City, he thought fit to leave his Palace, and to go directly for London, to pay his Duty to the King, and to receive His Majesty's farther Commands. Which Prudence, or Timorousness, the King took for Loyalty, and immediately gave him the Arch-Bishoprick of York, which had been long kept Vacant for a very ill Design.

The Bishop flies to London.

Engagement of the Nobility and Gentry.

While His Highness was at Exeter, the Noblemen and Gentlemen there with him, enter'd into this Engagement: "We do Engage to Almighty "God, and to His Highness the Prince of Orange, "and with One Another, to stick Firm to this "Cause, and to One Another, in the Defence of it, "and never to Depart from it, until our Religion, "Laws and Liberties are so far secured to us in a "Free-Parliament, that they shall be no more in Danger of falling under Popery and Slavery. And "whereas we are Engaged in the Common-Cause, "under the Protection of the Prince of Orange, by "which means his Person is expos'd to Danger, "and to the Desperate and Curs'd Designs of "Papists, and other bloody Men; We do therefore "solemnly Engage to God, and to One Another, "That if any such Attempts be made upon Him, "we will pursue not only those that made them, "but all their Adherents, and all we find in "Arms against us, with the utmost Severity of "Just Revenge, in their Ruine and Destruction: "And that the executing any such Attempt, "(which God, of his Infinite Mercy, forbid) "shall not deprive us from Pursuing this "Cause which we do now Undertake, but it "shall encourage us to Carry it on with all the "Vigour that so Barbarous an Attempt shall "deserve.

The Prince finds his Reception too cold.

The Prince expected, that upon his first Landing, all the Gentlemen of the West wou'd Join Him; but he found, that for Nine Days together, scarce any Person of Note had dar'd to Come in; and He perceiv'd that the Mayor and Aldermen of Exeter came to Visit Him rather out of Fear than Affection; that He wanted Recruits, and began more to want Money, and therefore He was under some melancholy Doubts for the Success of His Expedition. He held a Council of War, and suffer'd it to be Propos'd to Him to Re-imbarque for Holland. But by this time, the Gentlemen of Somersetshire and Dorsetshire, in considerable Numbers, found the way to Exeter. The Prince, on Novemb. 15th, receiv'd them in a Body, and spoke thus to 'em: 1688.

The Prince his Speech to the Gentlemen.

"THough We know not all your Persons, yet "We have a Catalogue of your Names, and "remember the Character of your Worth and "Interest in your Country. You see, We are "Come according to your Invitation, and Our "Promise. Our Duty to God, obliges Us to "Protect the Protestant Religion; and Our Love "to Mankind, your Liberties and Properties. We "expected, you that dwelt so near the Place of "Our Landing, wou'd have Join'd Us sooner: "Not that it is now too late, nor that we want "your Military Assistance so much, as your Countenance and Presence, to Justifie Our Declared "Pretensions, rather than to Accomplish Our "Good and Gracious Designs. Though We have "brought both a good Fleet, and a good Army, "to render these Kingdoms Happy, by Rescuing "all Protestants from Popery and Slavery, and "Arbitrary Power; by Restoring them to their "Rights and Properties Establish'd by Law, and "and by Promoting of Peace and Trade, which "is the Soul of Government, and the very Life "and Blood of a Nation: yet We rely more on "the Goodness of God, and the Justice of Our "Cause, than on any Humane Force and Power "whatsoever. Yet since God is pleas'd We "shall make Use of Humane Means, and not "expect Miracles for Our Preservation and Happiness; Let Us not neglect making Use of this "Gracious Opportunity, but with Prudence and "Courage put in Execution Our so-Honourable "Purposes. Therefore, Gentlemen, Friends, and "Fellow-Protestants, We bid You and all your "Followers most heartily Welcome to Our Court "and Camp. Let the whole World now judge "if Our Pretensions are not Just, Generous, Sincere, "and above Price; since We might have ev'n a "Bridge of Gold to return Back: But it is Our "Principle and Resolution, rather to Die in a "Good Cause, than Live in a Bad one; well "knowing, that Vertue and True Honour is its own "Reward; and the Happiness of Mankind, Our "Great and Only Design.

Many other Persons come in to the Prince.

These Gentlemen having broken the Ice, were soon follow'd by several other Persons of Greater Note; The Lord Colchester (Son to the Earl of Rivers, Lieutenant to the Lord Dover's Troop of of Guards) waited upon His Highness, accompany'd by Thomas Wharton Esq; Colonel Godfrey, James Howe Esq; some Life-Guards of his Troop, and about Threescore more on Horse-back. The Lord Cornbury (Colonel of the Royal-Regiment of Dragoons) pretending an Order from the King to go and Beat-up one of the Enemies Advanc'd-Posts, Carry'd off with him his own Regiment, and the Royal-Regiment of Horse, and the Duke of St. Alban's Regiment, Commanded by Lieutenant-Colonel Langston, and with the major-part of them Went in to the Prince at Exeter; where, the Day before, Came in the Lord Abington, Mr. Russel, Captain Clargis, and many others: And indeed, most of the Nobility and Gentry were forming themselves into Parties in every County of England, to be ready for the Prince's Service, assoon as they cou'd have Opportunity to Join Him. The Lord Lovelace was the only Person Intercepted, he was going with that Design with about 60 or 70 Horse-men, who too boldly took their Lodging

Ld. Lovelace Intercepted.

1688. Lodging at Cirencester, while the Militia of that County were there in Arms, by whom, after an obſtinate Oppoſition, they were taken Priſoners, and ſent to Glocester. The Court was extremely pleas'd with this Apprehenſion of the Lord Lovelace; but ſo mortify'd preſently upon it, with the News of my Lord Cornbury's Deſertion, that at firſt the Trains of Artillery, the King's Equipage, and the reſt of the Troops that were moving towards Salisbury, had Orders to ſtop their March, it being now uncertain whether the King wou'd go to the Army or not: However, after ſeveral Conſultations, which the Earl of Feverſham held with with the General-Officers, and at which the Count De Roy Aſſiſted, it was thought neceſſary, That the King ſhou'd haſten his Departure, that He might, by His Preſence, keep thoſe firm who began to ſtagger.

The King in Suſpence.

At this Juncture, moſt of the Proteſtant Lords who were then in London, (viz.) the Arch-Biſhops of Canterbury and of York, the Biſhops of St. Aſaph, Ely, Rocheſter, Peterborough, and even of Oxford, the Dukes of Grafton and Ormond, the Earls of Clare, Clarendon, Burlington, Angleſey and Rocheſter, Viſcount Newport, and the Lords Paget, Shandois and Offulſton, Drew up a Petition; wherein they told the King, "That in the deep Senſe of the "Miſeries of a War, now breaking-out in the "Bowels of this Kingdom, &c. they did think "themſelves bound in Conſcience, and out of the "Duty they ow'd to GOD, their Holy Religion, "His Majeſty, and their Country, moſt humbly "to offer to His Majeſty, That, in their Opinions, "the only viſible Way to Preſerve His Majeſty "and His Kingdom, wou'd be, the Calling of a "Parliament, Regular and Free in all reſpects: "That therefore they did moſt earneſtly Beſeech "His Majeſty, That He wou'd be pleas'd, with "all ſpeed, to Call ſuch a Parliament, wherein "they ſhou'd be moſt ready to Promote ſuch "Counſels and Reſolutions of Peace and Settlement "in Church and State, as might conduce to His "Majeſty's Honour and Safety, and to the "Quieting the Minds of his People; and like-"wiſe, they did moſt humbly Beſeech His Ma-"jeſty, in the mean-time, to uſe ſuch Means for "preventing the Effuſion of Chriſtian Blood, as to "His Majeſty ſhou'd ſeem moſt meet and proper." The Duke of Norfolk, the Marqueſs of Hallifax, the Earls of Oxford and Nottingham, and the Lord Carbury, who were at the Drawing-up of this Petition, wou'd have a Clauſe inſerted, That the Peers who had Join'd the Prince, might Sit in that Free Parliament for which they Petition'd His Majeſty; but the other Lords thought this Clauſe needleſs. This Petition was Preſented to the King on Saturday Novemb. 17th, by the Two Arch-Biſhops, and the Biſhops of Ely and Rocheſter. His Majeſty, who was Adviſ'd by the Popiſh Lords about Him, to rely on His Army, rather than truſt Himſelf with a Parliament, gave 'em this Anſwer; That what they ask'd of Him, He Himſelf moſt paſſionately deſir'd: That therefore, He promis'd them, on the Faith of a King, that He wou'd have a Parliament, and ſuch an One as they ask'd for, aſſoon as ever the Prince of Orange had quitted this Realm; but, in the mean-time, it was not poſſible a Parliament ſhou'd be Free, whilſt an Enemy was in the Kingdom, and cou'd make a Return of near an Hundred Voices. By this Anſwer, however plauſible it was, the King entirely ruin'd his Intereſt; for the leaſt-diſcerning Perſon cou'd not but perceive, that the Prince of Orange's Army, was the only Humane Security the Nation had for the Calling of a Free Parliament; and that if King James ſhou'd force His Highneſs to leave the Kingdom, all their Laws and Liberties muſt become precarious, and lie at the Mercy of the Conqueror.

Petition of the Lords to the King.

The King's Anſwer not Gracious.

The King goes to Salisbury.

On the ſame Day, Nov. 17. the King began his Journey towards Salisbury, and juſt before his ſetting-out, He call'd ſome of the Officers who were then about him, the Duke of Grafton, the Lord Churchill, Colonel Trelawney, and Colonel Kirk, and ſpoke to 'em in this Manner; According to the Lords Petition I have engaged my Royal Word to call a Free-Parliament, aſſoon as ever the Prince of Orange has quitted the Kingdom, and am Reſolved to do all that lies in my Power, to quiet the Minds of my People, by ſecuring their Religion, Laws and Liberties. If you deſire any thing more, I am ready to grant it: But if after all this any of you is not Satisfied, let him declare himſelf; I am willing to grant Paſſes to all ſuch as have a Mind to go over to the Prince of Orange, and ſpare them the Shame of deſerting their Lawful Sovereign. At the ſame Time His Majeſty recommended the Care of the City to the Lord-Mayor, telling him, He left a ſufficient Number of Troops for their Defence: That upon any Exigence He ſhould Apply himſelf to the Privy-Council, aſſuring him, That if He return'd Victorious, He would punctually perform what He had already promiſed, for the ſecurity of their Religion and Liberties. The King committed the Adminiſtration of Affairs in his Abſence to the Lord-Chancellor, the Lords Arundel, Bellaſis, Preſton and Godolphin, which was not at all to the People's Satisfaction. In the mean-time Father Petre, who had been the great Author of theſe Dangers to the King, run away from them and went over to France, under the Protection of the Lord Walgrave, who was ſent thither in the Room of Colonel Skelton.

1688.

His Speech to his Officers:

And to the Lord-Mayor.

The King arriv'd at Salisbury on Monday-Night, Nov. 19. and took up his Lodging in the Biſhop's Palace the next Day. He was going out to View Part of his Army, when his Noſe fell a-Bleeding in ſo violent a Manner, that nothing could ſtop it but the Breathing a Vein, which hinder'd His Majeſty from going the next Day to Warminſter, the moſt Advanc'd Poſt of his Army. Upon this little Interruption moſt of the Chief-Officers apply'd themſelves to the Earl of Feverſham, deſiring him to aſſure His Majeſty, That upon any Occaſion they would be ready to ſpill the laſt drop of their Blood in his Service, yet they could not in Conſcience Fight againſt a Prince, who was come over with no other Deſign than to procure the Calling of a Free-Parliament, for the Security of their Religion and Liberties. By this the King might very well perceive how little he was to depend upon his Army; and the General, the Lord Feverſham, might well underſtand that none of the Chief-Officers would ſtand by him. The Lord Churchill was more-eſpecially ſuſpected by the General, who conjur'd His Majeſty to have him ſecur'd for a Terror to the reſt, but could not prevail with His Majeſty to do it; ſo the next Day the Lord Churchill went over to the Prince, with as many as were willing to follow him, amongſt whom were the Duke of Grafton, Colonel Berkley, and Four or Five Captains of his Regiment of Dragoons. Upon his going-off the Lord Churchill ſent this Letter to the King.

The King comes to Salisbury.

SIR,

"SInce Men are ſeldom ſuſpected of Sincerity, "when they act contrary to their Intereſts: "And tho' my Dutiful Behaviour to Your Ma-"jeſty in the worſt of Times, (for which I ac-"knowledge my poor Services much overpaid,) "may not be ſufficient to incline you to a Chari-"table Interpretation of my Actions; Yet, I hope, "the great Advantage I enjoy under Your Ma-"jeſty, which I can never expect in any other "Change of Government, may reaſonably con-"vince Your Majeſty and the World, that I am "acted by an higher Principle, when I offer'd "that Violence to my Inclination and Intereſt, as "to deſert Your Majeſty, at a Time when your

This, Sir, could proceed " from nothing but the inviolable Dictates of my " Conſcience, and a neceſſary Concern for my Reli- " gion (which no good Man can Oppoſe) and " with which, I am Inſtructed, nothing ought to " come in Competition. Heaven knows with " what Partiality my dutiful Opinion of Your " Majeſty, has hitherto repreſented thoſe unhappy " Deſigns, which Inconſiderate and Self-intereſted " Men have fram'd againſt Your Majeſty's true " Intereſt, and the Proteſtant Religion: But as I " can no longer joyn with ſuch, to give a Pre- " tence, by Conqueſt, to bring them to Effect; " ſo I will always, with the Hazard of my Life " and Fortune (ſo much Your Majeſty's Due) En- " deavour to Preſerve Your Royal Perſon, and " Lawful Rights, with all the tender Concern, " and dutiful Reſpect that becomes, &c.

The King leaves Salisbury.

King James finding himſelf deſerted by his beſt Friends, and being falſly Alarm'd, as if Duke Schonberg, the Prince's General, was Marching with all Speed to Fight him, left Salisbury in great Precipitation, after he had Publiſh'd a Proclamation, Nov. 22. at his Court at Salisbury, promiſing a Free and Abſolute Pardon to all his Subjects, who have taken up Arms, and joyn'd with the Prince of Orange, provided they Quit and Deſert him, within the Space of Twenty Days. In his Return, the King had this further Mortification, to ſee himſelf forſaken at Andover, by his Royal Highneſs Prince George of Denmark, the Duke of Ormond, Sir George Hewett, and others. The Prince wrote this Letter to His Majeſty.

SIR,

The Prince of Denmark's Letter to the King.

" WIth an Heart full of Grief am I forc'd " to Write what Prudence would not per- " mit me to ſay to your Face, and may I e'er " find Credit with Your Majeſty, and Protection " from Heaven, as what I now do is free from " Paſſion, Vanity or Deſign, with which Actions " of this Nature are too often accompanied. I " am not Ignorant of the frequent Miſchiefs " wrought in the World by factious Pretences of " Religion, but were not Religion the moſt juſti- " fiable Cauſe, it would not be made the moſt " ſuperior Pretence. And Your Majeſty has al- " ready ſhewn too intereſted a Senſe of Religion, " to doubt the juſt Effects of it in one, whoſe Pra- " ctices have, I hope, never given the World " Cauſe to Cenſure his real Conviction of it, or " his Backwardneſs to Perform what his Honour " and Conſcience Prompt him to. How then can " I longer Diſguiſe my juſt Concern for that Re- " ligion, in which I have been ſo happily Edu- " cated, which my Judgment truly convinceth me " to be the beſt, and for the Support of which I " am ſo highly intereſted in my Native Country? " And is not England now, by the moſt endearing " Tie, become ſo?

" Whilſt the reſtleſs Spirits of the Enemies of " the Reformed Religion, backed by the cruel " Zeal, and the prevailing Power of France, juſtly " Alarm and Unite all the Proteſtant Princes of " Chriſtendom, and Engage them in ſo vaſt an Ex- " pence for the Support of it: Can I Act ſo Un- " generous and Mean a Part, to deny my Con- " currence to ſuch worthy Endeavours, for the " Dis-abuſing Your Majeſty, by the Re-inforce- " ment of thoſe Laws, and Re-eſtabliſhment " of that Government, on which alone depends " the Well-being of Your Majeſty, and of the " Proteſtant Religion in Europe? This, Sir, is " that irreſiſtible and only Cauſe, that could come " in Competition with my Duty and Obligation 1688. " to Your Majeſty, and be able to Tear me " from you, whilſt the ſame Affectionate Deſire " to Serve you continues in me. Could I ſecure " Your Perſon by the Hazard of my Life, I " ſhould think it could not be better Employ'd. " And would to God theſe Your diſtracted King- " doms might receive that ſatisfactory Compli- " ance from Your Majeſty, in all their juſtifiable " Pretenſions, as might, upon the only ſure Foun- " dation, that of the Love and Intereſt of Your " Subjects, Eſtabliſh Your Government, and as " ſtrongly Unite the Hearts of all Your Subjects " to You, as is that of, &c.

March of the Prince of Orange.

Upon the News of King James's being come to Salisbury, the Prince of Orange March'd out of Exeter with his Army, leaving only Sir John Guy with his New-rais'd Regiment to Guard that City. On Nov. 20. there was a Skirmiſh at Wincanton, between a Detachment of 70 Horſe, and 50 Dragoons and Granadiers commanded by Gleſford, Sarsfield, and Webb, and 25 of the Prince of Orange's Men, commanded by one Campbel, a Lieutenant in Mackay's Regiment. Theſe latter, tho' ſo unequal in Number, Fought with ſuch undaunted Bravery, that they maintain'd their Ground for a conſiderable time; and when they were like to be Over-power'd, a Miller coming accidentally that way, Alarm'd the King's Party, by telling 'em, he had over-taken a ſtrong Detachment of the Prince's Army, who were juſt entring the Town, whereupon they Retreated in great Confuſion, leaving ſeveral of their Men Kill'd, and Cornet Webb Wounded. This ſmall Action ſtruck a Terror into the Minds of King James's Army, who were otherwiſe little inclin'd to Fighting: And beſides, it was every-where Magnify'd, ſo much above the real Truth, that it clearly ſhew'd how much the whole Nation were for the Succeſs of the Prince of Orange, who was ſoon after inform'd of His Majeſty's retiring to London, and the broken Remains of his Army to Reading; which being confirm'd by Prince George, and the Duke of Ormond, who joyn'd him at Sherborn-Caſtle, His Highneſs March'd with a Numerous Attendance into Salisbury, where He was receiv'd with much more Joy than the King had lately been.

The King at Whitehall.

The King came to Whitehall on Monday Night, Nov. 26. where his firſt Step again was very falſe and fatal to him; for he appointed Colonel Bevil Skelton to be Lieutenant of the Tower of London. But to do a more popular Thing, on Nov. 28. His Majeſty gave Order to the Lord-Chancellor for Iſſuing out Writs for Summoning a Parliament to meet at Weſtminſter, the 15th Day of Jan. next; and on Nov. 30. the King Publiſh'd a Proclamation for the ſpeedy Calling of a Parliament, ending with theſe good Words: And for the Security of all Perſons both in their Elections and Service in Parliament, We do hereby Publiſh and Declare, That all our Subjects ſhall have free Liberty to Elect, and all our Peers, and ſuch as ſhall be Elected Members of our Houſe of Commons, ſhall have full Liberty and Freedom to Serve and Sit in Parliament, notwithſtanding they have taken up Arms, or committed any Act of Hoſtility, or been any way Aiding or Aſſiſting therein. And for the better Aſſurance hereof, We have Graciouſly directed a General Pardon to all our Subjects, to be forthwith prepar'd to Paſs our Great Seal; And for the Reconciling all Publick Breaches, and Obliterating the Memory of all paſt Miſcarriages, We do hereby Exhort, and kindly Admoniſh all our Subjects to Diſpoſe themſelves to Elect ſuch Perſons for their Repreſentatives in Parliament, as may not be Byaſs'd by Prejudice or Paſſion, but Qualify'd with Parts, Experience and Prudence, proper for this Conjuncture, and agreeable to the Ends and Purpoſes of this Our Gracious Proclamation. But ſee the 1688. Effect of ill-timing Things: Had this been done before the King went down to Salisbury, it had been Acceptable, and in all probability Succesful. But it was now too late; besides, it was Extorted from His Majesty by the Lords Spiritual and Temporal then in London, who being Summon'd to give their Counsel about the present Exigencies, did Agree in these following Advices. First, To Grant a General Pardon to all those, that were either come over with the Prince of Orange, or had joyn'd with him since his Landing: Secondly, To Depute some of the Lords to Attend the Prince, and to Treat with him about a Suspension of Arms, and to Endeavour to bring Matters to an Accommodation: Thirdly, To turn immediately all Papists out of their Employments, to Convince the World, that His Majesty Acted a Sincere Part. His Majesty took that Night to Consider of their Advice, and the next Day Resolv'd in Council to Call a Parliament; and further declar'd, That He would Grant a Pardon, and Name Commissioners to Treat with the Prince of Orange; But as to that Part of the Lord's Advice, relating to the Roman-Catholicks; His Majesty was unwilling to Grant it, and only said, He would leave that Matter to be Debated in Parliament.

Effect

Advice of the Lords Spiritual and Temporal.

The Princess of Denmark retires.

When the King came back to London, He found his Daughter the Princess Anne of Denmark gone away the Night before; and when she was first Missing, the People were so Enrag'd, that they would have Torn the Popish Party to Pieces, upon a Surmise, that they had either made away with her, or Confin'd her to the Tower, if this Letter of her Royal Highness to the Queen had not been produc'd.

MADAM,

Writes a Letter to the Queen.

"I Beg Your Pardon, if I am so deeply Affected with the surprizing News of the Prince's being gone, as not to be able to see you, but to leave this Paper to Express my humble Duty to the King, and Your Self; and to let you know that I am gone to Absent my Self, to avoid the King's Displeasure, which I am not able to Bear, either against the Prince, or my Self; and I shall stay at so great a Distance, as not to Return before I hear the happy News of a Reconcilement. And as I am Confident the Prince did not leave the King with any other Design, than to use all possible Means for his Preservation; so I hope you will do me the Justice to believe, that I am not capable of following him for any other End. Never was any One in such an unhappy Condition, so divided between Duty and Affection to a Father and a Husband, and therefore I know not what to do, but to follow One, to preserve the Other. I see the general falling-off of the Nobility and Gentry, who Avow to have no other End, than to Prevail with the King to Secure their Religion, which they saw so much in Danger by the violent Counsels of the Priests; who, to promote their own Religion, did not care to what Danger they Expos'd the King. I am fully perswaded that the Prince of Orange designs the King's Safety and Preservation, and hope all Things may be Compos'd without more Bloodshed, by the Calling of a Parliament. God grant a happy End to these Troubles, that the King's Reign may be Prosperous, and that I may shortly meet You in Peace and Safety: Till when, let Me beg You to continue the same favourable Opinion that You hitherto had of, &c.

Journey of Her Royal Highness.

The King was soon after inform'd, That Her Royal Highness, with the Lady Churchill, and the Lady Berkley, had privately taken Coach at the Bishop of London's House in Aldersgate-Street; from whence they went directly to Nottingham, attended by that Prelate, the Earl of Dorset, and about Forty Horsemen. At Nottingham, the Earl of Devonshire gave Her a Guard of Two Hundred Men, by whom She was safely Conducted to Oxford, where Prince George soon after met Her, with a Detachment of the Prince of Orange's Forces. 1688.

Persons Appointed to Treat with the Prince of Orange.

The Persons Appointed to Treat with the Prince of Orange, were the Marquess of Hallifax, the Earl of Nottingham, and the Lord Godolphin, all Men of Address and Application; the Earl of Rochester was propos'd to be One of that Number, but his Lordship, and the Marquess of Hallifax not being able to Act together with any right Understanding, he got himself Excus'd. A Trumpeter was immediately dispatch'd by the Earl of Feversham, with a Letter to His Highness, to demand the necessary Passes. On Sunday, Decemb. 2. The Commissioners began their Journey, and came the next Day to Reading, where they met the Trumpeter, with the Passes desir'd from the Prince. The Day before the Departure of the Commissioners, the Earl of Clarendon went over to the Prince of Orange, which gave many occasion to think, that he was gone before 'em, either to Baffle the Negotiation, or at least to give the Prince a Jealousie of the Marquess of Hallifax, whom he thought an irreconcileable Enemy to his Family. On Dec. 6. The Three Commissioners acquainted the King, that they were to meet the Prince of Orange that Night at Ameshury: But the next Day, they inform'd His Majesty, that His Highness had made a new Appointment to meet at Hungerford, and had sent to them the Earls of Oxford and Clarendon, to desire 'em to make their Proposals in Writing. This Message of the Prince of Orange was thought an Evasion of all manner of Treaty, and the King began now to think it high time to provide for the Safety of His Person, and his Family. Upon the News of the Prince's Forces advancing towards Reading, the King's Army that Quarter'd there, was Order'd to March nearer London, and to fix their Head-Quarters at Colebrook; but on Dec. 8. the Court being inform'd that it was only a Detachment of His Highnesses's Horse that was advanc'd to Newberry, the Royal Forces were Re-manded to their old Post, and the same Day the Earl of Feversham return'd to Maidenhead, his Head-Quarters. The People of Reading, who had very much suffer'd by the King's Army Quartering amongst them, had upon their first with-drawing, invited some of the Prince of Orange's Forces that lay not far off, to take Possession of that Post, to secure themselves against the Universal Alarm of the Irish. Upon the unexpected Return of the King's Forces, Colonel Lanier, who commanded the Royal Detachment, taking a Re-possession of the Town, posted some Companies of Irish Dragoons to defend a Bridge, over which, His Highness's Troops were to Pass, and drew up in Battalia in the Market-Place, a Scotch Regiment of Horse: Upon the Approach of a small Party of the Prince's Cavalry, the Irish Fir'd, and run away; the Scotch, who had no Inclination to Fight, fled likewise in Disorder, and complain'd that the Town's-People Shot at 'em behind from their Windows, whilst the Prince's Horse Charg'd them before. Maidenhead-Bridge was also Fortify'd, and its Defence committed to the Irish, but some of the Town's-Men Beating a Dutch March in the Night, in order to Alarm them, this Stratagem took so well, that the Irish abandon'd their Post in Confusion, leaving their Cannon behind 'em.

The Earl of Clarendon goes in to the Prince.

Motions of the Two Armies.

Skirmish at Reading.

Things being come to this desperate pass, the Popish Cabal, and particularly Monsieur Barillon the French Ambassador, and Count Lanszun, prest the King to send away the Queen and Prince 1688. into France, and to follow her aſſoon as poſſible. Upon this Reſolution, on Dec. 10th, the Queen in Diſguiſe, with the Prince of Wales, and his Governeſs the Marchioneſs of Powis, with her Husband the Marqueſs, the Counteſs Dalmon, Seignior Montecuculi, Seignior Turini, under the Conduct of Riva an Italian, and Labidi a French-man, the Wet and Dry-Nurſes, and a Woman or two more, ſtole by the Privy-Stairs to the Water-ſide, croſs'd the Thames in a Dark Stormy Night, and being got on the other Side, waited under a Wall till the Coaches were got ready in the next Inn. When the Queen and Her Retinue had taken Coach, She was attended by a ſtrong Guard to Greenwich, and ſo to Graveſend, where She was to Embarque in a Yacht that lay ready to carry Count Lanſzun to France. Mrs. Labidi, who was acquainted with the Captain, amus'd him for a while, till the Queen (who paſt for an Italian Lady, returning to her Native-Country, with all her Family) was got into the Cabbin which was prepar'd for her. Three Iriſh Captains embarkt at the ſame time, being Appointed by the King to have an Eye upon the Captain, in Caſe of Diſcovery, or Suſpicion: But without any Danger, they had a very quick Paſſage, and Landed ſafely at Calais.

Queen goes to France with the Prince of Wales.

Immediately after the Queen's Departure, His Majeſty, to cover His Deſign of following Her, ſaid publickly, That He wou'd return to the Head of His Forces, and Fight the Prince of Orange: But He privately Order'd the Broad-Seal to be thrown into the Thames, and the Parliament-Writs to be burnt, and a Caveat to be Enter'd againſt making Uſe of thoſe few that were Sent out already; and then He wrote this Letter to the Earl of Feverſham.

The King in Deſpair:

My Lord,

He Writes to His General.

"THings being come to that Extremity, that I have been forc'd to Send away the Queen, and my Son the Prince of Wales, that they might not fall into the Enemy's Hands, which they muſt have done, if they had ſtay'd; I am oblig'd to do the ſame thing, in hopes it will pleaſe God, of His Infinite Mercy to this Unhappy Nation, to touch their Hearts again with true Loyalty and Honour. If I cou'd have rely'd on all my Troops, I might not have been put to the Extremity I now am in; and wou'd, at leaſt, have had one Blow for it: But though I know there are many Valiant and Brave Men among you, both Officers and Soldiers; yet you know, that both you, and ſeveral of the General-Officers and Soldiers, and Men of the Army, told Me, It was no-ways adviſeable for Me, to venture My Self at their Head, or think to fight the Prince of Orange with 'em.

"And now there remains only for Me, to Thank you, and all thoſe, both Officers and Soldiers, who have Stuck to Me, and been truly Loyal; I hope you will ſtill retain the ſame Fidelity to Me. And though I do not expect you ſhall expoſe your-ſelves, by reſiſting a Foreign Army, and a Poiſon'd Nation; yet I hope your former Principles are ſo in-rooted in you, that you will keep your-ſelves free from Aſſociations, and ſuch pernicious Things. Time preſſeth, ſo that I can add no more.

James Rex.

The King Goes away privately.

After Writing this Letter, on Monday-Evening, Dec. 10th, the Life-Guards were Order'd to be Ready, to attend His Majeſty to Uxbridge; but in ſtead of going to the Army, the King took Water at Whitehall Privy-Stairs, at Two of the Clock in the Morning, accompany'd only by Sir Edward Hales, Mr. Sheldon, and Labidi. Aſſoon as the King's Departure was publickly known, the Duke of Northumberland, with his Troop of Guards, Declar'd for the Prince: And his Example was follow'd by the Marqueſs of Miremont; and the other Principal-Officers of the Army about Town, who Met at Whitehall, and ſent an Expreſs to the Prince of Orange, to Acquaint Him with the King's Going away, and to Aſſure Him, That they wou'd Aſſiſt the Lord-Mayor to keep the City quiet, till His Highneſs's Arrival. 1688.

Upon this Inter-Regnum, the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, in and about the Cities of London and Weſtminſter, Met at Guildhall; where having Sent for the Lord-Mayor and Aldermen, they Drew up a Declaration, in this Form and Title:

The Declaration of the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, in and about the Cities of London and Weſtminſter, Aſſembled at Guildhall, Dec. 11. 1688.

Declaration of the Lords Spiritual and Temporal.

"WE doubt not but the World believes, That in this Great and Dangerous Conjuncture, we are heartily and zealouſly Concern'd for the Proteſtant Religion, the Laws of the Land, and the Liberties and Properties of the Subject: And we did reaſonably hope, that the King having Iſſued His Proclamation and Writs for a Free-Parliament, we might have reſted Secure, under the Expectation of that Meeting: But His Majeſty having Withdrawn Himſelf, and, as we apprehend, in order to His Departure out of this Kingdom, by the Pernicious Counſels of Perſons Ill-affected to Our Nation and Religion; we cannot, without being wanting to our Duty, be ſilent under theſe Calamities, wherein the Popiſh Counſels which ſo long prevail'd, have miſerably involv'd theſe Realms: We do therefore Unanimouſly Reſolve to Apply our-ſelves to His Highneſs the Prince of Orange, who with ſo great Kindneſs to theſe Kingdoms, ſo vaſt Expence, and ſo much Hazard to His own Perſon, hath Undertaken, by endeavouring to procure a Free-Parliament, to Reſcue Us, with as little Effuſion as poſſible of Chriſtian Blood, from the imminent Dangers of Popery and Slavery.

"And we do hereby Declare, That we will, with our utmoſt Endeavours, Aſſiſt His Highneſs in the obtaining ſuch a Parliament with all ſpeed, wherein our Laws, our Liberties and Properties, may be Secured, the Church of England in particular, with a due Liberty to Proteſtant Diſſenters, and, in general, the Proteſtant Religion and Intereſt over the whole World may be Supported and Encourag'd, to the Glory of God, the Happineſs of the Eſtabliſh'd Government in theſe Kingdoms, and the Advantage of all Princes and States in Chriſtendom, that may be herein concern'd.

"In the mean time, we will endeavour to preſerve, as much as in us lies, the Peace and Security of theſe Great and Populous Cities of London and Weſtminſter, and the Parts adjacent, by taking Care to Diſarm all Papiſts, and Secure all Jeſuits and Romiſh Prieſts who are in and about the ſame.

"And if there be any thing more to be perform'd by us, for promoting His Highneſs's Generous Intentions for the Publick Good, we ſhall be ready to do it as Occaſion ſhall require.

Dated at Guildhall, Decemb. 11th, 1688.

The Lords commit the Government of the Tower to the Lord Lucas.

The Lords, at the ſame time, ſent for Colonel Skelton, Lieutenant of the Tower, and demanded the Keys of him; which he willingly reſigning, they beſtow'd the Government of it upon the Lord Lucas, a Man of Honour, and a Lover of his Country; which Choice was afterwards Confirm'd by the Prince of Orange. The ſame Day, the Lieutenancy of the City of London made an Addreſs to the Prince of Orange, to Thank Him for Expoſing His Perſon to ſo many Dangers, by Sea and Land, for the Preſervation of the Proteſtant Religion, and the Laws and Liberties of this Kingdom; without which Unparallel'd Undertaking, they muſt probably have ſuffer'd all the Miſeries that Popery and Slavery cou'd have brought upon them; They therefore humbly Deſire, That His Highneſs wou'd pleaſe to repair to this City, with what convenient ſpeed He can, for the Perfecting the Great Work which His Highneſs had ſo happily begun, to the General Joy and Satisfaction of them All.

Addreſs of the Lieutenancy of London to the Prince of Orange.

With this Addreſs, Sir Robert Clayton, Sir Baſil Firebrace, Sir William Ruſſel, and Charles Duncomb Eſq; were Order'd to Attend His Highneſs. At the ſame time, the Lord-Mayor, Aldermen and Commons of the City of London, Drew up alſo the following Addreſs, which was Preſented to the Prince of Orange by Four Aldermen, and Eight Common-Council-Men, Concluding thus; We preſume to make Your Highneſs our Refuge, and do, in the Name of this Capital-City, implore Your Highneſs's Protection, and moſt humbly beſeech Your Highneſs to vouchſafe to repair to this City, where Your Highneſs will be receiv'd with Univerſal Joy and Satisfaction. Though the Train'd-Bands were now in Arms, yet the Mob of the City was preſently up, and pull'd down the Meſs-Houſes in the City and Suburbs; and yet were ſo well Diſpos'd and ſo well Commanded by their Leader, that they did no Miſchief to any but the Papiſts.

Addreſs of the Lord-Mayor, &c.

Proceedings of the Commiſſioners:

The King's Commiſſioners returning to London, the ſame Day His Majeſty had left His Palace, were much ſurpriz'd to hear of his ſudden Departure; becauſe they had brought with 'em ſuch an Anſwer from the Prince, as might have encourag'd Him to ſtay, and of which they had already inform'd His Majeſty, by an Expreſs He receiv'd two or three Hours before He left Whitehall. The Propoſals deliver'd to His Highneſs at Hungerford, Dec. 8th, by the Commiſſioners, were theſe:

SIR,

Their Propoſals to the Prince.

" THE King Commanded us to acquaint you, " That He obſerveth, All the Differences and " Cauſes of Complaint, alledged by Your Highneſs, " ſeem to be referr'd to a Free-Parliament.

" His Majeſty, as He hath already Declar'd, " was Reſolv'd, before this, to Call one; but " thought, that in the preſent State of Affairs, it " was adviſeable to defer it till Things were 1688. " more compos'd; yet ſeeing that His People ſtill " continue to deſire it, he hath Put forth His " Proclamation in order to it, and hath Iſſued His " Writs for the Calling of it.

" And to prevent any Cauſe of Interruption, " in it He will Conſent to every thing that can be " reaſonably Required, for the Security of all thoſe " that come to it.

" His Majeſty hath therefore ſent us to Attend " Your Highneſs, for the Adjuſting of all Matters " that ſhall be Agreed to be neceſſary to the " Freedom of Elections, and the Security of Sitting; " and is ready to Enter immediately into a Treaty " in order to it.

" His Majeſty Propos'd, That in the mean " time, the reſpective Armies may be return'd " within ſuch Limits, and at ſuch Diſtance from " London, as may prevent the Apprehenſions " that the Parliament may be in any kind " Diſturb'd; being deſirous that the Meeting may " be no longer delay'd, than it muſt be by the " uſual and neceſſary Forms.

Halliſax, Nottingham, Godolphin.

The Prince having receiv'd this Paper, continu'd His March towards London; and being arriv'd at Littlecot, did the next Day, with the Advice of the Lords and Gentlemen with Him, make theſe following Propoſals, in Anſwer to them. The Prince his Anſwer.

" WE, with the Advice of the Lords and " and Gentlemen Aſſembled with Us, have, " in Anſwer, made theſe following Propoſals.

1. " That all Papiſts, and ſuch Perſons as are " not qualify'd by Law, be Diſarm'd, Disbanded, " and Remov'd from all Employments Civil and " Military.

2. " That all Proclamations that reflect upon Us, " or any that have come to Us, be Recall'd: And " if any Perſons, for having Aſſiſted Us, have been " Committed, that they be forthwith Set at " Liberty.

3. " That for the Security and Safety of the " City of London, the Cuſtody and Government " of the Tower be immediately put into the Hands " of the ſaid City.

4. " But if His Majeſty ſhou'd think fit to be " in London, during the Sitting of the Parliament, " that We may be there alſo, with an equal Num- " ber of Our Guards: And if His Majeſty ſhall be " pleas'd to be in any Place from London, what- " ever Diſtance He thinks fit, that We may be at the " ſame Diſtance; and that the reſpective Armies be " from London Forty Miles; and that no further " Forces be brought into the Kingdom.

5. " And that, for the Security of the City of " London, and their Trade, Tilbury-Fort be put " into the Hands of the City.

6. " That a ſufficient part of the Publick Re- " venue be aſſign'd Us, for the Support and Main- " tenance of Our Troops, until the Sitting of a " Free-Parliament.

7. " That, to prevent the Landing of the French, " or other Foreign Troops, Portſmouth may be " put into ſuch Hands, as by His Majeſty and Us " ſhall be Agreed on.

Earl of Feverſham Disbands the Army.

The Earl of Feverſham, and the other General-Officers, going to Uxbridge to Attend the King's pretended coming thither, receiv'd His Majeſty's Letter, which was the ſame Day Read aloud to the Troops, and drew Tears from moſt of 'em. Hereupon they held a Council of War, and concluded from the Words of the Letter, That ſince the King did not expect they ſhould reſiſt a Foreign Army, His Intention was, That the reſt of the Army ſhould be Disbanded; and accordingly 4000 Men, the 1688. the Earl had then with him, were immediately Diſmiſs'd: after which he ſent the following Letter to the Prince of Orange, Subſcrib'd by himſelf and Three General Officers.

S I R,

The Earl of Feverſham writes to the Prince.

" HAving receiv'd this Morning a Letter from " His Majeſty with the Unfortunate News " of his Reſolution to go out of England, I thought " my ſelf oblig'd, (being at the Head of his Army, " and having receiv'd his Orders, to make no " Oppoſition againſt any-body,) to let Your Highneſs know it, with the Advice of the Officers " here, ſo ſoon as was poſſible, to hinder the Effuſion of Blood. I have Order'd already to that " Purpoſe all the Troops that are under my Command, which ſhall be the laſt Order, they ſhall " receive from Feverſham, Lanier, Fenwick, Oglethorp.

Cenſures on the Earl of Feverſham.

The Trumpeter ſent to the Prince with this Letter return'd without an Anſwer, which ſhew'd his Highneſs did not approve of that Conduct; and indeed moſt of the Lords in London, look'd upon that haſty Disbanding, to be a raſh and unadviſed Action. A Panick Fear which next Day Alarm'd the City of London, contributed much to the Cenſure paſs'd on the Earl of Feverſham; for ſome Country-Fellows, arriving about Midnight at Weſtminſter, cauſed a ſudden Uproar, by Reporting that the Iriſh in a deſperate Rage were advancing to London, and putting all before 'em to Fire and Sword. This not only rais'd the Train-Bands and Regular-Troops, but moſt People left their Beds, placed Lights in the Windows, and ſtood to their Arms; and what's very ſtrange, this Univerſal Terror ſpread itſelf that very Night over the whole Kingdom. An effectual Stratagem, commonly aſcribed to the Duke of Schomberg.

Panick Fear throughout England.

The Day before this Conſternation, Dec. 12. Chancellor Jefferyes, whom every-body thought to have been gone with the King, having diſguis'd and abſconded himſelf in a Little Houſe at Wapping, in order to his Eſcape beyond-Sea, as he was looking out of the Window in a Seaman's Cap, was diſcover'd by a Clerk in Chancery, that accidentally paſſed by. Whereupon he was immediately Apprehended, and after a fair Deliverance from the Mob, that would have torn him to Pieces, he was carried before the Lord-Mayor, who fell into a Fit of an Apoplexy, whilſt he was asking him ſome Queſtions, and Died ſoon after. On the ſame Day the Peers, Aſſembled at Whitehall with ſome of the Privy-Council, Committed him to the Tower, where, to drown the Conſcience of his Crimes, or the Cowardice of his Nature, He fell to Intemperate Drinking, which put him into a Fever that took away his Life. In the mean while the Prince of Orange was advanc'd as far as Henly with the greateſt Part of his Army, and finding the King's Troops now without an Head, committing many Diſorders, He put out this Declaration.

Lord-Chancellor Jefferyes Apprehended at Wapping.

Declaration of the Prince of Orange.

" WHereas We are Informed, That divers " Regiments, Troops and Companies have " been Encourag'd to diſperſe themſelves in an " unuſual and unwarrantable Manner, whereby " the Publick Peace is very much diſturbed; We " have thought fit hereby to Require all Colonels " and Commanders in Chief of ſuch Regiments, " Troops and Companies, by Beat of Drum or otherwiſe to call together the ſeveral Officers and Soldiers belonging to their reſpective Regiments, " Troops and Companies, in ſuch Places as they " ſhall find moſt convenient for their Rendezvous, " and there to keep them in good Order and Diſcipline. And we do likewiſe Direct and Require all ſuch Officers and Soldiers forthwith to repair to ſuch Places as be appointed for that Purpoſe, by the reſpective Colonels and Commanders in Chief, whereof ſpeedy Notice is to be given unto us for our further Orders. 1688.

Given at our Court at Henly, Dec. 13. 1688.

Prince of Orange.

At the ſame Time the Prince ſent a Letter to the Earl of Denby, to deſire him to come to him; and order'd the Secretary of War, Mr. Blathwaite, to bring him an Account of the King's Army. He alſo diſpatch'd the Lord Churchill to London, to Re-aſſemble his Troop of Horſe-Guards, and directed the Duke of Grafton to go and take Poſſeſſion of Tilbury-Fort, with his Regiment of Foot-Guards. And the next Day the Peers and Privy-Council, in Purſuance of the Prince's Directions, made this Order.

Order of the Peers and Privy-Council.

" WE the PEERS of this Realm, Aſſembled " with ſome of the Lords of the Privy-Council, do hereby Require all Iriſh Officers and Soldiers to repair forthwith to their Reſpective Bodies to which they do or did lately belong; and " do hereby Declare, that behaving themſelves " peaceably, they ſhall have Subſiſtence Paid " them, till they ſhall be otherwiſe Provided for or " Imployed. And the ſaid Officers and Soldiers " are to deliver up their Arms to ſome of the Officers of the Ordnance, who are to diſpoſe the " ſame in their Stores in the Tower of London. " And we do Require and Command all Juſtices " of the Peace, Conſtables, and other Officers whom " it may concern, that they Apprehend and Seize " all ſuch Soldiers as ſhall not repair to their reſpective Bodies, and that they be dealt with as " Vagabonds.

This was all on Suppoſition, That His Majeſty had left the Kingdom; but it ſo happen'd, that the King with his Three Followers, having croſs'd the Thames at Whitehall, went by Land to a certain Place near Feverſham, where he Embark'd a-board a Smack Commanded by Captain Sanders, who was to carry him to a Frigot Commanded by Mackdonnel, an Iriſh Captain, who by Concert waited for His Majeſty at Margate. Whilſt they were waiting to go on Board, Hales ſent his Footman to the Poſt-Office in Feverſham; a Gunner belonging to the Dover-Caſtle, whom Hales had formerly Caſhier'd, knew the Footman by his Livery, and dogging him to the River-ſide, He ſaw him make Signs to ſome People that were a-board a Smack. Hereupon he got a Rabble together, and carry'd them to the Water-ſide, and immediately Boarded the Veſſel, and ſoon diſcover'd Sir Edward Hales, who was well known and much hated in that Country. As for the King, who was in a Plain Suit and a Bob-Wig, they took him to be a Popiſh Prieſt, and ſuppoſed Him to be Hales's Chaplain, for which Reaſon they put many groſs Indignities upon Him, and ſearching Him they found 400 Guinea's, ſeveral Valuable Seals, and other Jewels about Him. But ſeveral other People crowding into the Veſſel, there was amongſt the reſt a Conſtable who knew the King's Face, and fell preſently at His Feet, begging his Majeſty to forgive the Rudeneſs of the Mob, and bidding the Fellows return what they had taken from Him; but the King would only receive

His Majeſty then told the Conſtable, He hoped he would uſe Him well; and when He ſaw every-body paying the Reſpect due to Him, He earneſtly endeavoured to be gone: But the People brought him by a ſort of a Force to a Publick Inn in the Town, from whence His Majeſty ſent for the Earl of Winchelſea, whom He made Lord-Lieutenant of the County, and Governour of Dover-Caſtle, who prevail'd with His Majeſty to return toward London. This ſtrange Adventure did variouſly affect the Prince of Orange, and the People of England. The Prince ſeems to have deſir'd that he ſhould not have been ſtopt nor brought back, but moſt of the People were rather glad of an Opportunity, to convince the King that there was no ill Deſign againſt his Perſon. The Peers and Privy-Council Met, and after ſome Debates, They appointed Four of their Members, viz. the Earls of Middleton, Aylesbury, Yarmouth and Feverſham, to wait upon His Majeſty, and Invite him to his Palace at Whitehall; To which, tho' at firſt He ſhew'd ſome Reluctance, yet at laſt He condeſcended. The Peers alſo diſpatch'd an Expreſs to the Prince of Orange, to acquaint him that the King was ſtill in England: Whereupon His Highneſs came to Windſor, Dec. 14. and Lodged in the Prince of Denmark's Apartment, which was prepared for his Reception; where He held a Conſultation with the Chief of the Nobility and Gentry about Him, and by their Advice He diſpatch'd Monſieur de Zuyleſtein to the King, to deſire him to continue at Rocheſter, but he miſs'd him by the Way; for His Majeſty left that Place on Sunday-Morning, Dec. 16. And about Four in the Afternoon Enter'd the City of London, as it were in Triumph, and went on to Whitehall with great Acclamations, Ringing of Bells, and Bonfires, with all other Proofs, that the People who hated Popery loved the King. The Night before the King left Rocheſter, He diſpatch'd the Earl of Feverſham with a Letter to the Prince, to Invite him to St. James's, with what Number of Guards and Troops His Highneſs ſhould think convenient to bring along with him, That they might Perſonally and Amicably Confer together about the Means of Redreſſing the Publick Grievances. The Earl arrived on Sunday-Morning at Windſor, and having deliver'd his Meſſage to the Prince, he was Surpriz'd, when in ſtead of an Anſwer Monſieur Bentinck Demanded his Sword, being Order'd by His Highneſs to Arreſt him and Secure him, for his Late Act of Diſbanding the Army, without Orders. Then the Prince referred the Conſideration of the King's Letter to the Peers about him, who concluded that the Royal Palace of Whitehall being ſtill crowded with Iriſh Papiſts, Prieſts and Jeſuits, His Highneſs could not be Safe at St. James's, unleſs His Majeſty was remov'd within a reaſonable Diſtance from London. Several Places were propoſed, but at laſt Ham, a Houſe belonging to the Dutcheſs of Lauderdale, was pitch'd upon, and by their Advice, His Highneſs Subſcribed a Paper in theſe Words.

Earl of Middleton,	Mr. Titus.

Laſt Order of Council.

"HIS Majeſty being given to underſtand, That divers Outrages and Diſorders are committed in ſeveral Parts of the Kingdom, by Burning, Pulling-down, and otherwiſe Defacing Houſes and other Buildings, and Rifling and Plundering the ſame, to the great Terror of His Majeſty's Subjects, and manifeſt Breach of the Peace; His Majeſty in Council is Pleaſed to Direct and Command all Lords-Lieutenants, Deputy-Lieutenants, Juſtices of the Peace, Mayors, Conſtables, and all other Officers whom it may concern, to uſe their utmoſt Endeavours for the preventing all ſuch Outrages and Diſorders for the future, and for the Suppreſſing all Riotous and Tumultuous Meetings and Aſſemblies whatſoever.

W. BRIDGEMAN.

The King had heard on Sunday-Night, That the Earl of Feverſham, his Meſſenger to the Prince, was put under Confinement at Windſor; upon which His Majeſty was full of Perplexity and Irreſolution: Yet on Monday-Morning, Dec. 17. He ſent the Earl of Muſgrave with another Complement to the Prince of Orange, who was by this Time advanc'd as far as Sion-Houſe, and his Guards were come as far as Kenſington and Chelſey, where they were Order'd to Quarter that Night; but ſoon after, they received freſh Orders to March, and take Poſſeſſion of all the Poſts about Whitehall and St. James's, either by fair Means or open Force. Count Solmes, who Commanded 'em, being come for that Purpoſe, His Majeſty ſent for him about Nine a-Clock at Night, and deſir'd him to let Him have his own Guard at Whitehall only for that Night; but the Count alledging his Poſitive Orders to Relieve all the Poſts, His Majeſty bade him do his Office. At Ten of the Clock the Dutch-Guards entred into St. James's Palace, and towards Eleven thoſe who were Commanded to Whitehall, mov'd thither through the Park. The Lord Craven, who was directed by the Prince to Order the King's Guards to retire upon Approach of His Highneſs's Troops, ſuppoſing this was not to be executed till the next Day, had given no Orders for that Purpoſe; And the Engliſh, ſeeming unwilling to Diſlodge, the Prince's Guards March'd up to 'em with Lighted-Match, and in a Fighting-Poſture; but at laſt the King's Guards were perſwaded to withdraw.

The King ſends the Earl of Muſgrave to the Prince.

The Prince Orders his own Guards at St James's and Whitehall.

The Dutch being thus Poſted at Whitehall, the Three Lords, who came from the Prince, ſent in this Note to Secretary Middleton; My Lords, There is a Meſſage to be deliver'd to His Majeſty from the Prince, which is of ſo great Importance, that We, who are Charg'd with it, deſire We may be immediately admitted; and therefore deſire to know, where we may find your Lordſhip, that you may introduce, my Lord, your———Hallifax, Shrewsbury, Delamere. The King was before this in Bed, but the Earl of Middleton introduc'd them to His Majeſty's Bed-ſide, about One in the Morning. And after a ſhort Apology, for breaking in upon His Majeſty's Repoſe at ſo unſeaſonable an Hour, They deliver'd Him the Prince's Paper, which the King Read, Meſſage to the King.

1688. Read, and ſaid, He would Comply with it. Whereupon the Lords Humbly deſir'd, He would Remove ſo Early, as to be at Ham-Houſe by Noon, to prevent Meeting the Prince in his Way to London, where He was to come the ſame Day. His Majeſty readily Agreed to this too, and ask'd, Whether He might not Appoint what Servants ſhould Attend Him? To which the Lords reply'd, That it was left to His Majeſty to give Order in that as He pleas'd, and ſo took their Leave. When they were gone as far as the Privy-Chamber, the King ſent for 'em again, and told 'em, He had forgot to Acquaint 'em, with his Reſolutions before the Meſſage came, to ſend my Lord Godolphin next Morning to the Prince, to propoſe his going-back to Rocheſter; He finding by the Meſſage Monſieur Zuyleſtein was Charg'd with, that the Prince had no Mind he ſhould be at London, and therefore He now deſir'd He might rather return to Rocheſter, than go to any other Place. The Lords reply'd, that they would immediately Acquaint the Prince, with His Majeſty's Deſire, not doubting of ſuch an Anſwer, as would be to His Majeſty's Satisfaction. Accordingly they ſent to the Prince, who was then at Sion-Houſe, who yielding to the King's Deſign of leaving the Realm, order'd Monſieur Bentinck to write a Letter, which came before Eight a Clock next Morning, Agreeing to His Majeſty's Propoſals of returning to Rocheſter. Thereupon the King having taken his Leave of the Lords, the Ambaſſador of Spain, and other Perſons there preſent, His Majeſty went into his Barge, attended by the Earls of Aileſbury, Litchfield, Arran, and Dunbarton, Six of his own Yeomen of the Guard, and about One Hundred of the Prince's Forces, and Arriv'd about Nine a-Clock at Night at Graveſend, where He met ſome Troops of Horſe, who, the next Day, Guarded Him by Land to Rocheſter.

Conference between the King and Meſſengers from the Prince.

The King deſires to return to Rocheſter,

Which is granted by the Prince.

The Prince comes to St. James's.

The ſame Day, Dec. 18. about Three in the Afternoon, the Prince, with a Magnificent Equipage, and a Noble and Numerous Retinue came to St. James's, where He receiv'd the Congratulations of the Nobility and Gentry, and the Acclamations of the People in a very extraordinary Manner. On the 20th, the Aldermen, and Common-Council of the City of London, waited on the Prince; and the Lord Mayor being Indiſpos'd, the Recorder, Sir George Treby, made an Eloquent Speech to His Highneſs, concluding thus: Great Sir, when We look back to the laſt Month, and Contemplate the Swiftneſs and Fulneſs of our preſent Deliverance, Aſtoniſh'd, We think it Miraculous. Your Highneſs, led by the Hand of Heaven, and called by the Voice of the People, has preſerv'd our deareſt Intereſts; The Proteſtant Religion, which is Primitive Chriſtianity reſtor'd; Our Laws, which are our Ancient Title to our Lives, Liberties and Eſtates, and, without which, this World were a Wilderneſs. But what Retribution can we make to Your Highneſs? Our Thoughts are full-charg'd with Gratitude. Your Highneſs has a laſting Monument in the Hearts, in the Prayers, and in the Praiſes of all good Men amongſt us. And late Poſterity will Celebrate your Ever-Glorious Name, till Time ſhall be no more.

Foreign Miniſters Addreſs the Prince.

The Ambaſſador of Spain, and the Reſident of Venice, did likewiſe Complement his Highneſs in Private, and deſir'd Protection to Themſelves, and other Foreigners, who were in great Danger of being Inſulted by the Mobile, upon which the Privy-Council iſſu'd out an Order, That all Foreigners ſhould be allow'd to leave the Kingdom, and the Prince ſent his Paſſes to the Pope's Nuncio, and to the Envoys of Poland, Savoy, and Modena. The Lords Langdon and Montgomery were ſet at Liberty, but the Earls of Peterborough and Salisbury, were kept in Cuſtody, with a great many Popiſh Prieſts and Jeſuits.

On Dec. 21. The Lords Spiritual and Temporal, about Seventy in Number, waited on the Prince at St. James's, who deſir'd them to conſider of the beſt Methods, to call a Free Parliament, and to purſue the Ends of His Declaration, which He left to be purſu'd by their Lordſhips, and ſo withdrew from 'em. After the Reading of the Declaration, the Lords Voted their Thanks to his Highneſs for coming over: And the better to conſider of the moſt effectual Means, to obtain the Ends of his Highneſs's Declaration, and to ſettle a Form of Government; They Reſolv'd to Aſſemble for the future in the Parliament-Houſe at Weſtminſter, where They met accordingly the next Day, and firſt made an Order to Appoint Francis Gwyn, Eſq; to Sign and Subſcribe ſuch Orders as ſhould be from Time to Time made by 'em. Then they came to a Reſolution, That Five of the moſt able Lawyers, Sir John Maynard, Mr. Holt, Mr. Pollexfen, Mr. Bradford, and Mr. Atkinſon, ſhould Aſſiſt 'em in their important Conſultations, in the Room of the Judges, who were moſt of 'em Abſent from London. It was afterwards propos'd, That the whole Aſſembly ſhould Sign the ſame Engagement or Aſſociation, which the Nobility and Gentry had already Subſcrib'd at Exeter, to which all the Lords Agreed, excepting Four or Five.

1688. The Prince Conſults with the Peers.

Their Advice and Reſolutions.

The King at Rocheſter ſoon heard of theſe Proceedings, and was the more determin'd by 'em, to purſue his former Reſolution of going over to France. And therefore, on Sunday, Dec. 23. about Three in the Morning, His Majeſty privately withdrew Himſelf, without Communicating his Deſign to any Body; No, not to the Earl of Dunbarton, who lay in the King's Chamber, and who did not awake till after His Majeſty was gone. This Forlorn Prince, taking only with him the Duke of Berwick, Mr. Sheldon, and Monſieur Labidi, went on Horſe-Back, as far as the Place appointed at the River-ſide, where Captain Mackdonnel waited to receive him in a ſmall Frigot; and having immediately put to Sea with a favourable Wind, they ſoon Landed at Ambletenſe in France, from whence His Majeſty took Poſt for St. Germains. The Earl of Middleton, who had come down to Rocheſter to reſign his Seal, found the next Day upon the Table, One of His Majeſty's Letters, deſiring him to Gratify the Captains of the Prince's Troops that were appointed to Guard Him, with an 100 Guinea's a-piece, the Lieutenants and Enſigns with Fifty; and to Reward ſome others that had attended Him in Proportion. The King left alſo behind Him a Paper Wrote with his own Hand, and afterwards Printed by his Order in this Form.

The King Reſolves to go to France.

He leaves a Paper at Rocheſter.

His Majeſty's Reaſons for Withdrawing Himſelf from Rocheſter.

" THE World cannot Wonder at my With" drawing my Self now this ſecond Time.
" I might have expected ſomewhat better Uſage
" after what I Writ to the Prince of Orange, by
" my Lord Feverſham, and the Inſtructions I gave " him. But in ſtead of an Anſwer, ſuch as I might " have hop'd for, what was I to expect, after the " Uſage I receiv'd, by the making the ſaid Earl
" a Priſoner, againſt the Practice and Law of Na" tions; The ſending his own Guards at Eleven at " Night, to take Poſſeſſion of the Poſts at White-
" hall, without Advertiſeing me in the leaſt man" ner of it; The ſending to me at One of the " Clock at Midnight, when I was in Bed, a kind
" of Order, by Three Lords, to be gone out of " my Palace before Twelve the ſame Morning.
" After all this, how could I hope to be Safe, ſo
" long as I was in the Power of One, who had
" not only done this to me, and invaded my
" Kingdoms, without any juſt Occaſion given him
" for it; but that did, by his own Declaration

lay

1688. " lay the greateſt Aſperſion on Me that Malice
" could invent, in the Clauſe of it which concerns
" My Son? I Appeal to all that know Me, nay,
" even to Himſelf, that in their Conſciences, neither
" He, nor they, can believe Me in the leaſt capable
" of ſo Unnatural a Villany, nor of ſo little Com" mon Senſe, to be Impos'd on in a Thing of ſuch
" a Nature as that. What had I then to expect,
" from One, who, by all Arts, hath taken ſuch
" Pains to make Me as Black as Hell to My People,
" aſwell as to all the World beſides? What Effect
" that hath had at Home, all Mankind hath ſeen,
" by ſo general a Defection in my Army, aſwell
" as in the Nation, amongſt all ſorts of People.

" I was Born Free, and deſire to Continue ſo:
" And though I have ventur'd my Life very
" frankly, on ſeveral Occaſions, for the Good and
" Honour of my Country; and am as free to do
" it again, (and, which I hope I ſhall yet do, as " Old as I am, to redeem it from the Slavery it is " like to fall under) yet I think it not convenient
" to expoſe My Self to be ſo Secured, as not to be
" at Liberty to Effect it; and for that Reaſon, to " Withdraw, but ſo as to be within Call, when-
" ſoever the Nation's Eyes ſhall be open'd, ſo as " to ſee how they have been impos'd upon, by the " ſpecious Pretences of Liberty and Property. I " hope it will pleaſe GOD to touch their Hearts,
" out of His Infinite Mercy, and to make them
" ſenſible of the Ill-Condition they are in, and
" bring them to ſuch a Temper, that a Legal Par- " liament may be Call'd; and that, amongſt other " Things which may be neceſſary to be done, they " will Agree to Liberty of Conſcience for all Pro-
" teſtant Diſſenters; and that thoſe of My Own
" Perſuaſion may be ſo far Conſider'd, and have
" ſuch a ſhare of it, as they may live peaceably,
" and quietly, as Engliſh-men and Chriſtians ought
" to do, and not be oblig'd to tranſplant them-
" ſelves; which wou'd be very grievous, eſpecially
" to ſuch who love their Country. And I appeal to " all Men, who are Conſidering Men, and have had " Experience, whether any thing can make this " Nation ſo Great and Flouriſhing, as Liberty of " Conſcience: Some of Our Neighbours dread it.

" I cou'd add much more, to confirm what I
" have ſaid, but now it is not the proper Time.

Rocheſter,
Dec. 22. 1688.

When the Prince was inform'd of His Majeſty's Departure, He reſolv'd not to Act without a Concurrence of the Lords and Commons; and therefore He Publiſh'd this Order, ſuitable to the preſent Exigence:

The Prince his Order.

" WHereas the Neceſſity of Affairs does re" quire ſpeedy Advice; We do Deſire all
" ſuch Perſons as have Serv'd as Knights, Citizens
" or Burgeſſes in any of the Parliaments that were " held during the Reign of the late King Charles II.
" to Meet us at St. James's, upon Wedneſday the " 26th of this Inſtant December, by Ten of the " Clock in the Morning. And We do likewiſe
" Deſire, That the Lord-Mayor and Court of Alder-
" men of the City of London wou'd be preſent at
" the ſame time: And that the Common-Council
" wou'd Appoint Fifty of their Number to be
" there likewiſe. And hereof We Deſire 'em not " to fail.

Given at St. James's, the 23*d of* December, 1688.
W. H. Prince of Orange.

In the mean-time, on Tueſday Decemb. 25th, the Lords Spiritual and Temporal Aſſembled in their Houſe at Weſtminſter, and made this Addreſs to the Prince:

Addreſs of the Lords.

" WE the Lords Spiritual and Temporal,
" Aſſembled in this Conjuncture, do Deſire
" Your Highneſs to take upon You the Admini- 1688.
" ſtration of the Publick Affairs, both Civil and " Military, and the Diſpoſal of the Publick Re-
" venue, for the Preſervation of our Religion, Rights,
" Laws, Liberties and Properties, and of the Peace
" of the Nation: And that Your Highneſs will " take into Your particular Care, the preſent
" Condition of Ireland; and endeavour, by the " moſt-effectual Means, to prevent the Dangers
" threatning that Kingdom. All which, We make " our Requeſt to Your Highneſs to Undertake and
" Exerciſe, till the Meeting of the intended Con- " vention, the 22d of January next. In which, We " doubt not, ſuch proper Methods will be taken,
" as will conduce to the Eſtabliſhment of theſe
" Things upon ſuch Sure and Legal Foundations,
" that they may not be in Danger of being again
" Subverted.

Dated at the Houſe of Lords, Weſtm. Dec. 25. 1688.

Then Their Lordſhips proceeded to Conſider of the moſt-effectual Way for Summoning the ſaid Convention, and Drew up their Opinions, in this other Addreſs to the Prince:

Opinion of the Lords, for a Convention.

" WE the Lords Spiritual and Temporal,
" Aſſembled at Weſtminſter in this Ex-
" traordinary Conjuncture, do humbly Deſire
" Your Highneſs to cauſe Letters to be written,
" Subſcribed by Your Self, to the Lords Spiritual

" ſeveral Counties, Univerſities, Cities, Boroughs
" and Cinque-Ports of England, Wales, and Town
" of Berwick upon Tweed. The Letters for the " Counties, to be Directed to the Coroners of the " reſpective Counties, or any One of them; and
" in Default of the Coroners, to the Clerk of the " Peace of the reſpective Counties: And the " Letters for the Univerſities, to be Directed to " every Vice-Chancellor: And the Letters to the " ſeveral Cities, Boroughs, and Cinque-Ports, to be " Directed to the Chief-Magiſtrates of each reſpe-
" ctive City, Borough, and Cinque-Port; con" taining Directions for the Chuſing, in all ſuch
" Counties, Cities, Univerſities, Boroughs and
" Cinque-Ports, within Ten Days after the Receipt " of the reſpective Letters, ſuch a Number of " Perſons to Repreſent them, as are of Right to be " Sent to Parliament: Of which Elections, and
" the Times and Places thereof, the reſpective Offi" cers ſhall give Notice, within the ſpace of Five " Days at the leaſt. Notice of the intended Elections
" for the Counties, to be Publiſh'd in the Churches,
" immediately after the Time of Divine-Service,
" and in all Market-Towns within the reſpective
" Counties: And Notice of the intended Elections
" for the Cities, Univerſities, Boroughs and Cinque-
" Ports, to be Publiſh'd within the ſaid reſpective
" Places. The ſaid Letters, and the Execution
" thereof, to be Return'd, by ſuch Officer and Offi" cers who ſhall Execute the ſame, to the Clerk of " the Crown in the Court of Chancery; ſo as the " Perſons ſo to be Choſen, may Meet and Sit at
" Weſtminſter, on the Two and twentieth Day of " January next.

Dated at the Houſe of Lords, Weſtm. Dec. 25. 1688.

Both theſe Addreſſes were Sign'd by all the Lords Spiritual and Temporal then Aſſembled; and Preſented to His Highneſs the Prince of Orange, the ſame Day, at St. James's: Who ſuſpended His Anſwer, till He had heard whether the Commoners, who were to Meet the next Day, wou'd Concur in the ſame Advice.

Meeting of the Commons of the two laſt Parliaments.

On Wedneſday the 26th of December, Divers of the Members of the Parliament in the Reign of the late King Charles II. and the Aldermen and Common-Council of the City of London, purſuant to His Highneſs the Prince of Orange's Deſire, Met toge-

1688. ther in the Palace of St. James; To whom His Highneſs ſpoke as follows.

The Prince his Speech to the Commons.

"YOU Gentlemen that have been Members of the late Parliaments, I have Deſir'd you to Meet Me here, to Adviſe the beſt Manner how to purſue the Ends of My Declaration, in Calling a Free-Parliament, for the Preſervation of the Proteſtant Religion, and the Reſtoring the Rights and Liberties of the Kingdom, and Settling the ſame, that they may not be in Danger of being again Subverted.

"And You the Aldermen and Members of the Common-Council of the City of London, I Deſire the ſame of You. And in regard your Numbers are like to be great, you may, if you think fit, divide your-ſelves, and Sit in ſeveral Places.

They form themſelves into an Houſe.

Upon which, they immediately Agreed to go to the Commons-Houſe at Weſtminſter; where being Seated, they Choſe Henry Powle Eſq; their Chairman. The firſt Queſtion they Debated, was, What Authority they had to Aſſemble? Upon which, it was Agreed, That the Requeſt of His Highneſs, was a ſufficient Warrant. Then a Queſtion was ſtarted by Sir Robert S——, How His Highneſs cou'd take upon Him the Adminiſtration of Affairs, without a Diſtinguiſhing Name or Title? To which Mr. Serjeant Maynard Anſwer'd, That the Aſſembly wou'd loſe a great deal of Time, if they waited till Sir Robert cou'd conceive how that was poſſible: And ſo that Queſtion dropt. Then one Member Propos'd, To offer the Government to His Highneſs, for a Month; and another, for a whole Year: But it was Anſwer'd, That it wou'd be Time enough for the Convention to Conſider of that Matter. After this, it was Mov'd, That the Aſſociation, that had been Sign'd by the Lords, might likewiſe be Subſcrib'd by this Aſſembly: But it was Carry'd, That the ſaid Aſſociation ſhou'd be left upon the Table, and Every-one be at liberty to Sign it, or not. After theſe previous Debates, they Reſolved upon Heads for an Addreſs to be made to His Highneſs, and Appointed Perſons to Draw up and Prepare the ſame; and in the Afternoon it was done accordingly, and Read, and Approv'd, in this Form:

Addreſs of the Commons to the Prince.

"WE who have Serv'd as Members of the Parliaments during the Reign of the late King Charles II. together with the Court of Aldermen, and Members of the Common-Council of the City of London, Aſſembled at Your Highneſs's Deſire (in this Extraordinary Conjuncture,) Do, with an Unanimous Conſent, tender to Your Highneſs our humble and hearty Thanks, for Your Coming into this Kingdom, and Expoſing Your Perſon to ſo great Hazards, for the Preſervation of our Religion, Laws and Liberties, and Reſcuing us from the Miſeries of Popery and Slavery: And Deſire Your Highneſs, That (in purſuance of thoſe Ends, and for the Preſervation of the Peace of the Nation) Your Highneſs will take upon You the Adminiſtration of Publick Affairs, both Civil and Military, and the Diſpoſal of the Publick Revenue.

"We do alſo Deſire, That Your Highneſs will take into Your particular Care, the preſent Condition of Ireland; and endeavour, by the moſt-ſpeedy and effectual Means, to prevent the Dangers threatning that Kingdom.

"All which, We Deſire Your Highneſs to Undertake and Execute, until the Meeting of the intended Convention, the 22d Day of January next.

"We do likewiſe Deſire Your Highneſs, to cauſe Letters to be Written, and Subſcribed by Your Highneſs, to the Lords Spiritual and Temporal (being Proteſtants;) and to the ſeveral Counties, Univerſities, Cities, Boroughs and Cinque-Ports of England, Wales, and to the Town of Berwick upon Twede. 1688.

"The Letters for the Counties, to be Directed to the Coroners of their reſpective Counties, or any One of them; and in Default of Coroners, to the Clerk of the Peace of the reſpective Counties: And the Letters to the Univerſities, to be Directed to the reſpective Vice-Chancellors: And the Letters to the ſeveral Cities, Boroughs and Cinque-Ports, to be Directed to the Chief-Magiſtrate of each reſpective City, Borough and Cinque-Port; containing Directions for the Chuſing, in all ſuch Counties, Cities, Univerſities, Boroughs and Cinque-Ports, within Ten Days after the Receipt of the ſaid reſpective Letters, ſuch a Number of Perſons to Repreſent them, as are of Right to be Sent to Parliament. That for ſuch Elections, and the Times and Places thereof, the reſpective Officer ſhall give Notice, in Manner following: (That is to ſay,) As to the Elections of the Counties, Notice to be Publiſh'd in all Market-Towns in the reſpective Counties, by the ſpace of Five Days at leaſt before ſuch Election: And Notice of the Elections for the Cities, Univerſities, Boroughs and Cinque-Ports, to be Publiſh'd in the reſpective Places, by the ſpace of Three Days before at the leaſt.

"That the ſaid Letters, and the Execution thereof, be Return'd, by ſuch Officer and Officers who ſhall Execute the ſame, to the Clerk of the Crown in the Court of Chancery; ſo as the Perſons ſo to be Choſen, may Meet and Sit at Weſtminſter, on the Twenty-ſecond Day of January next.

"This We humbly offer Your Highneſs, as our beſt Advice, in this Exigency of Affairs, for attaining the Ends of Your Highneſs's Declaration; and as the beſt Means tending to ſuch an Eſtabliſhment, as that our Religion, Laws and Liberties, may not be in Danger of being again Subverted.

His Highneſs having Appointed to receive this Addreſs the next Morning, He was then Attended by a Body of them; and the Addreſs was Preſented, and Read by Mr. Powle, to His Highneſs: Who was pleas'd to Declare, That it being a Matter of Weight, He wou'd Conſider thereof, and give His Anſwer the next Day.

Accordingly, on Friday-Morning, Dec. 28th, His Highneſs gave the following Anſwer to the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, at St. James.

My LORDS,

Anſwer of the Prince to the Lords.

"I Have Conſider'd of Your Advice; and, as far as I am able, I will endeavour to Secure the Peace of the Nation, until the Meeting of the Convention in January next; for the Election whereof, I will forthwith Iſſue out Letters, according to Your Deſire. I will alſo take Care to apply the Publick Revenue to the moſt proper Uſes that the preſent Affairs require: And likewiſe endeavour to put Ireland into ſuch a Condition, as that the Proteſtant Religion, and the Engliſh Intereſt, may be Maintain'd in that Kingdom. And I further Aſſure you, That as I Came hither for the Preſervation of the Proteſtant Religion, and the Laws and Liberties of theſe Kingdoms; ſo I ſhall always be ready to Expoſe My Self to any Hazard, for the Defence of the ſame.

And in the Afternoon, His Highneſs was pleas'd to give the ſame Anſwer to the Commoners.

On Sunday Dec. 30th, His Highneſs receiv'd the Holy Sacrament in the Royal Chappel of St. James's, from the Hands of the Biſhop of London, and heard the whole Service Read by Dr. Burnet, and an Excellent Sermon Preach'd by the Biſhop of St. Aſaph, 1688. St. Asaph, with open professing Himself a Member of the Church of England, gain'd Him the Tongues and Hearts of many People. On Monday Morning, his Highness Publish'd a Declaration (being the first Act of his Administration of Publick Affairs) for Authorizing all Sheriffs, Justices of Peace, and other Officers and Ministers, not being Papists that were in such Offices, on the first Day of December last, to Act in their respective Places, till the Meeting of the said Convention, or other Order to the contrary. The same Monday Evening, his Highness paid a Visit to the Queen Dowager, and amongst other Questions, ask'd Her Majesty, How She pass'd her Time, and whether She Play'd at Basset. The Queen took this Opportunity to speak at a distance, in Favour of the Earl of Feversham, and answer'd his Highness, That She had not Play'd at it since the Absence of her Chamberlain, who us'd to keep the Bank. The Prince of Orange took the Hint, and assur'd Her Majesty, That he would not by any means Divert Her Majesties Diversions, and would therefore Order the Earl to be set at Liberty, which was done the next Day.

The Prince having dispatch'd his Circular Letters for the Meeting of the Convention, he Publish'd an Order, Jan. 5. strictly Charging and Requiring all Regiments, Troops or Companies, to March out of the Quarters, where any Election was to be made (the several Garrisons only excepted) the Day before the same be made, That such Elections might be carry'd on with the greater Freedom, and without any Colour of Force or Restraint. And because the Prince was inform'd, That divers Soldiers, contrary to his Intention, and the Laws of the Land, were Quarter'd in Private Houses, he sent out an Order, dated Jan. 8. That none of the Forces of what Nation or Quality soever, should presume to Quarter in any Private House, without the free and voluntary Consent of the Owner. The same Day, the Court of Aldermen, and Common-Council being Assembled, a Letter was deliver'd unto 'em from his Highness the Prince of Orange, setting forth the great Occasion there was for an immediate Supply of Money, beyond what the present Condition of the Revenue could furnish, for supporting the Charge of the Navy, paying off a Part of the Army, and sending a speedy Relief for the Defence of the Protestant Interest in Ireland; and proposing that for the Answering these great Ends, such a Sum of Money should be Advanc'd by way of Loan, as they could conveniently Spare, which should be secur'd in the best Manner that could be Advis'd, and Re-paid with full Interest at the End of Six Months: Whereupon a Vote immediately Pass'd with all Chearfulness and Unanimity, That they would Supply his Highness with Two Hundred Thousand Pounds. The next Day, a Committee of the said Court, attended his Highness, and gave him an Account of their Compliance with his Desire, and the whole Sum was Rais'd in Four Days, One single Man having Subscrib'd Sixty Thousand Pounds towards it.

On Jan. 16. The Prince Publish'd a Declaration to Satisfie the Seamen, That as well their Arrears, as their growing Wages should be fully made good to 'em, according to the known Methods of the Navy, so soon as the Ships should be brought in, and laid up. And on Jan. 19. The Prince Publish'd another Order for the Satisfying and making Good to every Officer and Soldier their full Pay and Arrears due to 'em until the first Day of this Instant January, and for the making Constant and Punctual Payment of the Subsistance-Money, and Clearings of the Army in the usual Method, without any the least Diminution of the former Pay.

On Tuesday, Jan. 22. The Lords Spiritual and Temporal and Commons Assembl'd at Westminster: The Lord Marquess of Hallifax, Executed the Place of Speaker in the House of Lords, and the Commons Chose Henry Powle, Esq; to be their Speaker. After which, this Letter from the Prince of Orange, was Read in Both Houses on the Occasion of their Meeting.

My Lords and Gentlemen;

"I Have Endeavour'd to the utmost of my Power to Perform what was desir'd from Me, in order to the publick Peace and Safety, and I do not know that any Thing hath been emitted, which might tend to the Preservation of them, since the Administration of Affairs was put into my Hands. It now lieth upon you to lay the Foundations of a firm Security for your Religion, your Laws, and your Liberties.

"I do not doubt, but that by such a Full and Free-Representative of the Nation, as is now Met, the Ends of my Declaration will be attained: And since it hath pleas'd GOD hitherto to bless My good Intentions with so-good Success; I trust in him, that he will compleat his own Work, by sending a Spirit of Peace and Union, to Influence your Counsels, that no Interruption may be given to an happy and lasting Settlement.

"The dangerous Condition of the Protestants in Ireland, requiring a large and speedy Succour; and the present State of Things Abroad, Oblige me to tell you, That next to the Danger of unseasonable Divisions amongst your Selves, nothing can be so fatal, as too great a Delay in your Consultations. The States, by whom I have been enabl'd to Rescue this Nation, may suddenly feel the ill Effects of it, both by being too long depriv'd of the Service of their Troops, which are now here, and of your early Assistance against a powerful Enemy, who hath declar'd War against them. And as England is by Treaty already Engag'd to help them upon such Exigencies, so I am Confident, that their chearful Concurrence to preserve this Kingdom with so much Hazard to themselves, will meet with all the Returns of Friendship and Assistance, which may be expected from you as Protestants and English Men, whenever their Condition shall require it.

The Prince's Speech to them.

After the Reading this Letter in the House of Commons, the Speaker represented to the Assembly, "The dangerous State of the Nation, and the fatal Consequences of Anarchy, the deplorable Condition of the Protestants in Ireland, and how much England might be affected by the Loss of that Kingdom: And lastly, the Growth of the Exorbitant Power of France, and the vast Designs of that aspiring and turbulent Monarch, not only the Persecutor of the Protestant Religion, but the Sworn-Enemy of England, &c. This Speech was receiv'd with universal Applause, and was seconded by several Members. Then Both Houses resolv'd upon an Address to be presented to his Highness, and agreed that Thursday, the 31st of Jan. should be Appointed for a Day of Publick Thanksgiving to Almighty God, in the Cities of London and Westminster, and Ten Miles distant, for having made his Highness the Prince of Orange the Glorious Instrument of the great Deliverance of this Kingdom from Popery and Arbitrary Power, and that Thursday, the 14th of February, should be Appointed for a Day of like Publick Thanksgiving throughout the rest of the Kingdom. Then the Lords and Commons went in a Body to present the forementioned Address to his Highness in these Words.

Day of Thanksgiving.

"WE the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and Commons Assembled at Westminster, being Sensible of the great Deliverance of this

Address of Lords and Commons.

1688. " Kingdom from Popery and Arbitrary Power; " and that our Preſervation is next, under GOD, " owing to Your Highneſs, do return Our Moſt " Humble Thanks and Acknowledgments to Your " Highneſs, as the Glorious Inſtrument of ſo great " a Bleſſing. We do farther acknowledge the " great Care Your Highneſs has been pleaſed to " take in the Adminiſtration of the Publick Af- " fairs of the Kingdom to this Time. And We " do moſt humbly deſire Your Highneſs that You " will take upon You the Adminiſtration of Pub- " lick Affairs both Civil and Military, and the " Diſpoſal of the Publick Revenue, for the Pre- " ſervation of our Religion, Rights, Laws, Liber- " ties and Properties, and the Peace of the Na- " tion; and that Your Highneſs will take into " your particular Care the Preſent State of Ire- " land, and endeavour by the moſt Speedy and " Effectual Means to prevent the Dangers that " threaten that Kingdom. All which We make " Our Requeſt to Your Highneſs to undertake and " execute, till further Application ſhall be made " by Us, which ſhall be expedited with all con- " venient Speed: And We ſhall alſo uſe our ut- " moſt Endeavours to give Diſpatch to the Mat- " ters recommended to Us by Your Higneſs's " Letter.

On the next Day, Jan. 23. His Highneſs ſent this Anſwer to Both Houſes.

My Lords and Gentlemen;

The Prince his Anſwer. " I am Glad that what I have done has Pleaſed " You, and ſince You deſire Me to continue " the Adminiſtration of Affairs, I am willing to " Accept it. I muſt recommend to You the " Conſideration of Affairs abroad, which makes " it fit for you to expedite your Buſineſs, not on- " ly for making a Settlement at home, upon a " good Foundation, but for the Safety of Europe.

On Monday, Jan. 28. the Commons Reſolved themſelves into a Committee of the whole Houſe, to take into Conſideration the State and Condition of the Nation, and Mr. Hamden took the Chair. Mr. Dolben began in a Speech to prove that the Throne was Vacant, becauſe King James, both by his Violation of the Laws, and his Voluntary Deſerting theſe Kingdoms, had forfeited his Right and Abdicated the Government. Several Members Argued againſt the Throne being Vacant, as a Poſition New and Unknown to the Engliſh Conſtitution. Sir Richard Temple ask'd, If the Throne were not Vacant, what Buſineſs they had in that Place, and what Need or what Power there was for Calling this Convention? and then proceeded to confirm Mr. Dolben's Aſſertion. After Four Hours Debate, Mr. Hamden reported this Reſolve of the Committee, to which the Houſe Agreed.

The Commons Debate on the Throne being Vacant.

Reſolution. Reſolved,

" That King James the Second, having en- " deavoured to Subvert the Conſtitution of the " Kingdom, by breaking the Original Contract " between King and People: And by the Advice " of Jeſuits and other wicked Perſons, having " Violated the Fundamental-Laws, and withdrawn " Himſelf out of the Kingdom, hath Abdicated the " Government, and that the Throne is thereby " Vacant.

Mr. Hamden, by Order of the Houſe, carried up this Reſolution to the Lords for their Concurrence; and on Saturday, Feb. 2. this Meſſage was brought from the Lords. Mr. SPEAKER, The Lords have Conſidered of the Vote of this Houſe of the 28*th of* January laſt, to which they Concur with Amendments, unto which Amendments they deſire the Concurrence of this Houſe. The Two Amendments were, l. 8. in ſtead of the Word Abdicated, read Deſerted. l. 9. leave out theſe Words, And that the Throne is thereby Vacant. The Commons having Conſider'd theſe Amendments, Diſagreed by a great Majority, and Appointed a Committee, who drew up theſe Reaſons why the Houſe could not Concur with their Lordſhips.

The Lords make Amendments.

1688. Diſagreed to by the Commons.

" To the Firſt Amendment Propoſed by the Lords, in ſtead of the Word Abdicated, to inſert " the Word Deſerted, the Commons do not Agree; " becauſe the Word Deſerted doth not fully ex- " preſs the Concluſion neceſſarily inferred from " the Premiſſes, which your Lordſhips have A- " greed to: For your Lordſhips have Agreed, That King James the Second hath endeavoured to Sub- " vert the Conſtitution of the Kingdom, by break- " ing the Original-Contract between King and Peo- " ple, and hath Violated the Fundamental-Laws, " and withdrawn himſelf out of the Kingdom. Now " the Word Deſerted reſpects only the Withdraw- " ing, but the Word Abdicated reſpects the whole; " for which Purpoſe the Commons made Choice of it. Their Reaſons.

" The Commons do not Agree to the Second " Amendment to leave out the Words, And that " the Throne is thereby Vacant.

" 1. Becauſe they Conceive, That as they " may well infer from ſo much of their own " Vote, as your Lordſhips have Agreed unto, That " King James the Second has Abdicated the Go- " vernment, and that the Throne is thereby Va- " cant: So that if they ſhould admit your Lord- " ſhips Amendment, that he hath only Deſerted " the Government; yet even thence it would " follow, that the Throne is Vacant as to King " James the Second, Deſerting the Government " being in true Conſtruction Deſerting the Throne.

" 2. The Commons Conceive, they need not " prove unto your Lordſhips, that as to any other " Perſon, the Throne is alſo Vacant: Your Lord- " ſhips (as They conceive) having already Ad- " mitted it, by Your Addreſſing to the Prince of " Orange, the 25th of December laſt, To take upon " Him the Adminiſtration of Publick Affairs, both " Civil and Military; and to take into His Care the " Kingdom of Ireland, till the Meeting of this Con- " vention. In purſuance of ſuch Letters, and " by Your Lordſhips renewing the ſame Addreſs " to His Highneſs (as to Publick Affairs, and the " Kingdom of Ireland) ſince You Met, and by " appointing Days of Publick Thankſgivings to be " obſerved throughout the whole Kingdom. All " which the Commons conceive to imply, that it " was your Lordſhips Opinion, that the Throne " was Vacant, and to ſignifie ſo much to the Peo- " ple of this Kingdom.

" 3. It is from thoſe who are upon the Throne " England (when there are any ſuch) from whom " the People of England ought to receive Prote- " ction; and to whom for that Cauſe they owe " the Allegiance of Subjects: But there being none " now from whom they expect Regal Protection, " and to whom for that Cauſe they owe the Al- " legiance of Subjects, the Commons conceive the " Throne is Vacant.

Diviſions among the Lords.

Intrigues of the French Ambaſſador.

The better to underſtand the Diviſions in the Houſe of Lords, it muſt be remembred, that while the King was the laſt time at Rocheſter, Monſieur Barillon, the French Ambaſſador was extraordinary buſie in promoting Diviſions amongſt the Peers, upon which the Prince of Orange, aſſoon as He was informed of the King's Departure, ſent an Order to that Miniſter, to leave the Kingdom in four and twenty Hours. Monſ. Barillon demanded more Time, which being refuſed, he parted from London with the Marqueſs Rangoni, Envoy of Modena, to whom the Prince had granted a Guard, and was conducted to Dover by Monſ. de L' Etang, a French-Refugee, and Lieutenant of His Highneſs's Horſe-Guards; from whence he Embark'd for Calais. Soon after, King James wrote a Letter from St. Germains, directed to the Lords and others of his 1688. Letter of King James.

his Privy-Council, Dated Jan. 4. importing, "That "He had taken away, not only all juſt Cauſes, "but even Pretenſions of Diſcontent, and redreſs'd "all thoſe things that were ſet forth as the Cauſes "of the Invaſion: That the Prince of Orange ſee- "ing all the Ends of his Declaration anſwer'd; "the People beginning to be Undeceiv'd, and re- "turning to their Duty, and well fore-ſeeing that "if a Free-Parliament ſhould Meet at the Time "appointed, ſuch a Settlement in all Probability "would be made both in Church and State, as "would totally defeat his Ambitious Deſigns, re- "ſolv'd by all Means poſſible to prevent the "Meeting of the Parliament: That to do this "the moſt effectual way, the Prince thought fit "to lay a Reſtraint upon his Royal Perſon; for "as it were abſurd to call that a Free-Parliament, "where there is any Force on either of the Two "Houſes, ſo much leſs can that Parliament be ſaid "to Act freely, where the Sovereign, by whoſe "Authority they Meet and Sit, and from whoſe "Royal Aſſent all their Acts receive their Life "and Sanction, is under actual Confinement: "That the Senſe of the Indignities He had ſuf- "fered, both in his own, and in the Perſon of "the Earl of Feverſham, and the juſt Apprehen- "ſion of further Attempts, by them who already "endeavour'd to Murther his Reputation by In- "famous Calumnies (as if he had been capable "of ſetting up a Suppoſititious Prince of Wales;) "together with a ſerious Reflexion on a Saying "of his Royal Father, when he was in the like "Circumſtances, that there is little Diſtance be- "tween the Priſons and the Graves of Princes, "(which afterward prov'd but too true in his "Caſe) could not but perſwade him to make uſe "of that Right, which the Law of Nature gives "to the meaneſt of his Subjects, of freeing himſelf "from that unjuſt Confinement: That this He "did not more for the Security of his own Perſon, "than that thereby He might be in a better Ca- "pacity for tranſacting and providing for every "thing that might contribute to the Peace and "Settlement of his Kingdoms: That as no Change "of Fortune ſhould ever make Him condeſcend to "any thing unbecoming his Royal Station; ſo "neither the Provocation nor Ingratitude of his "own Subjects, nor any other Conſideration "ſhould ever prevail with him to make the leaſt "Step contrary to the true Intereſt of the Engliſh "Nation, which he ever did and ever muſt look "upon as his own: That He requir'd them of his "Privy-Council, to make theſe his Intentions "known to the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and "the Lord-Mayor and Commons of the City of "London, and to all his Subjects in general; and "to aſſure them, that He deſir'd nothing more than "to return and hold a Free-Parliament, wherein "He might have the beſt Opportunity of unde- "ceiving his People, and ſhewing the Sincerity "of thoſe Proteſtations He had often made, of "preſerving the Liberties and Properties of his "Subjects, and the Proteſtant Religion, more-eſ- "pecially the Church-of-England, as by Law Eſta- "bliſhed: That in the mean-time they ſhould "ſend him their Advice, what was fit to be done "by Him towards his Returning, and the accom- "compliſhing of theſe good Ends; and that He "requir'd them to endeavour to ſuppreſs all Tu- "mults and Diſorders, that the Nation might re- "ceive the leaſt Prejudice that was poſſible from "the preſent Diſtractions.

This Letter was publickly Printed and Diſpers'd in London, but being Counter-ſign'd by the Earl of Melford, a profeſs'd Papiſt, and being dictated by the Counſels of France, it had very little Effect upon the People, whatever Impreſſions of Reſerve and Caution it might make upon ſome of the Peers, who deſired or feared the Return of the King. There being no avow'd Anſwer made to it, King James wrote another Letter Addreſs'd to the Lords and Commons, Dated Feb. 3. N. S. wherein He tells them, "That He thought Himſelf obliged "in Conſcience to do all he could to open his "People's Eyes, that they may ſee the true Inte- "reſt of the Nation in this important Conjuncture: "That finding He could no longer ſtay with Safe- "ty nor act with Freedom, He had left the Reaſons "of his Withdrawing from Rocheſter under his own "Hand: That underſtanding that Letter, which "He repeated here at length, was not taken to be "His, but was maliciouſly ſuppreſs'd by the Prince "of Orange; He writ to ſeveral of his Privy-Coun- "cil, and directed Copies thereof to divers of them, "the Peers of the Realm, believing none durſt in- "tercept or open any of thoſe Letters: That of "all theſe, He had no Account, nor did He won- "der that all Arts were uſed to hinder them from "knowing his Sentiments: That He was Reſolved "nothing ſhould be omitted on his Part, that "could contribute towards the Redreſs of all for- "mer Errors, or preſent Diſorders, or add to the "Securing the Proteſtant Religion, or the Property "of the Subject; intending to refer the whole to "a Parliament, Legally Called, Freely Elected, and "Held without Conſtraint. And that none might "deſpair of his Mercy, He declar'd on the Word "of a King, that his Pardon ſhould be extended "even to thoſe that betray'd him, (ſome few ex- "cepted) Reſolving in that Parliament to cover "all Faults by an Act of Oblivion.

1688. King James ſends another Letter.

This Letter the Lord Preſton ſent to the Houſe of Commons, directed to their Speaker, but the Houſe being Informed, that it came from King James, they did not think fit to open it, or to take any other Notice of it. A Copy of the ſame Letter was ſent to the Marqueſs of Halifax, as Speaker of the Houſe of Lords; Some of the Peers were for opening, others for rejecting of it: It was at laſt Reſolved, that the Lord Preſton ſhould be ſent for, who appear'd, and own'd, that the Letter was brought to him by a Scotch-Man; upon which his Lordſhip was Order'd to Attend the Houſe again with the Bearer on Feb. 4. But his Lordſhip on that Day appointed was never call'd in, nor any farther Notice taken of the Letter.

This Letter ſent to the Two Houſes.

Who took no Notice of it.

But however, this Regard to the Perſon of King James, and the Old New-Notions of an indefeaſible Right of Hereditary-Monarchy, began to work much upon the Minds of the Peers, and even of thoſe who had been moſt forward to invite or to join the Prince: For on Jan. 29. the Lords began to conſider of the Commons Voting the Throne to be Vacant, and Reſolv'd into a Committee of the whole Houſe, of which the Earl of Denby was Chairman. The Firſt Motion was made not to Agree with the Commons, that the Throne was Vacant; and yet to ſuppoſe it for the preſent, and paſs to this other Queſtion, Whether the Throne being Vacant, it ought to be fill'd up by a Regent, or a King? The Earl of Nottingham fetch'd many Arguments from our Engliſh-Hiſtory, to ſupport his Opinion for a Regency; adding a freſh Inſtance from Portugal, where Don Pedro had only the Title of Regent conferr'd upon him, while his Depoſed-Brother was Alive. This Speech is ſaid to have had a great Influence on the Houſe, and would have been followed by a Majority, had not the Marqueſs of Halifax and the Earl of Denby ſtrenuouſly oppos'd it; ſo that the Queſtion being put to the Vote, Fifty-one were for a King, and Forty-nine only for a Regent; viz. the Dukes of Somerſet, Ormond, Southampton, Grafton, Beaufort and Northumberland; the Earls of Kent, Pembroke, Clarendon, Rocheſter, Craven, Weſtmoreland, Scarſdale, Cheſterfield, Litchfield, Yarmouth and Lindſey; Viſcount Weymouth; the Barons Coventry, Brook, Leigh, Ferrars, Maynard, Shandois, Jermin, Arundel of Treviſe, Dartmouth,

The Lords Debate about a Regent.

1688. Dartmouth, Godolphin, Griffin, and Five more; the Arch-Biſhop of York, the Biſhops of Norwich, Winchester, Ely, St. Aſaph, Bath and Wells, Oxford, Gloceſter and Lincoln. The Earls of Huntingdon and Muſgrave did not appear in the Houſe: My Lord Churchil likewiſe kept at Home, upon ſome Indiſpoſition: The Arch-Biſhop of Canterbury was alſo abſent. And indeed, the Abhorrence of a Depoſing-Power, as an Art and Act of Popery, was ſo warm upon the Thoughts of the Clergy, that no Biſhops came in to the Opinion of filling up the Throne, except the Biſhops of London and Briſtol. But four Dukes were ſoon brought-over, viz. the Duke of Ormond, and the three Natural Sons of King Charles II. Whilſt the Lords were Debating that Preliminary Queſtion, the Commons Paſs'd a Vote, Declaring, That Popery was Inconſiſtent with the Engliſh Conſtitution; and therefore, all Papiſts ſhou'd be for ever Excluded from the Succeſſion to the Crown of England: To which the Houſe of Peers gave their Concurrence; and Propos'd farther, to add a Clauſe, That no King of England ſhou'd Marry a Roman-Catholick.

Votes against Popery.

On the next Day, Jan. 30th, the Lords put this Queſtion, Whether or no there was an Original-Contract between King and People? In this Diſpute, ſome labour'd to maintain, That Kings held their Crowns by Divine Right; while others did aſſert, That All Power Originally belong'd to the Community, and to the King, only by Mutual Compact. The Houſe being Divided, 53 were for this laſt Poſition, and 46 only for the Negative; by which it appear'd, that the Party that were for a Regency began to loſe ground. The next Queſtion was, Whether King James had Broke that Original-Contract? Which, after a ſhort Debate, was Carry'd in the Affirmative.

Lords Debates of Original-Contract;

On Thurſday Jan. 31ſt, Their Lordſhips took into Conſideration the word Abdicated; and Concluded, that the word Deſerted was more proper. They next examin'd the word Vacant; and put this Queſtion, Whether King James, having Broke that Original-Contract between Him and His People, and Deſerted the Government, the Throne was thereby Vacant? This Queſtion was Debated with more Heat and Contention than any of the former; and, upon a Diviſion, it was Carry'd in the Negative by Eleven Voices. From this, ſome Peers inferr'd, That if there was no Vacancy, the Crown was devolv'd upon the next Heirs; and Mov'd, That the Prince and Princeſs of Orange ſhou'd be Declar'd King and Queen: Which was alſo Carry'd in the Negative by Five Voices. The next Day, Their Lordſhips Agreed to communicate their Reſolutions to the Houſe of Commons: But before they roſe, the Marqueſſes of Hallifax and Winchester, the Earls of Denby and Devonſhire, and 36 more of the Peers, Enter'd their Proteſtations againſt the Vote of the Day before, (viz.) That the Throne was not Vacant.

And of the Vacancy of the Throne.

On Febr. 2d, It was Order'd by the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, Aſſembled at Weſtminſter, "That the Day of Thankſgiving on the 6th of Febr. "Inſtant, on which Day the late King James II. "came to the Throne, ſhall not be Obſerv'd in "this Kingdom." On this ſame Day, They Sent up their Amendments to the Vote of the Houſe of Commons: Upon which, a Free-Conference was Appointed in the Painted-Chamber.

Conference between the Two Houſes.

On Febr. 5th, Mr. Hambden Reported from the Conference with the Lords, That the Earl of Nottingham had ſpoke to this effect; "That the Lords "had Deſir'd this Conference, that they might be "as happily United to the Commons in Opinion, as "they were Inſeparable in their Intereſt; and that "they were at this time Uneaſie, that they cou'd "not Concur with the Commons in every thing: "That the Lords did Inſiſt upon the Firſt Amend-"ment; becauſe they did not find that the word "Abdicated was known to the Common-Law of 1688.
"England; and becauſe, in the moſt common Ac-
"ceptation of the Civil-Law, Abdicated, was a "Voluntary Expreſs Act of Renunciation; which "was not in this Caſe: That the Lords alſo
"Inſiſted on the Second Amendment; for although "Their Lordſhips had Agreed, That the King had
"Deſerted the Government, and therefore had "made Application to the Prince of Orange to "take upon Him the Adminiſtration of the Govern"ment; yet there cou'd be no other Inference
"drawn from hence, but only, The Exerciſe of the "Government by King James II. was Ceas'd: So
"as the Lords were willing to Secure the Nation
"againſt the Return of the ſaid King into this
"Kingdom; but not that there was either ſuch
"an Abdication by Him, or ſuch a Vacancy in the "Throne, as that the Crown was therefore become "Elective: Which They cou'd not Agree to;
"(1.) Becauſe, by the Conſtitution of the Govern"ment, the Monarchy is Hereditary, and not "Elective. (2.) No Act of the King, can Bar or
"Deſtroy the Right of His Heirs to the Crown;
"and therefore, if the Throne be Vacant of King
"James, Allegiance is due to ſuch Perſon as the "Right of Succeſſion does belong to." By this way of Reaſoning, it is plain, That the Diſſent of the Lords from the Commons, did not ariſe from any Favour to the Perſon or the Government of King James, but from a Tenderneſs to the Proteſtant Succeſſors, and the Legal Notions of Hereditary Monarchy.

When Mr. Hambden made his Report of this Conference, the Queſtion was put, Whether the Commons ſhou'd Concur with the Lords? And it was Carry'd in the Negative, by a very great Majority; and it was Reſolved, That a Free-Conference be Deſir'd with the Lords, upon the Subject-Matter of the laſt Conference: To which the Lords Agreed. This Second Conference was Open'd by Mr. Hambden, who ſpoke thus: "My Lords, The "Commons have Deſir'd this Free-Conference from "Your Lordſhips, upon the Subject-Matter of the "laſt Conference; that they may make appear "to Your Lordſhips, That it is not without ſuffi-"cient Reaſon, that they are induced to Maintain "their Own Vote; to which Your Lordſhips "have made ſome Amendments. —— 'Tis true, "My Lords, the preſent Difference between Your "Lordſhips and the Commons, is only about a few "Words: But the Commons think their Words ſo "ſignificant to the Purpoſe for which they are "uſed, and ſo proper to the Caſe unto which they "are apply'd, that, in ſo weighty a Matter as that "now in Debate, they are by no means to be "parted with.

Another Free-Conference.

Speech of Mr. Hambden.

"The word Abdicated, the Commons conceive "is of larger Signification, than the Word Your "Lordſhips are pleas'd to uſe, Deſert; but not "too large to be apply'd to all the Recitals in the "beginning of the Commons-Vote, to which they "meant it ſhou'd be apply'd: Nor ought it to "be reſtrain'd to a Voluntary Expreſs Reſignation, "only in Word or Writing; Overt-Acts there are, "that will be ſignificant enough to amount to it.

"My Lords, That the Common-Law of England "is not acquainted with the Word; it is from the "Modeſty of our Law, that it is not willing to "ſuppoſe there ſhou'd be any Unfortunate Occa-"ſion of making Uſe of it: And We wou'd have "been willing that We ſhou'd never have had ſuch "an Occaſion as We have, to have Recourſe to it. "Your Lordſhips next Amendment, is, That Your "Lordſhips have left-out the laſt Words in the Com-"mons-Vote, And that the Throne is thereby Vacant.

"My Lords, The Commons conceive it is a "true Propoſition, and That the Throne is Vacant; "and, they think they make it appear, that that "is no new Phraſe; neither is it a Phraſe that perhaps

1688. " haps ſome of the Old Records may be Strangers " to, or not well-acquainted with : But they think " it not chargeable with the Conſequences that " Your Lordſhips have been pleas'd to draw from " it, That it will make the Crown of England become " Elective. If the Throne had been Full, We know " Your Lordſhips wou'd have aſſign'd that, as a " Reaſon of Your Diſagreement, by telling us Who " fill'd it ; and it wou'd be known by ſome Pub- " lick Royal Act, which might notifie to the " People, in Whom the Kingly-Government reſided : " Neither of which has been done ; and yet Your " Lordſhips will not allow the Throne to be Vacant.

" My Lords, I am unwilling to detain Your " Lordſhips longer, from what may be better ſaid, for " Your Lordſhips Satisfaction in theſe Matters, by " thoſe whoſe Province it is : I am to acquaint Your " Lordſhips, That the Commons do Agree, It is an " Affair of very Great Importance. Here are " other Gentlemen that are Appointed to Manage " this Conference ; and will give their Aſſiſtance, " to bring it, We hope, to a happy Concluſion, in " the Agreement of both Houſes, in this ſo very " Conſiderable a Point.

Argument of Mr. Sommers.

Then Mr. Sommers ſpoke thus : " My Lords, " What is Appointed me to ſpeak to, is, Your Lord- " ſhips Firſt Amendment ; by which the word Abdica- " ted, in the Commons-Vote, is chang'd into the word " Deſerted : And I am to acquaint Your Lordſhips, " what ſome of the Grounds are, that induced the " Commons to Inſiſt upon the word Abdicated, and " not to Agree to Your Lordſhips Amendment.

1. " The Firſt Reaſon Your Lordſhips are " pleas'd to Deliver, as for your changing the " Word, is, That the word Abdicated, Your Lord- " ſhips do not find, is a Word known to the Common- " Law of England, and therefore ought not to be " uſed : And the next is, That the Common Accep- " tation of the Word, amounts to a Voluntary Expreſs " Act of Renunciation ; which (Your Lordſhips ſay) " is not in this Caſe, nor will follow from the " Premiſſes.

" My Lords, As to the Firſt of theſe Reaſons, if " it be an Objection, That the word Abdicated, hath " not a known Senſe in the Common-Law of Eng- " land ; there's the ſame Objection againſt the word " Deſerted : For there can be no Authority, or " Book of Law, produced, wherein any Determinate " Sence is given to the word Deſerted. So that " Your Lordſhips Firſt Reaſon hath the ſame Force " againſt Your Own Amendment, as it hath againſt " the Term uſed by the Commons.

" The Words are both Latin Words, and us'd " in the beſt Authors, and both of a known Signi- " fication ; their Meaning is very well underſtood, " though it be true, their Meaning be not the ſame : " The word Abdicate, doth naturally and properly " ſignifie, Entirely to Renounce, Throw off, Diſown, " Relinquiſh any Thing or Perſon, ſo as to have no " further to do with it ; and that whether it be done " by expreſs Words, or in Writing, (which is the " Sence Your Lordſhips put upon it, and which is " properly call'd Reſignation, or Ceſſion) or, by " Doing ſuch Acts as are Inconſiſtent with the Holding " or Retaining of the Thing : Which the Commons " take to be the preſent Caſe, and therefore made " choice of the word Abdicate, as that which they " thought did, above all others, moſt properly " expreſs that Meaning : And in this latter Senſe " it is taken by others ; and that it is the true Sig- " nification of the Word, I ſhall ſhew Your Lord- " ſhips out of the beſt Authors.

" The firſt I ſhall mention, is Grotius, [de Jure " Belli & Pacis, l. 2. c. 4. §. 4.] Venit enim hoc non " ex jure civili, ſed ex jure naturali, quo quiſque " ſuum poteſt Abdicare, & ex naturali Præſumptione " qua voluiſſe, quis creditur, quod ſufficienter ſignifi- " cavit. And then he goes on, Recuſari Hæreditas " non tantum verbis, ſed etiam re poteſt, & quovis 1688. " indicio voluntatis.

" Another Inſtance, which I ſhall mention, " to ſhew, that for the Abdicating a thing, it " is ſufficient, to do an Act which is inconſiſtent " with the Retaining it, though there be nothing of " an expreſs Renunciation, is out of Calvin's Lexicon " Juridicum, where he ſays, (Generum Abdicat, qui " ſponſam repudiat ;) He that Divorceth his Wife, " Abdicates his Son-in-Law. Here is an Abdication " without expreſs Words ; but is by doing ſuch an " Act, as doth ſufficiently ſignifie his Purpoſe.

" The next Author that I ſhall quote, is Bri- " ſonius, [De Verborum Significatione] who hath " this Paſſage ; Homo liber qui ſeipſum vendit, " Abdicat ſe ſtatu ſuo : (that is) He who Sells " himſelf, hath thereby done ſuch an Act, as cannot " conſiſt with his former Eſtate of Freedom ; and is " therefore properly ſaid, Se Abdicaſſe ſtatu ſuo.

" Budæus [in his Commentaries ad Legem Se- " cundam, de Origine Juris] expounds the Words " in the ſame Sence ; Abdicare ſe Magiſtratu eſt " idem quod abire penitus Magiſtratu : (that is) " He that goes out of his Office of Magiſtracy, let it " be in what manner he will, has Abdicated the " Magiſtracy.

" And Grotius [in his Book de Jure Belli & " Pacis, l. 1. c. 4. §. 9.] ſeems to expound the " word Abdicare, by manifeſte habere pro derelicto : " (that is) That he who hath Abdicated any thing, " hath ſo far Relinquiſh'd it, that he hath no Right " of Return to it. And that is the Sence the Com- " mons put upon the Word : It is an Entire Aliena- " tion of the Thing ; and ſo ſtands in Oppoſition " to Dicate : Dicat qui proprium aliquod facit ; " Abdicat qui alienat, ſo ſays Pralejus, in his " Lexicon Juris. It is therefore Inſiſted upon as " the proper Word, by the Commons.

" But the word Deſerted, (which is the Word " us'd, in the Amendment, by Your Lordſhips) " hath not only a very doubtful Signification ; " but in the Common Acceptance both of the Civil " and Canon-Law, doth ſignifie only a Bare With- " drawing, a Temporary Quitting of a thing ; and " Neglect only, which leaves the Party at liberty of " Returning to it again : Deſertum pro Neglecto, " ſays Spigelius in his Lexicon. But the Difference " between Deſerere and Derelinquere, is expreſly " laid down by Bartolus, upon the 8th Law of " 58th Title of the 11th Book of the Code, and his " Words are theſe ; Nota diligenter ex hac Lege, " quod aliud eſt Agrum Deſerere, aliud Derelinquere ; " qui enim Derelinquit, ipſum ex pœnitentia non " revocat : ſed qui Deſeret, intra biennium poteſt.

" Whereby it appears, My Lords, That, that " is call'd Deſertion, which is Temporary and " Relievable : That is call'd Dereliction, where " there is no Power of Right to Return.

" So in the beſt Latin Authors, and in the " Civil-Law, Deſerere Exercitum is us'd to ſignifie, " Soldiers leaving their Colours, [Cod. lib. 12. " §. 1.]

" And in the Canon-Law, to Deſert a Benefice, " ſignifies no more than to be Non-Reſident ; ſo is " Calvin's Lexicon, Verb. Deſert. Secund. Canones.

" In both Caſes, the Party hath not only a " Right of Returning, but is bound to Return again. " Which, My Lords, as the Commons do not take " to be the preſent Caſe, ſo They cannot think " that Your Lordſhips do ; becauſe it is expreſly " ſaid, in one of Your Reaſons given in the laſt " Amendment, That Your Lordſhips have been, and " are willing, to Secure the Nation againſt the Return " of King James : Which Your Lordſhips wou'd " not in Juſtice do, if You did look upon it no " more than a Negligent Withdrawing, which leaveth " a liberty to the Party to Return.

" For which Reaſons, My Lords, the Commons " cannot Agree to the Firſt Amendment, to inſert 1688. " the Word Deſerted, in ſtead of Abdicated; be-

" the

" cauſe it doth not, in any ſort, come up to their
" Sence of the Thing: So, they do apprehend,
" it doth not reach Your Lordſhip's Meaning, as " it is Expreſs'd in Your Reaſons; whereas they
" look upon the Word Abdicated to Expreſs pro" perly what is to be Inferr'd from that Part of " the Vote to which Your Lordſhips have Agreed,
" That King James II. by going about to Subvert the
" Conſtitution, and by Breaking the Original Con" tract between King and People, and by Violating
" the Fundamental Laws, and With-drawing Himſelf
" out of the Kingdom, hath thereby Renounc'd to
" be a King according to the Conſtitution: By
" Avowing to Govern by a Deſpotick Power, un-
" known to the Conſtitution, and inconſiſtent
" with it; He hath Renounc'd to be a King ac" cording to the Law, ſuch a King as He Swore
" to be at the Coronation, ſuch a King, to whom
" the Allegiance of an Engliſh Subject is due; and " hath ſet up another kind of Dominion, which " is to all Intents an Abdication or Abandoning of
" his Royal Title, as fully as if it had been done
" by Expreſs Words.

" And, My Lords, for theſe Reaſons the Com-
" mons do inſiſt upon the Word Abdicated, and " cannot Agree to the Word Deſerted.

Argument of Serjeant Holt.

" Mr. Serjeant Holt Argu'd thus: My Lords,
" I am Commanded, by the Commons, to Aſſiſt in
" the Management of this Conference, and am to " Speak to the ſame Point that the Gentleman did,
" who Spoke laſt to Your Lordſhip's Firſt Amend-
" ment.

" As to the Firſt of Your Lordſhips Reaſons,
" for that Amendment (with Submiſſion to Your
" Lordſhips) I do conceive it not ſufficient to alter
" the Minds of the Commons; or to induce them
" to change the Word Abdicated, for Your Lord-
" ſhips Word Deſerted.

" Your Lordſhips Reaſon is, That it is not a
" Word that is known to the Common-Law of Eng" land. But, My Lords, the Queſtion is not ſo
" much, whether it be a Word as Ancient as the " Common-Law, (though it may be too) for that " will be no Objection againſt the uſing it, if it
" be a Word of a known and certain Signification;
" becauſe that, we think, will juſtifie the Commons
" making Uſe of it, according to Your Lordſhips
" own Expreſſion.

" That it is an Ancient Word, appears by the " Authors that have been Quoted, and 'tis fre-
" quently met with in the beſt of Roman Writers,
" as Cicero, &c. And by the Derivation from
" Dico, an Ancient Latin Word.

" That now it is a known Engliſh Word, and
" of a known and certain Signification with us,
" I will Quote to your Lordſhips an Engliſh Au" thority, and that is the Dictionary ſet forth by
" our Country-Man Minſhew, who hath the Word
" Abdicate, as an Engliſh Word; and ſays, that it
" ſignifies to Renounce, which is the Signification
" the Commons would have of it: So that I hope
" Your Lordſhips will not find Fault with their
" uſing a Word that is ſo Ancient in itſelf, and
" that hath ſuch certain Signification in our own
" Language.

" Then, My Lords, for that Part of Your Lord-
" ſhips Objection, That it is not a Word known to
" the Common-Law of England, that cannot pre-
" vail; for Your Lordſhips very well know, we " have very few Words in our Tongue that are of " equal Antiquity with the Common-Law; Your
" Lordſhips know the Language of England is al-
" ter'd greatly in the ſeveral Succeſſions of Time,
" and the Intermixture of other Nations; and if
" we ſhould be oblig'd to make uſe only of Words
" then known and in uſe, what we ſhould deliver
" in ſuch a Dialect, would be very Difficult to be
" underſtood.

" Your Lordſhips ſecond Reaſon, for your firſt 1688.
" Amendment in changing the Word Abdicated,
" for the Word Deſerted, is, Becauſe in the moſt
" common Acceptation of the Civil Law, Abdication
" is a voluntary Expreſs Act of Renunciation.
" That is the general Acceptation of the Word,
" and, I think, the Commons do ſo uſe the Word
" in this Caſe, becauſe it hath that Signification:
" But I do not know, whether Your Lordſhips
" mean a voluntary Expreſs Act, or formal Deed
" of Renunciation: If you do ſo, I confeſs I know
" of none in this Caſe: But, My Lords, both in
" the Common-Law of England, and the Civil-Law,
" and in common Underſtanding, there are Ex-
" preſs Acts of Renunciation that are not by Deed;
" for if Your Lordſhips pleaſe to obſerve, the Go-
" vernment and Magiſtracy is under a Truſt, and
" any Acting contrary to that Truſt is a Renoun-
" cing of the Truſt, tho' it be not a Renouncing by " formal Deed; For it is a plain Declaration, by " Act and Deed, though not in Writing, that he,
" who hath the Truſt, Acting contrary, is a Dif-
" claimer of the Truſt: Eſpecially, My Lords, if
" the Actings be ſuch as are inconſiſtent with, and
" ſubverſive of this Truſt; For how can a Man
" in Reaſon or Senſe, expreſs a greater Renuncia-
" tion of a Truſt, than by the conſtant Declarati-
" ons of his Actings to be quite contrary to that " Truſt?

" This, My Lords, is ſo plain, both in Under-
" ſtanding and Practice, that I need do no more
" but Repeat it again, and leave it with Your
" Lordſhips, That the doing an Act inconſiſtent with
" the Being and End of a Thing, or that ſhall not
" Anſwer the End of that Thing, but quite the con- " trary, that ſhall be Conſtru'd an Abdication, and
" Formal Renunciation of that Thing.

The Managers of the Lords, having made their Report to the Houſe; on the ſame Day, February 6th, there was a long Debate, whether or no they ſhould inſiſt upon their Amendments? By this time ſeveral of the Chief Members, who were before for a Regency, were come over to the Party, that were for filling up the Vacant Throne, which was alſo encreas'd by the Arrival of ſome other Lords, inſomuch that the Two Queſtions about the Words, Abdicated and Vacant were now carry'd in the Affirmative. The Earl of Denby made an Excellent Speech, to prove the Vacancy of the Throne, and the neceſſity of Supplying it by the Prince and Princeſs of Orange, wherein he was Stoutly ſeconded by the Marqueſs of Hallifax, who immediately put this Queſtion: Whether their Highneſſes, the Prince and Princeſs of Orange, ſhould be declar'd King and Queen? Upon which, by a Majority of Twenty Voices, It was Reſolv'd by the Lords Spiritual and Temporal Aſſembled at Weſtminſter, That the Prince and Princeſs of Orange, ſhall be declar'd King and Queen of England, and of all the Dominions thereunto belonging.

The Lords at laſt Agree to the Words Abdicated and Vacant.

On Thurſday, Feb. 7. The Lords came to this Declaration of Setling the Succeſſion of the Crown; That the Prince and Princeſs of Orange ſhould be King and Queen of England, &c. for their Natural Lives, and Life of the longer Liver of them; and that the Sole and Full Regal Power be in the Prince only, in the Name of Both: And that after their Deceaſes, the Crown ſhall belong to the Heirs of the Body of the Princeſs; and for Default of ſuch Iſſue, to the Princeſs Anne of Denmark, and the Heirs of Her Body; and for Default of ſuch Iſſue, to the Heirs of the Body of the ſaid Prince of Orange; and for Default of ſuch Iſſue, to the Perſon that ſhall be Nam'd, and in ſuch manner as ſhall be Limited and Regulated by Act of Parliament; and for Default of ſuch Limitation and Regulation, to the Lawful Heirs of the ſaid Prince of Orange. The Lords ſent up this Declaratory Vote to the Commons, Reſolution of the Lords for Sitting the Throne.

1688. mons, to which, after a ſhort Debate, and ſome little Amendment, the Commons Agreed: The ſame Day the Lords ſent a Meſſage to the Commons, That they had Agreed to the Vote ſent them up of the 28th of January laſt, without any Alterations. They alſo Communicated to the Commons the Oaths which the Lords thought fit to be taken, in ſtead of thoſe of Allegiance and Supremacy, which were readily Approv'd by the Commons.

Happy Agreement of the Two Houſes.

In the mean-time, a Committee of the Houſe of Commons were Employ'd in Drawing up a Declaration, containing the Reaſons, why King James had Vacated the Throne, and Aſſerting the ancient Rights and Liberties of the People of England; which Declaration being ſent up to the Lords on the 1ſt of February, was after ſome Debates Agreed unto the Day following, when the Princeſs of Orange arriv'd at Graveſend, and went directly to Whitehall, amidſt loud Acclamations, and all the Signs of Univerſal Joy.

Arrival of the Princeſs of Orange.

On the next Day, being Wedneſday, February 13. The Prince and Princeſs of Orange, being Seated on Two Armed Chairs, under a Canopy in the Banqueting-Houſe, both Houſes of the Convention waited upon Them in a Body, and caus'd the Clerk of the Crown to Read with an Audible Voice the following Declaration of the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and Commons Aſſembl'd at Weſtminſter.

Declaration of the Two Houſes.

" WHereas the Late King James II. by the " Aſſiſtance of divers Evil Counſellors, " Judges, and Miniſters Employ'd by him, did " endeavour to Subvert and Extirpate the Proteſtant Religion, and the Laws and Liberties of this " Kingdom; by Aſſuming and Exerciſing a Power " of Diſpenſing with, and Suſpending of Laws, " and the Execution of Laws, without Conſent " of Parliament; By Committing and Proſecuting " divers worthy Prelates, for humbly Petitioning " to be Excus'd from Concurring to the ſaid Aſſum'd Power; By Iſſuing and Cauſing to be " Executed, a Commiſſion under the Great Seal, for " Erecting a Court call'd, The Court of Commiſſioners for Eccleſiaſtical Cauſes; By Levying Money for, and to the Uſe of the Crown, by Preſence of Prerogative for other Time, and in other Manner, than the ſame was granted by " Parliament; By Raiſing and Keeping a Standing Army within this Kingdom in Time of " Peace, without Conſent of Parliament; and " Quartering Soldiers contrary to Law; By cauſing ſeveral good Subjects, being Proteſtants, to " be Diſarm'd at the ſame time, when Papiſts " were both Arm'd, and Employ'd contrary to " Law; By violating the Freedom of Election " of Members to Serve in Parliament; By Proſecution in the Court of King's-Bench, for Matters and Cauſes Cognizable only in Parliament, " and by divers other Illegal and Arbitrary " Courſes:

After the Reading of this Declaration the Marqueſs of Halifax, Speaker of the Houſe of Lords, made a Tender of the Crown to their Highneſſes in the Name of Both Houſes, whereupon the Prince returned this Anſwer.

My Lords and Gentlemen;

Anſwer of the Prince.

" THIS is certainly the greateſt Proof of the " Truſt you have in Me that can be gi- " ven, which is the Thing that makes Us value " it the more: And as I had no other Inten- " tion in coming hither, than to preſerve your " Religion, Laws and Liberties, ſo you may be " ſure, that I ſhall endeavour to ſupport them, " and ſhall be willing to Concur in any thing " that ſhall be for the Good of the Kingdom, " and to do all that is in my Power to advance " the Welfare and Glory of the Nation.

The Prince and Princeſs Proclaim'd King and Queen.

On the ſame Day, being Aſh-Wedneſday, the Prince and Princeſs were Solemnly Proclaimed King and Queen of England, France and Ireland, firſt at Whitehall, then at Temple-Bar, and again at the Royal-Exchange, each Proclamation being Eccho'd with Univerſal Acclamations of Joy.

THE LIVES & REIGNS OF King WILLIAM AND Queen MARY.

1688. ON Thurſday Febr. 14th, a Proclamation was Iſſued by King WILLIAM and Queen MARY, for Continuing in their reſpective Offices and Places all Perſons, (being Proteſtants.) And then His Majeſty's firſt Care was, to Summon a Privy-Council, that conſiſted of theſe Honourable Perſons: His Royal Highneſs Prince George of Denmark, William Lord-Arch-Biſhop of Canterbury, Thomas Earl of Denby (Lord-Preſident of the Council,) George Marqueſs of Halifax (Lord-Privy-Seal,) Henry Duke of Norfolk (Earl-Marſhal of England,) Charles Marqueſs of Winchester, Robert Earl of Lindſey (Lord-Great-Chamberlain of England,) William Earl of Devonſhire (Lord-Steward of His Majeſty's Houſhold,) Charles Earl of Dorſet and Middleſex (Lord-Chamberlain of His Majeſty's Houſhold,) Aubery Earl of Oxford, Charles Earl of Shrewsbury (His Majeſty's Principal-Secretary of State,) William Earl of Bedford, John Earl of Bath, Charles Earl of Macclesfield, Daniel Earl of Nottingham, Thomas Viſcount Falconberg, Charles Viſcount Mordant, Francis Viſcount Newport (Treaſurer of His Majeſty's Houſhold,) Richard Viſcount Lumley, Henry Lord-Biſhop of London, Philip Lord Wharton, Ralph Lord Mountague, Henry Lord Delamere, John Lord Churchil, Mr. Bentinck (Groom of the Stole to His Majeſty,) Mr. Henry Sidney, Sir Robert Howard Kt. Sir Henry Capel Kt. Mr. Henry Powle (Speaker of the Houſe of Commons,) Mr. Edward Ruſſel, Mr. Hugh Boſcawen: To whom were added, on Febr. 20th, Thomas Wharton Eſq; and Sir John Lowther of Lowther Bar. (Vice-Chamberlain of His Majeſty's Houſhold.)

ew Pri-Council.

And the Chief-Offices at Court were fill'd-up with Perſons of the Beſt Quality and Merit: Monſieur D'Auverquerque was made Maſter of the Horſe to the King; Marſhal de Schomberg, Maſter of the Ordnance; the Lord Mountague, Maſter of the Great-Wardrobe; Monſieur Zeulcſtein, Maſter of the Robes; the Biſhop of London, Dean of the Chappel; the Lord Lovelace, Captain of the Gentlemen-Penſioners; the Duke of Ormond, the Earl of Oxford, the Lords Mordant, Lumley and Churchil, and Mr. Sidney, Gentlemen of the King's Bed-Chamber; the Earl of Wiltſhire, Lord-Chamberlain to the Queen; John Howe Eſq; Vice-Chamberlain; Mr. Villers, Great-Maſter of the Horſe; and the Counteſs of Derby, Firſt-Lady of the Bed-Chamber, and Groom of the Stole, to Her Majeſty. His Majeſty is ſaid to have offer'd the Great-Seal to the Earl of Nottingham, though he had Proteſted againſt the Vacancy of the Throne, and had Oppos'd the Settlement of the Crown; but the Earl Excus'd himſelf from Accepting of it, alledging his Unfitneſs for an Employment that requir'd a conſtant Application. The Marqueſs of Halifax had the ſame Offer made him; which he likewiſe declin'd. Whereupon the Seals were given (in Commiſſion) to Sir John Maynard, Anthony Keck, and William Rawlinſon, Eſqrs. the two laſt of whom were Knighted by His Majeſty. The Places of High-Admiral, and Lord-Treaſurer were likewiſe given to Commiſſioners; The firſt, to Admiral Herbert, the Earl of Carbery, Sir Michael Wharton, Sir Thomas Lee, Sir John Chichley, Sir John Lowther, and Mr. Sacheveril; The other, to the Lord Mordant, the Lord Delamere, the Lord Godolphin, Mr. Hambden, and Sir Henry Capel. As to the Earl of Nottingham, he was at laſt prevail'd with to be One of His Majeſty's Principal-Secretaries of State. 1688.

The firſt time the King Advis'd with His Privy-Council, He Propos'd to 'em, Whether the Convention might be Legally turn'd into a Parliament? To which the Majority Agreeing, His Majeſty, on Monday Febr. 18th, went to the Houſe of Lords in great Solemnity, and being Seated on the Throne, and the Commons Attending at the Bar, with their Speaker, His Majeſty made this Speech to both Houſes.

Convention turn'd into a Parliament.

My Lords and Gentlemen;

The King's Speech.

" I Have lately told You, how Senſible I am of Your Kindneſs, and how much I Value the Confidence You have repos'd in Me: And I come Hither to Aſſure You, That I ſhall never do any thing that may juſtly leſſen Your Good-Opinion of Me.

" I think it neceſſary to Acquaint You, That the Condition of Our Allies Abroad, and particularly that of Holland, is ſuch, that unleſs ſome ſpeedy Care be taken of them, they run a greater Hazard than You wou'd have them expos'd to.

" You Your-ſelves muſt be ſenſible, That the Poſture of Affairs Here, require Your Serious Conſideration; and that a Good Settlement at Home is neceſſary, not only for Your Own Peace, but for the Support of the Proteſtant Intereſt, both Here and Abroad.

" And particularly the State of Ireland is ſuch, that the Dangers are grown too great to be obviated by any ſlow Methods.

" I muſt leave it to You, to Conſider of the moſt Effectual Ways of Preventing the Inconveniences which may ariſe by Delays, and to 1688. " Judge what Forms may be moſt proper to " bring thoſe Things to paſs for the good of the " Nation, which I am confident are in all your " Minds, and which I on my Part, ſhall be al- " ways ready to promote.

This Speech was receiv'd with a general Applauſe, and purſuant to the laſt Clauſe of it, the Lords immediately brought in a Bill to remove and prevent all Queſtions and Diſputes concerning the Aſſembling and Sitting of this preſent Parliament; which they Read twice that Afternoon, and having Paſs'd it the Day following, they ſent it to the Commons for their Concurrence. Upon which the Commons went into a Committee of the whole Houſe, and Mr. Hambden, the Chairman, put this Queſtion, Whether a King Elected and Declared by the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and Commons Aſſembled at Weſtminſter, 22*d* Jan. 1688. coming to and Conſulting with the ſaid Lords and Commons, did not make as compleat a Parliament and Legiſlative-Power, and Authority, to all Intents and Purpoſes, as if the ſaid King ſhould cauſe New Summons to be given, and New Elections to be made by Writs? This occaſion'd a long and warm Debate; the Party who were for the Negative, Headed by Sir Edward Seymour and Sir Thomas Clargis, inſiſted upon the ſtrict Ancient Conſtitution. The others Argued upon ſeveral Precedents, the lateſt in 1660. When the Lords and Commons convened by the Keepers of the Liberties of England, were upon Reception of King Charles the II. Adjudg'd a Parliament, and they more-eſpecially urg'd the preſent Neceſſity of Affairs, which would not admit of any Loſs of Time, without infinite Danger Abroad and at Home. The Queſtion was at laſt carried in the Affirmative, and Two Days after the Commons Acquainted the Lords that they had Agreed to their Bill, with ſome Alterations and Amendments, relating to the Oaths, which by the ſaid Bill were appointed to be taken by Both Houſes with Amendments; being confirmed by the Lords, the whole Bill receiv'd the Royal-Aſſent on Saturday, Feb. 23. and ſo the Convention was chang'd into a Parliament. Yet ſome of the Commons had before proteſted that they would neither Submit to the Deciſions of ſuch a Parliament, nor Sit in it: And indeed ſome of 'em kept their Word as to this laſt Point, retiring into the Country upon frivolous Pretences, which occaſion'd the Dilatory-Proceedings of this Seſſion, and gave King James an Opportunity to get conſiderable Footing in Ireland, and the Hopes of Re-aſcending his Throne. And the Diſcontented Party grew ſtronger in the Houſe of Commons; for on Feb. 26. the Queſtion being put, Whether the Revenue was expired by the Vacancy of the Throne,, or whether it was devolved on their Majeſties? The Firſt Part of the Queſtion was carried in the Affirmative, and a Committee was thereupon appointed to Regulate their preſent Majeſties Revenue, and ſome of that Committee contended to have it Setled on them for Three Years only.

Bill to prevent Diſputes concerning this Parliament.

Some Diſcontented Members retire into the Country.

The Lords brought in a Bill on Feb. 26. for the better Regulating of the Trials of the Peers of England, which occaſion'd great Debates, and at the Third Reading had the Proteſtation of Fifteen Lords againſt it, and when it was ſent down to the Commons, it dropt there through the Influence of thoſe Peers who had oppos'd it. On Feb. 28. upon Information that ſeveral Papiſts continued in the Cities of London and Weſtminſter, the Lords order'd Sir William Waller to Secure, or cauſe to be Secured, all ſuch Papiſts, or reputed Papiſts, and return their Names to the Committee appointed to bring in a Bill for removing all ſuch from the ſaid Cities, which Bill was accordingly preſented to the Houſe, on March the Firſt: On which Day the King ſent Two Remarkable Meſſages to the Parliament. The Firſt was to the Houſe of Lords, by the Lord Mordant, to this Effect, " That His Ma- " jeſty in that Conjuncture, and for the Safety of " the Publick, had Secured ſome Perſons as dan- " gerous to the Government, and thought it might " be convenient to Secure more, but being very ten- " der of doing any thing not fully warranted " by Law, He had given Order that the Lords " might be acquainted, with what He had thought " himſelf oblig'd to do for the Publick Peace and " Security of the Government". This Meſſage " was occaſion'd by the Securing the Earl of Arran, Sir Robert Hamilton, and Two other Scotch-Men, who by ſome intercepted-Letters from France, had been diſcover'd to Plot the Reſtauration of King James, and were thereupon Committed to the Tower. The Lords immediately appointed a Committee to prepare an Addreſs to be preſented to the King, upon this Occaſion from Both Houſes, " expreſſing their Moſt Humble Thanks " for His Majeſty's great Care of their Liberties, " and for His Gracious Communication of this " Matter; and Humbly to Adviſe and Deſire His " Majeſty to take ſuch extraordinary Care of the " Government in this Conjuncture, by Securing all " Diſaffected Perſons, as might prevent any Di- " ſturbance of the Publick Peace, and that ſuch " Perſons as were, or ſhould be ſo Committed, " might be retain'd till the Firſt Day of the next " Term, if His Majeſty ſhould ſee Cauſe for it". The Commons made ſome Difficulty to give their Concurrence to this Addreſs, which ſeem'd to allow the King a Power of Diſpenſing with the Habeas-Corpus Act; and therefore thought it more Legal to bring in a Bill to Empower His Majeſty to Apprehend and Detain ſuch Perſons, as he ſhould find juſt Cauſe to ſuſpect were conſpiring againſt the Government; which went in few Days thro' Both Houſes, and afterwards Paſs'd into an Act by the Royal-Aſſent.

1688. Meſſage from the King to the Lords.

Addreſs of Both Houſes.

The other Meſſage was ſent to the Commons by Mr. Wharton, who acquainted the Houſe, " That " the King being ſenſible what a grievous Burden " the Duty ariſing from Hearth-Money was unto " his People, eſpecially to the Poorer Sort, His " Majeſty was pleaſed to Agree, either to the Re- " gulation of it, or to the taking of it wholly a- " way, not doubting but the Commons would take " Care of his Revenue another way". This prov'd to be an Act of great Prudence and Popularity, the Commons receiv'd it with an Univerſal Satisfaction, and preſented this Addreſs of Thanks for it on March 5.

Meſſage from the King to the Commons.

Addreſs the Commons to the King.

" WE Your Majeſty's Moſt Dutiful and Loy- " al Subjects, the Knights, Citizens and " Burgeſſes in Parliament Aſſembled, have taken " into our Serious Conſideration Your Majeſty's " Gracious Meſſage, wherein Your Majeſty is plea- " ſed to expreſs your great Goodneſs, and Senſe " of your People's Condition by your Tender " Conſideration, That the Revenue of the Hearth- " Money is very grievous to them; And are plea- " ſed to agree either to the Regulation of it, or to " the taking of it wholly away. And as Your " Majeſty is pleaſed in this to conſider the Eaſe " of your People, we acknowledge ourſelves o- " bliged to Declare, That Your Majeſty has filled " our Hearts with an intire Satisfaction and Gra- " titude, by this Your Moſt Gracious and Unpre- " cedented Offer. And we humbly crave Leave to " preſent this Aſſurance to Your Majeſty, That " we will make ſuch Grateful and Affectionate " Returns, and be ſo careful of the Support of " the Crown, that the World may ſee, to the diſ- " couraging of your Enemies, and Satisfaction of " all good Men, That Your Majeſty Reigns in " the Hearts of your People; Which GOD grant " long to continue.

Bill for Regulating Trials dropt.

The

1688. The Second, Fourth and Fifth Days of March were partly ſpent by Both Houſes in taking the Oaths of Fealty appointed by the late Act for Removing and Preventing all Queſtions and Diſputes concerning the Aſſembling and Sitting of this preſent Parliament; and in Subſcribing the Declaration required by an Act of 30th Car. II. In the Houſe of Commons few or none refuſed to take the ſaid Oaths; but in the Upper-Houſe, not above Ninety Temporal, and only Eight Spiritual-Lords comply'd with the Act: Thoſe Eight Prelates were, the Arch-Biſhop of York, and the Biſhops of London, Lincoln, Briſtol, Winchester, Rocheſter, Llandaff and St. Aſaph, whoſe Example was afterwards followed by the Biſhops of Carliſle, and even of St. David's. The Arch-Biſhop of Canterbury, and ſome other of his Suffragans, abſolutely refus'd to own the preſent Government, from a Conſcientious Regard they had to the Allegiance they had Sworn to King James: And many other Diſcontented Perſons fell in with 'em, from the Hopes or the Fears of his Reſtoration.

Some of the Biſhops refuſe to take the Oaths.

On Feb. 27. the King had acquainted the Houſe of Commons with the certain News of the Late King James having Sailed from Breſt with a conſiderable Number of French-Troops in order to Land in Ireland. Whereupon the Commons unanimouſly Voted, That they would ſtand by and aſſiſt the King, with their Lives and Fortunes, in Supporting his Alliances abroad, in Reducing of Ireland, and in Defence of the Proteſtant-Religion, and Laws of the Kingdom. This Vote was communicated to the Peers, who confirm'd it by entring the ſame into their Journal; and on the 5th Day of March Concurr'd alſo with the Commons, in the following Addreſs,

King James goes to Ireland.

Vote of the Commons to aſſiſt King William.

Addreſs of Both Houſes.

" WE Your Majeſties Moſt Dutiful and Faithful Subjects, the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and Commons Aſſembled in Parliament, " being highly Senſible of our late great and Signal " Deliverance from Popery and Arbitrary-Power, " whereof it has Pleaſed ALMIGHTY GOD to " make You the Glorious Inſtrument; and deſi- " ring, to the utmoſt of our Abilities, to expreſs " our Gratitude to Your Majeſty for ſo Great " and Generous an Undertaking, no leſs neceſſary " to Support the Proteſtant-Intereſt in Europe, " than for Recovering and Maintaining the Civil- " Rights and Liberties of theſe Nations, ſo noto- " rioufly Invaded and Undermined by Popiſh- " Counſels and Counſellors; being likewiſe fully " convinced of the reſtleſs Spirits and continual " Endeavours of Your Majeſty's and the Nation's " Enemies, for the Extirpation of the Proteſtant- " Religion, and the Subverſion of our Laws and " Liberties, do unanimouſly Declare, That We " will ſtand by and aſſiſt Your Majeſty with our " Lives and Fortunes, in Supporting the Alliances " abroad, in reducing of Ireland, and in Defence " of the Proteſtant-Religion and Laws of the King- " dom.

The Lord Great-Chamberlain having waited on the King to know when He would be Attended with this Addreſs, His Majeſty anſwer'd " He was " going out of Town, but intended to Return the " next Day, and then He would ſignifie his Plea- " ſure when Both Houſes ſhould wait on Him"; and accordingly His Majeſty gave this Anſwer to Both Houſes, on Friday, March 8th.

My Lords and Gentlemen;

King's Anſwer to Both Houſes.

" IF any thing could add to the Eſteem and Af- " fection I have for Parliaments, and particu- " larly for this, they would be much increaſed by " the Kindneſs you ſhew to me, and the Zeal you " expreſs for the Publick Good, in the Addreſs you " have made, which, in the Manner as well as " the Matter, has every thing in it that ought to " recommend it to me. 1688.

" I will aſſure you, that I will never abuſe " the Confidence you have put in me, being fully " perſwaded that there is no ſure Foundation of a " good Agreement between a King and his People, " but a Mutual Truſt; when that is once broken, " a Government is half Diſſolved.

" It ſhall be therefore my Chief Care never to " give any Parliament Cauſe to diſtruſt me, and " the beſt Methods I can uſe for that Purpoſe, is " never to expect any thing from them, but what " ſhall be their own Intereſt to grant.

" I came hither for the good of the Kingdom, " and ſince it is your Deſire that I am in this " Station, I ſhall purſue the ſame Ends that " brought me.

" GOD has been pleaſed to make me Inſtru- " mental to redeem you from the Ills you fear'd; " and it is ſtill my Deſire, as well as my Duty, " to ſerve you in your Religion, Laws and Liber- " ties, which was the only Inducement that " brought me into England; and to theſe I aſcribe " the Bleſſings that have attended this Underta- " king.

" When I ſpoke laſt to you, I told you of the " Neceſſity of aſſiſting our Allies, and more-eſpeci- " ally the States of Holland, whoſe Readineſs to " relieve you, at ſo great a Hazard and Expence, " from the Extremities you lay under, needs no " other Argument to move you to the Conſidera- " tion of it.

" As I was then a Witneſs of their Zeal and " Affection to promote the Expedition, and to " ſecond my Endeavours, even with the Neglect " of their own Safety; ſo I am now Senſible of " the Inevitable Ruine they have drawn upon " themſelves in giving you their Aſſiſtance, if " you ſhould not return it to them.

" They have really exhauſted themſelves to " ſuch a Degree, both as to Men and Money, that " it is not eaſily to be imagin'd; and I am con- " fident your Generoſity will have as little " Bounds towards them, as theirs had towards " you; and that you will not only enable me to " make good the Treaty with them, and Re-pay " what they have actually laid out upon this Oc- " caſion, (of which an Account ſhall be given " you) but that you will farther ſupport them, " to the utmoſt of your Ability, againſt the Power " of their Enemies; who muſt be yours too, by " their Intereſt, and their Religion, and do cer- " tainly deſign the Ruine of Holland to be a Step " to your Deſtruction.

" I need not take Pains to tell you the Deplo- " rable Condition of Ireland, which, by the Zeal " and Violence of the Popiſh-Party there, and by " the Aſſiſtance and Encouragement they have " from France, is brought to that Paſs, that it is " not adviſeable to attempt the Reducing of it " but by a conſiderable Force; which, I think, " ought not to be leſs than 20000 Horſe and Foot, " which, by the Bleſſing of GOD, will make the " Work ſhorter, and in Conſequence, the Charge " eaſier, tho' the Firſt Expence muſt, of Neceſ- " ſity, be very great.

" You are to conſider, That towards the moſt " ſpeedy and effectual Succeſs in relation to Ire- " land, as well as with a Regard to France, there " muſt be ſuch a Fleet, as may in Conjunction " with the States, make us ſo entirely Maſters of " that Sea, that nothing may be ſent from France " to Ireland, or any-where elſe, that may give " Diſturbance to Us, or our Allies.

" I muſt alſo recommend to you the Conſi- " ſideration of the Revenue to Me, that it may " be ſo Setled, as that it may be Collected without " Diſputes.

My

1688.

My Lords and Gentlemen,

" These Things will amount to a great Sum, " and must of consequence be a present Weight " upon the People: But considering, neither Your " Religion nor Your Safety can probably be Secured " without these Means, I conclude, Nothing can " be too great a Price for their Preservation. And " I will Engage My Solemn Word to You, That " whatever You shall Give to these Publick Ends, " shall be strictly Apply'd to them: And that as " You so freely Offer to hazard All that is Dear " to You, so I shall as freely Expose My Self for " the Support of the Protestant-Religion, and the " Safety and Honour of the Nation.

General Satisfaction.

The Parliament's Address, and the King's Answer, being made Publick, it was a Common-Satisfaction to the People of England; and the City of London express'd their singular Content and Joy, by an Address of Thanks to the House of Lords: Which was very grateful to the Court. But it was no small Disturbance to the New-Government, that there began to be a Defection in the Army, aswell as a Division in the Two Houses: For the Royal Scotch Regiment of Horse, that was Quarter'd at Abingdon, almost totally Deserted, Marching toward Scotland; as did also above Five hundred of Dunbarton's Regiment, Headed by Five Captains, steering the same Course, with Four Field-Pieces. The News of this Defection being brought to Hampton-Court, His Majesty Order'd Mr. Herbert to communicate it to the Parliament. Whereupon both Houses Agreed to an Address, on March 15th, Humbly Beseeching His Majesty to take effectual Care for the speedy Suppression of that Rebellion; and to Issue forth His Proclamation, Declaring those Officers and Soldiers, and their Adherents, to be Rebels and Traitors, and Requiring all His Subjects to Apprehend and Prosecute 'em as such. Accordingly the King Issued-out a Proclamation to that Effect; and sent a sufficient Force of Horse and Dragoons, under General Gincle, who soon Reduc'd those Mutinous Troops, and brought them to submit to the Mercy of King William, who sent 'em over into Holland. And to obviate the like Mischiefs for the future, an Act was Passed, For Punishing Officers and Solders who should Mutiny, or Desert Their Majesty's Service.

Scotch Regiments Desert the Service of King William.

Address of the Two Houses on this Occasion.

On Saturday March 16th, His Majesty went by Water to the House of Lords, Attended with the usual Solemnity; and being in His Royal-Robes, Seated on the Throne, and the Commons being Sent for up, His Majesty gave the Royal-Assent to, (1.) An Act for Impowering His Majesty to Apprehend and Detain such Persons, as He shall shall find Just Cause to Suspect are Conspiring against the Government. And, (2.) to An Act for the Annulling and making Void the Attainder of William Russel Esq;, commonly call'd Lord Russel. And then His Majesty made this Speech to both Houses:

Acts Passed by King William.

My Lords and Gentlemen;

His Majesty's Speech to the Two Houses.

" NOW I have the Occasion of Coming hither " to Pass this Bill, which, I hope, will be for " all Our Safeties; I shall put You in mind of " One Thing which will conduce much to Our " Settlement, as a Settlement will to the Disap-" pointment of Our Enemies.

" I am, with all the Expedition I can, filling-" up the Vacancies, that are in Offices and Places of " Trust, by this late Revolution. I hope You are " sensible, there is a Necessity of some Law to " Settle the Oaths to be taken by all Persons to be " Admitted to such Places: I recommend it to " Your Care, to make a speedy Provision for it. " And as I doubt not but You will sufficiently " Provide against Papists, so I hope You will leave " Room for the Admission of all Protestants that " are Willing and Able to Serve.

" This Conjunction in My Service, will tend 1688. " to the better Uniting You amongst Your-selves, " and the Strengthning You against Your Com-" mon-Adversaries.

The better to understand the Clause, of leaving Room for the Admission of all Protestants; it must be remembred, That the Arch-Bishop and Bishops, and many of the Clergy, had been so addicted to the High-Notions of Passive-Obedience, Non-Resistance, and the Divine-Right of an Hereditary-Monarchy, that they knew not how to reconcile the Revolution to those Bigotted Principles. And for that Reason, though they had earnestly Desir'd the Prince's Coming, and had the Chief of them Address'd to Him, after He was Come, to take the Administration of Affairs upon Him; yet, as if they wou'd have Him their Redeemer, without being their Protector, they did not care to pay any Allegiance to Him, nor to renounce their Obligations to King James. This Example of the Prelates and Clergy, had a great Influence on many other Members of the Church of England: And it was their Disaffection, that made the King more inclinable to favour the Dissenters, whom He generally look'd upon as better-affected to His Person and Title. This prepar'd the King and the Court to Desire, That all Protestants of what Denomination soever, might be Indifferently admitted to Offices and Employments Upon this Desire of the King, first signify'd to His Privy-Council, a Bill was Presented in the House of Lords, on Thursday March 14th, For Abrogating the former Oaths of Supremacy and Allegiance, and Appointing other Oaths in their stead. Which being Read a Second time, a Select Committee of the House was Order'd to Draw up Two Clauses; The one, To Explain the Abrogating the said Oaths; and the other, To Take away the Necessity of Receiving the Sacrament, to make a Man capable of enjoying any Office, Employment, or Place of Trust. This Clause being Drawn up, and Reported to the House, was Rejected by a great Majority, who thought it necessary to preserve the Government in the Hands of those that were of the National-Church and Religion. And yet Seven Lords Protested against Limiting Offices by the Sacramental-Test, the Lords Delamere, Stamford, North and Grey, Chesterfield, Wharton, Lovelace, and Vaughan, who, on March 21st, Dissented, for these Reasons: (1.) " That an hearty Union " among Protestants, was a greater Security to the " Church and State, than any Test that cou'd be " invented. (2.) That an Obligation to Receive " the Sacrament in Churches, was now a Test on " the Protestants, rather than on the Papists; and " as long as it was so continu'd, there cou'd not be " that hearty and perfect Union among Protestants, " as had always been wish'd, and was at this time " indispensably necessary. And, lastly, That a " greater Caution ought not to be requir'd from " such as were admitted into Offices, than from " the Members of the Two Houses of Parliament, " who were not oblig'd to Receive the Sacrament, " to enable 'em to Sit in either House.

Reasons why the King was jealous of some Church-men; and

More tender of some Dissenters.

Clause of Favour to Protestant-Dissenters.

Protestation of Seven Lords.

When the Court had lost this Point, they made another Attempt in favour of the Moderate-Dissenters, which was, by inserting a Clause in the said Bill, To Prevent the Receiving the Sacrament of the Lord's-Supper, upon any other Account, than in Obedience to the Holy Institution thereof: And to Provide, That any Man shou'd be sufficiently qualify'd for any Office, Employment, or Place of Trust, who within a Year before or after his Admission or Entrance thereinto, did Receive the Sacrament of the Lord's-Supper, either according to the Usage of the Church of England, or in any other Protestant-Congregation, and cou'd produce a Certificate, under the Hands of the Minister, and Two other Credible Persons. But this Clause was also Rejected by a great great Majority; though Six Lords, Oxford, Lovelace, Wharton, Mordant, Montague, and Paget, Enter'd their Diſſent, for theſe Reaſons: (1.) "Becauſe it gives a great Part of the Proteſtant Freemen of England, Reaſon to Complain of Inequality, and Hard-Uſage, when they are Excluded from Publick Employments by Law: And alſo, becauſe it deprives the King and Kingdom of divers Men fit and capable to ſerve the Publick, in ſeveral Stations; and that for a meer Scruple of Conſcience, which can by no means render them Suſpected, much leſs Diſaffected to the Government. (2.) Becauſe His Majeſty, as the Common and Indulgent Father of His People, having expreſs'd an earneſt Deſire of Liberty for Tender Conſciences, to His Proteſtant Subjects; and my Lords the Biſhops having, divers of them, on ſeveral Occaſions, profeſs'd an Inclination to, and Own'd the Reaſonableneſs of ſuch a Chriſtian-Temper; We apprehend it will raiſe Suſpicion in ſome Mens Minds, of ſomething elſe than the Care of Religion, or the Publick, and different from a Deſign to heal our Breaches, when they find, that by Confining Secular-Employments to Eccleſiaſtical-Conformity, thoſe are ſhut-out from Civil-Affairs, whoſe Doctrine and Worſhip may be Tolerated by Authority of Parliament; there being a Bill before Us, by Order of the Houſe, to that Purpoſe: Eſpecially when, without this Excluſive-Rigour, the Church is Secur'd in all Her Privileges and Preferments; no-Body being hereby Let-in to them, who is not ſtrictly Conformable. (3.) Becauſe, to ſet Marks of Diſtinction and Humiliation on any-ſort of Men, who have not rendred themſelves juſtly Suſpected to the Government, as it is at all times to be avoided by the Makers of Juſt and Equitable Laws, ſo may be particularly of ill-Effect to the Reformed-Intereſt at Home and Abroad, in this preſent Conjuncture, which ſtands in need of the United-Hands and Hearts of all Proteſtants, againſt the Open-Attempts and Secret-Endeavours of a Reſtleſs Party, and a Potent Neighbour, who is more Zealous than Rome itſelf, to plant Popery in theſe Kingdoms; and labours, with the utmoſt Force, to ſettle his Tyranny, upon the Ruines of the Reformation, all through Europe. (4.) Becauſe it turns the Edge of a Law (We know not by what Fate) upon Proteſtants, and Friends to the Government, which was intended againſt Papiſts, to Exclude them from Places of Truſt, as Men avowedly Dangerous to Our Government and Religion: And thus, the taking the Sacrament, which was enjoin'd only as a Means to Diſcover Papiſts, is now made a Diſtinguiſhing-Duty amongſt Proteſtants, to Weaken the Whole, by Caſting-off a Part of them. (5.) Becauſe Myſteries of Religion, and Divine-Worſhip, are of Divine-Original, and of a Nature ſo wholly diſtinct from the Secular-Affairs of Politick-Society, that they cannot be applied to thoſe Ends; and therefore, the Church, by the Law of the Goſpel, aſwell as Common-Prudence, ought to take Care, neither to offend Tender-Conſciences Within itſelf, nor give offence to thoſe Without, by mixing their Sacred-Myſteries with Secular-Intereſts. (6.) Becauſe We cannot ſee how it can conſiſt with the Law of God, Common-Equity, or the Right of any Free-born Subject, that any-One be Puniſh'd without Crime. If it be a Crime, not to take the Sacrament according to the Uſage of the Church of England, every-One ought to be Puniſh'd for it; which no-Body affirms: If it be no Crime; thoſe who are Capable, and judg'd Fit for Employments by the King, ought not to be Puniſh'd with a Law of Excluſion, for not doing that which 'tis no Crime to forbear. If it be urg'd ſtill, as an effectual Teſt to Diſcover and Keep-out Papiſts; the taking the Sacrament in theſe Proteſtant-Congregations where they are Members, and known, will be at leaſt as effectual to that Purpoſe."

1688.

As to the State of Scotland, the Prince's Declaration, diſpers'd in that Kingdom, had a great Influence upon the Body of the People: But the Biſhops and Epiſcopal-Clergy, being the more-immediate Creatures of the Court, had been Drawn-in to a more than ordinary Profeſſion of Adherence to King James: For, upon News of the Expedition of the Prince of Orange, they were made to write this following Letter to the King.

State of Scotland.

May it Pleaſe Your Moſt Sacred Majeſty;

Letter of the Biſhops to King James.

"WE Proſtrate Ourſelves, to pay Our moſt devote Thanks and Adoration to the Sovereign Majeſty of Heaven and Earth, for Preſerving Your Sacred Life and Perſon, ſo frequently Expos'd to the greateſt Hazards, and as often Deliver'd; and You miraculouſly Proſper'd with Glory and Victory, in Defence of the Rights and Honour of Your Majeſty's Auguſt Brother, and of theſe Kingdoms: And that, by His Merciful Goodneſs, the Ragings of the Sea, and Madneſs of Unreaſonable Men, have been ſtill'd and calm'd; and Your Majeſty, as the Darling of Heaven, peaceably ſeated on the Throne of Your Royal Anceſtors, whoſe Long, Illuſtrious and Unparallel'd Line, is the greateſt Glory of this Your Ancient Kingdom.

"We pay Our moſt humble Gratitude to Your Majeſty, for the repeated Aſſurances of Your Royal Protection to Our National-Church and Religion, as the Laws have Eſtabliſh'd them; which are very ſuitable to the Gracious Countenance, Encouragement and Protection, Your Majeſty was pleas'd to afford to Our Church and Order, whilſt We were happy in Your Preſence among us.

"We magnifie the Divine-Mercy, in bleſſing Your Majeſty with a Son, and Us with a Prince, whom we pray Heaven may bleſs and preſerve, to ſway Your Royal Sceptres after You, and that he may Inherit, with Your Dominions, the Illuſtrious and Heroick Vertues of his Auguſt and Moſt Serene Parents.

"We are amaz'd to hear of the Danger of an Invaſion from Holland, which excites our Prayers for an Univerſal Repentance, from all Orders of Men, that GOD may yet ſpare His People, preſerve Your Royal Perſon, and prevent the Effuſion of Chriſtian Blood; and to give ſuch Succeſs to Your Majeſty's Arms, that All who Invade Your Majeſty's Juſt and Undoubted Rights, and Diſturb or Interrupt the Peace of Your Realms, may be Diſappointed, and cloathed with Shame, ſo that on Your Royal Head the Crown may ſtill flouriſh.

"As, by the Grace of GOD, We ſhall preſerve in Ourſelves a firm and unſhaken Loyalty; ſo We ſhall be careful and zealous to promote, in all Your Subjects, an intrepid and ſtedfaſt Allegiance to Your Majeſty, as an Eſſential-part of their Religion, and of the Glory of Our Holy Profeſſion; not doubting, but that GOD, in His great Mercy, who hath ſo often preſerv'd and deliver'd Your Majeſty, will ſtill preſerve and deliver You, by giving You the Hearts of Your Subjects, and the Necks of Your Enemies. So Pray We, who, in all Humility, are, 1688. This Letter was fatal, not only to the Scotch-Biſhops, but to Epiſcopacy itſelf in Scotland: For the Diſtinction was very apparent, the Presbyterians fell in with the Revolution, the Epiſcopal-Party did all they could to obſtruct and oppoſe it. Hence upon the News of King James's being withdrawn, the Lord-Chancellor reſigned immediately the Great Seal, and retired to Edinburgh; and the Populace of that City inſulted not only the Romaniſts, but alſo the Epiſcopal-Party. The Prince being informed of theſe Things, and having firſt diſpatched Major-General Mackey with ſome Troops under his Command into that Kingdom, he aſſembled ſuch of the Scotch-Lords and Gentlemen, as were in Town, on the 7th of January, and made this Speech to them.

This

This Letter fatal to Epiſcopacy in Scotland.

My Lords and Gentlemen;

King William's Speech to the Scotch-Lords.

THE only Reaſon that induced me to undergo ſo great an Undertaking, was, That I ſaw the Laws and Liberties of theſe Kingdoms overturned, and the Proteſtant-Religion in imminent Danger: And ſeeing you are here ſo many Noblemen and Gentlemen, I have called you together, that I may have your Advice, what is to be done for Securing the Proteſtant-Religion, and reſtoring your Laws and Liberties, according to my Declaration.

Their Meeting and Conſults.

As ſoon as His Highneſs had retired, the Lords and Gentlemen went to the Council-Chamber at Whitehall, and having Choſen the Duke of Hamilton their Preſident, they fell a-Conſulting what Advice was fit to be given to His Highneſs in this Conjuncture; and after ſome Hours Reaſoning, they Agreed upthe Materials of it, and appointed the Clerks, with ſuch as were to aſſiſt them, to draw up in Writing, what the Meeting thought expedient to adviſe His Highneſs, and to bring it into the Meeting the next Day in the Afternoon.

Tueſday the Eighth Inſtant, the Writing was preſented in the Meeting, and ſome Time being ſpent in Reaſoning about the fitteſt way of Convening a General Meeting of the Eſtates of Scotland; At laſt the Meeting came to Agree in their Opinion, and appointed the Advice to be Writ clean over, according to the Amendments. But as they were about to part for that Time, the Earl of Arran propoſed to them, as his Lordſhip's Advice, That they ſhould move the Prince of Orange, to deſire the King to return and call a Free-Parliament, which would be the beſt way to Secure the Proteſtant-Religion, and Property, and to heal all Breaches. This Propoſal ſeem'd to diſſatisfie the whole Meeting, and eſpecially the Duke of Hamilton, their Preſident, Father to the Earl; but they preſently parted.

Wedneſday, the 9th of January, they Met at Three of the Clock in the ſame Room, where Sir Patrick Hume took Notice of the Propoſal made by the Earl of Arran, and deſired to know if there were any there, that would ſecond it; but none appearing to do it, he ſaid, "That what the "Earl had propoſed was evidently oppoſite and "inimicous to His Highneſs, the Prince of Orange's "Undertaking, his Declaration, and the good In"tentions of preſerving the Proteſtant-Religion, "and of reſtoring their Laws and Liberties ex"preſs'd in it; and farther deſired, That the "Meeting ſhould declare this to be their Opinion "of it". The Lord Cardroſs ſeconded Sir Patrick's Motion: It was Anſwer'd by the Duke of Hamilton, Preſident of the Meeting, "That their "Buſineſs was to prepare an Advice to be offer'd "to the Prince, and the Advice being now ready to "go to the Vote; there was no need that the Meet"ing ſhould give their Senſe of the Earl's Propo"ſal, which neither before nor after Sir Patrick's "Motion, any had pretended to own or ſecond, "ſo that it was fallen out of Doors; and that the "Vote of the Meeting, upon the Advice brought in 1688. "by their Order, would ſufficiently declare their "Opinion". This being ſeconded by the Earl of Sutherland, the Lord Cardroſs and Sir Patrick did acquieſce in it, and the Meeting Voted unanimouſly the Advice following.

Advice to the Scotch Noblemen and Gentlemen to the Prince of Orange.

"WE the Lords and Gentlemen of the King"dom of Scotland, Aſſembled at Your "Highneſs's Deſire, in this Extraordinary Con"juncture, do give Your Highneſs Our Humble "and Hearty Thanks for Your Pious and Gene"rous Undertaking for preſerving the Proteſtant-Religion, and reſtoring the Laws and Liberties "of theſe Kingdoms.

"In Order to the attaining theſe Ends, Our "Humble Advice and Deſire is, That Your High"neſs take upon You the Adminiſtration of all "Affairs, both Civil and Military, the Diſpoſal of "the Publick Revenues and Fortreſſes in the King"dom of Scotland, and the doing every thing that "is neceſſary for the Preſervation of the Peace of "the Kingdom, until a General Meeting of the "States of the Nation; which We humbly deſire "Your Highneſs to call, to be holden at Eden"burgh the 14th Day of March next, by your "Letters or Proclamation, to be Publiſh'd at the "Market-Croſſes of Edenburgh, and other Head"boroughs of the ſeveral Shires and Stewartries, "as ſufficient Intimation to all concerned, and ac"cording to the Cuſtom of the Kingdom: And "that the Publication of theſe your Letters or "Proclamation, be by the Sheriffs or Stewart-Clerks, "for the Free-holders, who have the Value of "Lands, holden according to Law, for making "Elections; and by the Town-Clerks of the ſaid "Boroughs, for the Meeting of the whole Burgeſſes "of the reſpective Royal Boroughs, to make their "Elections at leaſt Fifteen Days, before the Meet"ing of the Eſtates at Edenburgh, and the reſpe"ctive Clerks to make Intimation thereof, at leaſt "Ten Days before the Meeting for the Elections; "and that the whole Electors and Members of the "ſaid Meeting at Edenburgh, qualified as above "expreſs'd, be Proteſtants, without any other Ex"ception or Limitation whatſoever; to Delibe"rate and Reſolve what is to be done for Securing "the Proteſtant-Religion, and reſtoring the Laws "and Liberties of the Kingdom, according to "Your Highneſs's Declaration.

Dated at the Council-Chamber, the 10th Day of January, 1689.

This Addreſs being Subſcribed by above Thirty Lords and about Eighty Gentlemen, was preſented in their Preſence at St. James's, by the Duke of "Hamilton, their Preſident, to His Highneſs the "Prince of Orange, who Thanked them for the "the Truſt they repoſed in him, and deſired a "ſider upon ſo weighty an Affair.

Upon the 14th of January, His Highneſs Met again with the Scotch Lords and Gentlemen at St. James, and ſpoke to them as follows.

My Lords and Gentlemen;

The Prince his Speech.

IN Purſuance of your Advice, I will, until the Meeting of the States in March next, give ſuch Orders concerning the Affairs of Scotland, as are neceſſary concerning the Calling of the ſaid Meeting, for the preſerving of the Peace, the applying of the Publick Revenue to the moſt preſſing Uſes, and putting the Fortreſſes in the Hands of Perſons, in whom the Nation can have a juſt Confidence: And I do further Aſſure you, that you will always find me ready to Concur with you, in every thing that may be found neceſſary for Securing the Proteſtant-Religion, and reſtoring the Laws and Liberties of the Nation.

The

688. The Earl of Crawford desired of His Highness, that himself, the Earl of Louthian, and others, who came to Town since the Address was presented, might have an Opportunity to Subscribe it, which was accordingly done; after which His Highness retired, and all shewed great Satisfaction with his Answer.

ite of land. Ireland was like to be in a Bleeding Condition, and the Care of that Kingdom having not only been recommended to the Prince by the English Lords and Commons, but also by an Address of the Nobility and Gentry of that Country, Assembled for that Purpose at the Duke of Ormond's House, who at the same Time presented His Highness with a Draught of the Chief Ports of that Kingdom; the Prince thought fit to Summon Tyrconnel by a Letter, to submit to the present Administration, and to receive those Troops which His Highness design'd for the Security of that Kingdom, assuring him, the Roman-Catholicks should enjoy the same Liberty as they did in King Charles the IId's Time. Colonel Richard Hamilton, a Roman-Catholick, was the Person entrusted with the Letter and Message, who no sooner came to Dublin, but he wholly joyned with Tyrconnel, which so afflicted Mr. Temple, a hopeful Gentleman, that had advised the Prince to employ him, that he Drowned himself upon the News of it.

tate of eligion. As to the Affairs of the Church in this Year, there needs no distinguishing View of them; for the Dangers that threatned the Established-Church and the whole Reformation, made up the greatest Part of those Publick Grievances that brought about the wonderful Revolution. So that most of the Ecclesiastical-Matters are already intermix'd with the Civil, Popery, and Arbitrary-Power can hardly be separated from one another. We need only farther observe, that nothing did so much exasperate the Clergy of the Church-of-England as the obtruding upon 'em a Declaration to give their People a Liberty of dividing from them. And therefore the whole Body of the Clergy were Unanimous in refusing to Read it in their Churches. The Example of Courage began in the City of London, and was industriously recommended thro' all Parts of the Kingdom, in a Letter from a Clergyman in the City to his Friend in the Country, containing his Reasons for not Reading the Declaration, dated May 22d, 1688. The more Eminent Bishops would not suffer their Officers to disperse the Forms of Declaration as was by Authority requir'd, and so shelter'd the Clergy from any Punishment of Neglect or Contempt, which they were willing to take upon themselves: And even in those other Dioceses where, by the Obsequious Order of the Bishops, or the Cowardice of their Inferiour-Officers, the Declarations were laid in the respective Parishes, not one Minister in Five Hundred would submit to the Reading of it; and even of those who did sordidly comply, not One in Twenty seem'd to do it from any Principle, but that of Fear to offend, or Ambition to please the Court. And yet it is very observable, that Bishop Cartwright so labour'd the Point in his own Diocese of Chester, That by Threats and Terrors He drew in a small Number of his Clergy, not only to Read the Declaration, but to Triumph in the doing of it by this Address to the King.

he Declaration of James enerally efused by he Clergy.

The Humble Address of the Clergy of the County-Palatine of Chester, who Publish'd the Late Gracious Declaration in their Churches for Liberty of Conscience.

Address of the Clergy of Chester.

"WE Your Majesty's Most Dutiful and Loyal Subjects, well-weighing what "we, as such, ought to render to so Sacred and "Gracious a King, reckon'd we ow'd this and "higher Instances of our Obedience; in Pursu-1688. "ance of which, and of Your Majesty's Order in "Council, We heartily Read the Declaration for "Liberty of Conscience; not repining that all o-"ther our Fellow-Subjects should with us enjoy a "Portion of Your Royal-Favour. We are well-"aware that many have well deserved, and as to "the other Number, towards whom you use the "Courteous and Noblest Way of Conquering, we "hope you may be Successful, or at least your "Power will preserve you Safe. But if the Matter "of the Declaration were not according to our "Wishes, yet the Publishing of it is according to "our Duty, since it is Issued out from the express "Prerogative of your Supremacy over us: And we "are required by what is Statute-Law, the Ru-"brick of our Liturgy, to Publish what is enjoin'd "by the King or our Bishop, (whose Care herein "was remarkable) as much as what is prescribed "in the Rules of this Book: So that we cannot "but with Trouble of Mind hear of the Proceedings "of the Seven Bishops, who, though they tender-"ly promis'd the Dissenters something, yet refused "to do their Part about the Declaration, lest "they should be Parties to it; which Reason, we "with due Modesty, (and relying upon a higher "Authority,) esteem insufficient, seeing the Par-"liament of 62. did not think the Reading the "Common-Prayer was approving of it, without "Assent and Consent, publickly declared.

"We therefore, in all Submission, become ear-"nest, though too mean, Intercessors to Your "Most Gracious Majesty, in Behalf of the Church-"of-England, that the Faults of these, and others, "may not be laid to her Charge, in whose Com-"munion there are many, and we hope there will "be more, who concur in promoting the Purposes "of your Mild Government. We further beg "Leave to make our Congratulations for the "happy Birth of the Young Prince in his Here-"ditary Successive Kingdom: We in this Palati-"nate are the First Lot of Inheritance to the "First-Born of our Kings; and as we have a "greater Part in him, so we have a more plen-"tiful Joy that he is Born to us, praying a long "Life to him, and the Inheriting of his Royal "Father's Crowns and Vertues, we hereby bind "Ourselves to continue stedfastly,

Your Majesty's most Devoted, Obedient, and Firm Subjects, and Servants.

The same Fit of Loyalty came upon some other Bishops, who attempted to possess their Clergy with the Necessity of Obeying the King; but the Effect of it was only to make the King's Authority and their Own the more contemptible. Among others, the Poor Bishop of Lincoln having wrote much against Popery, was the more afraid of it; and therefore to make his Peace at Court, He did endeavour to perswade his Clergy to join with him, in some Address of the like Nature: But after all his Solliciting He could bring over but One Mean Clergy-man, and he of so little Reputation, that the Bishop was himself asham'd of him.

Poor Endeavours of the Bishop of Lincoln.

The Bishop of London was not only the most Instrumental in the Revolution, but the most Zealous in Promoting the Peace and Settlement of it; and therefore, on Dec. 21st, he waited on His Highness, being attended with some of his own Clergy, and ev'n with some of the Dissenting-Ministers, and in his own and their Name, made a Speech to the Prince, to this Effect; "That they came to pay "Him their humble Duties, and grateful Respects, "for His very great and most hazardous Under-"taking, for their Deliverance, and the Preserva-"tion of the Protestant Religion, with the Ancient "Laws and Liberties of this Nation: That they "gave up daily many Thanksgivings to Almighty

Bishop of London most Instrumental in the Revolution.

His Lordship's Address to the Prince.

1688. "GOD, who had hitherto been graciously pleas'd "so wonderfully to preserve his Person, and "prosper and favour his good Design; and they "promis'd the continuance of their most fervent "Prayers to the same GOD, and all concurrent "Endeavours, in their respective Circumstances, "for the promoting yet farther that Work which "was so happily begun; and also for the perfecting "of it, not only in this Kingdom, but in other "Christian Kingdoms." The Bishop likewise suggested to the Prince, "That some of the Dissenting-"Ministers, and their Brethren, were there pre-"sent, who having the same Sense of his Coming "hither, with themselves, had join'd themselves "with them, by him, to render him their humblest "and most grateful Resentments.

The Prince his Answer. His Highness was pleas'd to Answer, That He Thank'd them for their Attendance; and did Assure 'em, That the Great End of His Difficult and Chargeable Expedition, was to Preserve and Secure the Protestant Religion (His own Religion, and their Religion;) and He shou'd not think any Thing, (no, not Life itself) too Dear to hazard, in Promoting and Perfecting so good a Work: And as He Himself had offer'd up, with great Devotion, His most solemn Acknowledgments to Almighty GOD, for His Presence with Him, and Blessing upon His Endeavours and Arms hitherto, so He must desire the Continuance of all their Prayers to GOD for Him.

Those of the Dissenting-Ministers, who had not waited on the Prince, under the Protection of the Bishop of London, took another Opportunity of Attending His Highness at St. James's, on Wednesday Jan. 2d, when they were, to the Number of Ninety, or upwards, Introduc'd by the Earl of Devonshire, the Lord Wharton, and the Lord Wiltshire, and Presented an Address, to this Effect:

Address of the Dissenting-Ministers. "They profess'd their grateful Sense of His High-"ness's Hazardous and Heroical Expedition, which "the Favour of Heaven had made so surprizingly "Prosperous. They esteem'd it a Common-"Felicity, That the Worthy Patriots of the Nobi-"lity and Gentry of this Kingdom, had Unani-"mously Concur'd unto His Highness's Design; "by whose most prudent Advice, the Administra-"tion of Publick-Affairs was devolved, in this "Difficult Conjuncture, into Hands, which the "Nation and the World knew to be apt for the "Greatest Undertakings, and so suitable to the "present Exigency of our Case. They promis'd "the utmost Endeavour, which, in their Stations, "they were capable of affording, for promoting "the Excellent and Most-desirable Ends for which "His Highness had Declar'd. They added their "continual and fervent Prayers to the Almighty, "for the Preservation of His Highness's Person, "and the Success of His future Endeavours, for "the Defence and Propagation of the Protestant-"Interest throughout the Christian World. They "should All most willingly have chosen that "for the Season of paying this Duty to His High-"ness, when the Lord Bishop and the Clergy of "London Attended His Highness for the same Pur-"pose, (which some of them did, and which His "Lordship was pleas'd condescendingly to make "mention of to His Highness) had their Notice of "that intended Application been so early, as to "make their more general Attendance possible to "them at that time: Therefore, though they did "now appear in a distinct Company, they did not "on a distinct Account, but on that only which "was Common to them, and to all Protestants. "There were some of Eminent Note, whom Age, "or present Infirmities, hinder'd from Coming "with 'em, yet They Concurr'd in the same "grateful Sense of this their Common-Deliverance.

The Prince his Answer. His Highness was pleas'd very favourably to receive this Application, and to Assure 'em, That He came purposely for the Defence of the Protestant-Religion, for that was His Own Religion wherein He was born and bred, the Religion of His Country and His Ancestors; therefore He was Resolv'd, by the Grace of GOD, always to Adhere to it, and to do His utmost Endeavours for the Defence of it, and the Promoting a firm Union among Protestants. 1688.

This a happy Juncture for Uniting all Protestants. It must be own'd, that this was a glorious Opportunity, of Reconciling all Moderate-Dissenters to the Communion of the Church of England; which might have been happily effected, if this Extraordinary Juncture had been Well-manag'd and Improv'd. For the Bishops, and most Eminent Clergy, had publickly profess'd to King James, their being willing to come to a Temper with their Dissenting-Brethren; and they had made their Applications to the Prince of Orange, upon the like Assurances of Peace and Union, by all proper and lawful Means. And at the same time, there was a like amicable Disposition in the Body of the Dissenters, who took Care to represent their Desires of Accommodation, by the Mouth of Dr. Bates, who being Attended by very many Dissenting-Ministers, made these following Speeches to Their Majesties.

To the KING.

May it Please Your Majesty;

Speech of Dr. Bates to the King. "THE Series of Successful Events that has "attended Your Glorious Enterprize, for the "Saving these Kingdoms from so Imminent and "Destructive Evils, has been so Eminent and Ex-"traordinary, that it may force an Acknowledg-"ment of the Divine-Providence from those who "Deny it, and raises Admiration in all who Be-"lieve and Reverence it. The Beauty and Speed "of this Happy Work, are the bright Signatures of "His Hand, who creates Deliverance for His People. "The Less of Humane Power, the More of the Divine "Wisdom and Goodness has been Conspicuous in it. "If the Deliverance had been obtain'd by Fierce and "Bloody Battels, Victory itself had been Dejected "and Sad, and Our Joy had been mix'd with "Afflicting Bitterness: But as the Sun, ascending "the Horizon, dispels, without Noise, the Darkness "of the Night; so Your Serene Presence has, "without Tumults and Disorders, chas'd away "the Darkness that Invaded us. In the Sense of "this Astonishing Deliverance, We Desire, with all "possible Ardency of Affection, to Magnifie the "Glorious Name of GOD, the Author of it, "by whose entire Efficacy the Means have been "Successful: And We cannot, without a warm "Rapture of Thankfulness, recount our Obliga-"tions to Your Majesty, the Happy Instrument "of it. Your Illustrious Greatness of Mind, in "an Undertaking of such vast Expence; Your "Heroick Zeal, in Exposing Your Most Precious "Life in such an Adventurous Expedition; Your "Wise Conduct, and unshaken Resolution, in Pro-"secuting Your Great Ends, are above the loftiest "Flights of Language, and exceed all Praise. We "owe to Your Majesty the Two Greatest and most "Valuable Blessings that we can enjoy; The Pre-"servation of the True Religion, our most Sacred "Treasure; and the Recovery of the Falling State, "and the Establishing it upon Just Foundations. "According to our Duty, we promise unfainting "Fidelity and true Allegiance to Your Majesty's "Person and Government.—— We are encourag'd "by Your Gracious Promise, upon our First Address, "humbly to desire and hope, That Your Majesty will "be pleas'd, by Your Wisdom and Authority, to "Establish a firm Union of Your Protestant Subjects "in the Matters of Religion, by making the Rule "of Christianity to be the Rule of Conformity. "Our Blessed Union, in the Purity and Peace of "of the Gospel, will make this Church a Fair and "Lovely Type of Heaven, and Terrible to our "Anti-christian Enemies: This will make England 1688. " the Steady Centre from whence a Powerful Influence " will be deriv'd, for the Support of Reformed Chri- " ſtianity Abroad: This will bring Immortal Honour " to Your Name, above the Trophies and Triumphs " of the moſt Renowned Conquerors. We do Aſſure " Your Majeſty, That we ſhall cordially embrace the " Terms of Union, which the Ruling-Wiſdom of Our " SAVIOUR has preſcribed in His Word.—— We " ſhall not treſpaſs farther on Your Royal-Patience, " but ſhall offer up our fervent Prayers to the King " of kings, That He will pleaſe to direct Your Ma- " jeſty by His Unerring Wiſdom, and always encline " Your Heart to His Glory, and encompaſs Your " Sacred Perſon with His Favour, as with a Shield, " and make Your Government an Univerſal Bleſ- " ſing to theſe Kingdoms.

The King's Anſwer. His Majeſty was pleas'd graciouſly to make this Anſwer: I take kindly Your Good-Wiſhes; and whatever is in my Power, ſhall be employ'd for obtaining ſuch an Union among you. I do Aſſure you of My Protection and Kindneſs.

To the QUEEN.

May it Pleaſe Your Majeſty;

Speech of Dr. Bates to the Queen. " YOUR Happy Arrival in Your Native- " Country, and Acceſſion to the Crown, has " diffus'd an Univerſal Joy through this Kingdom. " 'Tis an Auſpicious Sign of Publick-Felicity, " when Supreme-Vertue and Supreme-Dignity meet " in the ſame Perſon. Your Inviolable Firmneſs " in the Profeſſion of the Truth, and Exemplary " Piety, are the moſt radiant Jewels in Your " Crown. The Luſtre of Your Converſation, " unſtain'd in the midſt of Tempting Vanities, " and adorn'd with every Grace, recommends " Religion as the moſt Honourable and Amiable " Quality, ev'n to thoſe who are averſe from " hearing Sermons, and apt to deſpiſe Serious " Inſtructions and Excitations to be Religious.—— " We humbly Deſire Your Majeſty will be pleas'd, by " Your Wiſdom and Goodneſs, , to Compoſe the Dif- " ferences between Your Proteſtant Subjects, in " Things of leſs Moment concerning Religion. We " hope thoſe Reverend Perſons who conſpire with Us " in the Main-End, the Glory of GOD, and the " Publick-Good, will Conſent to the Terms of " Union, wherein all the Reformed-Churches Agree. " —— We ſhall ſincerely Addreſs our Requeſts to " GOD, that He will pleaſe to pour down, in a " rich Abundance, His Bleſſings upon Your Ma- " jeſty's Perſon and Government, and preſerve " You to His Heavenly Kingdom.

The Queen's Anſwer. Her Majeſty was graciouſly pleas'd to Anſwer them thus: I will uſe all Endeavours for the obtaining an Union, that is neceſſary for the Edifying of the Church. I deſire your Prayers.

Church-Preferments. As to Church-Preferments, Dr. Lamplugh, Biſhop of Exeter, flying from that City while the Prince of Orange was Marching to it, was rewarded by King James with the Tranſlation to the Arch-Biſhoprick of York, on Nov. 16th; and the Ceremonies of his Tranſlation were performed at Lambeth on Saturday, Dec. 8. by his Grace the Lord Arch-Biſhop of Canterbury, aſſiſted by the Biſhops of St. Aſaph, Ely, Rocheſter and Peterborough; and the Day after he did his Homage to His Majeſty at Whitehall, and within Two Days after he joined with the Lords Spiritual and Temporal Aſſembled at Guild-Hall, to Invite the Prince of Orange to take the Adminiſtration of the Government upon him. Upon his Tranſlation to York, King James commanded, though he ſtay'd not to compleat, the Tranſlation of Sir Jonathan Trelawney (Lord-Biſhop Briſtol) to the See of Exeter. The Learned Dr. Seth Ward (Biſhop of Salisbury) having outliv'd his Memory, and the greateſt-part of his excellent Underſtanding, Died in his Houſe at Knightsbridge near London, on Sunday Jan. 6th: Upon which Dr. Gilbert Burnet, who had Come over with the Prince, and had ſo highly deſerv'd of Him, was promoted to that See, at the beginning of March; and on the laſt Day of that Month, was Conſecrated in the Chappel of the Biſhop's Palace at Fulham, by the Biſhops of London, Winchеſter, Lincoln, Llandaff, St. Aſaph, and Carliſle, by virtue of a Commiſſion Granted to them by His Grace the Arch-Biſhop of Canterbury, who began now to Deny the Legality of the New-Government, and therefore wou'd not be Perſonally concern'd in the Conſecration of Dr. Burnet: Though, by the Advice and Importunity of Doctor Woodward (Chancellor of that Dioceſe) His Grace yielded to that Expedient of giving-out his Commiſſion; as if He cou'd Authorize Others to do what he thought cou'd not be lawfully done by Himſelf. On Apr. 3d, His Lordſhip was Sworn and Admitted Chancellor of the Moſt Noble Order of the Garter; and was always True and Faithful to the King's Perſon, Intereſt and Honour, and very Exemplary in his Dioceſe, for Diſcipline, Hoſpitality and Charity. 1688.

1689. We left the Parliament Sitting. The Houſe of Lords had Paſſed a Bill for Removing Papiſts from the Cities of London and Weſtminſter, and Ten Miles diſtance from the ſame. To which the Commons, on March 28th, added a Proviſo, relating to the Queen-Dowager, and Her Family, by which Her Articles of Marriage did ſeem to be Infring'd. To this Proviſo the Peers Diſagreed; alledging, " That Her Majeſty had for ſo many Years " made ſuch moderate Uſe of the ſaid Articles, " that there had not been any juſt Occaſion of " Complaint in the Enjoyment of 'em: That it " was evident, in the Time of the late King James, " when Her Majeſty might have been encourag'd " to entertain more Perſons of Her own Reli- " gion; moſt of Her Servants, and thoſe of the " moſt Conſiderable Places, were continu'd, and " alſo others receiv'd into Her Family, though " Proteſtants; and that it might be of Ill-Conſe- " quence, if Her Majeſty, by not Living eaſily " here, ſhou'd be oblig'd to retire into Foreign Parts. On the other ſide, The Commons, on April 8th, inſiſted upon the Proviſo added by 'em: 1. Becauſe it was no New Clauſe, and therefore impoſed no new Condition, upon Her Majeſty it being the ſame that was Enacted in the Thirtieth of King Charles II. For the more effectual preſerving the King's Perſon and Government. 2. Becauſe to make an Alteration in the Law as it then ſtood, might look like ſome kind of Countenance to thoſe of that Perſwaſion, at a Time when the Lords themſelves had judged the Reſort of Papiſts to London to be of ſo dangerous Conſequence to the Government, as to make this Act to remove 'em Ten Miles from it. And 3*dly*, Becauſe the Papiſts were not leſs active in their Deſigns and Practices to diſturb the Peace and Quiet of the Kingdom, than they were in the Thirtieth of King Charles II. And therefore the like Reaſons which induc'd the Parliament to make that Statute, remain'd at this Time, to perſwade the Houſe of Commons to keep the Force of it entire. Upon Conſideration of theſe Reaſons offer'd by the Commons in a Free-Conference, their Lordſhips agreed to propoſe, That the Queen-Dowager ſhould have Thirty Servants of the King's Engliſh-Subjects, provided none of them were Prieſts, Monks, or Fryars; to which Expedient, after ſeveral Conferences, and warm Debates, the Commons gave their Concurrence.

Proceedings in Parliament.

The King offers a General-Pardon & Oblivion. On Thurſday, March 28. the Earl of Shrewsbury acquainted the Houſe of Peers, " That His " Majeſty, out of an earneſt Deſire to deliver his " People from the Guilt, Reproaches and Penalties " which many of them may be liable to; and to " put an End to all Controverſies ariſing between 1689. "the Subjects, by reaſon of any Diſcord in later Times, and to take away all Diſtinctions, "and Occaſions of Diſcord among them; to the "end that they having an entire Confidence in His "Majeſty, and a perfect Union among themſelves, might be encourag'd in their Duty to "his Government, and more fully and ſecurely "enjoy the Benefit of it. And His Majeſty judging, that the beſt way to render this his Gracious Intentions moſt extenſive and effectual, "was to paſs a Free and General Pardon, Indemnity and Oblivion; His Majeſty did moſt earneſtly recommend the Conſideration thereof to "Both Houſes of Parliament, That with all the "Expedition a Matter of that kind would admit, "they might prepare a Bill for that Purpoſe for "the Royal Aſſent; with ſuch Exceptions only, as "to them ſhould ſeem neceſſary, for the Vindication of Publick Juſtice, the Safety of their Majeſties, and the Settlement and Welfare of the "Nation for the future". At the ſame Time the the Earl of Shrewsbury deſir'd Leave of the Houſe to bring in a Bill for the Naturalizing the Prince of Denmark, whom His Majeſty intended to create a Duke of this Kingdom, and ſo to make him capable of Sitting in that Houſe. Whereupon the Lords Order'd the Marqueſs of Winchester and the Earl of Bedford, to Attend the King with the Thanks of their Houſe, for His Majeſty's Gracious Meſſage to 'em concerning the Bill of Indemnity and Free-Pardon, and for his Intention of creating His Highneſs Prince George, a Duke of this Realm.

On Wedneſday, Apr. 3. His Majeſty came by Water to the Houſe of Lords, attended with the uſual Solemnity; and being in His Royal-Robes Seated on the Throne, and the Commons being ſent for up, His Majeſty gave the Royal Aſſent to the following Acts. 1. An Act for exhibiting a Bill in this preſent Parliament, for Naturalizing the Moſt Noble Prince George of Denmark. 2. An Act for Reviving of Actions and Proceſs lately depending in the Courts at Weſtminſter, and Diſcontinued by the not holding of Hillary-Term, and for Supplying other Defects relating to Proceedings at Law. 3. An Act for Puniſhing Officers and Soldiers, who ſhall Mutiny or Deſert their Majeſty's Service.

Acts paſs'd by the King.

Titles and Honours.

His Majeſty before his Coronation thought fit to Confer ſeveral Titles and Honours. He was pleaſed to create His Royal Highneſs, Prince George of Denmark and Norway, Baron of Ockingham, Earl of Kendall, and Duke of Cumberland; Charles, Lord Marqueſs of Winchester, Duke of Bolton; William Bentinck, Eſq; Groom of the Stole to His Majeſty, Baron of Cirenceſter, Viſcount Woodſtock, and Earl of Portland; Thomas, Lord Viſcount Fauconberg, Earl of Fauconberg; Charles, Lord Viſcount Mordant, Earl of Monmouth; Ralph, Lord Mountague, Viſcount Mount-Hermer, and Earl of Mountague; John, Lord Churchill, Earl of Marlborough; Henry Sidney, Eſq; Baron of Milton, and Viſcount Sidney, of Sheppey in the County of Kent; Richard, Lord Viſcount Lumley, of Waterford in Ireland, Viſcount Lumley, of Lumley-Caſtle in the County-Palatine of Durham; Hugh, Lord Viſcount Cholmondley, of Kellis in Ireland, Baron Cholmondley of Watchmalbank, alias Namptwich in Cheſhire. On March 27. the Lord Coote had been Sworn and Admitted into the Place of Treaſurer and Receiver-General to Her Majeſty. On Apr. 3. Duke Frederick, Mareſchal de Schonbergh, General of His Majeſty's Forces, and Maſter-General of the Ordnance, and William, Earl of Devonſhire, Lord-Steward of His Majeſty's Houſhold, in a Chapter held at Whitehall, were elected Knights-Companions of the Moſt Noble Order of the Garter; and being firſt Knighted by the Sovereign, were inveſted with the Garter and George with the uſual Ceremony: And on Apr. 5. the Duke of Ormond was Inſtalled Knight and Companion of that Moſt Noble Order, 1689. in St. George's Chappel at Windſor; and on Apr. 10. His Majeſty was pleaſed to Confer the Honour of Knighthood upon Thomas Pilkington, Eſq; Lord-Mayor of London.

On Tueſday, Apr. 9. the King came to the Houſe of Peers, and gave his Royal-Aſſent to (1.) An Act for Eſtabliſhing the Coronation-Oath. (2.) An Act for the Naturalization of the Moſt Noble Prince George of Denmark, and Setling his Precedency. (3.) An Act for Naturalizing of Frederick, Count Sconbergh, and others. In the Firſt of theſe Acts the Coronation-Oath was provided (by Directions from the Court) to be Adminiſtred either by the Arch-Biſhop of Canterbury, or the Biſhop of London. The Choice of One of theſe Two Prelates being left to the King, His Majeſty, leſt He ſhould be deny'd by the Firſt, thought fit to pitch upon the Second, who accordingly Officiated in that Magnificent Ceremony, which on the Day appointed Apr. 11. was perform'd at Weſtminſter in Manner following.

More Acts Paſſed.

Coronation of King William and Queen Mary.

THeir Majeſties being come from Whitehall to Weſtminſter, and the Nobility, &c. being put in Order by the Heralds, They came down in State into Weſtminſter-Hall, where the Swords and Spurs were preſented to them.

After which the Dean and Prebendaries of Weſtminſter, having brought the Crowns, and other Regalia, preſented them ſeverally to their Majeſties, which, with the Swords and Spurs, were thereupon delivered to the Lords appointed to carry them.

Then the Proceſſion began in this Manner: Drums and Trumpets; Six Clerks in Chancery Two a-Breaſt (as all the reſt of the Proceeding went;) Chaplains having Dignities; Aldermen of London; Maſters in Chancery; Sollicitor and Attorney-General; Gentlemen of the Privy-Chamber; Judges.

Children of Weſtminſter, and of the King's-Chappel; Choire of Weſtminſter, and Gentlemen of the Chappel; Prebends of Weſtminſter; Maſter of the Jewel-Houſe; Privy-Councellors not Peers.

Two Purſuivants, Baroneſſes, Barons, Biſhops; A Purſuivant, a Viſcounteſs, Viſcounts; Two Heralds, Counteſſes, Earls; a Herald, a Marchioneſs; Two Heralds, Dutcheſſes, Dukes; Two Kings of Arms, the Lord Privy-Seal; Lord-Preſident of the Council; Arch-Biſhop of York; His Royal Highneſs Prince George of Denmark; Two Perſons repreſenting the Dukes of Aquitain and Normandy.

Next the Lords who bore their Majeſties Regalia, viz. the Earl of Manchester, St. Edward's Staff; and the Lord Grey of Ruthin, the Spurs; the Earl of Clare, the Queen's Scepter with the Croſs, and the Earl of Northampton the King's; the Earls of Shrewsbury, Derby and Pembroke, the Three Swords. Next Garter King of Arms between the Uſher of the Black-Rod and the Lord-Mayor of London; the Lord Great-Chamberlain, ſingle; the Earl of Oxford with the Sword of State, between the Duke of Norfolk, Earl-Marſhal, and the Duke of Ormond, Lord High-Conſtable for that Day; then the Earl of Bedford with the Queen's Sceptre of the Dove, and the Earl of Rutland with the King's; the Duke of Bolton with the Queen's Orb, and the Duke of Grafton with the King's; the Duke of Somerſet with the Queen's Crown, and the Earl of Devonſhire, Lord-Steward of His Majeſty's Houſhold, who was made Lord High-Steward of England for that Day, with the King's; the Biſhop of London with the Bible, between the Biſhop of St. Aſaph with the Patin, and the Biſhop of Rocheſter with the Chalice.

Then the KING, Supported by the Biſhop of Winchester, and the QUEEN by the Biſhop of Briſtol, under a Canopy Born by Sixteen Barons of the Cinque-Ports; His Majeſty's Train Born by the Maſter of the Robes, aſſiſted by the Lord Eland, Lord Willoughby, Lord Lanſdowne, and the Lord Dunblain; 1689. Dunblain; and Her Majesty's Train by the Dutchess of Somerset, assisted by the Lady Elizabeth Pawlet, Lady Diana Vere, Lady Elizabeth Cavendish, and the Lady Harriot Hyde.

After the KING, a Gentleman of the Bed-Chamber, and Two Grooms of the Bed-Chamber; and after the QUEEN, a Lady of the Bed-Chamber, and Two of Her Majesty's Women.

Lasty the Captain of His Majesty's Guard, between the Captain of the Yeomen of the Guard, and the Captain of the Band of Pensioners; followed by the Officers and Band of Yeomen of the Guard, the Serjeants at Arms going on each Side of the Regalia, and the Gentlemen-Pensioners on each Side of the Canopy.

Thus their Majesties, in their Robes of Crimson-Velvet, the KING with a Cap, and the QUEEN a Circlet on her Head, all the Nobility in Crimson-Velvet Robes, with their Coronets in their Hands, and the rest of the Proceeding in their Proper Habits, Marched on Foot upon Blew Cloth to Westminster-Abby, all the Way and Houses on each Side being Crowded with vast Numbers of Spectators, expressing their Great Joy and Satisfaction by loud repeated Acclamations.

Being entred the Church, and all duely Seated, the Bishop of London, who performed this great Solemnity, began with the Recognition, which ended with a mighty Shout. Then their Majesties offered, and the Lords who bore the Regalia, presented them at the Altar. The Litany was Sung by Two Bishops, and after the Epistle, Gospel, and Nicene-Creed, the Bishop of Salisbury Preach'd on this Text, 2 Sam. xxiii. 14.

After Sermon their Majesties took the Oath, and being Conducted to their Regal-Chairs placed on the Theatre (that they might be the more Conspicous to the Members of the House of Commons, who were Seated in the North-Cross) were Anointed, and presented with the Spurs and Sword, and Invested with the Palls and Orbs, and then with the Rings and Sceptres; And at Four of the Clock, the Crowns were put upon their Heads, at Sight whereof the People Shouted, the Drums and Trumpets Sounded, the Great-Guns were Discharged, and the Peers and Peeresses put on their Coronets.

Then the Bible was presented to Them, and after the Benediction, They vouchsafed to Kiss the Bishops. Being Inthroned, first the Bishops, and then the Temporal-Lords, did their Homage, and Kissed their Majesties Left Cheeks; while the Treasurer of the Houshold threw about the Coronation-Medals.

Next followed the Communion; And their Majesties having made their Second Oblation, received the Holy Sacrament. Then the Bishop Read the Final Prayers, and their Majesties retiring into St. Edward's Chappel, and being new-Arrayed in Purple-Velvet, returned to Westminster-Hall, wearing their Rich Crowns of State, and the Nobility their Coronets.

The Nobility, &c. being Seated at their respective Tables, which were all ready furnished before their coming in; The First Course for their Majesties Table was Served up with the proper Ceremony, being preceded by the Great Officers, and the High-Constable, High-Steward, and Earl-Marshal: And before the Second Course, Charles Dymoke, Esq; Their Majesties Champion, between the High-Constable and the Earl-Marshal, performed the Challenge; After which the Heralds Proclaimed Their Majesties Stiles.

Dinner being ended, and the whole Solemnity perform'd with great Splendor and Magnificence, about Eight in the Evening Their Majesties returned to Whitehall.

The next Day Afternoon, the House of Commons in a full Body walked from Westminster to the Banqueting-House, where they Attended their Majesties to Congratulate 'em upon their Coronation; which Mr. Powle, their Speaker, performed in the following Speech. 1689.

Speaker's Speech to their Majesties.

"YOUR Most Loyal and Dutiful Subjects, "the Commons of England Assembled in this "present Parliament, having to their unspeakable "Joy, seen Your Majesties plac'd upon the Imperial Throne of this Kingdom, they have desir'd "Access at this Time to Your Royal Presence, "humbly to Congratulate Your Majesties upon "this Occasion, and to wish Your Majesties a "Long and Prosperous Reign, with all the Blessings that ever did attend a Crown.

"We are all Sensible that Your Majesties Greatness is the Security of your Subjects. It is from "your Power that we derive to our selves an Assurance of being Defended from our Enemies; "and from your Justice, that we expect a full "Enjoyment of our Laws and Liberties: But that "which compleats our Happiness, is the Experience we have of Your Majesties continual Care "to maintain the Protestant Religion; So that we "can no longer apprehend any Danger of being "deprived of that Inestimable Blessing, either by "secret Practices or by open Violences.

To the King.

"May the same Divine Providence which hath "hitherto preserved Your Majesty in the greatest "Dangers, and so often given you Victory over "your Enemies, still Crown your Undertakings with "Success.

To the Queen.

"And may those Unparallell'd Vertues, which "adorn Your Majesty's Royal Person, be the Admi- "ration of the Present Age, and an Example to the "Future.

"And may the Lustre of both your Names so "far out-shine the Glory of your Predecessors, "that the Memory of their greatest Actions may "be forgotten, and your People no longer date "the Establishment of their Laws and Liberties "from St. Edward's Days, but from the most Auspicious King WILLIAM and Queen MARY.

To this Speech His Majesty made the following Answer, both in his own, and in his Queen's Name.

GENTLEMEN;

The King's Answer.

WE return you Our hearty Thanks, for the Kindness that yor have, upon all Occasions, shew'd to Both of Us. We shall take Care, to the best of Our Power, of all things that conduce to the Good of the Kingdom: And I do not doubt, but, by GOD's Assistance, and Yours, We shall be Able, in a short time, to make you a Flourishing People.

Lords Address.

On Apr. 19th, the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and Commons in Parliament Assembled, Presented an Address to His Majesty, in the Banqueting-House, to render His Majesty their most Humble and Hearty Thanks, for His Gracious Declaration, and repeated Assurances, That He will Maintain the Church of England, as by Law Established: And humbly to Pray His Majesty, to Summon a Convocation of the Clergy of this Kingdom. To which His Majesty the next Day return'd a most Gracious Answer, (that shall be expresly recited under the View of Religion.)

Acts Pass'd.

On Wednesday Apr. 24th, His Majesty went to the House of Lords, and gave His Royal-Assent to these following Acts. (1.) An Act for Impowering His Majesty to Apprehend and Detain such Persons, as He shall find just Cause to Suspect are Conspiring against the Government. (2.) An Act for the Abrogating of the Oaths of Supremacy and Allegiance, and Appointing other Oaths. (3.) An Act for the Amoving Papists, and reputed Papists, from the Cities of London and Westminster, and Ten Miles distance from the same. (4.) An Act for the Taking-away the Revenue arising by Hearth-Money. (5.) An Act

1689. Act for the Encouraging the Exportation of Corn. (6.) An Act for the Explaining and Making-effectual a Statute made in the First Year of King James the Second, concerning the Havens and Peers of Great-Yarmouth. 1689.

There was yet no Open-War Declar'd againſt France: But the Reception of K. James in the French-Court, and His Tranſporting French-Forces into Ireland, made it neceſſary to Proclaim War againſt that Potent Monarch; as was expected Abroad, and deſir'd here at Home. Under this Diſpoſition, on Friday Apr. 26th, the Commons, in a Body, Waited on His Majeſty at Whitehall, and Preſented this Humble Addreſs:

Addreſs of the Commons, for a War with France.

" WE Your Majeſty's moſt Loyal and Dutiful Subjects, the Commons in this preſent " Parliament Aſſembled, moſt humbly lay before " Your Majeſty, Our earneſt Deſire, That Your " Majeſty wou'd be pleas'd to take into Your " moſt Serious Conſideration, the Deſtructive " Methods of late taken by the French-King, againſt " the Trade, Quiet and Intereſt, of this Your " Kingdom; and particularly, the preſent Invaſion " of the Kingdom of Ireland, and Supporting Your " Majeſty's Rebellious Subjects there.

" Not doubting in the leaſt, but that, through " Your Majeſty's Wiſdom, the Alliances already " made, with ſuch as may hereafter be Concluded, " on this Occaſion, by Your Majeſty, may be effectual " to Reduce the French-King to ſuch a Condition, " that it may not be in His Power hereafter to " Violate the Peace of Chriſtendom, nor Prejudice " the Trade or Proſperity of this Your Majeſty's " Kingdom.

" To this End, We moſt-humbly Beſeech Your " Majeſty to reſt Aſſured, upon this Our Solemn " and Hearty Engagement, That when Your Ma- " jeſty ſhall think fit to Enter into a War againſt " the French-King, We will Give Your Majeſty " ſuch Aſſiſtance, in a Parliamentary-way, as may " enable Your Majeſty (under that Protection " and Bleſſing GOD Almighty has ever afford- " ded You) to Support and Go-through with " the ſame.

To which Addreſs, His Majeſty gave this Gracious Anſwer:

WILLIAM R.

The King's Anſwer.

I Receive this Addreſs, as a Mark of the Confidence You have in Me, which I take very kindly; and ſhall endeavour, by all My Actions, to Confirm You in it.

I Aſſure You, That My Own Ambition ſhall never be an Argument to encline Me to Engage in a War, that may expoſe the Nation either to Danger or Expence.

But in the preſent Caſe, I look upon the War ſo much already Declar'd, in effect, by France, againſt England; that it is not ſo properly an Act of Choice, as an Inevitable Neceſſity, in Our Own Defence.

I ſhall only tell You, That as I have ventur'd My Life, and all that is Dear to Me, to Reſcue this Nation from what it Suffer'd; I am Ready ſtill to do the ſame, in order to the Preſerving it from all its Enemies: And as I do not doubt of ſuch an Aſſiſtance from You, as ſhall be ſuitable to Your Advice to Me, To Declare War againſt a Powerful Enemy; ſo You may Rely upon Me, That no-Part of that which You ſhall Give, for the Carrying it on with Succeſs, ſhall be diverted, by Me, to any other Uſe.

The King's Declaration for the French-Proteſtants.

Under this Reſolution of a War with France, the King Publiſh'd, A Declaration for the Encouraging of French-Proteſtants to Tranſport themſelves into this Kingdom; Promiſing them not only Protection for Themſelves, Families and Eſtates, but alſo ſuch Aid and Aſſiſtance in their ſeveral and reſpective Trades, and Ways of Livelihood, as that their Living and Being in this Realm may be Comfortable and Eaſie to them: And at the ſame time, A Proclamation, Prohibiting the Importation of all ſorts of Manufactures and Commodities whatſoever, of the Growth, Production or Manufacture of France.

The Commons had Voted the Yearly Sum of One million two hundred thouſand Pounds, for the Support of the Crown; and Six hundred thouſand Pounds, for the Maintenance of the Forces to be employ'd in the Reduction of Ireland. They Prepar'd a Poll-Bill; which having Paſs'd both Houſes, His Majeſty came, on May 1ſt, Attended with the uſual Solemnity, to the Houſe of Lords, where He gave His Royal-Aſſent to, (1.) An Act for Raiſing Money, by a Poll, and otherwiſe, towards the Reducing of Ireland. (2.) An Act for Preventing Doubts and Queſtions concerning the Collecting the Publick-Revenue. (3.) An Act to Enable Younger Cook Eſq; to Sell Lands to Pay his Debts, and Provide for his Younger Children. Acts Paſſed.

The Speaker, when he Preſented the Money-Bill, made this remarkable Speech:

May it Pleaſe Your Majeſty;

Speaker's Speech to the King.

" THE Commons Aſſembled in this preſent " Parliament, have taken into their moſt " Serious Conſideration, the Deplorable Condition " of Ireland, where thoſe fatal Counſels, that did " ſo long Govern the Affairs of theſe Kingdoms, " have ſo far prevail'd, that Your Arms and Gari- " ſons there have been taken from Your Proteſtant-Subjects, and put into the Hands of Iriſh-Papiſts; and the Engliſh-Proteſtants that remain " there, left naked and defenceleſs in the Power " of thoſe Enemies, which never yet ſhew'd them " any Mercy, when they had them at an Ad- " vantage.

" Nor is it the Strength of the Iriſh-Natives " only, animated with the Zeal for Popery, and " a longing-Deſire to free themſelves from any " Dependency upon the Crown of England, that is " likely to create Your Majeſty an Oppoſition " there, but they have likewiſe caſt themſelves " under the Protection of the French-King; who " will, without doubt, employ that Force, with " which, of late Years, he hath over-aw'd Europe, " to ſupport thoſe Your Rebellious Subjects; there- " by, if poſſible, to give Your Majeſty a Diver- " ſion from Oppoſing, in other Parts of the " World, his Ambitious Deſigns of an Univerſal-Monarchy.

" The Commons therefore, ſeeing ſo evident a " Neceſſity of Reducing that Kingdom under Your " Majeſty's Obedience, and the great Expence " Your Majeſty muſt undergo, in Maintaining " ſuch a War, Do now humbly Preſent to Your " Majeſty their hearty Aſſiſtance, in a Poll-Bill, " which they look upon as the moſt Speedy and " Effectual Way of Raiſing Ready-Money on this " Occaſion; ſolemnly Engaging themſelves to " Supply Your Majeſty with ſuch future Aids, as " may be proportionable to the Charge of the " War, as long as it ſhall continue.

The King, being Well-aſſur'd of the Aſſiſtance of the Commons, acquainted the Lords with His Intention, of ſpeedily Declaring War againſt France. Whereupon Their Lordſhips, on May 7th, Unanimouſly Reſolv'd to Aſſiſt and Serve His Majeſty therein, to Their utmoſt Power. The ſame Day, Their Majeſty's Declaration againſt the French-King, was ſolemnly Proclaim'd, in a Maſterly-Form, (ſaid to be Drawn-up by Mr. Sommers.)

WIL-

1689.

Declaration of War against France.

WILLIAM R.

"IT having pleas'd Almighty GOD to make Us the Happy Inſtruments of Reſcuing theſe Nations from Great and Imminent Dangers, and to place Us upon the Throne of theſe Kingdoms; We think Ourſelves oblig'd to endeavour, to the uttermoſt, to Promote the Welfare of Our People: Which can never be effectually Secured, but by Preventing the Miſeries that threaten them from Abroad.

"When We conſider the many Unjuſt Methods the French-King hath, of late Years, taken to gratifie his Ambition: That he has not only Invaded the Territories of the Emperor and the Empire, now in Amity with Us, Laying waſte whole Countries, and Deſtroying the Inhabitants, by his Armies; but Declar'd War againſt Our Allies, without any Provocation, in manifeſt Violation of the Treaties Confirm'd by the Guaranty of the Crown of England; We can do no leſs than Join with Our Allies, in Oppoſing the Deſigns of the French-King, as the Diſturber of the Peace, and the Common-Enemy of the Chriſtian World.

"And beſides the Obligations We lie under, by Treaties with Our Allies, which are a ſufficient Juſtification of Us for Taking up Arms at this time, ſince They have Call'd upon Us ſo to do, the many Injuries done to Us, and to Our Subjects, without any Reparation by the French-King, are ſuch, that (however of late Years they were not taken Notice of, for Reaſons well-known to the World, nevertheleſs) We will not paſs them over, without a Publick and Juſt Reſentment of ſuch Outrages.

"It is not long ſince the French took Licences from the Engliſh-Governor of Newfoundland, to Fiſh in the Seas upon that Coaſt, and pay'd a Tribute for ſuch Licences, as an Acknowledgment of the Sole-Right of the Crown of England to that Iſland: And yet of late, the Encroachments of the French upon Our ſaid Iſland, and Our Subjects Trade and Fiſhery, have been more like the Invaſions of an Enemy, than becoming Friends, who enjoy'd the Advantages of that Trade only by Permiſſion.

"But that the French-King ſhould Invade Our Charibbee-Iſlands, and Poſſeſs himſelf of Our Territories of the Province of New-York, and of Hudſon's-Bay, in a Hoſtile manner, Seizing Our Forts, Burning Our Subjects Houſes, and Enriching his People with the Spoil of their Goods and Merchandizes, detaining ſome of Our Subjects under the Hardſhip of Impriſonment, cauſing others to be inhumanely Kill'd, and driving the reſt to Sea in a ſmall Veſſel, without Food and Neceſſaries to ſupport them, are Actions not becoming even an Enemy: And yet he was ſo far from Declaring himſelf ſo, that at that very Time he was Negotiating here in England, by his Miniſters, a Treaty of Neutrality and Good-Correſpondence in America.

"The Proceedings of the French-King, againſt Our Subjects in Europe, are ſo Notorious, that We ſhall not need to Enlarge upon them: His Countenancing the Seizure of Engliſh-Ships by French-Privateers, Forbidding the Importation of great-Part of the Product and Manufactures of Our Kingdom, and impoſing Exorbitant Cuſtoms upon the reſt, notwithſtanding the vaſt Advantage he and the French-Nation reap by their Commerce with England, are ſufficient Evidence of his Deſign to Deſtroy the Trade, and conſequently to Ruine the Navigation, upon which the Wealth and Safety of this Nation very much depends.

"The Right of the Flag, Inherent in the Crown of England, has been Diſputed, by his Orders, in Violation of Our Sovereignty of the Narrow-Seas, which, in all Ages, has been Aſſerted by Our Predeceſſors, and We are reſolv'd to Maintain, for the Honour of Our Crown, and of the Engliſh Nation. 1689.

"But that which muſt nearly touch Us, is, his Unchriſtian Proſecution of many of Our Engliſh Proteſtant-Subjects in France, for Matters of Religion, contrary to the Law of Nations, and expreſs Treaties, forcing them to Abjure their Religion, by ſtrange and unuſual Cruelties, and Impriſoning ſome of the Maſters and Sea-men of Our Merchant-Ships, and Condemning others to the Gallies, upon pretence of having on-Board, either ſome of his own miſerable Proteſtant-Subjects, or their Effects. And laſtly, As he has, for ſome Years laſt paſt, endeavour'd, by Inſinuations, and Promiſes of Aſſiſtance, to Overthrow the Government of England; ſo now, by Open and Violent Methods, and the Actual Invaſion of Our Kingdom of Ireland, in Support of Our Subjects in Arms, and in Rebellion againſt Us, he is promoting the utter Extirpation of Our Good and Loyal Subjects in that Our Kingdom.

"Being therefore thus neceſſitated to take up Arms, and relying on the Help of Almighty GOD, in Our Juſt Undertaking; We have thought fit to Declare, and do hereby Declare War againſt the French-King; and that We will, in Conjunction with Our Allies, vigorouſly Proſecute the ſame by Sea and Land, (ſince he hath unrighteouſly Begun it;) being aſſured of the hearty Concurrence and Aſſiſtance of Our Subjects, in Support of ſo Good a Cauſe: Hereby Willing and Requiring Our General of Our Forces, Our Commiſſioners for Executing the Office of High-Admiral, Our Lieutenants of Our ſeveral Counties, Governors of Our Forts and Gariſons, and all other Officers and Soldiers under them, by Sea and Land, to Do and Execute all Acts of Hoſtility, in the Proſecution of this War, againſt the French-King, his Vaſſals and Subjects, and to Oppoſe their Attempts: Willing and Requiring all Our Subjects to take Notice of the ſame, whom We henceforth ſtrictly Forbid to hold any Correſpondence or Communication with the ſaid French-King, or his Subjects. And becauſe there are remaining in Our Kingdoms, many of the Subjects of the French-King; We do Declare, and give Our Royal Word, That All ſuch of the French-Nation as ſhall Demean themſelves Dutifully towards Us, and not Correſpond with Our Enemies, ſhall be Safe in their Perſons and Eſtates, and Free from all Moleſtation and Trouble of any kind.

Given at Our Court at Hampton-Court, the 7th Day of May, 1689. In the Firſt Year of Our Reign.

Engagement of Engliſh & French Fleets in Bantry-Bay.

Some Days before this Proclamation, the War was effectually Declar'd, by an Engagement between the Engliſh and French Fleets in Bantry-Bay: Of which this Account was given, from on-Board Their Majeſties Ship the Elizabeth, the 2d of May, 1689. "Admiral Herbert having Refitted, at Milford-Haven, the Damages which ſome of his Ships had ſuſtain'd, by Ill-Weather, on the Coaſt of Ireland, intended to have gone directly to Breſt; but the Wind coming Eaſterly, which might bring the French-Fleet out, he ſtood, on the 24th paſt, over to Kingſale, which he judg'd the likelieſt way to meet 'em. On the 29th, our Scouts made a Signal, That they Diſcover'd a Fleet keeping their Wind: Which made us likewiſe keep ours all Night, to hinder their getting into Kingſale. The 30th, we heard the Enemy were gone into Baltimore, being 44 Sail: Whereupon we bore away towards that Place, but found

"there

1689. " there no Signs of them; but in the Evening our " Scouts got Sight of them again to the Weſtward " of Cape-Clear. We Steered after them, and " found they were got into the Bantry; We lay " off of the Bay all Night, and the next Morning " by Break of Day ſtood in, where we found " them at an Anchor. They got preſently under " Sail, and bore down upon us in a Line compoſed " of Twenty-Eight Men of War and Five Fireſhips. " When they came within Muſquet-ſhot of the " Defiance, the Headmoſt of our Ships, the French- " Admiral put out the Signal of Battle, which " was begun by them, Firing Great and " Small Shot at the Defiance, and the reſt as we " came in our Line. We made ſeveral Boards to " gain the Wind, or at leaſt to engage them clo- " ſer; but finding that way of working very diſ- " advantageous, Admiral Herbert ſtood off to Sea, " as well to have got our Ships into a Line, as to " have gained the Wind of the Enemy, but found " them ſo cautious in bearing down, that we could " never get an Opportunity to do it; ſo conti- " nued Battering upon a Stretch till Five in the " Afternoon, when the French-Admiral tacked " from us, and ſtood farther into the Bay. Admi- " ral Herbert's Ship and ſome of the reſt being " diſabled in their Rigging, we could not follow " them; but we continued ſome Time after be- " fore the Bay, and our Admiral gave them a " Gun at parting. In this Action Captain George " Aylmer, of the Portland, with One Lieutenant " and Ninety-four Seamen were Killed, and about " Two Hundred and Fifty Wounded, as appears " by a Survey taken after the Fight, and our " Ships received little or no Damage except in " their Sail and Rigging. As for our Officers and " Seamen this Right muſt be done them, That " they behaved themſelves with all the Courage " and Chearfulneſs that could be expected from " the Braveſt Men: And on the other Side, with- " out leſſening the Enemy, it may be ſaid, that " they either wanted Courage or Skill to make uſe " of the Advantage of the Place, the Wind, their " Fireſhips, and their being at leaſt double our " Force; for they had Eighteen Ships, the leaſt " whereof was as Big as the Elizabeth; and it ſo " happened, that at the Time of this Engagement, " Admiral Herbert had with him but Eight Third " Rates, Ten Fourth Rates, One Fifth Rate, and " Two Tenders.

" We are now returning towards Scilly, where " the Rendezvous is appointed for our Fleet, which " having got together, we are in hopes to make a " Second Attempt upon the Enemy.

King William's Care of the Fleet.

A Fortnight after His Majeſty went to Portſmouth, both to haſten the Re-fitting of the Fleet, and to diſtribute Rewards to thoſe Officers and Soldiers, who had diſtinguiſh'd themſelves in the late Engagement. Admiral Herbert was declar'd, and ſoon after made Earl of Torrington; Captain John Aſhby, Commander of the Defiance; and Captain Cloudeſly Shovel of the Edgar, received the Honour of Knighthood, and each Seaman a Gratuity of Ten Shillings, which amounted to the Sum of Twenty Six Thouſand Pounds, with a Bounty ſuper-added to the Relicts of thoſe who had loſt their Lives. Some report that when the King receiv'd the News of this Sea-Fight, He ſaid, That ſuch an Action was neceſſary in the Beginning of a War, but it would be raſh in the Courſe of it.

The King's Appointment of Judges.

In the mean-time to provide for Peace at Home, His Majeſty took Care to conſtitute ſuch Judges as were moſt Eminent for Learning and Integrity, and who in the moſt Difficult Times had bravely ſtood up in Defence of the Laws and Liberties of the People. Sir John Holt was made Lord Chief-Juſtice of the King's-Bench; Sir William Dolben, Sir William Gregory, Giles Eyres, Eſq; Juſtices of the ſame Court; Sir Henry Pollexfen, Lord Chief-Juſtice of the Common-Pleas: Sir John Powel, Thomas Rokeby, Eſq; Peyton Ventris, Eſq; Juſtices of the ſame; Sir Robert Atkyns, Lord Chief-Baron of the Exchequer; Sir Edward Nevil, Nicholas Letchmore, Eſq; John Turton, Eſq, Barons of the ſame; John Trenchard, Eſq; Chief-Juſtice of Cheſter; Sir George Treby, Attorney-General, and John Sommers, Eſq Sollicitor-General to His Majeſty. Juſt before this Advancement, on May 2d. His Majeſty called by his Writ, Sir Henry Pollexfen, Kt. Nicholas Letchmore, Thomas Rokeby, John Thurbarne, William Wogan, William Powlet, Nathaniel Bond, Giles Eyres, Henry Hatſel, John Blencowe, Peyton Ventris, John Powel, Roger Belwood, John Tremain, John Trenchard, and John Turton, Eſqrs; to take upon 'em the State and Degree of Serjeants at Law, who gave Rings with this ſeaſonable Motto, Venicendo Reſtituit Rem. 1689.

Difference between the Two Houſes about Taxing.

To return to the Parliament. To defray the extraordinary Expences of the War, the Commons had Paſs'd an Additional Poll-Bill, which being ſent up to the Lords for their Concurrence, their Lordſhips on May 9th. added a Clauſe to it, for Rating and Taxing the Peers by Commiſſioners of their own Naming, appointing a Collector to receive the Rates and Taxes of the Peers, and freeing their Perſons from Impriſonment. To this Clauſe the Commons Diſagreed; 1, Becauſe the Bill in Queſtion Taxed Commoners only. 2. Becauſe the Poll-Bill already paſſed, had ſufficiently provided for Taxing all the Nobility, to which the Lords had conſented. On the other Hand the Peers inſiſted on their Clauſe, alledging firſt, " That it is the Common Courſe of Parliaments " to paſs Explanatory Acts, if any thing has been " omitted, or ill-expreſſed, in any other Act " Paſſed in the ſame Seſſion, which was the pre- " ſent Caſe. 2. That the Houſe of Commons had " in this Bill taken Care of the Serjeants-Inns, " and the Inns of Court and Chancery, That they " ſhould be rated by their own Members; There- " fore the Peers much more ought to be rated " by none but thoſe who are of their own Houſe. " 3. That the Houſe of Peers, out of their extraor- " dinary Zeal for the Reducing of Ireland, (the " Poll-Bill coming up ſo late to 'em from the " Houſe of Commons, that they had not Time to " deliberate upon every Part of it did make this " Omiſſion, which for that Reaſon only ought " not to turn to their Prejudice, it being their " undoubted Right which had been preſerved in " all former Poll-Bills, and particularly in the " laſt 29. Car. II. The Proviſo in that Bill being " conceiv'd in the ſame Form, with the Clauſe " now offered by their Lordſhips". To theſe Reaſons the Commons anſwer'd, That the admitting of their Lordſhips Amendment would in a manner Repeal the Bill for the Tax, and therefore they muſt inſiſt on their Diſagreement to it. The Peers being as poſitive in Adhering to their Clauſe, the Commons let drop the Additional Poll-Bill, and in ſtead of that made and Paſs'd a Bill for a Grant to their Majeſties of an Aid of Twelve Pence in the Pound for One Year.

Acts Paſſed.

On Saturday, May 11. His Majeſty came to the Houſe of Peers, and gave the Royal Aſſent to (1.) An Act for the better Securing the Government by Diſarming Papiſts and Reputed Papiſts. (2.) An Act that the Simoniacal Promotion of one Perſon may not prejudice another. (3.) An Act for Rectifying a Miſtake in a certain Act of this preſent Parliament, for the amoving Papiſts from the Cities of London and Weſtminſter. (4.) An Act for the Naturalization of Henry de Naſſau, and others. (5.) An Act for Annulling and making Void the Attainder of Algernoon Sidney, Eſq;

Proceedings of the Commons.

The Commons had appointed a Committee to make an Eſtimate of Forfeitures, Ground-Rents, and Additional-Exciſe, in order to raiſe further Aids

1689. Aids to carry on the War. On May 15th, Mr. Papillon Reported, That as to Forfeitures, the Committee had perused the Lists delivered in by the Members of the several Counties, and on Examination did find great Difficulties in the Matter, as, Whether some that were Named had acted in their Offices? Whether others were not insolvent and unable to Pay; Whether others had not qualified themselves, and whether there were not several omitted; but that on Consideration of the whole, it was their Opinion that the Forfeitures in the several Counties might produce Three Hundred Forty Eight Thousand Pounds, without including the Counties of Bedford, Lincoln, and Cardigan, there being no List brought in of those Counties: That as to the Additional Excise, it was the Opinion of the Committee, that Nine-Pence per Barrel might produce One Hundred and Twenty Thousand Pounds per Annum; but that as to the Ground-Rents, the Committee could not as yet find out Means to come to any probable way of making a right Estimate, but they were endeavouring to do it.

ords Debates upon their Privileges.

A Committee of Privileges had been appointed in the House of Peers, and upon Examination of the Case of the Earl of Devonshire, they reported their Opinion thus; That the Proceedings against the said Earl in the Court of King's-Bench in Easter-Term, in the Third Year of King James II. upon an Information of an Assault upon Mr. Culpeper, wherein his Lordship's Plea of Privilege of Parliament was over-ruled, and he was Fin'd Thirty Thousand Pounds, and thereupon committed to the King's-Bench in Execution, was a great Violation of the Privilege of the Peers of England; and likewise that those Judges who sat in the said Court when the said Judgment was given, and the said Commitment made, should be required to Attend the Bar of this House, to answer for the great Offence which they had committed thereby. Hereupon the Lords Order'd, That Sir Robert Wright, who, upon the withdrawing of King James, had been sent Prisoner to Newgate, Sir Richard Holloway, Mr. Bradbury, Mr. Pettit, and Mr. Justice Powel, should Attend their House on May 6. which they did accordingly; and being asked what they had to say for themselves in this Matter, Mr. Justice Powel said, It was his great Misfortune, that He was misguided by some Books which he look'd on as Authorities, and which he found by their Lordships Judgments were not so; and he humbly begg'd their Lordships and the Earl of Devonshire's Pardon: That as to the Fine he thought it exorbitant, and look'd upon Three Thousand Pounds Fine enough, and that his Silence in that Business was his greatest Fault, for which he also begg'd Pardon. Sir Robert Wright alledged, That as to the Breach of Privilege they were misguided by Precedents; and as to the Fine, which was usually set (according to Men's Quality and Estate) it came from the Puny-Judge Thirty Thousand Pounds, and so to him last, according to the Course of the Court; and if he was mistaken he begg'd Pardon, for he never had the least Disrespect to the Earl of Devonshire. Then Sir Richard Holloway said, That he, as Second Judge, pronounced the Fine Thirty Thousand Pounds, which was set Nemine Contradicente: That if a lesser Fine had been proposed, he should have accepted it, and begg'd my Lord Devonshire's Pardon, and submitted all to their Lordships. After this Examination, Notice was given to the King's Council, if they had any thing to offer, Whether a Peer of this Realm might by Law be committed in Execution for a Fine? The said Council did accordingly attend, but offered nothing on that Point; Wherefore, upon full Consideration of the several Cases and Precedents, wherein the Privilege of the Peers have been concern'd, the Lords Spiritual and Temporal did, on May. 15. Declare and Adjudge, That the Court of King's-Bench, in over-ruling the Earl of Devonshire's Plea of Privilege of Parliament, and forcing him to Plead over in Chief, it being within the usual Time of Privilege, did thereby commit a manifest Breach of Privilege; and that the Fine of Thirty Thousand Pounds impos'd by the Court of King's-Bench upon the said Earl, was excessive and exorbitant, and against Magna Charta, the Common Right of the Subject, and the Law of the Land; and that no Peer of this Realm, at any time ought to be committed for Non-Payment of a Fine to the King.

1689. Resolution of the Lords.

On the 9th of May, the Commons had sent up a Bill to the Lords, For Declaring the Rights and Liberties of the Subject, and Setling the Succession of the Crown, which their Lordships having consider'd, they thought the latter Part of it Defective, no Mention being made in it of her Electoral Highness the Princess Sophia, Dutchess of Hanover; and thought fit, amongst other Amendments, to add a Proviso in Her Highness's Favour. The Bill thus amended, was returned to the Commons on May 25. where a certain Party was so prevailing, that the House disagreed to their Lordships Proviso, some of them alledging, That a Parliament of England had never determin'd the Degrees of Succession beyond Two or Three Persons; That the mentioning the House of Hanover would give an Opportunity to Foreigners of intermedling too far in the Affairs of this Nation; And Lastly, That before the Crown should devolve on the Princess Sophia, some of the Catholick Princes, who were nearest in Blood, and who by this Clause were to be excluded, might turn Protestants. The King, who wish'd nothing more earnestly than to see the Crown Setled in the Protestant Line, us'd his utmost Endeavours to bring the Commons to a Compliance with the Lords; declaring in Council, That his Queen, and both the Prince and Princess of Denmark desir'd it as well as himself. The Lords likewise warmly insisted on their Clause, alledging on July 15th, " That tho' in the Instrument of" fered to their Majesties, the Limitation went no
" farther than to their Persons, yet in Law, which " has Respect to all succeeding Ages, and that Set-
" tles for ever the Liberties of the Subject, they " thought it reasonable to carry the Limitation of
" the Succession of the Crown farther than was ne" cessary in that Instrument; in which the Crown
" was offered to their Majesties, and that had " no other View but of the Succession of their " Posterity: That they could see no Danger nor " any ill Consequence that might follow a further
" Limitation, but very much to the contrary:
" For 1. This Secured the Nation effectually from
" the Danger of having any Papist to Reign in it
" at any Time hereafter, since of such a Number
" of Papists as stood next the Crown in the Li-
" neal Succession, some might be prevailed on to " make a Show of changing their Religion, if they " had a Prospect of Succeeding to the Crown upon
" it, and no Danger being so great as the hav" ing One who is a pretended Protestant, but in " Truth a concealed Papist, to Reign over us, the " most effectual Way to Secure our Religion, was
" to declare the Succession in a Family that was " known to be Protestant. 2. It was the Interest
" of England at present to do Right to that Great
" House, by Limiting the Succession according to
" the Proviso; for since this Limitation had been " proposed, if it should be now laid aside, it would " look like Excluding of that House, which might " provoke 'em to take Resolutions, that might be

Debates upon the Succession.

These Reasons having been deliver'd to the Commons, and several Conferences having passed between Both Houses without any Effect, Heaven seem'd to Interpose, and to let fall these Diffe-

1689. rences, by bleſſing Her Royal-Highneſs (the Princeſs of Denmark) with a Son, Born on the 24th of July, and Chriſten'd, on the 27th, by the Name of William; His Majeſty, and the Earl of Dorſet (on behalf of the King of Denmark) being God-fathers, and the Marchioneſs of Halifax God-mother. At the ſame time, His Majeſty conferr'd the Title of Duke of Glocester on the Royal-Infant, whoſe Auſpicious Birth contributed much to diſſipate the Fears of a Popiſh-Succeſſor.

Acts Paſſed. On Friday May 24th, His Majeſty came to the Houſe of Lords, and, with uſual Solemnity, gave the Royal-Aſſent to, (1.) An Act for Exempting Their Majeſties Proteſtant-Subjects Diſſenting from the Church of England, from the Penalties of certain Laws. (2.) An Act for Annulling and Making void the Attainder of Alicia Liſle, Widow. (3.) An Act for the Sale or Leaſing the Capital-Meſſuage, late Henry Coventry's Eſq; in Pickadilly. And on Tueſday May 28th, His Majeſty came again to the Houſe of Lords, and gave His Royal-Aſſent to, (1.) An Act for Impowering Their Majeſties to Commit, without Bail, ſuch Perſons as they ſhall find juſt Cauſe to Suſpect are Conſpiring againſt the Government. (2.) An Act for Building on Arundel-Grounds.

Judgment againſt Oates not Revers'd. On May 31ſt, the Houſe of Lords, having heard the Opinion of all the Judges, concerning the Illegality of Two Judgments given againſt Titus Oates, upon the Point of Perjury, for which he had brought his Writs of Error; the Houſe had this main-Queſtion Propoſed, Whether the ſaid Two Judgments ſhou'd be Revers'd? Which being Reſolv'd in the Negative, and the ſaid Judgments Confirm'd, Thirteen Lords Enter'd their Diſſents, upon theſe Reaſons: 1*ſt*, "Becauſe the King's-Bench, being "a Temporal-Court, made it part of their Judg- "ment, That Titus Oates, being a Clerk, ſhou'd, "for his Perjuries, be Diveſted of his Canonical "and Prieſtly Habit; which is a Matter wholly "out of their Power, belonging to the Eccleſiaſtical-Courts only. 2*dly*, Becauſe the ſaid Judgments "are Barbarous, Inhumane, and Unchriſtian; "and there is no Precedents to Warrant the Puniſh- "ments of Whipping, and Committing to Priſon "for Life, for the Crime of Perjury, which yet "were but Part of the Puniſhment inflicted upon "him. 3*dly*, Becauſe the particular Matters upon "which the Indictments were found, were the Points "Objected againſt Oates's Teſtimony, in ſeveral "of the Tryals, which were allow'd to be Good "and Credible Witneſſes, though Teſtify'd againſt "him by moſt of the ſame Perſons who Witneſs'd "againſt him upon theſe Indictments. 4*thly*, Be- "cauſe this wou'd be an Encouragement, and an "Allowance for giving the like Cruel, Barbarous "and Illegal Puniſhments hereafter, unleſs thoſe "Judgments were Revers'd. 5*thly*, Becauſe Sir John "Holt, Sir Henry Pollexfen, the Lords-Chief-Juſtices, "Sir Robert Atkyns (Chief-Baron,) with Six "Judges more, for theſe and many other Reaſons, "did, before that Houſe, ſolemnly deliver their "Opinions, and Unanimouſly Declare, That the "ſaid Judgments were contrary to Law and An- "cient Practice; and therefore Erroneous, and "ought to be Revers'd. And laſtly, Becauſe it "was contrary to the Declaration of Rights, on the "12th of February laſt, wherein it doth appear, "That Exceſſive Bail ought not to be requir'd, nor "Exceſſive Fines impos'd, nor Cruel and Unuſual "Puniſhments inflicted.

This Proteſtation workt ſo powerfully in the Houſe of Lords, that the following Day, their Lordſhips, after Hearing Councel at the Bar, to Argue the Errors aſſign'd by Oates, did Order and Adjudge, That the Judgment given againſt the ſaid Oates, ſhou'd be Revers'd: And Leave was given for the bringing in a Bill for the Securing Perſons, hereafter, from the Prejudice which might come from his Teſtimony. A Bill of Reverſal Paſs'd the Lower-Houſe: And upon a Second Reading in the Upper, there were ſeveral Amendments made, and a Proviſo inſerted, whereby it was Declar'd, That until the Matters for which Titus Oates was Committed for Perjury, were Heard and Determin'd in Parliament, the ſaid Oates ſhould not be receiv'd in any Court or Cauſe whatſoever, to be a Witneſs. Againſt which Proviſo and Amendments, a Proteſtation was Enter'd, by the Earls of Oxford, Suffolk, Monmouth, Montague, Macclesfield, Bedford, Stamford, and Suſſex, and by the Lords Newport, Berkley, Cornwallis, Paget, and Herbert. When the Bill was ſent back to the Commons, they Diſagreed to the Amendments. Upon which a memorable Conference began, between the Two Houſes, on July 29th, which occaſion'd great Heats, that might have riſen into greater Flames, if the Parliament had not been ſuddenly Adjourn'd; and all that Oates was able to obtain in this Seſſion, was only, on June 6th, an Addreſs from the Lords, at the Commons Deſire, Requeſting His Majeſty, "That whereas Titus Oates, Clerk, had already "receiv'd a ſevere Puniſhment, for the Perjury "whereof he had been formerly Convicted, and "ſome of the ſaid Puniſhments wou'd ſtill be con- "tinu'd upon him, unleſs they ſhou'd be Remitted "by His Majeſty; His Majeſty wou'd be gra- "ciouſly pleas'd to Grant His Pardon to the ſaid "Oates." The King readily Comply'd with the Lords Deſire; and moreover, aſſoon as, by Their Lordſhips Order, Oates was Diſcharg'd from his Confinement, His Majeſty receiv'd him into his Protection, and allow'd him a conſiderable Penſion; which occaſion'd various Reflections.

The Judgment againſt Oates, at laſt Agreed, by the Lords, to be Revers'd:

The King Pardon a Requeſt o the Lords

The Lord Conſider of the State of the Na tion.

On June 15th, the Lords having Conſider'd, in a Grand-Committee, the State and Condition of the Kingdom, and what Means to uſe, for Securing the Nation, againſt the Deſigns of the Papiſts, and the Power of the French-King; Reſolv'd upon an Addreſs to be made to His Majeſty, "To put the "Iſles of Wight, Jerſey and Guernſey, Scilly, Dover- "Caſtle, and other Places which might be expos'd "to the Enemy, into a Poſture of Defence: That "Papiſts might be Diſarm'd, their Horſes taken "from 'em, and they not be permitted to Travel "above Five Miles from their Houſes, and that "Care be taken to prevent Proteſtants Concealing "or Owning Papiſts Horſes." At the ſame time, Their Lordſhips Impower'd the Committee, to look into the Miſcarriages in Ireland, and to ſend for Perſons and Papers, for their Information. This Committee Drew-up an Addreſs, according to their Directions; and having acquainted the Houſe, That they cou'd not come to a full Diſcovery of the Miſcarriages of Ireland, without a Sight of the Minute-Books of the Committee for Iriſh-Affairs, to the 1ſt of May laſt; the Lords Order'd thereupon, That another Addreſs be Preſented to the King, Deſiring that the ſaid Minute-Book might be communicated to the Committee. His Majeſty's Anſwer to this Addreſs, on June 18th, was, That He wou'd Conſider of it. Which obſtructed the Proceedings of the Committee for near a Month, till the Commons, in the mean-time, Voted, That thoſe Perſons who had been the Occaſion of Delaying the ſending Relief to Ireland, and had Adviſ'd the King to Defer the giving Leave for ſome Members of the Houſe of Lords to Inſpect the Minute-Books of the Committee for Iriſh-Affairs, were Enemies to the King and Kingdom. And they were farther Debating to Addreſs the the King, for the Removing the Marqueſſes of Halifax and Carmarthen from His Council. Upon this, His Majeſty, on July 16th, acquainted the Lords, by the Earl of Nottingham, and the Commons, by Mr. Comptroller, That He gave Leave that a Committee of the Upper-Houſe might Inſpect the Book, according to their Deſire. This Book not being ſufficient to diſcover the Miſcarriages of Ireland, the Lords, on July 29th, Order'd the Earls of Shrewſbury

1689. bury and Nottingham to Addreſs His Majeſty, That He wou'd be pleas'd to give Order, That the Witneſſes in relation to Ireland, ſince His Majeſty's taking the Adminiſtration of the Government upon Him, to the time the Council-Books began, might be communicated to the Committee of their Houſe. Upon the two Earls delivering this Deſire of the Houſe, His Majeſty Anſwer'd, That there were no Minutes of the Iriſh-Affairs, in the Time mention'd by Their Lordſhips.

On Saturday June 22d, His Majeſty came to the Houſe of Lords, and ſending for the Commons, gave His Royal-Aſſent to, (1.) An Act for a Grant to Their Majeſties of an Aid of Twelve-pence in the Pound for One Year, for the neceſſary Defence of their Realms. (2.) An Act for Enabling Lords-Commiſſioners for the Great-Seal, to Execute the Office of Lord-Chancellor or Lord-Keeper. 3. An Act for Reviving two former Acts for the Exporting of Leather. 4. An Act for the Exportation of Beer, Ale, Cyder and Mum. 5. An Act to Make-good a Recovery, ſuffered by the Earl of Peterborough and Lord Mordant. 6. An Act for Reverſing the Attainder of Henry Corniſh Eſq; late Alderman of the City of London. 7. An Act to Enable Robert Penwarne to Sell Lands, to Pay his Brothers and Siſters Portions, and alſo to Pay Debts. 8. An Act to Enable Theodore Bathurſt to make a Jointure for his Wife, and to Charge Moneys on Part of his Eſtate in Yorkſhire. 9. An Act for the better Aſſuring the Manor of Silton, and divers other Lands and Tenements in Silton in the County of Salop, unto Joſeph Soley Gent. and his Heirs. 10. An Act for the Naturalization of Anne Aſtley, and others.

Is Paſſed.

The Speaker, upon Preſenting the Money-Bill, Addreſs'd himſelf thus to His Majeſty:

The Speaker's Speech to the King.

" THE Commons in this preſent Parliament " Aſſembled, do with all Duty and Humility " acknowledge Your Majeſty's great Care, for the " Protection of the People, in that Your Majeſty " hath made it one of the Firſt Acts of Your Reign, " to Declare War againſt the French-King, and to " ſeek Reparation for the Loſſes and Injuries Your " Subjects have ſuſtain'd from that Nation.

" If we conſider the Balance of Trade be- " tween the Two Kingdoms, we ſhall find the " French-King, of late Years, continually loading " the Engliſh-Manufactures with New Duties and " Impoſitions; thereby Prohibiting, in effect, all " Commerce in his Dominions, but for Ready- " Money.

" If we Conſider our Laws and Liberties, he " hath always Aſſiſted and Encourag'd thoſe that " have deſign'd their Subverſion. If we Conſider " our Religion; the Miſeries he hath inflicted upon " his Own Subjects of the ſame Profeſſion, do ſuffi- " ciently demonſtrate how great an Enemy he is " to Ours: And Whoever look upon the preſent " State of Europe, and ſee the Injuries made upon " Your Majeſty's Allies, the horrible Devaſtations " of their Countries, and the open Supporting " Your Majeſty's Rebellious Subjects, muſt needs " confeſs, That the War which Your Majeſty hath " Declared againſt France, is at this time not only " Juſt, but Neceſſary.

" To this War, as Your Dutiful and Loyal " Commons did humbly offer their Advice and " Aſſiſtance, before Your Majeſty Enter'd into it; " ſo They are now come to Preſent Your Majeſty " with a Supply towards the Carrying it on: " Humbly Deſiring Your Majeſty to reſt Aſſured, " That they ſhall never be wanting to expoſe both " their Lives and Eſtates, in Defence of Your Ma- " jeſty, againſt all Your Enemies.

Attempts for Reſtoring King James.

Several Letters from King James, ſome of them Written with his own Hand, and Directed to divers Perſons in London, and in the Country, having been Intercepted at Leverpoole, and ſent to Court, His Majeſty communicated the ſame to the Parliament: And becauſe, among other Enigmatical Expreſſions, mention was made in them, of Contraband-Goods ready to be Shipt-off, in order to be Run into ſuch Places where they might not be Seiz'd by Cuſtom-Houſe-Officers; which ſufficiently diſcover'd the Deſign of an Invaſion; Mr. Hambden, who at that time happen'd to be Chair-man of the Committee of the Whole Houſe, repreſented the imminent Danger that threaten'd the Kingdom, and what Difficulties His Majeſty lay under, to prevent it, for want of Money, and therefore Mov'd for a farther Supply. This Motion, from a Privy-Councellor, and at a time when the Houſe was going to Adjourn, was thought very Unpolitick and prepoſterous; and was ſo far from being backt by any Member, that it rather occaſion'd ſome ſharp Reflections: For Mr. Hambden, among the Dangers to which the Nation was expos'd, having nam'd that of falling into the Hands of the French and Iriſh, Mr. S—— Mov'd, to add the Dutch: And Mr. Garraway, though One of the Well-affected, ſaid, " That they had given Money enough for " that Year; and if they had thought there had " been Occaſion for more, they wou'd have pre- " vented the King's Demands: That it was not " the Want of Money, but the Ill-Conduct of thoſe " that had the Management of Affairs, that caus'd " the Difficulties the Government lay under: That " the Miſcarriages, in not Aſſiſting the Proteſtants " of Ireland, had been of ſo Ill-Conſequence, that, " if not ſpeedily Remedy'd, the Houſe wou'd be " oblig'd to take Notice of them." When Mr. Garraway had done ſpeaking, Mr. Howe ſtood up, and ſaid, " Their preſent Dangers, proceeded " from their not Addreſſing the King to Remove " His Evil-Counſellors;" as he himſelf had Mov'd, not long before. However, the Houſe having taken the Intercepted Letters into Conſideration, Reſolv'd to Addreſs His Majeſty, To Deſire Him to Secure all Papiſts of Note, and to Diſarm and Take-away the Horſes from the reſt: And, as a Conſequence of this Affair, a Bill was brought in, for Attainting ſeveral Perſons in Rebellion againſt Their Majeſties.

1689.

The King communicated the ſame Letters and Papers to the City of London. Upon which the Lord-Mayor, attended with the Sheriffs, on June 22d, Preſented to His Majeſty this Good Addreſs:

Good Addreſs from the City of London.

" WE Your Majeſty's moſt Dutiful and " Loyal Subjects, the Lord-Mayor, Alder- " men and Commons of the City of London, in " Common-Council Aſſembled, being deeply ſenſible " of Your Majeſty's great Care, and tender Regard " for our Religion, Laws and Liberties, and Your " particular Favour and Condeſcenſion to this " City, do render Your Majeſty our moſt humble " Thanks, for vouchſafing to communicate to us " the ſeveral Letters, and other Papers, which have " been now Read in this Common-Council, mani- " feſting the Progreſs of Your Enemies, in Your " Kingdom of Ireland, and alſo Diſcovering a " Conſpiracy within this Kingdom of England, to " Aid and Abet Your ſaid Enemies, in their " Deſign to Invade and bring the War upon this " Kingdom.

" And We moſt humbly beg Leave to Aſſure " Your Majeſty, That We will, as far as our " Power extends, oppoſe ourſelves to, and ſuppreſs " all Deſigns of that nature, and will Search after, " Diſarm, Seize, Secure, and bring to Juſtice, all " Perſons concern'd therein, or contributing thereto: " And We are Unanimouſly, Firmly and Unal- " terably, Reſolv'd and Determin'd to Stand by, " Defend and Maintain Your Majeſty, and Your " Government, with the uttermoſt Hazard and " Expence of Our Lives and Eſtates, againſt all Inſolence of the French-Papiſts.

About the ſame time, the French-Papiſts, taking Advantage of the Countenance given to the Proteſtants of that Nation, became very Inſolent, publickly Traducing the Preſent Government, and diſperſing ſeveral ſorts of Libels, and Seditious Papers. The Houſe of Lords being inform'd of their audacious Behaviour, and ſuſpecting they might proceed to more dangerous Attempts, Order'd, on June 14th, "That an Addreſs be "Preſented to His Majeſty, deſiring He wou'd "Iſſue-out His Proclamation, That no French-Papiſt "might come into Whitehall, St. James's, or "St. James's-Park; and that all French-Papiſts, "that were not Houſholders or Merchants, ſhou'd "leave the Kingdom within Six Weeks, and all "others within Six Months, under the Pain of "being Proſecuted as Alien-Enemies, according to "Law." The Lords of the White-Staffs having Preſented this Addreſs, His Majeſty Anſwer'd, He wou'd ſpedily give Order therein: But a ſhort time after, on June 25th, the Lord-Chamberlain acquainted the Houſe, "That His Majeſty finding, "upon farther Conſideration, That to Baniſh all "French-Papiſts, might be Diſadvantageous to the "Nation, they Trading to other Countries which "were His Majeſty's Allies; and beſides, His Ma-"jeſty having promiſed to protect them, whilſt "they liv'd peaceably here, thought fit to ſuſpend "the Iſſuing ſuch a Proclamation, until he had "ask'd their Lordſhips further Opinion in that "Matter." Upon Conſideration of this Meſſage, the Peers thought fit to leave that Affair to His Majeſty's Diſcretion: Many of them having heard the King often Declare, That He came over to Deliver the Proteſtants, and not to Perſecute the Romaniſts. And indeed, not only Foreigners, but Engliſh-Papiſts, were us'd with ſo much Clemency, that they too were really Gainers by the Revolution: Not only in being exempted from thoſe Publick Appearances which, in the late Reign, had been very Troubleſome and Expenſive to them; but ev'n in a Protection of their Perſons and Eſtates from the Fury of the People, to which they had, in great part, been ſacrific'd, if King William wou'd but have conniv'd at it.

Publiſhers of the Declaration of King James.

Whilſt the Lords were buſie about the French-Papiſts, the Commons were Drawing up Articles of High-Treaſon, againſt Sir Adam Blare, Capt. Henry Vaughan, Capt. Frederick Mole, and John Eliot and Robert Gray Doctors in Phyſick, for Publiſhing and Diſperſing the Declaration of King James, which he Publiſh'd in Ireland, May 8th, and Directed, To all his Loving Subjects in the Kingdom of England. When theſe Articles were Sent up to the Lords, and Read by them, a Committee was Appointed to Inſpect Precedents of Impeachments, which much retarded the Proſecution of the Priſoners. On July 4th, Capt. Vaughan, Capt. Mole, and Dr. Elliot, were brought to the Bar of the Houſe of Lords; and after the Articles of Impeachment had been Read to 'em, they deſir'd to have a Copy of their Accuſation, and both Time and Councel allow'd them to make their Defence: Which being Granted, they were Remanded to Newgate. On July 12th, they Deliver'd their Anſwers to the Articles Exhibited againſt them, wherein they Pleaded their Innocence, and ſubmitted themſelves, for their Tryal, to their Lordſhips Judgment. Three Days after, Sir Adam Blare and Dr. Gray, who had fled, and, by a Proclamation, had been Apprehended, were Examin'd by the Speaker of the Lords, and then Committed to the Priſon of the Gate-houſe. On July 22d, they put in the like Anſwers; and the ſeveral Copies being communicated to the Commons, no further Progreſs was made in this Buſineſs, during this Seſſion.

The ſlow Proceedings of the Parliament, and the Heats and Animoſities which divided both Houſes, ſo much obſtructed the Progreſs of the King's Deſigns, and the Common-Intereſt, that, on Friday June 28th, His Majeſty thought fit to come to the Houſe of Peers, and to make this Speech to both Houſes: 1689.

My Lords and Gentlemen;

The King Speech to the Two Houſes.

"THE Time of the Year being ſo far advanc'd, "and there being ſeveral Acts yet to be Paſs'd "for the Safety and Settlement of the Nation, I "deſire you wou'd Expedite them as ſoon as you "can; it being neceſſary there ſhou'd ſhortly be "a Receſs, both that I may be at liberty to purſue "the Buſineſs of Ireland with all poſſible Vigour, "and that the Members of both Houſes may repair "to their ſeveral Counties, to Secure the Peace, "and to put the Militia into ſome better Poſture.

"I am very ſenſible of the Zeal and Good-"Affection which you, Gentlemen of the Houſe of "Commons, have ſhew'd to the Publick, in Giving "thoſe Supplies you have done already: And I "do not doubt, but, from the ſame Inducements, "you will be ready to Give more, as the Occaſions "require, which, I muſt let you know, will be "ſooner than perhaps you may expect; becauſe "the Neceſſary Expence of this Year, will much "exceed the Sums you have provided for it. "And that you may make the truer Judgment "in that Matter, I am very willing you ſhou'd "ſee how all the Moneys have been hitherto Laid-"out; and to that End, I have Commanded thoſe "Accompts to be ſpeedily brought to You, by "which you will ſee how very little of the Revenue "has been apply'd to any other Uſe than that of "the Navy and Land-Forces.

"I muſt Remind you, of making an Effectual "and Timely Proviſion of the Money for the States "of Holland; and I doubt not, but you will take "Care to ſee a fitting Revenue ſettled for My-"Self.

My Lords and Gentlemen;

"I will add no more, but to recommend "earneſtly to You, to avoid all Occaſions of "Diſpute or Delay, at a Time that requires "Union and Vigour in Your Counſels, upon which "the Preſervation of all that is Dear to Us, doth "ſo much depend: And I do promiſe, That "nothing ſhall ever be wanting on My part, which "may contribute towards it.

Both Houſes return'd His Majeſty Thanks, for His Gracious Speech, and did a little the more expedite ſome Bills that lay before 'em: For, on Thurſday July 25th, His Majeſty came again to the Houſe of Peers, and gave His Royal-Aſſent to, (1.) An Act for an Additional-Duty of Exciſe, upon Beer, Ale, and other Liquors. (2.) An Act to Regulate the Adminiſtration of the Oaths requir'd to be taken by Commiſſion or Warrant-Officers, employ'd in Their Majeſty's Service by Land, by virtue of an Act made this preſent Seſſion of Parliament, Intituled, [An Act for the Abrogating the Oaths of Supremacy and Allegiance, and Appointing other Oaths.] (3.) An Act for Taking-away the Court holden before the Preſident and Council of the Marches of Wales. (4.) An Act to Veſt in the Two Univerſities, the Preſentations of Benefices belonging to Papiſts. (5.) An Act for Erecting a Court of Conſcience at New-Caſtle upon Tyne. (6.) An Act for Erecting Courts of Conſcience in the Cities of Briſtol and Gloceſter, and the Liberties thereof. (7.) An Act for the better Regulating the Salt-Works in Droitwich. (8.) An Act to Enable Thomas Chattel to Sell Part of his Eſtate, for Payment of his Debts, and making Proviſion for his Wife and Children. Acts Paſſed.

But

1689. But ſeveral Things remained for Matter of Diſpute and Difference between the Two Houſes in this warm Seaſon of the Year. A Bill for the Charging and Collecting the Duties upon Coffee, Tea and Chocolate at the Cuſtom-Houſe, being ſent up by the Commons to the Lords, their Lordſhips on July 24. added a Clauſe to it, For a Draw-back on the Exportation of the ſaid Commodities, with an Alteration of the Date from the 24th of July to the 25th of Auguſt. Theſe Amendments were diſagreed to by the Commons, who in a Conference alledg'd, " That they had always taken it for " their undoubted Privilege, (of which they have " been ever jealous and tender) That in all Aids " given to the King by the Commons, the Rate " or Tax ought not to be any ways altered by " the Lords: That the Amendments made by the " Lords, being in Point of Time, the Commons ho- " ped their Lordſhips would not at this Time " renew a Queſtion concerning the Method of " Granting Aids, which had formerly, in Inſtances " of this Nature, occaſion'd great Debates, and " which might now beget many Conferences, ſpend " much Time, and end in Inconveniences: That " this Amendment propoſed by the Lords made " the Bill Incoherent; for Both Houſes having " Agreed that the Forfeitures ſhould Commence " from the 20th of July, it would look ſtrange " that the Forfeitures ſhould be given before the " Duty was made payable: That Ships were then " arriving daily with the Commodities mention'd in " the Bill, which would be a Loſs to the King, " by putting the Commencement of the Duty ſo " far off. And that as to the Proviſo their Lord- " ſhips had ſent to the Commons, the Commons did " diſagree to it, and for that did refer to their " Firſt Reaſons; for the Proviſo being an Alte- " ration and Leſſening of the Grant made by the " Commons, they hop'd for theſe Reaſons, their " Lordſhips would agree with them, and not re- " vive old Diſputes". On the other Hand, the Lords inſiſted on their Proviſo and ſaid, " They " were much ſurpriz'd at the Aſſertion of the " Commons, that in all Aids given to the King by " the Commons, the Rate or Tax ought not to be " altered by the Lords, ſince they conceiv'd it " had always been their undoubted Right, in " Caſe of any Aids given to the King, to leſſen " the Rate or Tax Granted by the Commons, where- " of ſeveral Precedents might be given, which " for the preſent they were willing to forbear, " that they might not revive old Diſputes. But " that as to the Proviſo now offered by the Lords, " their Lordſhips were of Opinion, this General " Point was not the Caſe now in Difference, it " being neither an Alteration nor Leſſening of " the Duty laid upon theſe Commodities: For what " was propoſed to be drawn back on the Expor- " tation of them, could not be ſaid to leſſen the " Rates impoſed upon them: That it did indeed " take away ſo much from the King's Income, " but added much more to the Benefit of Trade, " of which the Lords conceived, they were equal " and competent Judges, and therefore thought " they had ſufficient Grounds to inſiſt on the " Proviſo". This Diſpute put a Stop to the Bill in this Seſſion, but it paſſed at laſt with their Lordſhips Clauſe about the Draw-back, on the 16. of January following.

Matters of Diſpute between the Two Houſes.

ommons eſoluti- n for an ddreſs.

On Auguſt 3. the Commons in a Committee of the whole Houſe, having conſider'd the State of the Nation, came at laſt to this Reſolution, That an Addreſs be preſented to His Majeſty upon theſe Heads: Firſt, That there had been Delays in the Succours of Ireland. Secondly, That there were not ſufficient Preparations to Tranſport the Forces to Ireland: And Thirdly, That ſeveral Ships had been taken for want of Guards and Convoys to preſerve them. At the ſame Time the Queſtion was put, Whether it ſhould be repreſented to His Majeſty, that it was thought inconvenient to His Majeſty's Affairs, that the Marqueſs of Halifax was in His Majeſty's Council? But this was decently carry'd in the Negative. On Aug. 12. Sir Thomas Littleton made a Report from the Committee, who examin'd the Matter of Miſcarriages relating to Ireland and Londonderry; upon which it was Reſolved, That an Addreſs be preſented to His Majeſty, that Colonel Lundee be ſent over to Londonderry to be Tryed there for the Treaſons laid to his Charge. 1689.

On Auguſt 13. the Commons ſent up a Bill to the Lords, For the enjoining the Wearing the Woolen Manufacture of this Kingdom at certain Times in the Year. Upon which the Bailiffs, Wardens and Aſſiſtants of the Company of Silk-Weavers of London and Canterbury, preſented a Petition to their Lordſhips in a Tumultuous Manner, praying to be Heard, before the ſaid Bill ſhould be paſſed into a Law. The Houſe Order'd their Speaker to tell the Petitioners, That the Lords did not then think fit to give an Anſwer, becauſe they obſerv'd there was an unuſual Manner of Application of Men, who ought to be better directed, by them who were Bailiffs, Wardens and Aſſiſtants of the Company: That the Lords did firſt require, That thoſe Crowds ſhould go home, and when that was done, neither they, nor other People of this Nation needed to doubt, but that their Lordſhips would do Juſtice, and hear the Objections of the Parties concern'd in this or any other Bill, that ſhould come before 'em. And to prevent the Return of ſuch unruly Multitudes who were ſuppos'd to be ſet on by the Enemies of the Government, the Lords deſir'd His Majeſty to Command ſome of the Horſe and Foot Guards to be Aiding to the Civil Powers; and Order'd the Governour of the Tower to take Care to prevent any unlawful Concourſe of People in thoſe Hamlets; the Lord-Mayor of London to have a ſufficient Number of the Trained Bands in readineſs to hinder the Paſſing of any extraordinary Numbers of People through the City; and the Deputy-Lieutenants and Juſtices of the Peace of the County of Middleſex, to provide for the Security of the City, and Liberties of Weſtminſter. The Weavers ſeeing theſe Preparations remain'd quiet in their Houſes; whereupon the Lords on Aug. 17. diſcharg'd the Train-Bands which had been Poſted in the Palace-Yard. However, upon the Second Reading of the Bill for Wearing the Woolen Manufactures, it was on Auguſt 19. unanimouſly rejected by their Lordſhips.

Riotous Aſſembly of Silk-Weavers.

The Houſe of Commons having paſſed the Bill for Attainting ſeveral Perſons in Rebellion againſt their Majeſties, and ſent it up to the Lords for their Concurrence; The Committee whom their Lordſhips appointed to examine the ſame, Reported their Opinion on July 30. That the Commons might be deſir'd by a Conference to give a Liſt to the Houſe of Lords of the Perſons that gave Evidence to the Commons, againſt the ſeveral Perſons deſign'd in the Bill to be Attainted: That the Lords might be fully ſatisfied by Evidence, Viva Voce, to Attaint the ſeveral Perſons, (as they ſuppos'd the Commons were;) for that if the Lords ſhould by themſelves enquire of ſuch Evidence, they might fail of hearing all the Evidence the Houſe of Commons had had. The Lords having Agreed to this Motion of the Committee, a Conference was deſir'd and manag'd betwixt Both Houſes, at which the Commons gave a Liſt of the Witneſſes, that depos'd at their Bar againſt the Perſons mention'd in the Bill of Attainder. Theſe Witneſſes were William Watts, Matthew Gun, Bazil Purefoy, and William Dalton, whoſe Evidence not ſatisfying the Lords, the Bill lay neglected for ſome Days, till the Commons having preſſed their Lordſhips by Two Meſſages to give Expedition to it; The 1689. House on Aug. 19. Agreed with the Committee in leaving out Thomas Lord Howard, the Earl of Dover, the Lord Hunsdon, Sir Roger Strickland, Sir Edward Herbert, Colonel Hugh Southerland, and Sir William Jennings, becauſe there did not appear ſufficient Evidence againſt 'em. But after many Alterations the Bill itſelf was dropt.

Bill for paying the States of Holland.

In Compliance to the King's repeated Deſires of giving Satisfaction to the States of Holland, the Commons did at laſt paſs a Bill for Appropriating certain Duties for Paying the States-General of the United-Provinces the Charges of His Majeſty's Expedition into this Kingdom. Which being Read in the Houſe of Lords, Aug. 13. a Motion was made, that ſeveral Members of this Houſe, and divers Servants of King Charles II. had Securities appropriated out of ſeveral Duties which paſſed away from them by this Bill, and therefore it was fit they ſhould be Heard by their Counſel. This Motion being receiv'd and Counſel Heard, their Lordſhips gave their Conſent to the Bill without any Amendment; but at the ſame Time, for an Argument of their preferring the King's Intereſt before their own, they agreed to preſent the following Addreſs to His Majeſty on Aug. 16.

Addreſs of the Lords.

" THE Lords Spiritual and Temporal in Parliament Aſſembled, upon their Concurrence " with the Houſe of Commons, in a Bill Entituled, " An Act for appropriating certain Duties for Paying " the States-General, &c. and for other Uſes, " think it Incumbent on them in Honour and " Juſtice, to lay before Your Majeſty, how ſeve- " ral of their own Body found themſelves ag- " grieved thereby, in relation to ſome Debts ow- " ing to them, on the Account of having been " Servants to King Charles II. and that their " Claim to their Arrears on that Score was " weaken'd and prejudic'd by this Bill, which " cuts them off from all Pretences whatſoever, " except ſuch as can be comprehended within the " Sums of Sixty Thouſand Pounds, which is very " far ſhort of anſwering their juſt Demands, " and which they conceive to have been better " and more amply provided for, in an Act paſs'd " in the Firſt Year of the Reign of the Late " King James, Entituled, An Act for Granting to " His Majeſty an Impoſition on all Tobacco and Su- " gar, Imported between the 24th Day of June, " 1685, and the 24th of June, 1693. Yet being " more concerned for the Welfare of Your Ma- " jeſty's Affairs than their own particular Bene- " fit, and being Senſible of the Importance it " may be to Your Majeſty, as well as to the " Good of Chriſtendom in this Conjuncture, that " the Debt owing to the States-General of the " United-Provinces, upon Account of aſſiſting " Your Majeſty at your coming into this Na- " tion, for our Deliverance from Popery and Ar- " bitrary Power, ſhould be provided for to their " Satisfaction, they have willingly deſiſted from " giving any Obſtruction to the paſſing of the " ſaid Bill, and have entirely ſubmitted their " Share of their Recompence for their Long and " Faithful Services to their Deceaſed Royal Ma- " ſter, to the Conveniency of Your Majeſties " preſent Circumſtances.

" Whereupon this Houſe hath thought fit to " repreſent to Your Majeſty, this moſt Reſpect- " ful and Dutiful Acquieſcence of the Peers " herein concerned to Your Majeſty's Juſtice and " Goodneſs, and to Beſeech Your Majeſty that " You would be pleaſed to take their Con- " dition, and the Manner of their preſent Re- " ſignation of it, into Your Gracious Conſidera- " tion and Royal Protection, wherein this Houſe " doth promiſe themſelves that the particular " Peers concern'd will find an entire Security.

" And whereas there is a Clauſe in this Bill 1689. " which provides, That Sixty Thouſand Pounds " therein mentioned for the Late King Charles's Ser- " vants, ſhould be applied to ſuch only as were his " Servants at the time of his Deceaſe; It is the " Humble Deſire and Recommendation of this " Houſe to Your Majeſty, that this Reſtraint " may bring no Prejudice to the Juſt and Equi- " table Pretenſions of ſuch of the Servants of his " ſaid Late Majeſty, as are Members of this Houſe, " or of others in their Circumſtances; but that Your " Majeſty will be graciouſly pleaſed to look up- " on them, as Entituled to an equal Share of Your " Favour and Conſideration, which others, their " Fellow-Servants, have generally had, or may " pretend to, by Virtue of this or the former " Act of Parliament before-mention'd.

The Marqueſs of Halifax, Speaker of the Houſe of Lords, having waited on the King with this Addreſs, His Majeſty receiv'd the ſame very kindly; and as for thoſe particular Peers that were concern'd in the Bill, He ſaid, He was ſenſible of their Behaviour toward Him on this Occaſion, and would not forget it.

On Tueſday, Aug. 20. His Majeſty went to the Houſe of Lords, and the Commons being ſent for up, the Speaker preſented the Bill for Paying the States-General, and made this Speech to His Majeſty, acknowledging the Great Services done to this Nation by the Dutch, and at the ſame Time very artfully re-minding the Dutch of their former Obligations to the Engliſh.

May it Pleaſe Your Majeſty;

Speaker's Speech to the King.

" THE Commons in this preſent Parliament " Aſſembled, taking into Conſideration the " great Aſſiſtance that was given by the States of " the United-Provinces to Your Majeſty, in Your " Glorious Deſign of Reſtoring theſe Kingdoms " to their ancient Rights and Liberties, and how " for that End they entruſted their Army and Fleet " to Your Majeſty's Diſpoſal, at a Time when " they had War Declar'd, and an Invaſion threat- " ned by the French King, meerly to divert them: " They do here humbly preſent Your Majeſty " with a Bill, appointing certain Duties of Exciſe " and Cuſtoms, for the Raiſing Six Hundred Thou- " ſand Pounds, which they deſire may be applied " by Your Majeſty, for the Satisfaction of the " Charges which have been Expended by the States " in this Expedition.

" It is little more than an Age ſince the Il- " luſtrious Prince of Orange, Your Majeſty's Great " Grand-Father, whoſe Name will ever be Famous " for his Love to his Country, did, by the Aſſi- " ſtance of the Engliſh, redeem thoſe Provinces " from the like Oppreſſions; which ſhews how " inſeparable the Intereſt of thoſe Two Nations " are. And ſince it was the Policy of thoſe that " that laboured our Deſtruction to divide us, it " ought to be the Endeavour of all True Lovers " of their Country, to keep us firmly united in " order to our Preſervation.

" The Commons have likewiſe conſider'd of " the great Arrears, that were left due by King " Charles the Second to his Servants, and have " therefore made a Proviſion of Sixty Thouſand " Pounds for them, which they humbly deſire " Your Majeſty would pleaſe to diſtribute among " them, in ſuch Proportions as Your Majeſty in " Your Princely Wiſdom ſhall think moſt fit.

" And having proceeded thus far in the " weighty Affairs depending before them, they " now become Humble Suitors to Your Majeſty " for a Receſs, that thereby they may have the " Opportunity of repairing into their ſeveral " Counties, and promoting Your Majeſty's Ser- " vice, and what remains at preſent for want of

Time

1689. " time to diſpatch, they doubt not but that they " ſhall be able to perfect it at their next Meeting, " and, as they hope, to the entire Satisfaction of " your Majeſty, and your whole Kingdom.

Acts paſt. After this Speech, the King gave his Royal Aſſent to the ſaid Bills; being, 1. An Act for Appropriating certain Duties, for paying the States-General of the United-Provinces their Charges, for His Majeſty's Expedition into this Kingdom, and for other Uſes. (2.) An Act for Prohibiting all Trade and Commerce with France. (3.) An Act for the better preventing the Exportation of Wool, and Encouraging the Woolen Manufacture of this Kingdom. (4.) An Additional Act for the appointing Commiſſioners, for the executing an Act of this preſent Parliament, Entitl'd, An Act for a Grant to Their Majeſties of an Aid of 12*d in the Pound, for One Year, for the neceſſary Defence of their Realms.* (5.) An Act for Relief of the Proteſtant Iriſh Clergy. (6.) An Act to Repeal the Statute made in the Fifth Year of King Henry IV. againſt multiplying Gold and Silver. (7.) An Act for Explaining part of an Act made in the Firſt Year of King James I. concerning Tann'd Leather. (8.) An Act to enable Truſtees to grant Leaſes of the Eſtate of Richard Hele, Eſq; (9.) An Act for Enabling of Hannah Sherley, Widow, and Mary Battilley, alias Sherley, her Daughter, to ſettle and diſpoſe of certain Lands and Tenements in the Counties of Middleſex and Eſſex. And then the Lord Privy-Seal, by the King's Command, acquainted the Two Houſes,

Two Houſes adjourn " That it was His Majeſty's Pleaſure, that they " ſhould Adjourn till the 20th of the next Month; " And that His Majeſty intended they ſhould far- " ther Adjourn till Winter, unleſs there was ſome " emergent Occaſion for their Sitting; of which " He would give them timely Notice by Proclamation. After which, the Two Houſes Adjourned accordingly till the 20th of September next.

Honours and Preferments. During this Seſſion, ſeveral Honours and Preferments were beſtow'd, beſides thoſe already mentioned. On April 18. His Majeſty was pleas'd to Conſtitute the Earl of Shrewsbury Principal Secretary of State, Lord-Lieutenant of the County of Worceſter. On April 19. His Majeſty was pleaſed to appoint, The Honourable George Booth, Eſq; Sir Richard Temple, Bar. and Kt. of the Bath, Sir John Werden, Bar. Sir Robert Southwel, Sir Robert Clayton, Sir Patience Ward, and Thomas Pelham, Eſq; to be Commiſſioners for Managing of the Cuſtoms; and alſo Sir Henry Vane, Sir Henry Aſhurſt, Sir Humphry Edwin, Thomas Frankland, Eſq; Francis Parry, Eſq; John Danvers, Eſq; and John Wilcocks, Junior, Eſq; to be Commiſſioners for Managing of the Exciſe. On April 23. The King Created Thomas Earl of Denby, Lord Preſident of his Council, and Marqueſs of Carmarthen. On May 16. His Majeſty was pleas'd to Create Frederick Count De Schonberg, General of His Majeſty's Forces, Maſter-General of the Ordnance, and one of the Lords of the Privy-Council; a Baron, Earl, Marqueſs and Duke of this Kingdom, by the Name and Title of Baron Teys, Earl of Brentford, Marqueſs of Harwich, and Duke of Schonberg. On June 1. Arthur Herbert, Eſq; Admiral of their Majeſties Fleet, was Created Earl of Torrington, and Baron Herbert of Torbay in the County of Devon. On June 4. John Aſhburnham, Eſq; was Created Baron Aſhburnham, of Aſhburnham in the County of Suſſex: On the ſame day His Majeſty conferr'd the Honour of Knighthood upon Edw. Moſly, of Hulme in the County of Lancaſter, Eſq; His Majeſty by Writ call'd to the Houſe of Lords, the Right Honourable Charles Ld. Durſly, and Robert Ld. Viſc. Liſle; who on July 11. were introduced into the Lords Houſe, and plac'd upon the Barons Bench. On July 16. His Majeſty appointed Robert Scarle, Eſq; to be his Conſul at Legborn; and ſoon after Martin Weſcomb, Eſq; his Conſul in the Ports of Cadiz and St. Mary's, within the Kingdom of Spain. On Auguſt 6. James Earl of Drumlanzick, and Charles Earl of Selkirke, were Sworn Gentlemen of His Majeſty's Bed-Chamber in Ordinary. About the middle of Auguſt His Majeſty was pleas'd to Conſtitute Nathaniel Loddington, Eſq; to be his Conſul at Tripoli in Barbary; and Thomas Chamberlaine, Eſq; reſiding at Meſſina, to be Conſul for the Kingdom of Sicily, and Iſland of Maltha. 1689.

Revolution in Scotland. To take a ſhort View of the Revolution in Scotland: The Convention of that Kingdom met on the 14th of March; and after Publick Prayers performed by the Biſhop of Edenburgh (wherein he pray'd for the Safety and Reſtoration of King James) they began with the Choice of a Preſident. The Marqueſs of Athol was propos'd by the Biſhops, and the Party which adher'd to the Old King; but the Duke of Hamilton was ſet up in Competition by the Friends of King William, and carried it by near Forty Voices. They came preſently to take into Conſideration the Caſtle of Edenburgh, which was yet Commanded by the Duke of Gourdon, a Papiſt, whom they requir'd to put that Caſtle into their Hands: The Duke deſir'd an Indemnity for what was paſt, and Security for the future; upon which the Convention ſent the Earls of Tweedale and Lothian to him, with a Pardon in writing for himſelf and the Garriſon. But after ſeveral Meſſages and Evaſions, the Duke at laſt declar'd, That he would not Surrender the Caſtle. Whereupon the Convention ſent up the Heralds at Arms to charge him immediately to ſubmit; which he perſiſting to refuſe, the Heralds went to the Market-Croſs, and ſolemnly Proclaim'd him a Traytor and Rebel.

On March 16. one Crane an Engliſhman, who was ſaid to be a Servant to King James's Queen, deliver'd a Letter from that Monarch to the Convention; and at the ſame time the Preſident acquainted the Aſſembly, That the Lord Levin was arriv'd Expreſs with another Letter from King William. Thereupon it was debated, which of the ſaid Two Letters ſhould be read Firſt; the Majority carry'd it for King William: whoſe Letter was read with general Applauſe in manner following.

My Lords and Gentlemen;

K. William's Letter to the Scotch Convention. " WE are very ſenſible of the Kindneſs and " Concern which your Nation has evinc'd " towards Us, and our Undertakings for the Pre- " ſervation of your Religion and Liberty, which " were in ſuch imminent Danger. Neither can " We in the leaſt doubt of your Confidence in Us, " after having ſeen how far ſo many of your Nobility and Gentry have own'd Our Declaration; " Countenancing and concurring with Us in Our " Endeavours, and deſiring Us, that We will take " upon Us the Adminiſtration of Affairs Civil and " Military, and to call a Meeting of the Eſtates, " for Securing the Proteſtant-Religion, and the an- " cient Laws and Liberties of your Kingdom: " which accordingly We have done.

" Now it lies in you to enter into ſuch Conſul- " tations, as are moſt probable to Settle you on " ſure and laſting Foundations; which, We hope, " you will ſet about with all convenient Speed, " with regard to the Publick Good, and the gene- " ral Intereſt and Inclinations of the People: That " after ſo much Trouble and great Suffering, they " may live happily and in Peace; and that you " may lay aſide all Animoſities and Factions that " may hinder ſo good a Work.

" We are glad to find ſo many of the Nobility " and Gentry, when here in London, were ſo much " inclin'd to an Union of both Kingdoms; and that " they did look upon it as one of the beſt Means " for procuring the Happineſs of both Nations, and 1689. " ſettling of a laſting Peace among them: Which " will be Advantageous to both; they living in the " ſame Iſland, having the ſame Language, and the " ſame Common Intereſt of Religion and Liberty; " eſpecially at this Juncture, when the Enemies of " both are ſo reſtleſs, endeavouring to make and " increaſe Jealouſies and Diviſions, which they " will be ready to improve to their own Advan- " tage and the Ruin of Britain. We being of the " ſame Opinion, as to the Uſefulneſs of this Uni- " on, and having nothing ſo much before Our " Eyes as the Glory of GOD, Eſtabliſhing the Re- " form'd-Religion, and the Peace and Happineſs of " theſe Nations, are reſolv'd to uſe Our utmoſt " Endeavour, in Advancing every thing that may " conduce to the effectuating the ſame. So we " bid you heartily Farewel.

" ſettling

From Our Court at Hampton-Court, the 7th Day of March, 1688.

After the reading of this Letter, a Committee was nam'd to draw up an Anſwer to it in the moſt Thankful and Dutiful Manner; and then, before they would admit of the Letter from King James to be open'd, they paſs'd an Act for aſſerting and maintaining the Lawfulneſs of that Convention; and declaring, That they would not diſſolve, but continue Sitting until the Government, Religion, Laws, Liberties and Properties were ſettled and Eſtabliſhed. After this, King James's Letter was read, that promis'd Pardon to all ſuch as ſhould return to their Duty before the laſt day of March; and threatning to Puniſh with the utmoſt Rigour of his Laws, all ſuch as ſhould ſtand out in Rebellion againſt Him or his Authority. This menacing Letter was the more ungrateful, it being Counterſigned by the Earl of Melfort (a Perſon odious to all the Presbyterians of Scotland, who made up the Major part of the Convention) So that in ſtead of ſerving the Intereſt of King James, it rather provoked that Aſſembly to be the more unanimous and forward in ſettling the Government after the Example of England. The Meſſenger that brought the ſaid Letter, was firſt ſecur'd, and then, as if not thought worth detaining, he was diſmiſt with a Paſs in ſtead of an Anſwer.

K James's Letter read.

The next Care of the Convention, was, to put that Kingdom into a Poſture of Defence: for which purpoſe, They order'd a Proclamation to be Publiſh'd, requiring all Perſons, from the Age of Sixteen to Sixty, to be in a readineſs to take Arms, and rais'd Eight hundred Men, under the Command of the Earl of Levin, to Guard the City of Edenburgh. On the 19*th* of March, they paſs'd an Act, approving the Addreſs of the Scotch Nobility and Gentry in London; who had thankfully acknowledged the great Benefit done to their Nation by the Prince of Orange, and had deſired His Highneſs to accept the Adminiſtration of the Government of that Kingdom. The ſame day, upon reading of ſome Letters from ſeveral Lords and Gentlemen in Ireland, craving Aſſiſtance of the Convention; they order'd 2000 Muskets, and 20 Barrels of Powder to be immediately ſent 'em: That a further Proviſion of Arms and Ammunition ſhould be bought for 'em in Holland, and that two ſmall Frigots ſhould cruiſe between Scotland and Ireland for mutual Intelligence.

Whilſt the Convention was thus providing for their own Security, and the Relief of their Proteſtant Brethren in Ireland, Viſcount Dundee held a private Conference with the Duke of Gourdon, at the Poſtern-Gate of the Caſtle: Upon which the Convention order'd Dundee to appear before them; but he retir'd with thirty or forty Horſe to Linlithgo. Thereupon a Party of Horſe was ſent after him; and the Convention apprehending he might ſurpriſe the Caſtle of Sterling, they immediately diſpatch'd away the Governour thereof, the Earl of Marr, to ſecure that Important Fortreſs. 1689.

In the mean time, the Duke of Gourdon amus'd the Convention, by beating a Parley and deſiring to Capitulate; till on March 22d, he ſent a Meſſage to the Magiſtrates of the City, to acquaint 'em, " That he had receiv'd Advices from Ireland of " King James's being landed there, and that to " expreſs his Joy upon that News, he ſhould be ob- " lig'd to fire the Cannon round the Caſtle; but bid " them not be alarm'd at it, ſince he deſign'd no " Hurt to the City." The Convention being informed of this Meſſage, Order'd the Caſtle to be block'd up; and on March 23d an Act was paſs'd and Proclaim'd, That none be ſuffer'd to Travel with Horſes or Arms, who have not Paſſes, or cannot at leaſt give a good Account of themſelves. On the ſame Day, the Anſwer of the Convention to the King of England's Letter, was Sign'd in a Meeting of the whole Houſe (very few excepted) and was order'd to be ſent away immediately by my Lord Roſs; who took Poſt for London, and Preſented it to his Majeſty in this Form.

May it Pleaſe Your Majeſty;

" AS Religion, Liberty and Law, are the deep- Anſwer to K Williams Letter.
" eſt Concerns of Mankind, ſo the deep
" ſenſe of the extreme Hazards theſe had been ex-
" poſ'd to, muſt produce ſuitable Returns from
" the Kingdom of Scotland to his Majeſty; whom
" in all Sincerity and Gratitude they acknowledg'd
" to be, under GOD, their great and ſeaſonable
" Deliverer: And they heartily Congratulated,
" that as GOD had honour'd his Majeſty to be " an Eminent Inſtrument for the Preſervation of " his Truth; ſo he had rewarded his Undertakings
" with Succeſs, in the conſiderable Progreſs which
" he had made in delivering them, and in preſer-
" ving to them the Proteſtant Religion. That they
" return'd their moſt Dutiful Thanks to his Maje-
" ſty, for his accepting the Adminiſtration of Pub-
" lick Affairs, and Convening the Eſtates of that " Kingdom. That they ſhould with all conveni-
" ent diligence take his gracious Letter into their
" Conſideration; hoping ſhortly, by the Bleſſing
" of GOD, to fall upon ſuch Reſolutions, as might
" be acceptable to his Majeſty, ſecure the Prote-
" ſtant Religion, and eſtabliſh the Government,
" Laws and Liberties of that Kingdom upon Solid
" Foundations, moſt agreeable to the general Good
" and Inclinations of the People: That as to the " Propoſal of the Union, they doubted not but his
" Majeſty would ſo diſpoſe that Matter, that there " might be an equal readineſs in the Kingdom of " England, to accompliſh it, as one of the beſt
" means for ſecuring the Happineſs of theſe Nati" ons, and ſettling a laſting Peace: That they " had hitherto, and ſtill ſhould endeavour to avoid
" Animoſities or Prejudice, which might diſturb
" their Councils: That as they deſign'd the Publick
" Good, ſo it might be done with the general Con-
" currence and Approbation of the Nation. And " that in the mean-time, they deſir'd the continu-
" ance of his Majeſty's Care and Protection to" wards them in all their Concerns, whereof the " kind Expreſſions in his gracious Letter had gi" ven them full Aſſurance.

The Forces King William had ſent into Scotland, under Major-General Mackay, conſiſting of Four Regiments of Foot and One of Dragoons, being arriv'd there, the Convention, on March 25. order'd them to be Quarter'd in Leith, and the Suburbs of Edenburgh. And on March 28. they gave a Commiſſion to that General, to be Commander in Chief of ſuch Militia, or other Forces, as ſhould be rais'd for the Safety of that Kingdom in the preſent Juncture. On March 26. a Committee was nam'd for ſettling the Government, compos'd of Eight Lords, Eight Forces in Scotland.

1689. Eight Knights, and Eight Burgeſſes, the Biſhops being left out, as moſt profeſtly diſaffected to King William. This Committee made their Report, That the Throne was Vacant; and the whole Houſe (except Twelve) approv'd of what the Committee had done, and paſs'd the following Act. The Eſtates of the Kingdom of Scotland find and declare, That King James VII. being a profeſs'd Papiſt, did aſſume the Royal Power, and acted as King, without ever taking the Oath requir'd by Law; and hath, by the Advice of Evil and Wicked Counſellors, invaded the Fundamental Conſtitution of this Kingdom, and alter'd it from a Legal and Limited Monarchy, to an Arbitrary Deſpotick Power; and hath Govern'd the ſame to the Subverſion of the Proteſtant Religion, and Violation of the Laws and Liberties of the Nation, Inverting all the Ends of Government, whereby he hath Forfeited the Right of the Crown, and the Throne is become Vacant.

Immediately after this, the Eſtates Voted and Order'd, That the ſame Committee ſhould bring in an Act, for Settling the Crown upon their Majeſties William and Mary, King and Queen of England; and to conſider the Terms of the Deſtination of the Heirs of the Crown: And likewiſe to prepare and bring in an Inſtrument of Government to be offer'd with the Crown, for Redreſſing the Grievances and Securing the Liberties of the People. According to this Vote the Committee drew up an Act, which was read and agreed unto by the Convention: by which Their Majeſties were Proclaim'd King and Queen of Scotland, on Apr. 11. the very ſame Day they were Crown'd in England. This Act recited the Methods by which King James had Invaded the Conſtitution of that Kingdom. 1. By Erecting "Publick-Schools and Societies of the Jeſuits; "and not only allowing Maſſes to be publickly "ſaid, but alſo converting Proteſtant-Churches "and Chappels into Publick Maſs-Houſes, contrary to the expreſs Laws againſt ſaying and hearing Maſs. 2. By allowing Popiſh Books to be "Printed, and diſpers'd by a Patent to a Popiſh "Printer, deſigning him Printer to His Majeſty's "Houſhold, College and Chappel, contrary to "Law. 3. By taking the Children of Proteſtant-"Noblemen and Gentlemen, ſending them abroad "to be bred Papiſts; and beſtowing Penſions upon Prieſts to pervert Proteſtants from their Religion, by Offers of Places and Preferments. "4. By diſcharging Proteſtants, at the ſame time "He employ'd Papiſts in Places of greateſt Truſt, "both Civil and Military, &c. and entruſting the "Forts and Magazines in their Hands. 5. By "impoſing Oaths contrary to Law. 6. By exacting Money without Conſent of Parliament or "Convention of Eſtates. 7. By Levying and keeping up a Standing-Army in time of Peace, without Conſent of Parliament, and maintaining "them upon Free-Quarter. 8. By employing the "Officers of the Army as Judges throughout the "Kingdom; by whom the Subjects were put to "Death, without Legal Trial, Jury or Record. "9. By impoſing Exorbitant Fines, to the Value "of the Parties Eſtates; exacting extravagant "Bail, and diſpoſing of Fines and Forfeitures before "any Proceſs or Conviction. 10. By Impriſoning "Perſons without expreſſing the reaſon, and delaying to bring them to Trial. 11. By cauſing "ſeveral Perſons to be proſecuted, and their E-"ſtates to be forfeited, upon ſtretches of old and "forfeited Laws; upon weak and frivolous Pretences, and upon lame and defective Proofs; as "particularly, the late Earl of Argyle, to the "Scandal of the Juſtice of the Nation. 12. By "ſubverting the Rights of the Royal-Burroughs, "the Third Eſtate of Parliament; impoſing upon "them not only Magiſtrates, but alſo the whole "Town-Council and Clerks, contrary to their "Liberties and expreſs Charters, without any pre-

King William and Queen Mary Proclaim'd in Scotland.

1689. "tence of Sentence, Surrender or Conſent: So "that the Commiſſioners to Parliaments being "Choſen by the Magiſtrates and Councils, the "King might, in effect, aſwell Nominate the Eſtate "of Parliament. Beſides that many of the Magiſtrates, by him put in, were Papiſts; and the "Boroughs were forced to pay Money for the Letters impoſing thoſe Illegal Magiſtrates upon them. "13. By ſending Letters to the Chief-Courts of "Juſtice, not only Ordering the Judges to ſtop, "ſine Die, but alſo Commanding how to Proceed "in Caſes depending before them, contrary to the "expreſs Laws; and by changing the Nature of "the Judges Patents ad Vitam or Culpam, into a "Commiſſion de Beneplacito, to diſpoſe them to a "Compliance with Arbitrary Courſes, and turning "them out of their Offices, if they refus'd to comply. 14. By granting Perſonal-Protections for "Civil-Debts, contrary to Law.

Their Claim of Rights and Liberties.

Then in the ſame Act they Claim'd and Declar'd theſe their Ancient Rights and Liberties: "1. That by the Law of Scotland, no Papiſt cou'd "be King or Queen of the Realm, nor bear any "Office therein; neither cou'd any Proteſtant-Succeſſor exerciſe the Regal-Power, till they had "ſworn the Coronation-Oath. 2. That all Proclamations Aſſerting an Abſolute-Power, to Null "and Diſable Laws, in order to erecting Schools "and Colleges for Jeſuits, converting Proteſtant-"Churches and Chappels into Maſs-Houſes, and the "allowing Maſs to be ſaid; and that the allowing "Popiſh-Books to be Printed and Diſpers'd, was "contrary to Law. 3. That the taking the "Children of Noblemen, Gentlemen, and others, "and keeping them Abroad, to be bred Papiſts; "the making Funds and Donations to Popiſh-Schools and Colleges, the beſtowing Penſions "on Prieſts, and the Seducing Proteſtants from "their Religion, by Offers of Places and Preferments, was contrary to Law. 4. That the Diſarming of Proteſtants, and employing Papiſts in "the greateſt Places of Truſt, both Civil and Military, &c. was contrary to Law. 5. That "the Impoſing an Oath, without Authority of "Parliament, was contrary to Law. 6. That "the Raiſing of Money, without Conſent of Parliament, or Convention, was contrary to Law. "7. That employing the Officers of the Army "as Judges, &c. was contrary to Law. 8. That "the impoſing Extraordinary Fines, &c. was "contrary to Law. 9. That the Impriſoning of "Perſons, without expreſſing the Reaſons, &c. "was the ſame. 10. That the Proſecuting, and "Seizing Mens Eſtates, as Forfeited, upon old "ſtretches of old and obſolete Laws, &c. was "contrary to Law. 11. That the Nominating and Impoſing Magiſtrates, &c. upon "Boroughs, contrary to their expreſs Charter, "was the ſame. 12. That the ſending Letters "to the Courts of Juſtice, ordaining the Judges "to deſiſt from Determining of Cauſes, and ordaining them how to Proceed in Cauſes depending before them, &c. was contrary to Law. "13. That the Granting of Perſonal-Protections, "was the ſame. 14. That the forcing the Subjects "to Depoſe againſt themſelves, in Capital-Cauſes, "however the Puniſhments were reſtricted, was "contrary to Law. 15. That the uſing Torture, "without Evidence, or in ordinary Crimes, was "contrary to Law. 16. That the ſending of an "Army, in a Warlike manner, into any part of "the Kingdom, in time of Peace, and exacting "Locality and Free-Quarters, was the ſame. "17. That charging the Subjects with Law-Boroughs, at the King's Inſtance, and impoſing "Bonds, without Authority of Parliament, and "the Suſpending Advocates, for not Appearing "when Bonds were offer'd, was contrary to Law. "18. That the putting Gariſons into Private-

That the " Opinions of the Lords of the Seſſions, in the " two Caſes following, were Illegal; (viz.) That " the concerting the Demand of the Supply of a " Fore-faulted Perſon, although not given, was " Treaſon; That Perſons refuſing to diſcover their " Private-Thoughts, in relation to Points of " Treaſon, or other Mens Actions, are Guilty of " Treaſon. 20. That the Fining Husbands, for " their Wives withdrawing from Church, was " Illegal. 21. That Prelacy, and Superiority of " an Office in the Church above Presbyters, is and " has been a great and inſupportable Burthen to " this Nation, and contrary to the Inclinations of " the Generality of the People, ever ſince the " Reformation, they having Reform'd Popery by " Presbytery; and therefore ought to be Aboliſh'd. " 22. That it is the Right and Privilege of the " Subject, to Proteſt, for Remedy of Law, to the " King and Parliament, againſt Sentences pronounc'd by the Lords of the Seſſions, provided " the ſame do not ſtop Executions of the ſaid Sentences. 23. That it is the Right of the Subject " to Petition the King; and that all Proſecutions " and Impriſonments for ſuch Petitioning, were " contrary to Law.

" Therefore, The ſaid Eſtates of the Kingdom of " Scotland had Reſolv'd, That WILLIAM and " MARY, King and Queen of England, be De- " clared King and Queen of Scotland, to hold the " Crown and Royal-Dignity of the ſaid Kingdom, to " them the ſaid King and Queen, during their Lives, " and the longeſt Liver of Them; and that the ſole " and full Exerciſe of the Power, be only in, and " Exerciſed by Him the ſaid King, in the Names of " the ſaid King and Queen, during their Lives; " and after their Deceaſe, that the ſaid Crown and " Royal-Dignity be to the Heirs of the Body of the " ſaid Queen: Which failing, to the Princeſs Anne " of Denmark, and the Heirs of Her Body: Which " alſo failing, to the Heirs of the Body of the ſaid " William King of England.

By the ſame Act, they Abrogated the Oath of Allegiance, and Subſtituted this ſhort Form of Fidelity: I A. B. do ſincerely Promiſe and Swear, That I will be Faithful, and bear True Allegiance to Their Majeſties, King William and Queen Mary. So help me God. Oath of Fidelity.

Then theſe Commiſſioners were ſent to Their Majeſties, the Earl of Argyle, Sir James Mongomery, and Sir John Dalrimple, who had a Publick-Reception, on May 11th, in the Banquetting-Houſe at Whitehall, Their Majeſties being placed on the Throne, under a rich Canopy.

They firſt Preſented a Letter from the Eſtates to His Majeſty: Then the Inſtrument of Government: And then, a Paper containing the Grievances which they deſir'd might be Redreſs'd: And laſtly, an Addreſs to His Majeſty, for turning the Meeting of the ſaid Eſtates into a Parliament. All which being Sign'd by His Grace the Duke of Hamilton, as Preſident of the Meeting, and Read to Their Majeſties, the King return'd to the Commiſſioners the following Anſwer.

The King's Anſwer to the Parliament of Scotland.

" WHen I Engaged in this Undertaking, I had " particular Regard and Conſideration for " Scotland; and therefore I did emit a Declaration " in relation to that, aſwell as to this Kingdom, " which I intend to Make good and Effectual to " them. I take it very kindly, that Scotland hath " expreſs'd ſo much Confidence in, and Affection " to Me: They ſhall find Me Willing to Aſſiſt " 'em, in every thing that concerns the Weal and " Intereſt of that Kingdom, by making what Laws " ſhall be neceſſary for the Security of their Reli- " gion, Property and Liberty, and to Eaſe 'em of " what may be juſtly Grievous to them.

After which, the Coronation-Oath was tender'd to Their Majeſties, which the Earl of Argyle ſpoke word by word diſtinctly, and the King and Queen repeated it after him, holding their Right-Hands up, after the manner of taking Oaths in Scotland. The Commiſſioners, by Authority of the Eſtates, repreſented to His Majeſty, " That the Clauſe of the " Oath in relation to the Rooting-out of Hereticks, " did not import the Deſtroying of Hereticks; and " that, by the Law of Scotland, no Man was to be " Perſecuted for his private-Opinion; and ev'n " Obſtinate and Convicted Hereticks were only to " be denounc'd Rebels, or Outlaw'd, whereby their " Moveable Eſtates are Confiſcated." Hence " His Majeſty, at the repeating that Clauſe in the Oath, did Declare, That He did not mean, by theſe Words, that He was under any Obligation to become a Perſecutor. To which the Commiſſioners made Anſwer, That neither the Meaning of the Oath, nor the Law of Scotland, did import it. Then the King Reply'd, That He took the Oath in that ſence, and call'd the Commiſſioners, and others there preſent, to be Witneſſes of his ſo doing. 1689. Coronation-Oath.

Upon this Settlement, the Siege of Edinburgh-Caſtle was ſo vigorouſly Carry'd-on, that the Duke of Gourdon, ſeeing his Ammunition ſpent, his Houſe wholly ruin'd by the Bombs, great Breaches made in the Walls by the Cannon, the Beſiegers advanc'd to the Ditch, and deſpairing of Relief, on June 13, he Deliver'd-up that Important Fortreſs to Sir John Laniere, and Surrender'd himſelf and his whole Gariſon entirely to King William's Diſcretion, on Condition of having their Lives, Liberties and Fortunes ſecured. Duke of Gourdon Delivers-up the Caſtle of Edinburgh.

Nothing was now wanting to Reduce Scotland to the Obedience of King William and Queen Mary, but the Suppreſſing of Dundee, who was got into the Highlands, and had got together the Figure of an Army. Several Skirmiſhes happen'd between him and ſome Detachments of Their Majeſty's Forces, Commanded by Lieutenant-General Mackay, Sir Tho. Levingſton Colonel of Dragoons, Colonel Ramſey, and Colonel Balfour, who were Join'd by the Lairds of Strithnaver, Grant, and Whitoſch, and their Followers; in which being Worſted, he betook himſelf to the Hills again. His Party was almoſt dwindled to nothing, when having receiv'd a Reinforcement of 300 Iriſh, Headed by Colonel Canon, he rais'd the Highland-Clans, and with a Body of 6000 Foot, and 100 Horſe, advanc'd to meet Mackay, who was Marching towards him with a Body of 4000 Foot, and four Troops of Horſe and Dragoons. Theſe two ſmall Armies Engag'd two Miles on this ſide the Blair of Athol, and fought with great Obſtinacy from Five in the Afternoon till Night: And though Mackay loſt the Field, and was forc'd to retire in ſome Diſorder towards Sterling with the broken-Remains of his Army; yet the Death of Dundee, who was ſlain in the Battle, did more than compenſate for the other's Loſs; conſidering he was the ſole and whole Dependance of that Party, who afterwards were worſted every-where, and particularly once and again at St. John's-Town. In the laſt of theſe Conflicts, one ſingle Regiment of the Earl of Angus, under the Command of Lieutenant-Colonel Cleelund, gave ſo entire a Defeat to their whole Force, which conſiſted of near 4000 Men, that they never after cou'd appear in any conſiderable Body; and therefore many of the Chiefeſt among them ſubmitted to Their Majeſty's Clemency. Army under Dundee. General Dundee ſlain.

In Ireland, the Earl of Tyrconnel, with great Zeal for his Unfortunate Maſter, had ſecur'd the moſt Important Places of that Kingdom, and not only Diſarm'd and Pillag'd moſt of the Proteſtants, but alſo Impriſon'd the Chiefeſt of 'em; and then ſent an earneſt Invitation to King James, to Come over with Forces and Money from France. Upon this State of Ireland.

1689. this Meſſage Tyrconnel ſent over Baron Rice a Roman-Catholick, and the Lord Montjoy a Proteſtant: The latter wou'd not conſent to go; but upon Tyrconnel's granting him theſe Four Things: 1*ſt*, That no more New-Commiſſions ſhou'd be given out, or New-Men rais'd: 2*dly*, That no more of the Army ſhou'd be ſent into the North: 3*dly*, That None ſhou'd be queſtion'd for what had paſs'd: And 4*thly*, That no Soldiers ſhou'd be Quarter'd in Private-Houſes. Theſe Ambaſſadors ſet-out from Dublin about the 10th of January: Aſſoon as they were gone, Tyrconnel broke all the Conditions he had made with the Lord Montjoy; and, with greater Perfidiouſneſs, His Lordſhip, immediately after his Arrival at Paris, was Committed Priſoner to the Baſtile, on Account of the great Zeal he had lately ſhew'd for the Proteſtant Intereſt. Soon after, King James took Shipping at Breſt, with about 1500 Men, Commanded by Experienc'd French, Scotch and Iriſh-Officers, and ſafely Landed at Kingſale on the 12th of March. The next Day, His Majeſty, with a numerous Attendance, went to Cork, where he was receiv'd by the Earl of Tyreonnel, who, in Glory, Executed one of the Magiſtrates, for Declaring for the Prince of Orange. On March 24th, King James Enter'd into the City of Dublin in a Triumphant manner; and next Morning, having Call'd a Council, Turn'd-out the Earl of Granard Chairman, Judge Keating, &c. and in their rooms plac'd Count D'Avaux the French-Ambaſſador, Dr. Cartwright Biſhop of Cheſter, and Lieutenant-Colonel Dorrington, on whom the King had beſtow'd the Royal-Regiment, in the room of the Duke of Ormond. Then His Majeſty made the Earl of Tyrconnel a Duke, and Summon'd a Parliament to Meet at Dublin on the 7th of May.

The Engliſh-Proteſtants had been ſo very hardly us'd in the Provinces of Munſter, Lemſter, and Connaught, that moſt of 'em retir'd towards their Brethren in Ulſter, who Declaring for King William and Queen Mary, had Seiz'd on the Towns of Kilmore, Coleraine, Inniskillin, and London-Derry. And yet the Engliſh that remain'd were ſo-little inclin'd to truſt to the Promiſes of King James, that they rather choſe to ſtand upon their Defence; and gathering into One Body, made Shew of Oppoſing the King's Forces in the Open-Field: But being Routed by Lieutenant-General Hamilton, at a Place call'd Drummore, their Reſiſtance and Defeat gave a juſt Occaſion to His Majeſty and Tyrconnel, to uſe thoſe in their Power with far greater Severity, and to March towards the North with an Army of about 20000 Men, to force the reſt out of their Strong-holds.

ng William ſends rces to em:

King William being ſenſible of the deſperate Condition of the Iriſh-Proteſtants, had already ſent Captain James Hamilton, with Ammunition and Arms, to London-Derry, and nam'd Colonel Lundee, on whoſe Fidelity he depended, Governor of that City; but it ſoon appear'd how much His Majeſty was miſtaken in him.

On Apr. 13th, Mr. George Walker, Rector of Donahmore in the County of Tyrone, who had rais'd a Regiment for Defence of the Poor Proteſtants, receiving Intelligence, that King James, having taken Colraine and Kilmore, after a ſtout Reſiſtance, was drawing his Forces towards Derry, haſten'd thither to give Lundee an Account of it. The Governor at firſt believ'd it only a Falſe-Alarm, but was ſoon convinc'd of the contrary. The Enemy being advanc'd to Cledyford, Mr. Walker return'd to Lyfford, where he join'd Colonel Crafton, and afterwards, according to Lundee's Directions, took his Poſt at the Long-Cawſey, which he vigorouſly Maintain'd a whole Night; but being Overpower'd by the Enemy's Numbers, he Retreated to London-Derry, where he vainly endeavour'd to perſwade Lundee to take the Field.

hey Re-cat to ndon-erry.

On Apr. 17th, Lundee thought fit to Call a Council of War, and Order'd that Colonel Cuningham and Colonel Richards, who, two Days before, came into the River Loughſoyle with their Regiments from England, ſhou'd be Members of it. Accordingly they Met, and with other Gentlemen either equally Diſaffected, or at beſt as little acquainted with the Condition of the Town, and the Reſolution of the People, they at laſt Concluded, That there was no Proviſion in the Town of London-Derry, for the preſent Gariſon, and the two Regiments a-Board, for above a Week, or Ten Days at moſt; and it appearing that the Place was not Tenable againſt a Well-appointed Army, therefore it was not convenient, for His Majeſty's Service, to Land the two Regiments: But, on the contrary, conſidering their preſent Circumſtances, and the Likelihood that the Enemy wou'd ſoon poſſeſs themſelves of that Place, it was thought moſt convenient, That the Principal-Officers ſhou'd privately Withdraw themſelves, aſwell for their own Preſervation, as in hopes that the Inhabitants, by a timely Capitulation, might make Terms the better with the Enemy. After this Reſolution, an Inſtrument was Prepared, to be Subſcrib'd by the Gentlemen and Chief-Citizens, and to be ſent to King James, who was advanc'd in Perſon, with his Army, as far as St. John's-Town. Captain White was ſent out to the King, to receive Propoſals from Him; and it was at the ſame time Agreed with Lieutenant-General Hamilton, That he ſhould not March the Army within Four Miles of the Town. But, contrary to this Agreement, King James, upon the Confidence given him, that the Town wou'd Surrender, at the Sight of his Formidable Army, Advanc'd at the Head of it, before the Walls, on the 18th of April. But meeting with a warm Reception, which put his Men into ſome Diſorder, His Majeſty retir'd to Saint John's-Town. In the mean-time, Mr. Muckeridge (the Town-Clerk) gave the People ſome Intimation of the Proceedings at the Council of War: Which Diſcovery ſo enrag'd them againſt the Governor and his Council, that they finding themſelves in Danger, began to make their Eſcape in Confuſion. The Governor could not ſo eaſily retire, and therefore thought fit to keep his Chamber. A Council being Appointed there, Mr. Walker and Major Baker endeavour'd to perſwade him to Continue his Government: But he poſitively refuſing to Concern himſelf, they, out of reſpect to his Commiſſion, ſuffer'd him to Diſguiſe himſelf, and in a Sally for Relief of Culmore, to paſs in a Boat, with a Load of Match on his Back; from whence he went to Scotland, and was there ſecur'd and ſent to London, to Anſwer for the Miſcarriages laid to his Charge.

1689.

The Town diſpos'd to Surrender.

The Gariſon of London-Derry being thus encourag'd to Maintain the Town, Unanimouſly Reſolv'd to Chuſe Mr. Walker and Major Baker to be their Governors: But theſe Gentlemen modeſtly declin'd the Office, and ſent a Letter to Colonel Cuningham, deſiring him to undertake the Charge; but he pretending that he was, by his Inſtructions, oblig'd to obey the Orders of Colonel Lundee, refus'd the Propoſal, and return'd into England, where both he and Colonel Richards were deſervedly Caſhier'd. Upon this Refuſal, Mr. Walker and Major Baker accepted the Government of the Gariſon, and Regimented the Men in the Town, to to the Number of 7000, under 8 Colonels, and 333 Inferior-Officers. It was a Bold Undertaking, in this Brave Divine, and Major Baker, to Maintain, againſt a Formidable Army Commanded by a King in Perſon, an ill-fortify'd Town, with a Gariſon compos'd of poor People frighten'd from their own Homes, and without a proportionable Number of Horſe to Sally out, or Engineers to Inſtruct 'em in the neceſſary Works. On Apr. 20. King James inveſted the Place, and the next Day began to Batter it, of which the Governours ſent an Account to England by Mr. Bennet, acquainting King William with their Reſolutions of Defence, and imploring a ſpeedy Aſſiſtance. Several Attacks were made by the Beſiegers, and as many Sallies by the Beſieged, in both which the latter had always the Advantages; and they would have had leſs Reaſon to fear either the Numbers or Rage of their Enemies without, if they had not had the more cruel ones of Famine and Sickneſs within.

K. James retires to Dublin.

On Apr. 29. King James retir'd from the Camp to Meet his Parliament at Dublin, where on May 7. He made a Speech, wherein He told 'em,

" That the Exemplary Loyalty which that Nation expreſs'd to him, at a Time when others " of his Subjects ſo undutifully mis-behaved themſelves to him, or ſo baſely betray'd him; and their " Seconding his Deputy as they did, in this bold " and reſolute Aſſerting his Right, in preſerving " that Kingdom for him, and putting it in a Poſture of Defence, made him reſolute to come to " them, and to venture his Life with them, in Defence of their Liberties and his own Right: " That to his great Satisfaction, he had not only found them ready to Serve him, but that " their Courage had equall'd their Zeal: That he " had always been for Liberty of Conſcience, and " againſt Invading any Man's Right or Liberty, having ſtill in Mind that Saying of Holy Writ, Do " as you would be done to, for this is the Law and " the Prophets: That it was this Liberty of Conſcience " he gave, which his Enemies, both at Home and " Abroad, dreaded to have Eſtabliſh'd by Law in " all his Dominions; and made them ſet themſelves up againſt him, though for different " Reaſons; ſeeing that if he had once Setled it, " his People (in the Opinion of the one) would " have been too happy, and (in the Opinion of the " ther) too great: That this Argument was " made uſe of to perſwade their own People to " join with them, and ſo many of his Subjects " to uſe him as they had done; but nothing " ſhould ever perſwade him to change his Mind " as to that, and whereſoever he was Maſter, he " deſign'd, God willing, to Eſtabliſh it by Law, " and have no other Teſt or Diſtinction but that " of Loyalty, expecting their Concurrence in ſo " Chriſtian a Work, and in making Laws againſt " Prophaneneſs and againſt all ſorts of Debauchery: " That he ſhould moſt readily Conſent to the making " ſuch good wholſom Laws as might be for the " Good of the Nation, the Improvement of Trade, " and relieving ſuch as had been injur'd by the " late Act of Settlement, as far forth as might " be conſiſtent with Reaſon, Juſtice, and the " Publick Good of his People: That as he ſhould " do his Part to make them Happy and Rich, " he made no Doubt of their Aſſiſtance, by enabling him to oppoſe the unjuſt Deſigns of his " Enemies, and to make that Nation flouriſh: " That to encourage them the more to it, they " knew with how great Generoſity and Kindneſs " the Moſt Chriſtian King gave ſure Retreat to " the Queen, his Son, and Himſelf, when they " were forc'd out of England, and came to ſeek " for Protection and Safety in his Kingdoms; " how he embrac'd his Intereſt, and gave him " ſuch Supplies of all ſorts, as enabled him to " come to them, which without his obliging Aſ- 1689. " ſiſtance he could not have done; and that this " he did at a Time when he had ſo many conſiderable Enemies to deal with, and ſtill continu'd ſo to do. His Majeſty concluded as he " had begun, and aſſur'd them, he was as Senſible as they could deſire of the Signal Loyalty " they had expreſs'd to him; and that he ſhould " make it his chief Study, as it had always " been, to make them and all his Subjects " Happy.

This Speech being ended, and the King withdrawn, Sir Richard Neagle, Attorney-General, who was choſen Speaker of the Commons, extoll'd to that Houſe their great Obligations to the King of France, and recommended it as very proper for Both Houſes to return His Majeſty Thanks for " his Gracious Speech, and to deſire Count " D' Avaux to do the ſame to his Moſt Chriſtian " Majeſty on their Behalf for his Generous Aſſi- " ſtance". Theſe Addreſſes were drawn up and preſented accordingly, and then a Bill was brought in containing a Recognition of the King's Title, and an Abhorrence of the Prince of Orange's Uſurpation, and Defection of the Engliſh. The next Day the King Publiſh'd a Declaration to all his Loving Subjects in the Kingdom of England, promiſing a Full Pardon to all his Subjects, if in Twenty-four Days after his Appearance in Perſon among 'em, they would return to their Obedience, by deſerting his Enemies, and joining with Him: And then He concludes, But if after this Our Gracious Condeſcenſion they ſhall yet continue to aſſiſt Our Enemies and Rebels, We do, before God, Charge all the Blood which ſhall be afterward ſhed, upon them and their Adherents; and We doubt not, by the Bleſſing of God upon our Arms, to force the moſt obſtinate to their Duty, tho', as We have made appear in reducing Our Rebellious Subjects in this Kingdom, We deſire to uſe no other than Lenity and Mercy.

Act of Settlement repeal'd.

On May 12. A Bill was brought into the Houſe of Commons by Chief-Juſtice Nugent, for Repealing the Act of Settlement, which, without any Oppoſition, was Read Three Times and ſent to the Lords. In the Upper Houſe the Biſhop of Meath very learnedly argued againſt the Bill, alledging, amongſt other Objections, " That no Pe- " nalty was provided on ſuch as enter'd Eſtates " without Injunctions; nor Conſiderations for Im- " provements; nor Saving for Remainders; nor " Time given to Tenants and Poſſeſſors to remove " their Stock and Corn; nor Proviſions for Proteſtant Widows; and that it allow'd only Repri- " ſals for Original Purchaſe-Money, which was hard " to make out, and was an Injury to the Second " or Third Purchaſer". But notwithſtanding the Validity of theſe Reaſons, back'd by an Addreſs to King James from Judge Keating, in Behalf of the Purchaſers under the Act of Settlement; and notwithſtanding His Majeſty's Anſwer to Keating, That he would not do Evil that Good might come on't; yet Chancellor Filton's Arguments prevail'd, and the Bill receiv'd the Royal Aſſent, and paſs'd into an Act: Nor indeed could it be expected otherwiſe, the Majority of Both Houſes conſiſting of Roman-Catholicks, on whom King James had his Sole Dependance, and who were the Sons and Deſcendants of thoſe Perſons that had forfeited their Eſtates for their Bloody Rebellion in 1641.

Act of Attainder.

To give ſtill a more fatal Blow, there was an Act of Attainder paſs'd in Parliament, in order to which every Member of the Houſe of Commons, return'd the Names of all ſuch Proteſtant Gentlemen as lived near them, or in the County or Borough for which they Serv'd. When this Bill was preſented to the King for his Aſſent, the Speaker of the Houſe of Commons told him; That many

1689. many were Attainted in that Act upon ſuch Evidence as ſatisfied the Houſe, and the reſt upon Common Fame. In this Black Act there were no fewer Attainted than Two Arch-Biſhops, One Duke, Seventeen Earls, Seven Counteſſes, Twenty-eight Viſcounts, Two Viſcounteſſes, Seven Biſhops, Eighteen Barons, Thirty-three Baronets, Fifty-one Knights, Eighty-three Clergy-men, Two Thouſand One Hundred Eighty Two Eſquires and Gentlemen: And all of them, unheard, declar'd Traitors and adjudged to ſuffer the Pains of Death and Forfeiture. The famous Proſcription at Rome, during the laſt Triumvirate, came not up, in ſome reſpects to the Horrors of this; for there were Condemn'd in this little Kingdom more than double the Number that were Proſcrib'd through the vaſt Extent of the Roman-Empire. And to make this of Ireland yet the more terrible and unavoidable, the Act itſelf was conceal'd, and no Proteſtant allow'd a Copy of it till Four Months after it was Paſs'd; whereas in that of Rome, the Names of the Perſons Proſcrib'd were affix'd upon all the Publick Places of the City, the very Day the Proſcription was Decreed, and thereby Opportunity was given to many to preſerve themſelves by a ſpeedy Flight. This Anti-Parliament, (if I may ſo call it) after they had made ſome other Acts, and amongſt the reſt one for Liberty of Conſcience, was Prorogued on the 20th of July, to the 12th of January enſuing; and ſo ended this Seſſion, whoſe Proceeding occaſion'd no leſs Diſturbance in the Kingdom of Ireland than the War itſelf.

Inſolence of Popery in Ireland.

It was not thought enough that Tyrconnel had ſtopp'd the Maintenance of the Univerſity of Dublin, but upon King James's Arrival, the Vice-Preſident, Fellows and Scholars were all further proceeded againſt, and turn'd out; their Furniture, Library, and Communion-Plate Seiz'd, and every thing that belong'd to the College, and to the Private Fellows and Scholars, taken away. All this was done, notwithſtanding that when they waited upon King James at his firſt Coming to Dublin, he was pleas'd to promiſe them; That he would preſerve them in their Liberties and Properties, and rather augment than diminiſh their Privileges and Immunities, that had been granted them by his Predeceſſors. In the Houſe they put a Gariſon and turn'd the Chappel into a Magazine, and the Chambers into Priſons for Proteſtants. One More, a Popiſh Prieſt, was made Provoſt, and one Mackarty, alſo a Prieſt, Library-Keeper, and the whole deſign'd for them and their Fraternity. One Arch-Biſhoprick, ſeveral Biſhopricks, and a great many other Dignities and Livings of the Church were deſignedly kept Vacant, and the Revenues firſt paid into the Exchequer, and afterwards diſpos'd of to Titular Biſhops and Prieſts; while in the mean-time the Cures lay neglected, ſo that it appear'd plainly that the Deſign was to deſtroy the Succeſſion of the Proteſtant Clergy-men. At length Things came to that Height, that moſt of the Churches in and about Dublin were Seiz'd upon by the Government, and Lutterel, Governour of that City, Iſſued out his Order, Commanding all Proteſtants, who were not Houſe-keepers, to depart out of the ſaid City; and all ſuch as were Houſe-keepers, to deliver up their Arms, both Offenſive and Defenſive; and likewiſe forbidding above Five Proteſtants meeting any-where upon pain of Death, or ſuch other Puniſhment as a Court-Martial ſhould think fit. The Governour being ask'd, whether this was deſign'd to hinder Meeting in Churches? He anſwer'd, this was deſign'd to prevent their Aſſembling there, as well as in other Places; and accordingly all the Proteſtant Churches were ſhut up throughout the whole Kingdom.

Progreſs of the Siege of London-Derry.

The Siege of London-Derry was carried on with the utmoſt Efforts, and the Place reduc'd to the laſt Extremity, when about the Middle of June, Major-General Kirke, with a Squadron from England, with Men, Proviſion and Arms, came into the Lough, but for above Six Weeks lay there at a Diſtance, not able to reach and relieve the Town. In the mean-time Major Baker died on June 20. to the great Loſs and Grief of the Beſieged: And on the other hand, Monſieur de Roſe, the French-General, came in Perſon to Command the Iriſh-Camp, much to the Encouragement of the Beſiegers. When the Gariſon was brought to the Neceſſity of feeding upon Horſe-Fleſh, Dogs, Cats, Rats and Mice, Tallow, Starch, Dry'd and Salted Hides, Lieutenant-General Hamilton ſent ſome Plauſible Offers to 'em for a Temptation to Surrender; but they unanimouſly Reſolv'd to eat the Iriſh, and then one another, rather than Yield; and their Anſwer to Hamilton was, That they much wondred he ſhould expect they ſhould place any Confidence in him, that had ſo unworthily broke his Faith with King William their Sovereign: That he was once generouſly truſted, though an Enemy, and yet betray'd his Truſt, and they could not believe he had learn'd more Sincerity in an Iriſh-Camp.

1689.

This Bold Anſwer ſo enrag'd the French-General, that He Publiſh'd an Order directed to the Governors and Gariſon of London-Derry, importing, That if they did not deliver the Town to him by the Firſt of July, according to Lieutenant-General Hamilton's Propoſals, He would diſpatch his Orders as far as Bali-Shanny, Charlemont, Belfaſt, and the Barony of Iniſhoven, and Plunder all Proteſtants that were either related to the Gariſon, or of their Faction, and then drive 'em under the Walls of their Town, where they ſhould be ſuffered to Starve: But the Beſieged receiv'd this Letter with the ſame Contempt and Indignation as they had done Hamilton's Propoſals. The News of this Order being brought to Dublin, the Biſhop of Meath humbly apply'd himſelf to King James, to prevent the Execution of it. His Majeſty told that Prelate, That He had heard of the Order before, and had already countermanded it: That General Roſe was a Foreigner, and had been uſed to ſuch Proceedings, as were ſtrange to Us, tho' common in other Places; and that if he had been his own Subject, He wou'd have call'd him to an Account for it. But in Spight of Royal Clemency, about Seven Thouſand Poor Proteſtants were brought under the Walls of London-Derry, where they muſt have famiſh'd if the Gariſon had not erected a Gallows in View of the Beſiegers, threatning to Hang all the Priſoners they had taken during the Siege, by way of Repriſal. This Sight of the Gallows, and an importunate Letter of the Priſoners who were to ſuffer, did at laſt prevail upon Hamilton, ſo that on the 4th of July, the poor half-ſtarv'd Proteſtants had Leave to return home: And this Stratagem prov'd only to the Benefit of the Gariſon, who crowded Five Hundred of their Uſeleſs People among the Naked Proteſtants under the Walls, who paſs'd undiſtinguiſh'd with 'em, and in Exchange they got ſome Able and Strong Men out of their Numbers.

Deplorable Eſtate of the Town.

By this time the Scarcity of the vileſt Eatables was increas'd to ſuch a degree, that they began to be afraid of the Neceſſity of preying upon one another: And it is remarkable, that a certain Gentleman, who was Young and Corpulent, thought himſelf mark'd out for a Meal to the gaping Soldiers; and therefore thought fit to hide himſelf for three days. Under this diſmal Scene of Deſpair, Mr. Walker, the Governour, remembred himſelf to be a Divine as well as a Military Commander; and therefore Preach'd in the Cathedral before the Gariſon; and reminded them of the many Inſtances of the Divine Providence, ſhown to them ſince the beginning of

1689. of the Siege; and endeavour'd to assure them, that if they plac'd their Confidence in God, He would not, after so miraculous a Preservation of them, suffer them to fall into the Hands of their Enemies; if they had but Faith and Courage, they need not doubt a speedy Deliverance. This Discourse seem'd to come not only from a Christian Zeal, but ev'n from a Spirit of Prophecy; for about an Hour after Sermon, the Garison discover'd Three Ships, which Major-General Kirke had sent to their Relief. The Montjoy of Derry, commanded by Capt. Browning, and the Phenix of Colrain by Capt. Douglas, being both loaden with Provision, were convoy'd by the Dartmouth Frigot: And after a furious firing from the Enemy on both sides the River, and the great difficulty of breaking and passing the Bomb, they did at last get up to the City; and brought unspeakable Joy and Transport to a Garison, which reckon'd only upon Two days Life, having nothing left but Nine lean Horses and a Pint of Meal to each Man. This brave and successful Undertaking so discourag'd the Enemy, that on the last of July they rais'd the Siege in the Night-time with great Confusion, and in their Retreat made a miserable Havock of the Country. The Garison of Iniskillin, under the Command of Gustavus Hamilton, Esq; had Signaliz'd themselves in many desperate Rencounters: And the day before the Siege of Derry was rais'd, they advanc'd near Twenty Miles to meet a Body of about Six Thousand Irish, upon their March under the Command of Major-General Mackarty; and at a Place call'd Newton, Butler fought and routed 'em, took Mackarty Prisoner, and kill'd and drown'd nigh Threee Thousand of them, tho' themselves were not above Two Thousand in all; and lost not above Twenty Men, with about Fifty wounded. In the mean-time King William and the English Parliament were sensible of the great Importance of the Reduction of Ireland; and there were Eighteen Regiments of Foot and Five of Horse, rais'd for that Service with good Expedition; but the providing Ships to Transport 'em, a Train of Artillery to attend 'em, and Provisions to maintain 'em, was manag'd with great Slowness and supine Negligence. This Fault was charg'd on Mr. Harbord, who out of Avarice, had engross'd to himself the Two Offices of Pay-master and Purveyor-General of the Army, till the Duke of Schonberg prevail'd with him to resign that of Purveyor to Mr. Shales. The News of raising the Siege of Londonderry, put new life into this long-depending Expedition; and many of the New Levies began to be ship'd off at Chester and Leverpoole: And General Schonberg having obtain'd leave of the Lords on July 16. to apply himself to the Commons; He return'd that Honourable House His grateful Acknowledgments, both for the great Respects and large Donative he had receiv'd from them; and presently after began his Journey toward Chester. On Aug. 12. he sail'd from thence with about Ninety Vessels of all sorts, and near Ten Thousand Men, Horse and Foot; and on the next day, after Noon, he arriv'd in the Bay of Carrick-Fergus, where the Army presently landed on Bangor-side, without Opposition. After sending out some Parties for Intelligence, he march'd his Forces to Belfast, which the Enemy had quitted, retiring to Carrick-Fergus, and where several Persons join'd him that durst not declare before. On Aug. 22. Duke Schonberg began the Siege of Carrick-Fergus; and in Four days time made such considerable Breaches, and was so ready for a general Assault, that the Garison was contented to accept what Conditions he pleas'd to offer; which were, "To be conducted with their Arms, and as much Baggage as "they could carry on their Backs, to the next Irish "Garison, which was Newry." In the mean-time the rest of the Horse, Foot and Dragoons, which for want of Transport-Ships had staid behind, were Embark'd at Highlake, and safely landed in Ireland; but the Artillery and Horses belonging to them were still at Chester. The Duke sent over his Orders for the greatest part of the Train of Artillery to be shipp'd, and the Fleet to sail with 'em, and all other Necessaries to Carlingford-Bay, while he march'd on his Army beyond Lisburn, and so thro' Hillsborough, and pitch'd his Camp at Drummore; and the next day continu'd his March to Loughbritaine, where the Iniskillin-Horse and Dragoons joyn'd him, and chearfully offer'd themselves to be an Advance-Guard to the Army. Upon this Approach, the Irish abandon'd Newry, a very strong Pass, having first set Fire to the Town; which News being brought to the General, he dispatch'd a Trumpeter to the Duke of Berwick, who commanded there, to acquaint him, That if they went on to burn in this barbarous manner, he would not give any Quarter. This Message had so good effect, that the Irish abandon'd Dundalk without doing any harm to the Town: and Duke Schonberg march'd thither, and encamp'd his Army, who were here well-refresh'd, and on Sept. 9. reinforc'd by Three Regiments of Major-General Kirk, Sir John Hanmore, and Brigadeer Stewart. The Duke design'd to have continu'd his Progress, but the Fleet with the Train of Artillery failing to come up in time to Carlingford, according to his Directions, was a great disappointment to him; so that he continu'd in an uncertain Posture, till Sept. 20. when he receiv'd Advice, That King James having gather'd all his Forces near Drogheda, advanc'd towards him. The day following, the Army of King James appear'd in Order of Battle, and a great Party of their Horse advanc'd towards the Entrenchments of the English-Camp: Several of our Officers were for an immediate Engagement, but Schonberg told 'em, Let 'em alone, we shall see what they will do; and when he saw their whole Body drawing within Cannot-shot of his Camp, yet he said still, He could not believe they design'd to Fight. However, one day seeing them form their Army into two Lines, he order'd his Foot to stand to their Arms, and his Horse to return to the Camp upon a certain Signal. The Soldiers, who were already struggling with Diseases and Want in their Tents, receiv'd these Orders with great chearfulness; but in a little time the Irish drew off, and march'd away. Tho' the English Army were impatient to Fight, yet General Schonberg seem'd wisely to consider, that the Enemy was much superiour in Horse; that his own Men were undisciplin'd, and weakned by Hunger and Sickness, while the other Army was in Health and Plenty; and that the Loss of a Battle might be attended with the Loss of Ireland. Besides, he discover'd a dangerous Conspiracy in his own Camp, carried on by some French-Papists who had Listed themselves in the Protestant-Regiments of that Nation. A Captain of one of these Regiments being informed, that Four of his Soldiers and a Drummer, who were Roman-Catholicks, design'd to go over to the Enemy; he caus'd them to be secur'd, and found Letters about one of them to Monsr. d'Avaux. Upon strict Examination, the Fellow declar'd, he had the Letters from one du Plessis, likewise a Papist; who now serv'd as a private Soldier in one of the French-Regiments, tho' he had formerly been a Captain of Horse in France, from whence he was forc'd to retire for Murther. Du Plessis being seiz'd, ingenuously confest, That he had written to King James, and to the French-Ambassador, and acquainted them, that there were divers Papists in the Three French-Regiments, whom he promis'd to bring over to the Irish-Camp, upon Condition he might have the Command of them, and his Pardon in France. He and his Five Accomplices were thereupon brought to their Trial, sentenc'd to Death by a Council of War, and accordingly Executed,

Great ſufferings of the Engliſh Army.

The Engliſh Army ſuffer'd extremely much from a raging Sickneſs of Gripes and Flux, occaſion'd by the Dampneſs of the Place, the Badneſs of the Weather, and ill Proviſions, which ſwept away a great number of brave Officers: Among the reſt there died Sir Edward Deering, a Gallant Gentleman, who had contributed more than any Man in the County of Kent, towards bringing about the Happy Revolution; Colonel Henry Wharton, a bold, brisk and brave Man, Brother to the preſent Ld. Wharton; Sir Thomas Gower and Col. Hungerford, two Young Gentlemen of diſtinguiſh'd Merit. Of common Soldiers there periſh'd above Two Thouſand, and as many Sick were ſhipp'd off to be tranſported to Belfaſt, but of them not above Eleven Hundred came aſhoar, the reſt dying at Sea. Nay, ſo great was the Mortality, that by the beginning of the following Year, near Two Thirds of the Army that was tranſported over, were entirely loſt.

Meeting of the Parliament

The Engliſh Parliament, in purſuance of their late Adjournment, met at Weſtminſter, on Friday Sept. 20. when His Majeſty ſignified His Pleaſure to both Houſes, that they ſhould farther Adjourn to the 19th of Octob. next; and that he intended they ſhould then Sit, whereof he had Order'd Notice to be given by Proclamation; which was accordingly Publiſh'd on Sept. 26. and on Saturday, Oct. 19. the King came to the Houſe of Lords, and made this Gracious Speech, on the Occaſion of their Meeting.

My Lords and Gentlemen;

King's Speech to Both Houſes.

" THough the laſt Sitting continu'd ſo long, " that perhaps it might have been more A- " greeable to you, in relation to your Private Con- " cerns, not to have met again ſo ſoon; yet the " Intereſt of the Publick, lays an indiſpenſable Ob- " ligation upon Me to call you together at this " time.

" In your laſt Meeting, you gave me ſo ma- " ny Teſtimonies of your Affection, as well as " Confidence in Me, that I do not at all queſtion, " but in this I ſhall receive freſh Proofs of both.

" I eſteem it one of the greateſt Misfortunes " can befal Me, that in the beginning of my Reign, " I am forc'd to ask ſuch large Supplies; tho' I " have this Satisfaction, that they are deſir'd for " no other Purpoſes, but the carrying on thoſe " Wars, into which I entred with your Advice, " and Aſſurance of your Aſſiſtance: Nor can I " doubt of the Bleſſing of God upon an Under- " taking, wherein I did not engage out of a vain " Ambition, but from the Neceſſity of Oppoſing " thoſe who have ſo viſibly diſcover'd their Deſigns " of deſtroying our Religion and Liberties.

" It is well known, how far I have Expos'd " My Self to reſcue this Nation from the Dangers " that threatned, not only your Liberty, but the " Proteſtant Religion in general; of which the " Church of England is one of the greateſt Sup- " ports, and for the Defence whereof, I am ready " again to venture my Life.

My Lords and Gentlemen;

" That which I have to ask of you at preſent " is, That what you think fit to give towards the " Charges of the War for this next Year, may be " done without delay: And there is one Reaſon " which more particularly obliges Me to preſs you " to a ſpeedy Determination in this Matter, be- " cauſe this next Month there is appointed, at the " Hague, a General-Meeting of the Miniſters of all " the Princes and States concern'd in this War a- " gainſt France, in Order to Concert the Meaſures 1689. " for the next Campain: And till I know your In- " tentions, I ſhall not only be uncertain My Self " what Reſolutions to take; but Our Allies will " be under the ſame Doubts, unleſs they ſee Me " Supported by your Aſſiſtance. Beſides, if I know " not in time what you will do, I cannot make " ſuch Proviſions as will be requiſite; but ſhall be " expos'd to the ſame Inconveniences the next Year, " which were the Cauſe that the Preparations for " this were neither ſo Effectual nor Expeditious " as was neceſſary: The Charge will alſo be con- " ſiderably leſſen'd, by giving time to provide " things in their proper Seaſon, and without Con- " fuſion.

" I have no other Aim in this, but to be in a " Condition to Attack Our Enemies in ſo Vigo- " rous a manner, as by the help of God, in a " little time may bring us to a laſting and honour- " able Peace; by which my Subjects may be freed " from the Extraordinary Expences of a Lingring " War: And that I can have no greater Satisfa- " ction than in contributing to their Eaſe, I hope " I have already given Proof.

" That you may be ſatisfy'd how the Money " has been laid out, which you have already giv'n, " I have directed the Accompts to be laid before " you, when-ever you think fit to call for them.

My Lords and Gentlemen;

" I have one Thing more to Recommend to " you, which is, the Diſpatch of a Bill of Indemni- " ty; that the Minds of My Good Subjects being " quieted, We may all Unanimouſly Concur to " Promote the Welfare and Honour of the King- " dom.

After a ſhort Prorogation, Both Houſes met again, on Wedneſday, Oct. 23. when the King came, and was pleas'd to ſpeak to Both Houſes to this Effect: That He having ſpoken to 'em ſo lately, He need not ſay any thing to 'em now, Matters having not been alter'd ſince that time; and therefore He referr'd 'em to what He had ſaid to 'em when he was laſt there, and deſired they would be ſpeedy in their Reſolutions. Then Both Houſes went into a Conſideration of His Majeſty's Speech; and Both Houſes return'd their Thanks: The Commons Reſolving to ſtand by and aſſiſt His Majeſty, in Reducing Ireland, and joining with his Allies abroad in a Vigorous Proſecution of the War againſt France. It is remarkable; That this Speech, which met with univerſal Applauſe, was compos'd by the King Himſelf, who, the day before, produc'd it to the Council, written with His Own Hand; telling 'em, He knew moſt of his Predeceſſors were us'd to commit the Drawing up of ſuch Speeches to their Miniſters, who generally had their Private Aims and Intereſts in View; to prevent which, He had thought fit to write it himſelf in French, becauſe He was not ſo great a Maſter of the Engliſh Tongue: Therefore He deſired them to look it over, and change what they found amiſs, that it might be Tranſlated into Engliſh. At the ſame Council, the Marqueſs of Halifax declar'd, That for ſeveral Reaſons which he forbore to mention, he muſt deſire to be excus'd from doing the Office of Speaker in the Houſe of Lords; which was readily granted him, and Sir Robert Atkins, Lord Chief-Baron ſupply'd his Place.

King's Speech at their next Meeting.

On October 26. The Commons Reſolv'd, That the Earl of Peterborough and Earl of Salisbury ſhould be Impeached of High-Treaſon, for departing from their Allegiance, and being reconcil'd to the Church of Rome; and Order'd, That Sir Edw. Hales and Obadiah Walker, be Committed to the Tower for High-Treaſon, in being Reconcil'd to the Church of Rome, and for other High Crimes and Miſdemeanours. And on Octob. 28. The Earl of Reſolution of the Commons againſt Apoſtates to Popery.

1689. of Caſtlemain was remanded to the Tower for the ſame Reaſon: But the Benefit of Habeas-Corpus was granted to the Lords Preſton and Forbes, and Sir John Fenwick, upon ſufficient Bail; and Mr. Baron Jenner had a Week's-time to anſwer the Matters laid to his Charge, and in the mean time was only to continue in the Cuſtody of a Serjeant at Arms. The ſame eaſie Confinement was alſo granted to Mr. Graham and Mr. Burton, the Two great Exacters and Oppreſſors in the late Reign. And tho' it was Reſolved by the Commons, That a Bill be brought in for inflicting Pains and Penalties upon ſuch Perſons as have been the Occaſion of the Violating the Laws and Liberties of this Kingdom, in the Two late Reigns; yet nothing was Inflicted upon any of 'em: But ſoon after the Attorney-General was Order'd to bring in a Bill of Indempnity, in ſuch ample Manner, as might anſwer His Majeſty's Gracious Intentions and Clemency; while the King Order'd the Accompts of the Expences of the laſt Summer, and of the State of the War for the enſuing Year, to be laid before them: Who having peruſed the ſame, Unanimouſly Voted, That for thoſe Purpoſes, a Supply ſhou'd be Given to Their Majeſties, not exceeding the Sum of Twenty hundred thouſand Pounds, to to be added to the Publick-Revenue.

Reſolution of a Supply.

Reſolution againſt Colonel Ludlow;

On Nov. 6th, the Commons Reſolved, That an Humble Addreſs be Preſented to His Majeſty, To Iſſue out A Proclamation for the Apprehending Colonel Ludlow, who ſtands Attainted of High-Treaſon, by Act of Parliament, for the Murther of King Charles I. And that His Majeſty wou'd be pleas'd to propoſe a Reward to ſuch as ſhall Apprehend him. The King comply'd with this Addreſs, and Publiſh'd His Proclamation to that effect, on Nov. 14th, which was known to be after his ſafe Arrival in Holland with the Dutch-Ambaſſadors, from whence he return'd to his Retirement at Vevay, a ſmall Town in the County of Vaux in Switzerland, where he Liv'd to a great Age, and left behind him thoſe Memoirs which have been ſince Publiſh'd, and do apparently ſhew that he was One of the pure Republicans, and as much an Enemy to Cromwel, as to his Lawful King. On the ſame Day, it was Reſolv'd, That a Bill be brought in, for the Forfeiture of the Eſtate and Honour of George late Lord Jeffreys (late Lord-Chancellor of England;) and it was recommended to Colonel Tipping to take Care of it. And, for a farther Terror to all the late Inſtruments of Popery and Arbitrary-Power, the Houſe Agreed, on the " 8th of November, That the Pecuniary Penalties " incurr'd by all Privy-Councellors, Lords-Lieutenants, Deputy-Lieutenants, Militia-Officers, Juſtices " of the Peace, and by any other Perſons who had " accepted or exercis'd any Office, or Place of " Profit, either Military or Civil, (other than ſuch " as are now Officers in Their Majeſties Army or " Fleet) contrary to an Act of 25 Car. II. [En- " titul'd, An Act for Preventing Dangers which may " happen from Popiſh-Recuſants] ſhou'd be ſpeedily " Levy'd, and apply'd to the Publick-Service. And the Lords, in the mean-time, Appointed a Committee, " To Examine, Who were the Adviſers " and Proſecutors of the Murders of the Ld. Ruſſel, " Col. Sidney, Sir Thomas Armſtrong, Mr. Corniſh, " and others; and Who were the Adviſers of Iſſuing " out Writs of Quo Warranto's againſt Corporations, " and Who were their Regulators; and alſo, Who " were the Publick Aſſerters of the Diſpenſing-Power.

And againſt the Inſtruments of Popery and Arbitrary-Power.

Dr Walker has Thanks and a Gratuity, for his great Services.

On Monday Nov. 18th, on a Petition of Doctor Walker, it was Reſolv'd by the Commons, " That " an Humble Addreſs be Preſented to His Majeſty, " That He wou'd pleaſe to Diſtribute the Sum of " Ten thouſand Pounds among the Widows and " Orphans of ſuch as were Slain and Died in the " Siege of London-Derry, and among the Clergy-Men " that were there." And on Nov. 19th, Doctor Walker was Call'd in, and Mr. Speaker gave him the Thanks of the Houſe; and deſir'd him, in the Name of the Houſe, to Thank all thoſe who had Serv'd under him at the Siege of London-Derry, in Defence of the ſaid Town. 1689.

Complaint of Ill-Victualling the Navy.

On Nov. 23d, the Houſe being Inform'd, That great Quantities of Corrupt and Unwholſom Victuals had been furniſh'd to the Navy, this laſt Summer, which had been the Occaſion, as was conceiv'd, of great Sickneſs and Mortality in the Fleet; and the ſame being Atteſted by ſeveral Members of the Houſe, upon their own Knowledge: It was Reſolved, " That Sir John Parſons, Sir Ri- " chard Haddock, Alderman Sturt, and Mr. Ni- " cholas Fenn, Victuallers of the Fleet, ſhou'd be " ſent for in the Cuſtody of the Serjeant at Arms, " to Anſwer to the ſaid Complaint." It was ſome Cover and Protection to 'em, that, within few Days after, His Majeſty was pleas'd to Appoint Thomas Papillon, Simon Maine, John Agar, Humphry Ayles, and James Howe Eſqrs; Commiſſioners for Victualling Their Majeſties Navy.

While the Commons were Enquiring into the Miſcarriages of Ireland, they found, by the Information of Dr. Walker, that they were chiefly owing to the Neglect of Mr. Shales (Purveyor-General to the Army,) by whoſe Default, Duke Schonberg had waited for Artillery, Horſes and Carriages, above a Month; that the Soldiers had all along wanted Bread, the Horſes Shooes and Provender, and the Surgeons proper Medicines for the Sick. Whereupon it was Reſolved, Nov. 26th, " That an Humble Addreſs be Preſented to His " Majeſty, That Mr. John Shales (Commiſſary- " General of the Proviſions for the Army in Ireland) " be forthwith taken into Cuſtody, and all his " Accompts, Papers and Stores ſecur'd, and that " a fit Perſon be put in his Place; and that His " Majeſty wou'd be pleas'd to Impower Duke " Schonberg to do the ſame. On the next Day, Major Wildman acquainted the Houſe, That he had attended His Majeſty with that Addreſs: Who was pleas'd to give this Anſwer; That He had ſome time ſince taken Order therein, being inform'd of the ſaid Captain Shales's Miſdemeanors in his Employment, and had Written to the Duke of Schonberg for that Purpoſe; a Copy of which Letter was brought to the Houſe, and there read: And that His Majeſty was pleas'd farther to add, That He verily believ'd, what was deſir'd, was already effectually done; though, the Wind being contrary, He had not as yet receiv'd any Account thereof from Ireland.

Addreſs againſt Commiſſary Shales

On Nov. 30th, Mr. Comptroller deliver'd this Meſſage from His Majeſty, in Writing:

WILLIAM R.

Meſſage from the King to the Commons.

HIS Majeſty having already Declar'd His Reſolutions to Proſecute the War in Ireland with the utmoſt Vigour, and being deſirous to uſe the Means that may be moſt Satisfactory and Effectual in order to it; Is graciouſly pleas'd, That this Houſe do Recommend a Number of Perſons, not exceeding Seven, to be Commiſſion'd by His Majeſty to take Care of the Proviſions, and ſuch other Preparations as ſhall be Neceſſary for that Service.

His Majeſty is farther pleas'd to let the Houſe know, That upon Conſideration of the Addreſs of the 11*th of* November, He gives them Leave to Nominate ſome Perſons to Go over into Ireland, to take an Accompt of the Number of the Army there, and the State and Condition of it; who ſhall receive His Majeſty's Orders accordingly. But, on Dec. 2d, It was Reſolv'd, " That this Houſe doth humbly De- " ſire to be Excus'd from Recommending any Per- " ſons to His Majeſty, to be Employ'd in the " Service of Ireland; and humbly leave it to His " Majeſty's great Wiſdom, to Nominate fit-Perſons " for that Service. And whereas and Addreſs " had been Prepar'd, and Preſented to His Ma- " jeſty, That He wou'd pleaſe to let this Houſe

" know,

1689. "know, Who Recommended Commiſſary Shales "to His Majeſty, and Advis'd his being Employ'd? Mr. Dolben Reported, That the Committee had Attended His Majeſty with that Addreſs, and that His Majeſty was pleas'd to give this Anſwer: Gentlemen, It is impoſſible for Me to give you an Anſwer to this Queſtion. On the ſame Day, Mr. Speaker Attended His Majeſty at the Banqueting-Houſe in Whitehall, and Preſented the Thanks of the Houſe to His Majeſty, for His Moſt Gracious Meſſage of Saturday laſt, with the Reſolution of the Houſe upon it. And His Majeſty was pleas'd to give this Anſwer: Gentlemen, I ſhall take all the Care that may be, to Carry on the War in Ireland with Vigour, and to Employ ſuch Perſons as may be moſt proper for the Service; and I doubt not but that I ſhall have the Aſſiſtance of the Houſe of Commons, to Carry it on in ſuch a Manner, as may be according to your Deſires, and My Intentions.

The King's Anſwer to the Commons.

But the Complaints of Miſmanagement were ſo great, that, on Dec. 14th, the Houſe Reſolved, "That an Humble Addreſs be Preſented to His "Majeſty, To lay before Him, the Ill-Conduct "and Succeſs of our Affairs, in reference to Ireland, "the Armies and Fleet: And humbly to Deſire "His Majeſty, That He will pleaſe to take it "into His Conſideration, and, in His Wiſdom, "to find out the Authors of theſe Miſcarriages; "and to Appoint Affairs to be Manag'd by Perſons Unſuſpected, and more to the Safety of "His Majeſty, and Satisfaction of His Subjects.

On Dec. 16th, His Majeſty came to the Houſe of Lords, and the Commons being ſent for up, He gave His Royal-Aſſent to, (1.) An Act, Granting to Their Majeſties an Aid of Two Shillings in the Pound, for One Year. (2.) An Act for Declaring the Rights of the Subject, and Settling the Succeſſion of the Crown. (3.) An Act for Naturalizing William Watts an Infant. (4.) An Act for Declaring John Rogerſon to be a Natural-born Subject of this Realm. The Commons returning to their Houſe, Deſir'd Mr. Speaker to Print his Speech made this Day to His Majeſty, upon Preſenting the Money-Bill, which was as follows.

Bills Paſſed.

May it Pleaſe Your Majeſty;

The Speaker's Speech to the King.

"YOur Dutiful and Loyal Subjects, the Commons in this preſent Parliament Aſſembled, "taking into Conſideration, the Great and Neceſſary Expences Your Majeſty will ſuſtain, in the "Proſecution of the War, wherein Your Majeſty "is now Engaged, did, at their Firſt Meeting in "this preſent Seſſion, Unanimouſly Agree, To "Preſent Your Majeſty with a Supply of Two Millions; the Greateſt-part of which they Reſolv'd "to Charge upon their Lands, as the moſt Speedy "and Effectual Way of Raiſing preſent Money "for this Occaſion. But finding that great Abuſes "had been committed, in Aſſeſſing the late Supply "of the like Nature, they have endeavour'd to "Provide againſt thoſe Abuſes in Raiſing of this "preſent Tax; the Conſideration whereof hath "taken up much of their Time, and produced a "Bill of an unuſual Length, which I now Offer "to Your Majeſty's Gracious Acceptance.

They have likewiſe Agreed upon a Bill for Declaring of their Rights and Liberties, which were "ſo Notoriouſly Violated in the late Reign; humbly Deſiring Your Majeſty to give Life to it, by "the Royal-Aſſent: That ſo it may remain not "only a Security to them from the like Attempts "hereafter, but be a Laſting Monument to all "Poſterity, of what they owe to Your Majeſty "for their Deliverance.

Proceedings againſt the L. Griffin.

In the mean-time, the Houſe of Lords had often requir'd the Lord Griffin to Attend: But he ſtill refuſing to Appear, Their Lordſhips Deſir'd the King, by an Addreſs, to Summon him, by His Royal-Proclamation, at ſuch a Day as His Majeſty ſhou'd Appoint, either to their Houſe, (if then actually Sitting) or to One of the Secretaries of State. His Lordſhip being accordingly Summon'd, Surrender'd himſelf to the Lord Nottingham: And on the 19th of October, having made his Appearance before the Houſe of Lords, the Speaker told him, That he knew what he had to do, before his Sitting in that Houſe. Whereupon his Lordſhip deſir'd Time to Conſider of taking the Oaths, he not being Prepar'd for it: Which was readily Granted. But immediately after this, a Pacquet was Intercepted, which plainly Diſcover'd how little he was inclin'd to Own the preſent Government. This Diſcovery happen'd in the following Manner. —— His Lordſhip having caus'd a large Pewter-Bottle to be made, with a Double-Bottom, order'd his Cook, at an Unſeaſonable Hour of the Night, to get the Falſe-Bottom Sodder'd. The Pewterer, finding a Pacquet between the two Bottoms of the Bottle, began to Suſpect ſomething; and the Cook not giving him a Satisfactory Anſwer about its Contents, he made-bold to Open it. The Superſcription of ſeveral Letters Directed to King James, the Duke of Berwick, &c. juſtify'd the Pewterer's Suſpicion; who immediately Seiz'd the Lord Griffin's Cook, and Carry'd him to One of the Secretaries of State: But he being gone to Bed, and his Servants refuſing to admit the Pewterer to their Maſter's Preſence, the Lord Griffin, who by this time began to apprehend what had befaln his Meſſenger, took this Opportunity to make his Eſcape. Beſides the Letters, there was found an Account of ſome private Reſolutions of the Council, and an Exact Liſt of all the Land and Sea-Forces of England. Whereupon the Lord Griffin's Houſe and Papers were Search'd, his Lady Committed to the Tower, ſeveral ſuſpected Perſons Arreſted, and the Cuſtom-Houſe-Officers Order'd to Stop all Unknown Perſons, that offer'd to Croſs the Seas without Paſſes. The Lord Griffin having Abſconded himſelf ſome few Days, and finding it difficult to go out of the Kingdom, Surrender'd himſelf to the Earl of Shrewsbury (Secretary of State,) who having Examin'd him, Committed him to the Cuſtody of a Meſſenger, from whence he was Sent to the Tower. Thereupon the Commons Appointed a Committee, to Enquire how the Lord Griffin came to know a Reſolution, which the King had communicated to Four Perſons only: And the Lords Addreſs'd His Majeſty, to let him underſtand, That the ſaid Lord being One of their Members, They were conſequently his proper Judges. The King having left the Cognizance of this Affair to the Peers, they began to Examine the Papers Intercepted in the Pewter-Bottle, which were the only Evidence againſt the Lord Griffin: And becauſe, ſome few Days before, it had been Reſolv'd in that Houſe, "That Colonel Algernoon Sidney was Unjuſtly "Condemn'd, nothing but Writings found in his "Cloſet, having been produc'd againſt him;" the Earl of Rocheſter Argu'd, from a Parity of Reaſon, in Favour of the Lord Griffin, who, after ſeveral warm Debates, was ſet at Liberty, upon ſufficient Bail.

Ld. Preſton Queſtioned.

While the Lord Griffin's Affair was depending, the Lord Preſton, Viſcount of Scotland, having Preſented to the Houſe of Lords, a Patent from King James, Dated from Verſailles, Jan. 21ſt, whereby he was created Baron of England; Their Lordſhips Voted him Guilty of High-Treaſon: But however, they thought fit to refer the Examination of that Matter to the Judges, their Aſſiſtants. My Lord Preſton pretended, That the Patent being Dated One Day before the Meeting of the Convention, which had Voted the Throne Vacant, it ought therefore to be Valid. To which it was Anſwer'd, That the Vacancy was ſuppos'd to Begin from the Moment King James left the Kingdom, whereby 1689. He Abdicated the Government. The next Day the Judges brought in the Lord Preſton Guilty of a High-Miſdemeanour, for which he was Committed to the Tower. Not long after, his Lordſhip acknowledg'd, and begg'd Pardon for his Fault, by a Petition to the Lords, which was rejected, upon his Subſcribing himſelf, Viſcount Preſton, without expreſſing of what Kingdom; the next Day he preſented another, wherein he ſtiled himſelf Viſcount of Scotland: And moreover, it being alledged in his Behalf, that by accepting a Patent from King James, he never meant an Affront to King William, but only to ſecure his own Perſon from Impriſonment, (being at that Time Proſecuted at Law by the Lord Mountague for a conſiderable Sum of Money,) he was releaſed from his Confinement without giving Bail.

Enquiry into the late Quo Warranto's

The Lords acquainted the Commons, That they had appointed a Committee to inquire who had adviſ'd the iſſuing of Quo Warranto's againſt Corporations, and deſir'd that Mr. Hamden, Junior, and Mr. Trenchard, Two of their Members, might appear before the Committee they had nam'd, to find out the Authors and Promoters of the Execution of the Lord Ruſſel, Algernoon Sidney, Sir Thomas Armſtrong, and Mr. Cornish. It is certain Mr. Hamden was able to give the Lords a great Light into that Affair, having been deeply engaged in that which was call'd the Presbyterian-Plot. Yet it is ſaid this Enquiry was not ſo much intended againſt Mr. Hamden, as againſt the Marqueſs of Halifax, who had endeavour'd Mr. Hamden's Ruine, by procuring a Note from the Duke of Monmouth, which made Hamden the Chief Accomplice with the Lord Ruſſel. But the Duke afterwards repenting of having accuſed one of his beſt Friends, earneſtly demanded his Note from King Charles II. to whom the Marqueſs had deliver'd it, and which He at laſt obtain'd on this Condition, never to return into His Majeſty's Preſence. Mr. Hamden appear'd before the Lords Committee, and made a Long Speech, wherein he rather aim'd at recommending himſelf than of diſcovering the Authors and Promoters of the Execution of his late Friends. He extoll'd his Services to the preſent Government, and plainly inſinuated, that the whole Intrigue of Inviting over the Prince of Orange, had been manag'd by himſelf, and Mr. Johnſon, a Scotch-Man. Indeed Mr. Hamden was apt to over-value his own Services and Abilities, and therefore made ſeveral Offers at being Secretary of State; but the King thought him of too warm a Temper for a Place that requires a Sedate Judicious Man. One Day Mr. Hamden, with Deſign to re-mind the King of his own Merits, repreſented to His Majeſty, that thoſe of Mr. Johnſon were ſtill left unrewarded; to which the King reply'd, That He had not forgot either Mr. Hamden or Mr. Johnſon. However neither of 'em had much Reaſon to complain, the King having named the firſt to be his Envoy into Spain, and the other into Switzerland, which Employments they both refuſed; and thereupon Mr. Cocks, upon Mr. Hamden's Recommendation, was ſent to the Switz-Cantons, and Mr. Stanhope, Brother to the Lord Cheſterfield, but recommended by his own Merit, was diſpatch'd to Madrid. About the ſame Time the Lord Paget was ſent Envoy to the Emperor, and the Lord Durſley to Holland, to relieve the Earl of Pembroke, who was made a Privy-Councellor, and ſoon after Firſt Commiſſioner of the Admiralty, in the room of Admiral Torrington, who voluntarily reſigned that Place.

The Important Bill to Settle the Rights of the Subjects, and the Succeſſion of the Crown, being paſſed the Houſe of Commons, and ſent to the Lords, their Lordſhips wiſely conſidering how far King James had gone towards the introducing the Popiſh Religion into the Nation, took ſpecial Care to prevent the like for the future, by adding a Clauſe to the Bill, "That the Kings and Queens of England ſhould be obliged at their coming to the "Crown, to take the Teſt in the Firſt Parliament "that ſhould be call'd at the Beginning of their "Reign; and that if any King or Queen of England ſhould embrace the Roman-Catholick-Religion, or Marry with a Roman-Catholick Prince "or Princeſs, their Subjects ſhould be abſolv'd of "their Allegiance; and that the Crown and Government of theſe Realms ſhould from Time to "Time deſcend to, and be enjoy'd by ſuch Perſons, being Proteſtants, as ſhould have inherited "the ſame, in Caſe the ſaid Perſons ſo reconcil'd to the Church of Rome, or Marrying a "Papiſt, as aforeſaid, were naturally dead". Some Days after, the Lords made a farther Progreſs in the Bill; and becauſe the Diſpenſing-Power was mention'd in it, as one of the chiefeſt Grievances, ſome were of Opinion, that ſuch a Power was a Prerogative inſeparable from the Crown, and that in ſome Caſes the King may Diſpenſe, if not with a Law, yet with ſome Part of it. To ſupport this Opinion, they alledg'd, That there was a Statute prohibiting all Foreign-Built Ships, or ſuch as had not been Laden in this Kingdom, to Trade to the Engliſh-Plantations in America; but that nevertheleſs, for the Good of the Nation, the King might Diſpenſe with that Statute, upon Account of the Negroe-Trade, which the Engliſh drove with the Spaniards, and of which they had cut off the Dutch. Tho' little could be ſaid in Oppoſition to thoſe Reaſons, yet becauſe they ſtrain'd too high the Royal Prerogatives, (which the Prevailing-Party deſign'd to moderate,) and ſeem'd to juſtifie the late Miſmanagements, they were rejected with ſome Heat. About this Time the Diſcontented grew ſo inſolent, being heartned by the Slow Proceedings of the Commons, that the Lords thought it neceſſary to deſire His Majeſty to cauſe the Laws againſt Papiſts to be put in Execution.

1689. Lords add a Clauſe to the Bill of Rights and Succeſſion.

Debates upon Members having Places at Court.

Towards the Beginning of December, there had been a Queſtion propounded in the Houſe of Commons, Whether a Perſon having a Place at Court, or any Dependence upon the King, ſhould be a Member of that Houſe? The Debate thereupon was very warm, but at laſt the Queſtion was carried in the Affirmative, it having been rightly urged, That if the Negative prevailed, the fitteſt Perſons for Publick Employments would remain Excluded, and be Debarr'd the Opportunity of Serving either the King or their Country. About the Middle of the Month, the Commons in a General Committee, conſidering the State of the Nation, ſome of the Diſſatisfied Members made grievous Complaints of the late Miſcarriages, and caſt them directly upon the preſent Miniſtry: And He that ſpoke the loudeſt on this Occaſion was Mr. Hamden Junior, who made a long Speech againſt thoſe that had the Management of Affairs, by ſaying; "He could not but Wonder "to ſee thoſe very Perſons in the Miniſtry whom "the Late King James had employ'd, even when "his Affairs were moſt deſperate, to Treat with "the then Prince of Orange. He alledg'd the "Example of William, Firſt Prince of Orange, "who never made uſe of the Duke of Alva's "Miniſters; of Henry IV. of France, who never "employ'd thoſe of his Competitor, the Duke of "Mayenne, and of ſeveral other Princes; and "mov'd for an Addreſs to deſire His Majeſty "to remove the Perſons He had mark'd out from "his Preſence and Councils. This Speech might have made a greater Impreſſion, but that at the ſame Time He complain'd, that ſeveral Common-Wealth's-Men were employ'd by the Government; upon which the whole Houſe broke out into a general Laughter, as knowing that He, his Father, and their

1689. their Predeceſſors had been alway reputed of the Republican-Party. Aſſoon as the Commons had recover'd their Gravity, ſeveral Members ſtood up in Defence of the Illuſtrious Perſons on whom Mr. Hamden had reflected; alledging, "That the "Reaſon why they had been deputed to the "Prince of Orange, was not becauſe they were in "King James's Intereſt, but rather, becauſe they "had all along diſapprov'd his Conduct, and as "ſuch, had the general Eſteem of the Nation, "and were moſt likely to be agreeable to His "Highneſs". However, Mr. Hamden did not altogether loſe his Point, for the Houſe Voted an Addreſs, to lay before His Majeſty the Ill Conduct and Succeſs of Affairs, and to find out the Authors of thoſe Miſcarriages. Mr. Hamden being named, among others, to draw up this Addreſs, gave People Occaſion to think, that his Principal Aim was to have the Earl of Nottingham removed, that He might himſelf ſtep into his Place of Secretary of State, to which he eagerly aſpired, as preſuming much upon his own Knowledge of Foreign Affairs. Before the Holy-days, Mr. Hamden Jun. brought in the Form of an Addreſs to the Commons, but it contain'd ſuch a tedious Detail of Miſcarriages and Misfortunes, that ſeveral Members, and Mr. Hamden the Father, ſpoke againſt it, and inſiſted to have it drawn over again; to which the other Party agreed, tho' on a different Reaſon, That it ought indeed to be drawn up in another Form, not in order to Contract, but rather to enlarge it, and the Addreſs was return'd for that Purpoſe.

Debates upon the Revenue for the Princeſs Anne.

Another Matter which occaſion'd warm Debates was, the Settling a Part of the Publick Revenue on the Princeſs Anne of Denmark, which divided the Houſe into Three Parties. The Lord Elan, Son to the Marqueſs of Halifax, Mr. Finch and Mr. Godolphin, who ſpoke in Favour of Her Royal Highneſs, inſiſted that Seventy Thouſand Pounds per Ann. was as little as could be allow'd Her, as it had been repreſented in the former Seſſion. Some who conſidered the Publick Neceſſities, would have that Sum reduc'd to Fifty Thouſand Pounds; and others again, being thought to be Influenc'd and Inſtructed by the King, were for leaving that Matter wholly to His Majeſty's Diſcretion. Mr. Hamden Jun. who few Days before had thunder'd againſt the Court and Miniſtry, did now Side with this laſt Party, and pleaded the Danger of Settling a Revenue on a Princeſs that had ſo near a Claim to the Crown, Independently upon the King, whoſe Title was diſputed by many Malecontents; and ſupported his Argument by the Example of the Queen, on whom it had lately been propoſed to Settle an Hundred Thouſand Pounds a Year; but which was thought improper, and therefore rejected, though Her Majeſty had no ſeparate Intereſt from that of Her Royal Conſort. However, his Opinion was not followed, and the Debate was Adjourn'd to the next Day. In the mean-time His Majeſty, who was unwilling that ſo nice an Affair ſhould be ſo loudly Canvaſs'd in Parliament, ſent the Earl of Shrewsbury and Mr. Wharton to Her Royal Highneſs, with Deſign to perſwade her to rely on his Generoſity: But the Princeſs, who was for a fixed Settlement, prudently Anſwer'd, That ſince that Affair was before the Commons it muſt e'en take its Courſe, and be concluded by that Wiſe Body. So on Wedneſday, Dec. 18. the Houſe Order'd an Humble Addreſs, "That His Majeſty would be pleaſed "to make a Proviſion for the Prince and Princeſs Anne of Denmark, of Fifty Thouſand Pounds "a Year, beginning at Chriſtmas next". And Mr. Speaker, with the Members, going to Whitehall to preſent this Addreſs, His Majeſty was pleaſed to return this Anſwer: GENTLEMEN, Whatſoever comes from the Houſe of Commons is ſo agreeable to Me, and particularly this Addreſs, That I ſhall do what you deſire of Me.

Her Royal Highneſs's Prudent Anſwer.

On the ſame Day, Monday, Dec. 23. His Majeſty came to the Houſe of Peers, and gave his Royal Aſſent to, (1.) An Act to prevent Doubts and Queſtions concerning the Collection of the Publick Revenue. (2.) An Act for Puniſhing Officers and Soldiers who ſhall Mutiny or Deſert their Majeſties Service; and for Puniſhing Falſe-Muſters. (3.) An Act to Enable the Lord Viſcount Hereford, to make a Jointure upon his Marriage with Mrs. Elizabeth Norborne, notwithſtanding his Minority.

Acts Paſſed.

Upon the Bill for Reſtoring Corporations to their Ancient Rights and Liberties, a Clauſe was offered and agreed to, Jan. 2. To Incapacitate for Seven Years ſuch as had any-ways Acted in the Surrenders of Charters, from bearing any Office in the ſaid Corporations: But at the Third Reading, on Jan. 10. This Clauſe was rejected, and the Bill carried up to the Lords without it. On Jan. 4. a Bill was brought in, For Sale of the Eſtates that were forfeited by thoſe that were now in Rebellion againſt their Majeſties in the Kingdom of Ireland. On Jan. 9. Francis Cholmondley, Eſq; a Member of the Houſe of Commons, was by the Speaker's Warrant Committed Priſoner to the Tower of London, for his Contempt in Refuſing to take the Oaths of Allegiance and Supremacy, appointed to be taken by the Members of the Houſe; and it was Ordered, That a Bill be brought in to Enjoin the taking of the Oath of Allegiance by all Perſons above the Age of Sixteen Years, and to require the Juſtices of the Peace to tender the ſame; and to commit ſuch Perſons to Priſon without Bail or Mainpriſe, as ſhall refuſe to take the ſame.

Other Proceedings in Parliament.

On Thurſday, Jan. 16. His Majeſty came to the Houſe of Lords, and gave the Royal Aſſent to, (1.) An Act for a Grant to Their Majeſties of an Additional Aid of Twelve-pence in the Pound for One Year. (2.) An Act for the Charging and Collecting the Duties upon Coffee, Tea, and Chocolate, at the Cuſtom-Houſe. The Adviſing King Charles II. and King James II. by ſome of their Judges and Counſel, that Parliaments needed not be call'd according to the Statutes. 11. The Procuring the Commiſſion to execute Martial-Law in the Iſland of St. Helena, or Signing the Inſtructions for putting the ſame in Execution. 12. The Regulating of Corporations and Burroughs in the Reign of the late K. James II. and the promiſing to take off the Penal-Laws and Teſt. 13. The undertaking in the Reign of the late King James II. to Repair the Ships of War, and receiving Money for that Service, and the not performing the ſame.

Acts paſt. On Monday, Jan. 27. His Majeſty came to the Houſe of Lords, and gave the Royal Aſſent to, 1. An Act for the Review of the Poll-Bill, and for an Additional Poll. (2.) An Act to prevent Vexatious Suits againſt ſuch as acted in order to the bringing in Their Majeſties, or for their Service. (3.) An Act for the better Security and Relief of the Iriſh-Proteſtants. (4.) An Act to diſcharge the Duke of Norfolk, upon Payment of certain Sums of Money to the Lady Elizabeth Tereſa Ruſſel, Wife of Bartholomew Ruſſel, Eſq; (5.) An Act to Enable the Earl of Radnor to make a Joynture to his Wife, and to raiſe a Sum of Money out of divers Lands and Tenements in Cornwal. (6.) An Act to Enable Thomas Edon, Eſq; to Sell Lands to pay his Debts, and to make Proviſion for his Wife, and for his Children, in caſe he ſhould have any. (7.) An Act to Enable William Batſon, Eſq; to Sell Lands in the County of Oxon, and to Purchaſe and ſettle an Eſtate in the County of Suffolk to the ſame Uſes.

After which His Majeſty made a moſt Gracious Speech to Both Houſes, which follows.

My Lords and Gentlemen;

King's Speech. I Am ſo ſenſible of the Readineſs you have ſhew'd to Supply me with Money for the Carrying on the Wars I am Engag'd in, that I am glad of this Occaſion, to give you Thanks for your Chearful Diſpatch of that Matter, which was abſolutely neceſſary for the Common Safety.

The beſt Return I can make to your Kindneſs, is, to Aſſure you, That as far as it will go, it ſhall all be Employ'd to the Purpoſes it was given.

It is a very ſenſible Affliction to Me, to ſee my good People Burthen'd with heavy Taxes; but ſince the ſpeedy Recovering of Ireland, is, in my Opinion, the only Means to Eaſe them, and to Preſerve the Peace and Honour of the Nation, I am reſolv'd to go thither in Perſon, and with the Bleſſing of God Almighty, endeavour to reduce that Kingdom, that it may no longer be a Charge to this. 1689.

And as I have already ventur'd my Life for the Preſervation of the Religion, Laws and Liberties of this Nation; So I am now willing again to expoſe it, to ſecure you the quiet Enjoyment of them.

The Spring draws on, and it being requiſite I ſhould be Early in the Field, I muſt immediately apply my Thoughts to the giving Orders for the neceſſary Preparations: Which that I may have the more Leiſure to do, I have thought convenient now to put an End to this Seſſion.

And then the Right Honourable Sir Robert Atkyns, Lord Chief-Baron of Their Majeſties Court of Exchequer, and Speaker of the Houſe of Peers, ſaid:

My Lords and Gentlemen;

" It is His Majeſty's Pleaſure, That this Par- Parliament
" liament be Prorogued to the Second Day of April prorogu'd.
" next; And this Parliament is Prorogued to the Second Day of April next.

The City of London were ſo ſenſible of their Loyalty of the City of London. Liberties reſtor'd to 'em, that they paid all poſſible Duty and Honour to King William: And Sir Thomas Pilkington, being continu'd Lord-Mayor for the Year 1690. in the Name of the City Invited the King and Queen, the Prince and Princeſs of Denmark, and both Houſes of Parliament, to Dinner at Guildhall, on the uſual Solemnity, Octob. 29. When Their Majeſties, attended by their Royal Highneſſes, and a numerous Train of the Nobility and Gentry, went firſt to a Balcony prepar'd for them in Cheapſide, to ſee the Show: Which for the great number of Livery-Men, the full Appearance of the Militia and Artillery, the rich Adornments of the Pageants, and the Splendid and good Order of the whole Proceeding, out-did all that had been ſeen before upon the like Occaſion; and what deſerves to be particularly mention'd, was, a Royal-Regiment of Volunteer-Horſe, made up of the Chief-Citizens; who being very richly Accoutr'd, and led by the Earl of Monmouth, attended Their Majeſties from Whitehall. The Cavalcade being paſt by, the King and Queen were Conducted by the Two Sheriffs to Guildhall, where they and their numerous Retinue were Entertain'd with a Magnificent Feaſt. His Majeſty, to expreſs his Satisfaction, Conferr'd the Honour of Knighthood on Chriſtopher Lethuillier and John Houblon, Eſq; the two Sheriffs, and on Edward Clarke and Francis Child, two of the Aldermen. At Their Majeſties Return in the Evening, the Soldiers had, at convenient Diſtances, lighted Flambeaus in their Hands, the Houſes were all Illuminated, the Bells ringing, and nothing was omitted thro' the whole Courſe of this Days Solemnity, either by the Magiſtrates, or the People, that might ſhow their Reſpect and Veneration, as well as their Dutiful Affection and Loyalty to Their Majeſties, and the Senſe they have of the Happineſs they enjoy under their moſt benign and gracious Government. Not many Days after, ſome violent Malecontents offer'd an Indignity to the King's Picture in the Guildhall, by Cutting away the Sceptre and Crown: Whereupon the Lord-Mayor and Court of Aldermen Promis'd a Reward of Five hundred Pounds to any that ſhou'd Diſcover the Author of that Inſolence.

As to other Honours and Preferments conferr'd Honours and Preferments. this Year: At the beginning of November, His Majeſty was pleas'd to create Richard Lord Coote (Baron of Coloony in Ireland) an Earl of that Kingdom, by the Name of Earl of Bellomont. About the middle of the Month, His Majeſty Appointed Thomas Kirke Eſq; to be his Conſul at Genoa, Lambert Blackwel Eſq; to be his Conſul at Legborne; 1689. Leghorne; Walter Dolman Esq; his Consul at Alicant; Hugh Broughton Esq; his Consul at Venice; Lancelot Stepney Esq; his Consul in the City and Port of O-Porto in the Kingdom of Portugal; and James Paul Esq; his Consul for the Islands of Zant, Corfu, Cefalonia and Theaca, with the other adjacent Islands belonging to the Venetian-Territories, and the Province of Morea, with the Islands, Ports and Districts of and belonging to the same: And soon after, His Majesty was pleas'd to Constitute Robert Godshall Esq; his Consul at Seville, St. Lucar, and Places adjacent, within the Kingdom of Spain. On Dec. 14th, His Majesty conferr'd the Honour of Knighthood, in his Bed-Chamber, upon William Cranmore Esq; who Presented a Loyal Address of divers English-Merchants in and about the City of London. On Dec. 23d, His Majesty Knighted Thomas Miller of Chichester Esq; in Consideration of his great Loyalty and Services. On Febr. 13th, Sir Henry Goodrick Kt. and Bar. (Lieutenant-General of Their Majesties Ordnance) was Sworn of the Privy-Council. On Febr. 19th, His Majesty was pleas'd to Constitute William Cheney Esq; Sir John Knatchbul Bar. and Sir Wil. Pulteney Kt. his Commissioners for executing the Office of Keeper of the Privy-Seal. On March 19th, His Majesty was pleas'd to Constitute Sir John Lowther of Lowther Bar. Vice-Chamberlain of His Majesty's Houshold; Richard Hamden Esq; (who was also made Chancellor of the Exchequer,) Thomas Pelham Esq; and Sir Stephen Fox, Lords-Commissioners of the Treasury; and Henry Guy Esq; to be One of the Commissioners of Their Majesties Customs, in the Place of Mr. Pelham.

As to the State of Religion, it was Natural for the Roman-Catholicks to Repine at the present Settlement, as apprehending their late Hopes were extinguish'd, and the Fears of Persecution were coming on 'em, since they had lost a King, whom they always esteem'd to be rais'd by God Almighty, to Re-establish the Roman-Faith and Worship in these Kingdoms: But it was strange, to see some of the Higher-Church-Men Disgusted with a Revolution that seem'd to have been Accomplish'd under the particular Direction of Heaven, for the Preservation of the Reformed-Established-Religion. These Men murmur'd at the present Posture of Affairs, whispering, That All was Illegal and Unjustifiable; That the Doctrine of the Jesuits, in Absolving from Oaths of Allegiance, was now practically Translated into English: But that King James wou'd shortly Return with a Powerful Army, and Settle Things upon a Right Foundation; for the Interest of the Church of England was Involv'd with that of His Majesty, and that the One cou'd not Subsist without the Restoration of the Other. These Seditious Insinuations were Countenanc'd by some Divines, who refus'd to take the Oaths: And therefore to give Satisfaction in this Point, several of the Bishops and Clergy, in Sermons and Discourses, did abundantly Justifie the Revolution, upon the Principles of Nature, Scripture, and the English-Constitution. Among others, Dr. Burnet (Bishop of Salisbury) Address'd a Pastoral-Letter, Dated May 15th, to the Clergy of his Diocese, concerning the Allegian e Due to King William and Queen Mary, wherein he happen'd to Offend by one Topick, the Right of Conquest; though he did but modestly alledge, "That there were few of those, who did "not think, That the King, when He was Prince "of Orange, had a Just Cause of War, when He first "Undertook this Expedition: For ev'n, at Common-Law, an Heir in Remainder, has just Cause to "sue him that is in Possession, if he makes waste on "the Inheritance which is in Reversion: That it is "much more reasonable, since the thing is much "more important, That the Heir of a Crown should "interpose, when he sees him that is in Possession hur-ome Church-Men dis-usted at he Revo-ution.

Others did vindicate nd ad-ere to it.

"ry'd on blindfold, to subject an Independent King- 1689.
"dom to a Foreign Jurisdiction, and thereby to "rob it both of its Glory and of its Security: that "when it is manifest, that this must occasion the "greatest Ruine and Miseries possible to that "Kingdom; and when a Pretended Heir was set "up in such a manner, that the whole Kingdom
"believ'd him Spurious; in such a Case, it could "not be deny'd, even according to the Highest
"Principles of Passive Obedience, that another So-
"vereign Prince might make War upon a King so
"abusing his Power: That this being the Case in "Fact, here was a War begun upon just and law-
"ful Grounds; and being so begun, it was the un-
"controverted Opinion of all Lawyers, That the "Success of a just War gives a lawful Title to that "which is acquir'd in the Progress of it; and there-
"fore King James having so far sunk in the War,
"that he abandon'd his People and deserted the "Government, all his Right and Title did accrue
"to King William, in the Right of a Conquest over
"him. But tho' with Relation to King James's
"Rights, he was vested with them by the Succes-
"ses of a War, yet His Majesty was willing, with "relation to the Peers and People of England, to "receive the Crown by their Determination, ra-
"ther than to hold it in the Right of his Sword."
The like Argument was more boldly pursu'd about Three Years after, in a Pamphlet, Entitled, King William and Queen Mary Conquerors, suppos'd to be written by Mr. Blount; at which the Parliament then Sitting were so offended, that they Order'd, both that Pamphlet and the Bishop's Letter, to be Publickly burnt by the Common-Executioner; tho' this latter seems then to be sacrific'd to a poor Jest upon the Author's Name.

On April 4. The House of Lords entred into a Consideration of the Report of the Amendments in the Bill for Uniting Their Majesties Protestant-Subjects: And, upon Debate, the Question was put, "Whether to agree with the Committee in leaving "out the Clause, about the Indifferency of the Po-"sture at Receiving the Sacrament." The Votes were equal, and therefore according to the ancient Rule in the like Cases it was carried in the Negative. The next Day the Lords resum'd the Debate of the Report of the said Amendments, particularly of the Clause concerning a Commission to be given out by the King, to some Bishops and others of the Clergy; and it being proposed, Whether some of the Laity should be added? The Votes were again equal on both Sides, and so it was again carried in the Negative; but some Peers enter'd their Dissents for these Reasons.

Proceedings of the Lords in Matters of Religion.

Commission for Reviewing the Liturgy.

"First; Because the Act itself being, as the "Preamble sets forth, designed for the Peace of the "State; the putting the Clergy into Commission, "with a total Exclusion of the Laity, lays this "Humiliation on the Laity, as if the Clergy of "the Church of England were alone Friends to the "Peace of the State, and the Laity less able, or "less concerned to provide for it.

"2. Because the Matter to be considered be-"ing barely of Humane-Constitution, viz. the Li-"turgy and Ceremonies of the Church of England, "which had their Establishment from King, Lords "Spiritual and Temporal, and Commons Assembled "in Parliament, there can be no Reason why the "Commissioners, for altering any-thing in that Ci-"vil-Constitution, should consist only of Men of "one sort of them, unless it be supposed that Hu-"mane Reason is to be quitted in this Affair, and "the Inspiration of Spiritual Men to be alone de-"pended on.

"Because tho' upon Romish Principles the Cler-"gy may have the Title to meddle alone in Mat-"ters of Religion, yet with us they cannot, where "the Church is acknowledg'd and defin'd to consist "of Clergy and Laity; and so those Matters of 1689. "Religion which fall under Humane Determination, "being properly the Buſineſs of the Church, belong "equally to both; for in what is of Divine-Inſtitution, neither Clergy nor Laity can make any "Alteration at all.

"Religion

4. "Becauſe the pretending, That Differences "and Delays may ariſe, by mixing Lay-Men with "Eccleſiaſticks, to the fruſtrating the Deſign of "the Commiſſion, is vain and out-of-doors; unleſs "thoſe that make uſe of this Pretence, ſuppoſe "that the Clergy-part of the Church have diſtinct "Intereſts or Deſigns from the Lay-part of the "ſame Church; and will be a Reaſon, if Good, "why one or other of them ſhou'd quit this Houſe, "for fear of obſtructing the Buſineſs of it.

5. "Becauſe the Commiſſion being intended for "the Satisfaction of Diſſenters, it wou'd be con-"venient, that Lay-Men of different Ranks, nay, "perhaps of different Opinions too, ſhou'd be "mix'd in it, the better to find Expedients for "that End; rather than Clergy-Men alone of Our "Church, who are generally obſerv'd to have all very "much the ſame way of Reaſoning and Thinking.

6. "Becauſe it is the moſt ready way to faci-"litate the Paſſing the Alterations into a Law, "That Lay-Lords and Commoners ſhou'd be Join'd "in the Commiſſion, who may be able to Satisfie "both Houſes of the Reaſons upon which they "were made, and thereby remove all Fears and "Jealouſies ill Men may raiſe up againſt the "Clergy, of their Endeavouring to Keep up, without "Grounds, a diſtinct Intereſt from that of the "Laity, whom they ſo carefully Exclude from "being Join'd with them, in Conſultations of "Common-Concernment, that they will not have "thoſe have any Part in the Deliberation, who "muſt have the greateſt in Determining.

7. "Becauſe ſuch a Reſtrain'd Commiſſion lies "liable to this great Objection, That it might be "made uſe of to elude Repeated Promiſes, and "the preſent General Expectation of Compliance "with Tender-Conſciences, when the Providing "for it, is taken out of the ordinary Courſe of "Parliament, to be put into the Hands of thoſe "alone, who were lateſt in admitting any Need "of it, and who may be thought to be the more "Unfit to be the Sole Compoſers of our Diffe-"rences, when they are look'd upon, by ſome, as "Parties.

Laſtly, "Becauſe, after all, this carries a dan-"gerous Suppoſition along with it, as if the Laity "were not a Part of the Church, nor had any "Power to meddle in Matters of Religion; a Sup-"poſition directly oppoſite to the Conſtitution both "of Church and State: Which will make all Alte-"rations utterly impoſſible, unleſs the Clergy alone "be allow'd to have Power to make Laws in Mat-"ters of Religion; ſince what is Eſtabliſh'd by "Law, cannot be Taken away, but by Conſent "of Lay-Men in Parliament; the Clergy themſelves "having no Authority to meddle in this very Caſe, "in which the Laity are Excluded by this Vote, "but what they derive from Lay-Hands.

Subſcrib'd,

I Diſſent, for this and other Reaſons; becauſe it is contrary to Three Statutes, made in the Reign of K. Henry VIII. and One in K. Bill for Union more desirable.

Tho' the Body of Dissenters were contented with this Liberty, yet the more moderate and wiser Part of 'em would be glad to be taken into the National Establishment; and there was indeed a Bill of Union still depending in Parliament, which pass'd the House of Lords; and when it came down to the House of Commons, they desir'd His Majesty to summon a Convocation, and lay the Matter before them. Accordingly a Convocation was summon'd by the King's Writ, to meet on Dec. 4. In the mean-time His Majesty thought fit to fill up the Vacant Sees: And therefore on Octob. 13. Dr. Edward Stillingfleet, late Dean of St. Paul's, Bishop Elect of Worcester; Dr. Simon Patrick, late Dean of Peterborough, Bishop Elect of Chichester; and Dr. Gilbert Ironside, late Warden of Wadham-College in Oxford, Bishop Elect of Bristol, were Consecrated in the Chappel of Fulham-Palace by the Bishops of London, St. Asaph and Rochester, by Virtue of a Commission granted to them in that behalf. And because the time allow'd by Act of Parliament for the Clergy to take the Oaths was expired, those who refus'd to qualifie themselves were Suspended ab Officio; particularly the Archbishop of Canterbury, and the Bishops of Gloucester, Ely, Norwich, Bath and Wells, and Peterborough.

Consecration of Bishops.

Non-juring Bishops suspended.

In order to prepare Matters to be consider'd by the Convocation, His Majesty issued out this Legal and Reasonable Commission, to the most Eminent Bishops and Divines.

Form of Commission for reviewing the Liturgy.

" WHereas the particular Forms of Divine " Worship, and the Rites and Ceremonies " appointed to be us'd therein, are Things in " their own Nature Indifferent and Alterable, and " so acknowledg'd; It is but reasonable, that up- " on weighty and important Considerations, ac- " cording to the various Exigencies of Times and " Occasions, such Changes and Alterations should " be made therein, as to those that are in Place " and Authority, should from time to time seem " either Necessary or Expedient.

" And whereas the Book of Canons is fit to be " Review'd, and made more suitable to the State " of the Church; And whereas there are Defects " and Abuses in the Ecclesiastical Courts and Ju- " risdictions; and particularly, there is not suffi- " cient Provision made for the Removing of Scan- " dalous Ministers, and for the Reforming of Man- " ners either in Ministers or People: And where- " as it is most fit, that there should be a strict " Method prescrib'd for the Examination of such " Persons as desire to be admitted into Holy Or- " ders, both as to their Learning and Manners.

" We therefore, out of Our Pious and Princely " Care, for the Good Order, and Edification, and " Unity of the Church of England, committed to " Our Charge and Care; And for the Reconciling, " as much as is possible, of all Differences among " Our Good Subjects, and to take away all occasi- " ons of the like for the future, have thought fit " to Authorize and Empower you, &c. and any " Nine of you, whereof Three to be Bishops, to " meet from time to time as often as shall be " needful, and to prepare such Alterations of the " Liturgy and Canons, and such Propolals for the " Reformation of Ecclesiastical Courts, and to con- " sider of such other Matters, as in your Judg- " ments may most conduce to the Ends abovemen- " tion'd. 1689.

Proceedings of these Commissioners.

These Commissioners often met, and drew up several Alterations to make Conformity the more easie and acceptable to all manner of Conscientious Persons; but some that were named in the Commission, did either not appear, or did soon desert their other Brethren upon a high Notion, That either no Alterations ought to be made, or at least that this was not a seasonable Time for the making of 'em; of which Number were Dr. Jane, Regius Professor of Divinity in Oxford, and some others. But the better and much greater Majority apply'd themselves to the Business of Accommodation, with great Industry and Prudence: That Point which created the greatest Difficulty, was about the admitting of Dissenting-Ministers to Officiate in the Church, when duely reconciled to it. Some of the Commissioners were inclined not to insist on the Re-ordination of 'em, alledging, That they ought not to shew less Regard to the Vocation of Presbyterian Ministers, than to that of Roman-Catholick Priests, whose Ordination was never question'd upon their joining in Communion with the Church of England. But the Majority thought it more proper to keep a middle Course, which was, first with respect to Romish-Priests, to leave it undecided whether their Ordination was good or no: But because they were not oblig'd to give Credit to their Certificates, That therefore such of 'em as for the future should turn Protestants, should live in

1689. in Lay-Communion only, unleſs they were Re-ordained to a Legal Title of any Church or Cure: And Secondly, That tho' they did not determine the Ordination of Presbyterians to be altogether invalid; yet they thought it neceſſary for their Miniſters to receive Orders from a Biſhop, who, in conferring the ſame, might add a Clauſe to the Common-Form, as the Church had already Ordain'd in the Caſe of uncertain Baptiſm, to this Effect, If thou art not already Ordained, I Ordain thee, &c. and this was the greateſt Conceſſion that was made by the Commiſſioners. One of the Chief Diſſenters has given this Opinion of their Proceedings: "Theſe "Commiſſioners often met and debated Matters, "but were deſerted by Dr. Jane and ſeveral o- "thers. They drew up ſundry Alterations, a "Copy of which I have by Me; but they having "never thought fit to Communicate them to the "Body of the Convocation, or to expoſe them to "the View of the World from the Preſs, I know "not how proper it would be for me to Print "them. But this much I ſhall venture to ſay, "That ſuch Amendments as thoſe were, with "ſuch an Allowance in the Point of Orders for Ordination by Presbyters, as is made 13 Eliz. Cap. "12. would in all Probability have brought in "Two Thirds of the Diſſenters in England, which "being done, and at the ſame Time a Liberty "continued to ſuch as could not be comprehended, "would have been greater Service than can eaſily "be imagined.

Judgment of the Diſſenters upon this Matter.

One of the Commiſſioners has more lately given this better Account of it; "In the Reign of "King James, thoſe of the Church who ſaw the "Papiſts drawing in the Diſſenters to concur with "them in their Deſigns againſt the Church, ap- "plied to the then Prince of Orange, deſiring "him to make uſe of his Intereſt in them for "diverting them from that: And in thoſe Letters "which are yet extant, Aſſurances were given, "That the Church was then in ſuch a Temper, "ſo well-convinced of former Errors, that if ever "ſhe got out of that Diſtreſs, all thoſe Differences "would be certainly made up: And to make this "Aſſurance more publick, the Arch-Biſhop and "Biſhops in that Petition, for which they were "Impriſoned and Tryed, Declared, That they "were ready to come to a Temper in thoſe Mat- "ters, both in Parliament and Convocation. Upon "this it was, that the Prince of Orange promiſed "in his Declaration, to uſe his Endeavours to "heal all thoſe Diviſions: In order to the perform- "ing this, He, by a ſpecial Commiſſion appointed "all thoſe Biſhops who owned his Authority, He "being then ſet on the Throne, together with a "great many of the Clergy, to draw out the "Grounds upon which the Diſſenters had ſepara- "ted from us, and to offer Expedients in order to "the Healing our Breaches. We had before "us all the Books and Papers that they had at "any time offered, ſetting forth their Demands; "together with many Advices and Propoſitions "which had been made at ſeveral times, by moſt "of the Beſt and moſt Learned of our Divines; "of which the late moſt Learned Biſhop of Wor- "ceſter had a great Collection: So we prepared "a Scheme to be laid before the Convocation; but "did not think that we ourſelves, much leſs that "any other Perſon, was any way limited, or "bound to comply with what we reſolved to "propoſe. On the contrary, we ſaid, if we ſaw "better Reaſon, we would change our Minds: "Yet this, which was only a Council created by "the King to prepare Matters, was complained "of, as an Impoſing on the Convocation, and as "a Limiting of it; and tho' a Royal Licenſe was "ſent them, yet a previous Reſolution was taken, "To admit of no Alterations. When we ſaw that, "we reſolved to be quiet, and leave that Matter "to better Times: But then the Enemies of the "Civil Government began to work on the Jea- "louſies and Fears of many well-minded Men; "and the Preſerving the Church, was given out "as the Word, by thoſe who meant France or "St. Germains by it; and under this fatal Delu- "ſion many are apt to be miſ-led to this Day.

Account of this Affair from the Biſhop of Sarum's Triennial-Viſitation Charge, 1704.

Meeting of the Convocation.

The Convocation Met on Thurſday, Nov. 21. and began in an unhappy Difference about the Choice of a Prolocutor. The Perſon deſign'd by the Biſhop of London and moſt of his Brethren, and the Sober Part of the Clergy, was Dr. Tillotſon, Dean of Canterbury, whom the King had lately made Clerk of his Cloſet, and uſed to call him the honeſteſt Man, and the beſt Friend that ever He had in his Life; but it was carried by a Majority of Votes for Dr. Jane of Oxford, who being Preſented on the 25. to the Biſhop of London as Preſident, for his Approbation, made a Cuſtomary Speech in Latin, wherein He extoll'd the Excellency of the Church of England as Eſtabliſhed by Law, above all Chriſtian Communities, and imply'd that it wanted no Amendments; and then ended with the Application of this Sentence by way of Triumph, Nolumus Leges Angliæ mutari. The Biſhop of London, to whom the Prolocutor had been Chaplain, made a Speech in the ſame Language with more Charity and Candor: He told the Clergy, they ought to endeavour a Temper in thoſe Things that are not Eſſential in Religion, thereby to open the Door of Salvation to a multitude of ſtraying Chriſtians: That it muſt needs be their Duty, to ſhow the ſame Indulgence and Charity to the Diſſenters under King William, which ſome of the Biſhops and Clergy had promiſed to them in their Addreſſes to King James, and concluded with a Pathetical Exhortation to Unanimity and Concord.

Dr. Jane, Prolocutor.

Biſhop of London, Preſident.

Biſhop of London's Speech.

At the next Meeting, the Biſhop of London, being Senſible that the Majority of the Lower-Houſe were reſolv'd to oppoſe the intended Union with the Diſſenters, acquainted the Convocation, "That having communicated the Royal Commiſſion "by which they were impowered to Act, to an "Eminent Civilian, He had found it defective in "not having the Great-Seal, and therefore He "ſhould Prorogue 'em till that was procured". During this Interval many Arguments were uſed to bring the moſt ſtiff of the Inferiour Clergy to a Charitable Condeſcenſion, and the much-deſir'd Union, but to very little Purpoſe; there was a Jealouſie and a Diſtruſt not to be Conquer'd: Tho' there could be but Two Arguments of any Force to juſtify their Averſeneſs to enter upon the Terms of Accommodation; One was, That it ſeem'd to derogate from the Dignity of the Church of England to make any Step toward the Altering of her Conſtitution, till it did appear that the Diſſenters themſelves did deſire a Reconcilement, and were ready to offer ſome Propoſals or to accept of others. A Second Argument might be, That the Arch-Biſhop of Canterbury and ſome of his Suffragans, and ſome other Divines, would not own the preſent Government, and were therefore ready to fall into a New Separation from their Brethren; ſo that at this Juncture it might be dangerous to make any Change that might give a Pretence of being for the Old Church, as well as for the Old King.

The Preſident Prorogues.

The Majority againſt an Accommodation with the Diſſenters.

On Dec. 4. While Both Houſes were together in Henry VIIth's Chappel, the Earl of Nottingham brought in the King's Commiſſion, and a Meſſage from His Majeſty in Writing, both which were Read, there being preſent Twelve Biſhops and a good Number of the Inferior Clergy. The Commiſſion was as follows:

"WILLIAM and MARY, by the Grace of "GOD, King and Queen of England, "Scotland, France, and Ireland, Defender of the "Faith,

The King Commiſſ. to Act.

1689. " Faith, &c. To all to whom theſe Preſents ſhall " come, Greeting; Whereas, In and by one Act of " Parliament, made at Weſtminſter in the Twenty- " fifth Year of the Reign of King Henry the VIII. " Reciting, That whereas the King's Humble and " Obedient Subjects, the Clergy of this Realm of " England, had not only acknowledged according " to the Truth, that the Convocation of the ſame " Clergy, were always, had been, and ought to be " Aſſembled only by the King's Writ; but alſo " ſubmitting themſelves to the King's Majeſty, " had promiſed in Verbo Sacerdotis, That they " would never from thenceforth preſume to At- " tempt, Alledge, Claim, or put in Ure, or E- " nact, Promulge, or Execute any new Canons, " Conſtitutions, Ordinances, Provincial, or others, " or by whatſoever other Name they ſhould be " called in the Convocation, unleſs the ſaid King's " moſt Royal Aſſent and Licenſe might to them " be had, to Make, Promulge and Execute the " ſame; and that the ſaid King did give his Roy- " al Aſſent and Authority in that Behalf.

" It was therefore Enacted by the Authority " of the ſaid Parliament, according to the ſaid " Submiſſion and Petition of the ſaid Clergy, among " other things, That they, nor any of them from " thenceforth ſhould Enact, Promulge or Execute " any ſuch Canons, Conſtitutions, or Ordinances " Provincial, by whatſoever Name they might be " called in their Convocations in Time coming, " which always ſhould be Aſſembled by Autho- " rity of the King's Writ, unleſs the ſame Clergy " might have the King's moſt Royal Aſſent and " Licenſe, to Make, Promulge and Execute ſuch " Canons, Conſtitutions and Ordinances, Provincial " or Synodal, upon pain of every one of the ſaid " Clergy doing contrary to the ſaid Act, and be- " ing thereof Convict, to ſuffer Impriſonment, " and make Fines at the King's Will.

" And further, by the ſaid Act it is Provided, " That no Canons, Conſtitutions or Ordinances " ſhould be made, or put in Execution within " this Realm, by Authority of the Convocations of " the Clergy, which ſhould be contrariant or repug- " nant to the King's Prerogative-Royal, or the " Cuſtoms, Laws or Statutes of this Realm, any " thing contained in the ſaid Act to the contrary " thereof notwithſtanding.

" And Laſtly, It is alſo Provided by the ſaid " Act, That ſuch Canons, Conſtitutions, Ordinances " and Synodals Provincial, which then were al- " ready made, and which then were not contra- " riant or repugnant to the Laws, Statutes and " Cuſtoms of this Realm, nor to the Damage or " Hurt of the King's Prerogative-Royal, ſhould " then ſtill be uſed and executed as they were be- " fore the making of the ſaid Act, until ſuch time " as they ſhould be Viewed, Searched, or other- " wiſe Order'd and Determin'd by the Perſons " mention'd in the ſaid Act, or the moſt part of " them, according to the Tenor, Form and Ef- " fect of the ſaid Act; as by the ſaid Act, among " divers other things, more fully and at large, it " doth and may appear.

" And whereas the particular Forms of Divine " Worſhip, and Rites and Ceremonies appointed to " be uſed therein, being Things of their own Na- " ture Indifferent and Alterable, and ſo Acknow- " ledged, it is but reaſonable, that upon weighty " and important Conſiderations, according to the " various Exigency of Times and Occaſions, ſuch " Changes and Alterations ſhould be made there- " in, as to thoſe that are in Place and Authority, " ſhould from time to time, ſeem either neceſſary " or expedient.

" And whereas the Book of Canons is fit to " be Reviewed, and made more Suitable to the " State of the Church: And whereas there are di- " vers Defects and Abuſes in the Eccleſiaſtical " Courts and Juriſdictions; and particularly there 1689. " is not ſufficient Proviſion made for the remo- " ving of Scandalous Miniſters, and for the Re- " formation of Manners, either in Miniſters or Peo- " ple: And whereas it is moſt fit that there " ſhould be a ſtrict Method preſcribed, for the " Examination of ſuch Perſons as deſire to be ad- " mitted into Holy Orders, both as to their Learn- " ing and Manners: Know ye, That We, for di- " vers urgent and weighty Cauſes and Conſidera- " tions, Us thereunto moving, of Our eſpecial " Grace, certain Knowledge, and meer Motion, " have by Virtue of Our Prerogative-Royal, and " Supreme Authority in Cauſes-Eccleſiaſtical, Given " and Granted, and by theſe Preſents do Give and " Grant, Full, Free and Lawful Liberty, Licenſe, " Power and Authority unto the Right Reverend " Father in God, Henry, Lord-Biſhop of London, " Preſident of this preſent Convocation for the " Province of Canterbury, (upon the Suſpenſion " of the Lord Arch-Biſhop of Canterbury,) du- " ring this preſent Parliament now Aſſembled; " and in his Abſence, to ſuch other Biſhop " as ſhall be appointed Preſident thereof, and to " the reſt of the Biſhops of the ſame Province, " and all Deans of Cathedral-Churches, Arch-Dea- " cons, Chapters and Colleges, and the whole " Clergy of every ſeveral Dioceſe, within the ſaid " Province: That they the ſaid Lord-Biſhop of " London, or other Preſident of the ſaid Convoca- " tion, and the reſt of the Clergy of this preſent " Convocation within the ſaid Province of Canter- " bury, or the greateſt Number of them, whereof " the Preſident of the ſaid Convocation to be al- " ways one, ſhall and may from time to time, du- " ring this preſent Parliament, Confer, Treat, De- " bate, Conſider, Conſult, and Agree of and upon " ſuch Points, Matters, Cauſes and Things, as We " from time to time ſhall Propoſe or cauſe to be " Propoſed by the ſaid Lord Biſhop of London, or " other Preſident of the ſaid Convocation, concern- " ing Alterations and Amendments of the Liturgy " and Canons, and Orders, Ordinances and Conſti- " tutions for the Reformation of Eccleſiaſtical- " Courts, for the Removing of Scandalous Mini- " ſters, for the Reformation of Manners either in " Miniſters or People, and for the Examination " of ſuch Perſons as deſire to be admitted into " Holy Orders; and all ſuch other Points, Cauſes " and Matters as We ſhall think Neceſſary and " Expedient, for advancing the Honour and Ser- " vice of ALMIGHTY GOD, the Good and " Quiet of the Church, and the better Govern- " ment thereof.

" And We do alſo, by theſe Preſents, Give " and Grant unto the ſaid Lord-Biſhop of London, " or other Preſident of the ſaid Convocation, and " to the reſt of the Biſhops of the ſaid Province " of Canterbury, and unto all Deans of Cathedral- " Churches, Arch-Deacons, Chapters and Colleges, " and the whole Clergy of every ſeveral Dioceſe " within the ſaid Province, full, free and lawful " Liberty, Licenſe, Power and Authority, That " they the ſaid Lord-Biſhop of London, or other " Preſident of the ſaid Convocation, and the reſt " of the ſaid Biſhops, and other the Clergy of " the ſame Province, or the greateſt Number of " them that ſhall be preſent in Perſon, or by their " Proxies, ſhall and may, from Time to Time, " draw into Forms, Rules, Orders, Ordinances, " Conſtitutions and Canons, ſuch Matters as to " them ſhall be thought Neceſſary and Expedient " for the Purpoſes above-mention'd; and the ſame " ſet down in Writing, from Time to Time, to " Exhibit and Deliver, or cauſe to be Exhibited " and Delivered unto Us; to the end that We, as " Occaſion ſhall require, may thereupon have the " Advice of Our Parliament: And that ſuch, and " ſo many of the ſaid Canons, Orders, Ordinances, 1689. " Conſtitutions, Matters, Cauſes and Things, as " ſhall be thought Requiſite and Convenient by " Our ſaid Parliament, may be Preſented to Us " in due Form, for Our Royal-Aſſent, if, upon " Mature Conſideration thereof, we ſhall think fit " to Enact the ſame. In Witneſs whereof, we have " caus'd theſe Our Letters to be made Patent.

Per Breve de Privato Sigillo,

BURKER.

His Majeſty's Meſſage to the Convocation, is as follows.

WILLIAM R.

The King's Meſſage to the Convocation.

" HIS Majeſty has Summon'd this Convocation, " not only becauſe 'tis Uſual, upon Holding " of a Parliament, but out of a Pious Zeal, to do " every thing that may tend to the beſt Eſtabliſh- " ment of the Church of England, which is ſo Emi- " nent a Part of the Reformation, and is certainly " the beſt ſuited to the Conſtitution of this Govern- " ment, and therefore does moſt ſignally deſerve, " and ſhall always have both His Favour and " Protection; and He doubts not, but that you " will Aſſiſt Him in promoting the Welfare " of it, ſo that no Prejudices, with which ſome " Men may have labour'd to poſſeſs you, ſhall " diſappoint His good Intentions, or deprive the " Church of any Benefit from your Conſulta- " tions. His Majeſty therefore expects, That " the Things that ſhall be Propos'd, ſhall be " Calmly and Impartially Conſider'd by you; " and aſſures you, That He will offer nothing to " you, but what ſhall be for the Honour, Peace " and Advantage, both of the Proteſtant-Religion " in General, and particularly of the Church of " England.

The Biſhops Agreed on this Addreſs to His Majeſty:

The Convocation's Addreſs to the King.

" WE Your Majeſties Moſt Dutiful Subjects, " the Biſhops and Clergy of the Province " of Canterbury, in Convocation Aſſembled, having " receiv'd Your Majeſty's Gracious Meſſage, toge- " ther with a Commiſſion from Your Majeſty, by " the Earl of Nottingham, hold Ourſelves bound in " Gratitude and Duty, to return our moſt humble " Thanks and Acknowledgments, of the Grace and " Goodneſs expreſs'd in Your Majeſty's Meſſage, " and the Zeal you ſhew in it for the Proteſtant- " Religion in General, and the Church of England " in Particular, and of the Truſt and Confidence " repoſed in Us, by this Commiſſion. We look " upon theſe Marks of Your Majeſty's Care and " Favour, as the Continuance of the Great Deli- " verance Almighty GOD wrought for Us, by " Your Means, in making You the bleſſed Inſtru- " ment of Preſerving Us from falling under the " Cruelty of Popiſh Tyranny. For which, as We " have often Thank'd Almighty GOD, ſo We " cannot forget that high Obligation and Duty " which We owe to Your Majeſty; and on theſe " new Aſſurances of Your Protection and Favour " to Our Church, We beg Leave to renew the " Aſſurance of Our conſtant Fidelity and Obe- " dience to Your Majeſty; Whom we Pray GOD " to continue Long and Happily to Reign " over Us.

Diſcontents and Diviſions in the Lower-Houſe.

The Lower-Houſe, whoſe profeſs'd Buſineſs was to do nothing, wou'd not Conſent to this Addreſs, but firſt pleaded for the Privilege of Preſenting a ſeparate Addreſs of their own Drawing up; and then, dropping that Pretenſion, they fell to making Amendments, and gave a Reaſon why they cou'd not Concur with the Biſhops, in their Form, in theſe Words: We are deſirous to confine Our Addreſs to His Majeſty's Moſt Gracious Meſſage, and to thoſe Things only therein which concern the Church of England. Hereupon a Conference was deſir'd, that was chiefly Manag'd between the Biſhop of Salisbury and the Prolocutor; and theſe Reaſons were Reported, why Their Lord-ſhips inſiſted on the expreſs Mention of the Proteſtant-Religion: 1. " Becauſe it is the known Denomi- " nation of the Common-Doctrine of the Weſtern- " part of Chriſtendom, in Oppoſition to the Errors " and Corruptions of the Church of Rome. 2. Be- " cauſe the Leaving out this, may have Ill-Con- " ſequences, and be liable to ſtrange Conſtructions, " both at Home and Abroad, among Proteſtants " aſwell as Papiſts. 3. Becauſe it Agrees with " the General Reaſon, offer'd by the Clergy, for " their Amendments, ſince this is expreſly men- " tion'd in the King's Meſſage; and in this the " Church of England being ſo much Concern'd, " the Biſhops think it ought to ſtand ſtill in the " Addreſs." The Lower-Houſe Debated theſe Reaſons, and Diſagreed to 'em; and then Reſolv'd, " That in ſtead of Proteſtant-Religion, they won'd " rather ſay, Proteſtant-Churches." Their Lord-ſhips Deſir'd a Reaſon of this Alteration? Which " was return'd to 'em in theſe Words: " We " being the Repreſentative of a Form'd Eſtabliſh'd- " Church, do not think fit to mention the word " Religion, any farther than it is the Religion of " ſome Form'd Eſtabliſh'd-Church." The Lords return'd the Amendments, with this Alteration: " We doubt not the Intereſt of the Proteſtant- " Religion, in this and all other Proteſtant- " Churches.

The Lower-Houſe ſeeming to fear it was a Diminution to the Church of England, to join it with Foreign Proteſtant-Churches, wou'd have the words [this and] to be omitted; and at laſt, with great Difficulty, this Addreſs was Agreed on, and Preſented to His Majeſty in the Banqueting-Houſe at Whitehall, on Thurſday Dec. 12th:

Form of an Addreſs

" WE Your Majeſty's Moſt Loyal and Moſt " Dutiful Subjects, the Biſhops and Clergy " of the Province of Canterbury, in Convocation " Aſſembled, having receiv'd a Moſt Gracious " Meſſage from Your Majeſty, by the Earl of Not- " tingham, hold Ourſelves bound in Duty and " Gratitude, to return Our Moſt Humble Acknow- " ledgments for the ſame, and the Pious Zeal and " Care Your Majeſty is pleas'd to expreſs therein, " for the Honour, Peace, Advantage and Eſtabliſh- " ment of the Church of England; whereby, We " doubt not, the Intereſt of the Proteſtant-Religion " in all other Proteſtant-Churches, which is Dear " to Us, will be the better Secur'd, under the " Influence of Your Majeſty's Government and " Protection. And We crave Leave to Aſſure " Your Majeſty, That in purſuance of that Truſt " and Confidence You repoſe in Us, We will Con- " ſider, whatſoever ſhall be Offered to Us from " Your Majeſty, without Prejudice, and with all " Calmneſs and Impartiality: And that We will " conſtantly pay the Fidelity and Allegiance which " We have all Sworn to Your Majeſty and the " Queen; Whom we Pray GOD to Continue " Long and Happily to Reign over Us.

His Majeſty well underſtood why this Addreſs omitted the Thanks which the Biſhops had recom- mended His Royal Commiſſion, and the Zeal He had ſhewn for the Proteſtant-Religion; and why there was no Expreſſion of Tenderneſs to the Diſ-ſenters, and but a cool Regard to other Proteſtant-Churches. However, His Majeſty return'd this Gracious Anſwer: My LORDS, I take this Ad- dreſs very kindly from the Convocation. You may depend

The King's Anſwer to the Ad-dreſs.

1689. depend upon it, That all I have Promis'd, and all I can Do, for the Service of the Church of England, I will Do: And I give you this new Assurance, That I will Improve all Occasions and Opportunities for its Service.

Proceedings of the Lower-House.

The Majority of the Lower-House had a reserved Kindness for the Non-Juring Bishops and Clergy; and therefore, One of the Members made a zealous Speech, in Behalf of the Bishops under Suspension, "That something might be done, to "qualifie 'em to Sit in Convocation; yet so, as "that the Convocation might not incur any Danger "thereby." But this Matter was too hard for 'em, and therefore it was left to farther Consideration; while they labour'd to find out some other Business, to divert 'em from that for which they were Call'd together: And therefore, on Dec. 11th, the Prolocutor Attended the President and Bishops, and, in the Name of the House, represented to Their Lordships, "That there were several Books of very "Dangerous Consequence to the Christian Religion, "and the Church of England; particularly, Notes "upon Athanasius's Creed, and Two Letters re"lating to the present Convocation, lately come "abroad; and desir'd Their Lordships Advice, in "what Way, and how far safely, without incur"ring the Penalty of Stat. 25. Hen. VIII. the Con"vocation may Proceed, in the preventing the Pub"lishing the like Scandalous Books for the future, "and inflicting the Censure of the Church, accord"ing to the Canons provided in that behalf, upon the "Authors of 'em." Upon which the Prolocutor soon after acquainted the House, "That the Presi"dent had declar'd his Sence of the Ill-Conse"quence of those Books that were sent up from "this House to Their Lordships; and that, upon "Enquiry, he cou'd not receive any Satisfaction, "how far the Convocation might Proceed in that "Affair, but he wou'd, as far as lay in him, take "farther Order about it." When the President and his Brethren saw the Disposition of the Lower-House, they found it was to no Purpose to communicate any Proposals to 'em; and therefore the Convocation was Prorogu'd to Jan. 24th, and soon after, with the Parliament, Prorogu'd and Dissolv'd. "It must be confess'd, (says a late "Writer) That the Presbyterians did not a little "contribute to exasperate the Convocation against "'em, having, at this very time, given Orders to "near Fifty Young Students; and Mr. Baxter "(the Head of their Party) having Publish'd a "Book, reflecting on the Church of England. It "was also reported, That the Presbyterians of "Scotland were the Authors of a Sham-Plot, which "they father'd upon the Episcopal-Party of Glasgow, "that they might have a Pretence to Disarm 'em, "and Oppress 'em.

A Complaint of ill Books.

The President's Answer.

The Convocation prorogu'd.

1690. Meeting of a New-Parliament.

On Thursday March 20th, the New-Parliament Met at Westminster, pursuant to Their Majesties Writs of Summons; and His Majesty being in his Royal-Robes, Seated on the Throne, the Commons were Sent for up, by the Usher of the Black-Rod: Who accordingly Attending, the Lord-Chief-Baron Atkyns (Speaker of the House of Peers) by His Majesty's Command, signify'd to 'em His Majesty's Pleasure, "That they shou'd forthwith pro"ceed to the Choice of a Speaker, and present him "to His Majesty the next Morning." After which, the Commons return'd to their House, and made Choice of Sir John Trevor Kt. to be their Speaker; who being the next Morning Presented to His Majesty, seated on the Throne in the House of Peers, His Majesty did graciously Approve of him, and then His Majesty made this Speech to both Houses:

My Lords and Gentlemen;

The King's Speech.

"I Am resolv'd to leave nothing unattempted "on My Part, which may contribute to the "Peace and Prosperity of this Nation: And find- 1690.
"ing My Presence in Ireland will be absolutely "necessary, for the more speedy Reducing of that "Kingdom, I continue My Resolution of going "thither as soon as may be; and I have now "Call'd you together, for your Assistance, to enable "Me to prosecute the War with Speed and Vigour: "In which I assure My Self of your cheerful "Concurrence, being a Work so necessary for your "own Safeties.

"In order to this, I Desire you will forthwith "make a Settlement of the Revenue; and I can"not doubt, but you will therein have as much "Regard for the Honour and Dignity of the "Monarchy in My Hands, as has been lately "shew'd to Others: And I have so great a Con"fidence in you, That if no Quicker or More"convenient Way can be found, for the Raising "of Ready-Money, (without which, the Service "cannot be perform'd) I shall be very well Con"tent, for the present, to have it made such a "Fund of Credit, as may be Useful to Your"selves, aswell as Me, in this Conjuncture; not "having the least Apprehensions, but that you "will provide for the taking off all such Anticipa"tions as it shall happen to fall under.

"It is sufficiently known, how earnestly I "have endeavour'd to Extinguish (or, at least, "Compose) all Differences amongst My Subjects, "and to that end, how often I have recommended "an Act of Indemnity to the last Parliament: But "since that Part of it, which related to the Pre"venting of private Suits, is already Enacted, "and becaus[illegible] Debates of that nature must take up "more of your Time, than can now be spar'd "from the Dispatch of those other Things which "are absolutely necessary for Our Common-Safety; "I Intend to send you an Act of Grace, with "Exceptions of some few Persons only, but such "as may be sufficient to shew My great Dislike of "their Crimes, and at the same time, My Readi"ness to extend Protection to all My other Sub"jects, who will thereby see, That they can Re"commend themselves to Me, by no other Methods "than what the Laws prescribe, which shall always "be the only Rule of My Government.

"A farther Reason, which Induceth Me to Send "you this Act at this time, is, Because I am De"sirous to leave no Colour of Excuse to any of "My Subjects, for the Raising of Disturbances in "the Government, and especially in the time of "My Absence; and I say this, both to inform "you, and to let some Ill-affected Men see, that "I am not unacquainted, how busie they are, in "their present Endeavours, to Alter it.

"Amongst other Encouragements, which I "find they give themselves, one of the Ways, by "which they hope to compass their Designs, is, "by creating Differences and Disagreements in "your Counsels, which, I hope, you will be very "careful to prevent; for be assured, That Our "greatest Enemies can have no better Instruments "for their Purposes, than those who shall any "way endeavour to Disturb or Delay your Speedy "and Unanimous Proceeding upon these necessary "Matters.

"I must recommend also to your Considera"tion, an Union with Scotland: I do not mean, "it should be now entred upon; but they having "Proposed this to Me some time since, and the "Parliament there having Nominated Commissioners "for that Purpose, I shou'd be glad that Com"missioners might also be Nominated here, to "Treat with them, and to see if such Terms "cou'd be Agreed on, as might be for the Benefit "of both Nations, so as to be ready to be Presented "to you in some future Session.

1690.

My Lords and Gentlemen;

" I have thought it moſt convenient, to leave " the Adminiſtration of the Government in the " Hands of the Queen, during my Abſence; and " if it ſhall be judg'd neceſſary to have an Act of " Parliament, for the better Confirmation of it to " Her, I Deſire you will let ſuch an one be Pre- " pared to be Preſented to Me.

" I have this only to add, That the Seaſon of " the Year, and my Journey into Ireland, will ad- " mit but of a very ſhort Seſſion; ſo that I muſt " recommend to you the making ſuch Diſpatch, " that We may not be engag'd in Debates, when " Our Enemies ſhall be in the Field. For the " Succeſs of the War, and the more thrifty Ma- " nagement of it, will both principally depend " upon your ſpeedy Reſolutions. And I hope it " will not be long before we ſhall meet again, to " perfect what the time will not now allow to be " done.

This Speech had a good Influence on Both Houſes; and the Commons were now generally ſuch as were well-affected to the preſent Government, and had a hearty Concern for the Support and Settlement of it: And yet there were ſome of the Old Speaking Members of the diſcontented Party, who, upon Occaſion, betray'd their Temper different from that of the Majority. The firſt Buſineſs of Importance the Commons entred upon, was the Settling a Revenue for the Maintenance of the Civil-Liſt. Upon which Occaſion, Sir Charles Sidley made this bold and memorable Speech, againſt Exorbitant Penſions and Salaries:

Mr. Speaker;

Speech of Sir Charles Sidley.

" WE have Provided for the Army; we have " Provided for the Navy: And now, at " laſt, a New Reckoning is brought us, we muſt " likewiſe Provide for the Liſts. Truly, Mr. Speaker, " 'tis a ſad Reflection, That ſome Men ſhou'd " Wallow in Wealth and Places, whilſt others " Pay away, in Taxes, the Fourth-part of their " Revenue, for the Support of the ſame Govern- " ment. We are not upon Equal Terms, for His " Majeſty's Service: The Courtiers and Great Of- " ficers Charge, as it were, in Armour; they feel " not the Taxes, by reaſon of their Places, whilſt " the Country-Gentlemen are Shot through and " through by them. —— The King is pleas'd to " lay his Wants before us, and, I am confident, " expects our Advice upon it: We ought therefore " to tell Him what Penſions are too Great; what " Places may be Extinguiſh'd, during the Time " of the War, and Publick-Calamity. His Majeſty " ſees nothing but Coaches and Six, and great " Tables, and therefore cannot imagine the Want " and Miſery of the reſt of his Subjects: He is a " Brave and Generous Prince, but He's a Young " King, encompaſs'd and hemm'd-in by a Company " of Crafty Old Courtiers. To ſay no more, ſome " have Places of 3000 l. ſome of 6000 l. and " others of 8600 l. per An. and I am told, the " Commiſſioners of the Treaſury have 1600 l. per An. " a-piece. Certainly, Publick-Penſions, whatever " they have been formerly, are much too great " for the preſent Want and Calamity that reigns " every-where elſe: And it is a Scandal, that a " Government ſo Sick at Heart as ours is, ſhou'd " Look ſo well in the Face. —— We muſt Save " the King Money where-ever we can; for I'm " afraid the War is too great for our Purſes, if " Things be not Manag'd with all imaginable " Thrift. When the People of England ſee all " Things are Sav'd, that can be Sav'd; that there " are no Exorbitant Penſions, nor Unneceſſary " Salaries, and all this Applied to the Uſe to " which they are Given; We ſhall Give, and " They ſhall Pay, whatever His Majeſty can " Want, to Secure the Proteſtant-Religion, and " to Keep out the King of France, and King " James too, whom, by the way, I have not " heard nam'd this Seſſion; whether out of Fear, " Diſcretion, or Reſpect, I cannot tell. —— " I Conclude, Mr. Speaker, Let us Save the King " what we can, and then let us proceed to Give " Him what we are able.
